"Fire Indians" aid the inhabitants in extinguishing a fire in the dwelling of one Gerardus Cooper, a cooper.—N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 19, 1733.

Lewis Morris writes to the lords of trade regarding Cosby that "no Man was ever so universally hated as he is." He asks that Cosby be recalled "for the safety of the inhabitants of this Province."—N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 19, 1733.

Rip van Dam (who was president of the governor's council until dismissed by Gov. Cosby, Nov. 24, 1735) delivers to Gov. Cosby 34 articles of complaint against the governor. These articles charge Cosby with performing certain acts beyond the limits of his instructions, and acting in various instances in an overbearing and unjust manner. The governor's council sent a reply to these complaints, on Dec. 17, to the Duke of Newcastle, the king's secretary of state, defending Cosby and accusing Van Dam of devising "a labarynth of detestable falsehoods."—N. Y. Col. Docs., v: 975-85. See June 19, 1734. For a connected account of the controversy thereby generated, and of its consequences, see Man. Com. Coun. (1855), 732 et seq.

Observations are published concerning the defences of the city against invasion. "As a war is likely to break out, and the Rumours thereof daily increase," the writer believes the city should not trust "too much on our Number of Men, and carelessly saying, No Fear, No Fear;" but that batteries should be erected at Sandy Hook, Coocy Island, both sides of the Narrows, and other strategical points in and around the city. To make these works, all the train-bands of the adjacent towns should be required "to repair thither with all speed," the forces from the city and surrounding country to leave their boats at Kip's Bay, and those from Bergen County at "Griangage" (Greenwich). Everyone is urged "to lay aside all private Views, Partyships and Divisions ... and declare for a stout and resolute Resistance." Instead of paying a heavy ransom for the city, it is preferable to strengthen the defences, in order to retain "a free and happy People."—N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 31, 1733. See also June 10, 1734.

Anthony Rutgers receives a patent from the King George II for "a certain swamp and fresh pond, called the Fresh Water, and adjacent to the King's Farm, formerly called the Duke's Farm, on the Island Manhattan, beginning at a stake set in the ground on the south side of the said pond, and at the north-east corner of the land belonging to William Merritt; thence it rangeth along the south side of the said swamp and pond, by the upland to the beach on the east side of Hudson's River; so along the beach to the upland; thence crosteth and out of said swamp to the land on the east side thereof; thence by the said land as it runeth, to the east side of the tax-yards; and thence to the place where it begun."—Liber Patents, xi: 127 (Albany). The swamp and fresh water included about 70 acres. Judge Hoffman (Estate and Rights of the Corporation of the City of N. Y., i, 139) says "there is no doubt the grant took in the strip west of the Calk Hook and down to near Duane, east of that part of the Dominie's Bowery." In the Bancker collection (box G), in N. Y. pub. Library, is "A Plan of a proposed alteration of Boundary between the Church Land and the Land belonging to MT Anthony Rutgers." The history of the grant to Anthony Rutgers is singular. An order of the privy council, issued Aug. 12, 1731, empowered Gov. Cosby to grant a patent to the swamp and fresh pond. Hoffman op. cit. observes this and states that he finds no grant made by the governor at this time. Nevertheless, a petition of Anthony Rutgers, April 6, 1733 (p. v.) alleged that he had "lately Obtained his Majestys Grant and Letters Patent for the Swamp near fresh Water." Yet the grant from the governor and council is dated Dec. 16, 1733 in Col. Coun., xii, 320; and the patent is actually 15 days later. From 1731, Rutgers evidently assumed that the swamp and pond had been granted to him. For much interesting data upon this confused subject, see Hoffman, op. cit., i: 121-26; ii: 189-91. For the copy of an act permitting the grant of the pond and swamp to Rutgers, see Pennsylvania, 731 and for the warrant for a patent, see ibid., xi: 77. For the release of the right to the land under water, executed in 1791 by the heirs of Anthony Rutgers, see May 13 and Sept. 29, 1791. See also descriptions of Frontispiece II, and Pl. 83-b, III: 540, 566-61; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 947, 965.

1734

"The year 1734 passed with little peace for New-York. — The fear of the French and Indians still hung over the colony, trade was declining, several families emigrated to New Jersey, the assembly was adjourned, not to meet again until April, 1734,"—From "William Cosby and the Freedom of the Press," in Wilson's Mem.Hist. of N. Y., ii: 236.

Probably in this year, William Bradford published "A New Map of the Harbour of New York," showing Manhattan Island, the upper and lower bays, and the surrounding country, as well as the principal sound-banks, soundings, etc. The only known copy of this plan is reproduced and described in Vol. i, Pl. 29.

Cosby issues an "Account stated," printed by Bradford, showing the need of developing the merchant marine of the province, as expressed in his address to the assembly.—See original broadside or folder in N. Y. Pub. Library.

A belfry is constructed above the low tower of the Dutch Church at Harlem, to contain the bell, cast this year at Amsterdam.

See inscription on the bell, which is in use at present in the edifice at the north-west corner of Leroy Ave. and 121st St. See also Tul- ton, Reformed Low Dutch Church of Harlem, 43-45; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, iii: 935.

The birthday of Frederic, Prince of Wales, is celebrated with the usual demonstrations, and described in detail in the newspaper reports.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 21-23, 1734.

"There is now preparing for the Press, a list of the Names of those Gentlemen, who by their Words and Actions do profess the Belief of that modern Doctrine, of keeping in with Governors upon any terms in order to prevent the People, on a new Choice of Representatives from trusting their liberties in such hands."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 31, 1734. An appeal is addressed to Cosby, beginning "We the Grand Inquest for our Sovereign Lord the King, and the Body of the City and County of New-York, . . . . It appears to be a combined measure from a combination of the Crown and the city magistrates, who state: 'That from the various Accounts we have lately had by the publick Papers of the Armaments and Military Preparations which for some Time past have been making by several of the States and Powers in Europe, We are apprehensive the Consequences thereof may terminate in War ... They wish to discourage and oppose any Naval Attempt that might be made against us.' They therefore ask "that such proper and reasonable Care may speedily be taken to fortify this City (the Metropolis of this Province) as may most conduce to His Majesty's Honour, and the Safety of his People ..." Cosby replied next day that he had received no express from England, such as is usually sent "Upon the least Surmise of a War." He cannot learn that any of the governors have received any. Nevertheless, he says, "I will employ my immediate Thoughts to consider such effectual Measures, that no Time may be lost when it is proper, to put them in Practice for the Security, Ease and Protection of you the Grand Inquest for our Sovereign Lord the King, . . . ."

A negro is burnt alive at New York, in accordance with the sentence of a justice's court, for two attempted assaults upon women.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 21-25, 1734.

At about midnight of this Friday, a letter is found under the door of James Alexander's house, threatening him and his family with destruction, if a most villainous demand, thereby made, is not complied with. On Feb. 15, the governor's council ordered that a proclamation be issued to discover the perpetrator. Such proclamation, signed by Cosby, dated Feb. 19, and offering a Feb. reward of £50 to anyone who should discover the author of the letter, or his accomplice, was published,—Cal. Govt. Min., 320; N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 19-25, 1734. On March 4, "Fra. Harrison," published an indignant denial of the authorship of the letter, which had been charged to him; and, on March 11, an advertisement announced the publication of the report of a committee of the council regarding the episode.—N. T. Gaz., Feb. 25-Mar. 4, and Feb. 25, 1734.

4. The "Hum-drum-Club" is spoken of in an attack on Zenger by a correspondent in Bradford's Gazette. "The Governor," he says, "was not at the Hum-drum-Club of this City on Friday Night last; but was pleased to honour the worthy Gentlemen of that Club with his Company on Saturday was [sic] Sevennight, and last Saturday Night."—N. T. Gaz., Jan. 30-Feb. 4, 1734. Again, on March 25, a correspondent who signed himself "Peter Scheme" said that he often frequented the "Coffee-house, to take an Hitt at Back Gammon," where he heard the sentiments of the "Courtiers," as Zenger termed them; and also that he conversed with the governor and the "Courtiers," sometimes at the "Humdrum," and sometimes at "the Fort."—Ibid., March 18-25, 1734.

18. A letter is published regarding the increase in the number of beggars in New York. The example of neighbouring provinces is cited, where beggars are forced to work to maintain themselves, "which is the Reason of so many Stragers coming among us, finding they may here be maintained without being punished for Sloathfulness." The writer recommends the building of workhouses. "And if stately Buildings could not be accomplished, less might answer the End for a Time; and being thus provided, the Navigation of these Strangers might be able (at a cheap Rate) to provide and take Care of the Helpless, to teach the Sloathful Industry, the Disobedient and stragling Vagabonds to punish. And by these Means, in a few Years, save more Money to the City than those Buildings would cost."—N. T. Gaz., March 4, 1734.

11. Zenger "intends to remove to Broad-Streer near the upper End of the Long Bridge."—N. J. Jour., March 11, 1734.

Apr.

4. A contributor to Bradford's paper thinks that the only excuse for allowing Zenger to continue in the "Consideration of giving him Rope enough." False, malicious, libellous, licentious, scurrilous, virulent, seditious—are some of the adjectives used to describe his journal.—N. T. Gaz., March 4, 1734.

15. Bradford, the printer of the Gazette, has just moved "to the House where the brassier lately dwelt, in Hanover Square, over against Capt. Walton's."—N. T. Gaz., April 8-15, 1734. He moved again, April 25, 1735 (q.v.).

22. The development of the city in the vicinity of Beeckman's Swamp, which was granted to Jacobus Roosevelt on Sept. 5, 1728 (q.v.), begins by the more active sale of building lots; 18 lots fronting the street that leads from Smith's Fly to the Fresh Water," bounded in part by "the Swamp or Tan Yard" and "Sininer Street," are offered for sale.—N. T. Jour., April 22, 1734. On June 10, 22 lots in the same locality were advertised.—Ibid., June 10, 1734. On July 20 (q.v.), the city made additional grants in the Swamp itself to Jacobus Roosevelt.—Liber Deeds, Bk. 151. See also Aug. 24, 1733.

25. Several acres of the "Swamp" had been acquired by Jacobus Roosevelt. "Having been divided by the purchaser into lots, they were principally taken by the tanners, who occupied much of the entire space included between Cliff and Gold and Ferry and Frankford streets, and the north side of Frankford between Cliff and Duke. In this noted region the activity of the trade, before the Revolution, accumulated vast mounds of tan, where the boys of the neighborhood wagged mimic battles behind redoubts of that material, spiked with horns from the tannarys. Other tanners pursued their occupation outside the city palisades, on the southern borders of the 'Collect' or Fresh-water Pond, near the junction of the present Centre and Pearl streets."—Bishop, Hist. of Am. Manufactures from 1605 to 1800, I: 444-452.

22. Members leave the assembly chamber and go to the council chamber, at Gov. Cosby's request, as is customary, to hear his speech at the opening of the session. The encouragement of trade is his first topic. He points out causes of the decay of trade. The principal one is that neighbours, the Bermudians especially, have become the common carriers for this province. Thereby, "not only building, which is a vast Advantage to a Country, is discouraged, and almost wholly disused; Artificers without Employ, . . . and no Prospect before them, but extreme Poverty, or a forsaking their Country; but likewise vast Sums of Money are yearly carried out of the Province by Strangers, who, . . . spend hardly any Thing even for their daily Subsistence while here, nor Import any Thing useful or profitable into it."

Another cause of the decay of trade is the want of strict inspection of flour, "the staple Commodity of the Country." The object of such inspection is to prevent the exportation of any except such as are equal "to Cay Stragers to the best that is exported from neighbouring provinces, whose flour has gained a reputation superior to that of New York because of "the wholesome Laws they have made to prevent Frauds and Abuses." Cosby therefore recommends the passage of laws for the encouragement and navigation, "by laying a Duty of Tonnage" upon those who supplant this province in navigation; and for laws for flour inspection, to prevent frauds in bolting. These laws, he declares, will "give Life to the expiring Hopes of your Ship Carpenters and other Tradesmen; recall their unwilling Resolutions to support the Province, and encourage others to come into it; fill your Harbours with Vessels of your own, inspire the Youth with warm Inclinations to become Seamen; and, by giving new Vigour to a declining Trade, fill your Country with Riches, and spread its Reputation far and wide.

He also recommends the protection of the harbour and town of New York, and the frontiers; "nor is any Time so fit to guard against our future Enemies, as a Time of Peace." He advises the assembly "to give a sufficient Sum for the Erecting of a Battery at the Point of Rocks by Whitehall," and new forts at Albany and Schenectady. For these purposes he has drawn plans, and made an estimate of the expense, which he will order laid before the assembly. He advises also that the management of the money be put into "honest and frugal Hands," and a strict account required.

He desires also that the burden of duties now laid upon trade may be eased "by an Imposition on some other Parts better able to bear it, or on something that may not at all affect Trade." He suggests a duty "upon Paper to be used in the Law, and in all Conveyances and Deeds of every Denomination."

He points out the disadvantages "that attend the too great Importation of Negroes and Convicts," also that provision should be made to supply the Six Nations of Indians with smiths and proper tools to mend their arms. The French "not only do that, but constantly send some Men of Art and Interest to reside among them, furnished with Brandy, Lead and Powder, which they give from Time to Time to the Indians, whereby they inculcate themselves with them, and alienate their Affections from us." It is "Our Interest," he says, "to defeat the Attempts of the French by the like Arts, and to preserve the Friendship of the six Nations though at a greater Expense."

Cosby promises from the concurrence in the enactment of any other laws for the defence of the trade, the advancement of trade, the encouragement of husbandry, or for promoting manufactures, arts, and sciences.—Assemb. Jour., I: 654; Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 659-632.

On April 29, Mr. Morris, the deputy secretary, presented to the house the governor's plans, and his estimate of the expense for fortifications. The proposed battery at Whitehall is estimated at about £3,000.—Ibid., I: 655. A later estimate (May 4), placed it at £1,910.—Ibid., I: 657. See also Oct. 28, 1734, where the name "Copie" is applied to the same locality.
A "Committee of Grievances" is appointed by the assembly on Apr. 26 to meet every Thursday, "at the House of Mr. John De Honore, in the City of New-York."—Assem. Jour., I., 655.

May 13 After repeated announcement, beginning March 11, of his intention "to move to Broad-Streets near the upper End of the Lots in his tract," at 3 o'clock on this day he marks that he "is removed."—N. Y. Jour., May 13, 1734.

The city's method of extending its boundaries by filling in the water front around the lower end of the island is well illustrated in the laying out and development of Water Street in the vicinity of Rutgers Wharf. The common council, in giving the chasers of the Water Lots fronting the Dock Wharf be liable to Obligate and build a Wharf of twenty five foot part of the Street or Wharf of forty foot next to the East River in Six years and to finish the Said Street of forty foot in twelve years."—M. C. C., IV., 208. On Sept. 30, 1734, it was ordered "that twenty foot of Ground on the West Side of the Lot of Ground of Anthony Rutgers Esq which he lately purchased of this Corporation between the Great Dock and Whitehall, be left to make A Street or Wharf thereon by the Said Anthony Rutgers fronting to the Slip to be left there."—Ibid., IV.: 320. On Oct. 3, 1734, there was entered in the Minutes a petition from Stephen de Lancy, Anthony Rutgers, John Moore, and Robert Livingston, Jr., stating that they had lately purchased six lots, four of which were situated on the west side of the great dock between Whitehall Street and the East River, and two on the front to be laid out of forty foot wide to Run along the East River or Harbour, and in the Rear Northerly by Whitehall Street," as shown by their respective grants on record in the town clerk's office. This petition further recited that on one of these four lots "Very Considerable Buildings and Improvements" had been made, and that "further Improvements for the Convenience of Trade Navigation & Commerce and Enlarging this City in Buildings and Inhabitants" were "Speedily Intended." It was therefore their desire that they might not afterward "be Debarred or Deprived of the Benefit of the East River or Harbour," and they asked that the corporation would grant to them, "as to their parcel of land," all the width of ground "to be gained out of the Said East River," fronting their purchases, together with the right to profit from the wharfs to be made on the river front, "with all Cranes Stairs and landing places to be made thereon." They offered on their part to make a street 40 feet in width fronting their lots, and "at the Outer part of the Said 245 feet of Ground in the East River or Harbour at their own further Expenditure will leave Another Good and sufficient Street or Wharf of forty foot in breadth" as the city surveyors should direct, completing "the Said Streets" on or before March 25, 1735, and after they shall have been made and the said improvements it being understood that these should "Remain Publick Streets and Highways for Ever." The petition was granted by the common council "at the yearly Rent of Eighteen pence 1& foot, in the front of each Lott; and that Mr. Moore make A Wharf or Street, the whole length of his Lott on the East side thereof 274 foot thirty four foot in breadth and that Mr. Rutgers make A Wharf or Street twenty foot in breadth on the West side of his Lott at their own proper Cost and Charge." It was ordered that the mayor execute the grants "for the same four Water Lots," and that the yearly rent be payable March 25 "Commonly Called Lady Day."—Ibid., IV.: 224-225; and see City Grants, Libr. B, 253-260. Regarding the further development of the street along East River, see M. C. C., IV.: 328. It received the name of Water Street in 1736.—Ibid., IV.: 331. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1011. Water lots, granted in 1734 between Old Slip and Coenties Slip, are shown preserved (made in 1771), now in Bureau of Topography, Dept. of Public Works.

An ordinance is proclaimed, by order of the common council, for preserving the fish in Fresh Water Pond. It provides "that if any Person or Persons whatsoever do, from henceforth presume to put a net or any other sort of Fish-Trap or Fish-Pond, belonging to this Corporation, any Hoop-Net, Draw-net, Purse-net, Cast-net, Cod-net, Bley-net, or any Other Net or Nets whatsoever, and shall take and Catch any of the fish within the Said Pond, therewith, or by any other Engine, Machine, Artifice, or Device, all such Vessels can carry other than a six feet long Angle Rod, Hook and Line only," he shall be required to pay a fine of 20 shillings.—M. C. C., IV.: 209-210. This appears to be the first municipal ordinance for the protection of "fish and game." For the city's first "closed season" ordinance, see May 14, 1738.

Cap't Michael Thodey is given permission by the common council "to make use of the Rope Walk without Spring Garden Gate lately in the Occupation of John seareel deceased and John Flanagin," at "during the Service of this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV.: 209. See Jan. 27, 1736.

William Smith, counsellor-at-law, delivers an opinion to the general assembly to show "That no Court of Equity can lawfully have any Being or Authority within this Colony, without Consent in General Assembly." Whence it is inferred, That the Court of Equity lately erected in the Supreme-Court, by Ordinance of Governor and Council, without Consent in General Assembly; is not a lawful Court. —N. Y. Gen., Sept. 16-23, 1734. See also Mr. Smith's Opinion Humbly Offer'd to the General Assembly of the Colony of New-York, One [on] the Seventh of June, 1734, At their Request, Occasion'd by sundry Petitions of the Inhabitants of the City of New-York . . . praying an Establishment of Courts of Justice within the said Colony by Act of the Legislature. (N. Y., 1734). Bound with this is Mr. Murray's Opinion Relating to the Courts of Justice in the Colony of New-York; Delivered to the General Assembly of the said Colony, at their Request, the 12th of June, 1734, both documents being printed by Bradford. Copies are owned by the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The justices of the peace and the vestrymen of the city ask the assembly for leave to bring in a bill for the "better Relief and Maintenance of the Poor in the said City."—Assem. Jour., IV.

Recollecting to the subject of defence which is under general discussion, a letter to the press states: "Mr Bradford's Writers . . . have told the World, how packed and unprovided we are, and what great Advantage and Profits an Enemy has a chance to get by coming here."

The king's accession to the crown is celebrated. At noon, "the Gentlemen of the Council, Assembly, and the City" wait on the governor at the fort; and drink the health of the king and queen, the royal family, and the Prince and Princess of Orange, "under the Discharge of the Cannon;" the "regular Troops, in their new Clothes, and all the little Cadets and outside Appearance." Afterwards, the governor, attended by the same assemblage, "went into the Field, and review'd the Militia of the City drawn up there; and express'd great Satisfaction at their Order, Discipline, and Appearance, and was pleased to order 12 Barrels of Beer to be distributed among them to drink their Majesties and the Royal Healths."—N. Y. Gen., June 17, 1734.

Cosby, in a report to the lords of trade, reviews the arguments in his case against Van Dam, which led to his dismissing chief-justice Morris (see Nov. 14, 1727); and he sends them a copy of Morris's argument and opinion on the latter case and decided, this being a tract entitled The Opinion and Argument of the Chief Justice of New York, concerning the Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court (printed and sold by Zenger, 1733). Cosby also states that Morris expressed "his open and implacable malice" against him in false and scandalous libels printed in Zenger's paper, which he gives his reasons at length for removing Chief-Justice Morris. The question involved is whether there shall be, by Cosby's appointment, an equity branch of the court of exchequer. The people have a great dislike for such a court.—N. Y. Col. Deci., VII: 4-14. See, further, ibid., VII: 206-207.

The bill of Daniel Gauthier, amounting to $37,719.15, for building the additional room in the city hall for the assembly (see Sept. 26, 1732) is audited.—Assem. Jour., I., 668. On July 13, a warrant was issued to pay him.—Cal. Gen. Min., 321. (Note that the date "1733" on pp. 321 and 322 of the Cal. Gen. Min. is a misprint for 1732.)

The legislature passes an act to lay a duty on the tonnage of all vessels trading in the colony of New York, excepting vessels built here; also an act to prescribe rates to be charged for the use of the wharf called Burnet's Key. The same schedule of rates is to apply to any vessel as east of Pond's Wharf that has printed and circulated, that is not to affect the wharfs belonging to the city.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 343, 487-491 and see April 25. Commenting on this act, Cosby stated on June 10, 1735, that the owners of Burnet's Key had "carry'd it a considerable way into the water whereby almost any vessel that comes with more ease and less expense . . . than they formerly used to do by bukis when riding at anchor in the River."—N. Y. Col. Deci., VII: 29. Burnet's Key is shown on Pls. 26, 27, and 27-A, Vol. I.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1734 A provincial act is passed granting "Quakers residing within this Colony The Said privileges Benefits & Indulgences as by the Law & Statutes now remaining of force in . . . England The people of That Denomination are intitled unto within those Dominions of the King of Great Britain . . . N. Y. Gaz."—Sept. 22.

29 Capt. Robert Long, commander of "his Majestys Ship Seaforth the Station ship of War for this Colony," having represented to the common council "that the Hulks whereby his Majestys ships used to Careen by, is sunk and broke to pieces in Turtle Bay," proposes that the city will grant to him and his heirs and assigns forever "A Small piece of Ground on the south West Side of Turtle Bay, only, from high Water Mark fifty foot into the River," he will erect thereon at his own expense a wharf "Convenient for his Majestys Ships to Careen at," and "Remove the Ruins of the Hulks storesaid and such Other Wrecks which lye sunk within the said Turtle Bay," the object being to make the bay "more usefull and Commodious for the Sheltering of A far greater Number of Shipping therein," and more especially to secure them in winter from "the driving Ice in the River." The common council resolves to grant such land (the description of which is entered in detail in the Minutes), with the understanding that he will erect the wharf before July 1, 1735, that he will also erect and keep in repair a "Convenient pair of landing Stairs of Six foot wide, free for all Persons to Come to and land at the same at or Near the North West Corner," and he is given authority for himself and his heirs and assigns, if he receive such sum or sums of Money for such loading, unloading or Careening at, or by the said Wharf as shall be Reasonable."—M. G. C., IV, 212–14. The grant was made Oct. 12, 1734.—City Grants, Liber B, 263. See Oct. 8.

20 Betstaver's Cripplesbusch, or Beckman's Swamp, is granted to Jacobus Roosevelt by the city.—Liber City Grants, B, 151 (comptroller's office). This tract, represented on numerous early maps as a piece of swampy land, lay between the present Franklin, Spuyten, Gold, and Cliff Sts., and is traversed to-day by Jacob and Ferry Sts. It became known later as "The Swamp," and is so spoken of to-day, colloquially. The tanning and leather interests of New York have never entirely abandoned this locality. See Sept. 10, 1686; Sept. 5, 1728.

26 The city grants to Cornelius van Horne a lot extending from the Dock Street wharf 400 feet into the East River, with the obligation that he shall increase by 15 feet the width of Dock (later Water) Street at the upper end of his lot and make another wharf (South Street Mound) 40 feet in width 200 feet farther into the East River. This is the first conveyance of part of the city charged an annual rent instead of a cash payment.—Liber Deeds, B, 125. See also Blake's Municipal Ownership of Land, 18. Other grants at this wharf are made the same day on similar terms.—Ibid., B, 153, 154, 155, 164, 173, 178, 191, and 192. See also Addenda, 1700.

6 Six acres reserved for sale "on the Wharf or Crippebusch." Three them of front "The Road that leads from Spring Garden to fresh Water;" the other three front "The street next to the Swamp." Inquirers are referred to Anna Ten Eyck, "near Koonties Market."—N. Y. Jour., July 29, 1734.

Aug. 17 Thomas Copeley this day stood in the Publick Pillory of this City for having false Dollars with intent to utter and pass them in payment, and uttering one false Dollar knowing it to be so, of which he was Convict." Eighteen such "false Dollars" are "in Open Court [of general session] . . . broke to pieces."—Min. Gen. Session, (1734), 45.

14 Ordered That Mr Vesey the Two Church Wardens Mr Moore Mr Aubuyonde and Mr Chambers or any five of them whereof the Rector and one of the Church Wardens be Two be a Committee to leave out the Lots of Ground behind the Church Yard for any Number of Years not Exceeding forty under such Yearly Ground Rents Covenants and Restrictions as they shall think most proper . . . And it is also "Resolved that the said Committee be at Liberty to Obtain from the Corporation of this City a Grant and Confirmation of their said Ground and of the Water Lots fronting the same Upon Such Yearly Ground Rents and agrement as they shall think proper and reasonable to make."—Trin. Min. (MS).

27 "This Day, his Excellency our Governor and Family embarked for his other Government of New Jersey, being attended to the Water-side by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, and sundry Aug. 27 the principal Gentlemen of this City, and the Officers and Soldiers of the Garrison under Arms; upon their embarking, they were saluted by the Fort with fifteen Guns, and by the Gentlemen with three Guns."—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 8.

Satirical letters by "Timothy Wheelwright" and "John Chris- sel" (pseud.), dated Sept. 8 and 12, regarding the approaching election for aldermen, are printed as a handbill or folder by Zenger. They express the despair of the workmen, and advise them to assert the rights of their masters and their country. One of these handbills is in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

According to this document (quoted in I: 258, 9, v.), a short cut on the "Boston High Road" is in course of construction. This short cut is shown on the Bradford Map, Pl. 27, Vol. I, indicating that it had been begun, or at least was in contemplation, as early as 1730. The road seems to have been still incomplete on July 29, 1730 (p. 2). On Nov. 7, 1741, the course of the post-road was defined by law and included the "Straight Line" or short cut "through the Hill by the House of Captain Brown Where the Wind Mill formerly Stood."—Col. LIVINGSTON, N. Y., III, 162-66.

"A Great Number of Tanners and Other Inhabitants" have been represented to the common council that "they are greatly prejudiced by a Drain laid into the fresh Water Pond by the Order of Antony Rutgers Esq[†] [see April 6, 1733] which has greatly drawn away the Water from the same Pond," it is ordered "that the Said Mr Rutgers do by no means hinder or prevent the greater part of the said Water being drained thirty foot from the Said fresh Water Pond." Rutgers had been obliged by his letters patent which granted him the swamp near the pond to drain the swamp within one year from the date of his patent.—M. G. C., IV, 216–17. See Sept. 15, 1739.

The elections for members of the common council, held this day, are described as follows: "Simon Johnson and Edie Myer carried it against the Governor's Interest notwithstanding there voted against them a considerable Merchant who was an Inhabitant of another Ward, and about 15 of the soldiers of His Majesty's Gar- rison, besides the Corporation of the City [Francis Hartson] and his Interest. All the Members that were chosen were put up by an Interest opposite to the Governor's except John More, in whose Favor a great many of the City join'd, or he would have lost his Election."—N. Y. Jour., Oct. 7, 1734. See Oct. 14, 1734.

It is resolved by the common council that "the Bowling Green at the lower end of the Broadway in the West Ward of this City as it is now in fence be leased unto Frederick Philipse Esq[†] Mr John Chambers and Mr John Roosevelt and their Assigns for the Term of ten years to Commence the twenty Ninth day of September last past for A Bowling Green only at the yearly Rent of one pepper corn and that he plant the said ground with a wharf for the same under the Common seal of this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV, 221. For the continuation of this lease, see Sept. 7, 1744. See also March 14, and April 6, 1733.

The draught of a grant for a piece of land to Robert Long to be used as a carreenside for ships of the royal navy at Turtle Bay is read and amended, and the common council orders that it be engrossed.—M. C. C., IV, 237. See June 29, 1734. Refer also to M. C. C., I, 166, 172, 174, 178, and 209, and City Grants, Liber B, 263. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 6988 Pl. 176.

By order of the common council, Mayor Lutting reissues himself, by warrant to the treasurer for $327 6 for "Casting of Timber out of the Parade before the Fort in the year 1728. and for A speaking Trumpet for the use of this Corporation (in 1735) in Case of fire."—M. C. C., IV, 228. The original bill of the mayor is proved in the city clerk's office.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to Agree with A Printer for the printing of the Charter of this Corporation," the copy to be printed being "first Carefully Examined with the Original."—M. C. C., IV, 231. On Oct. 25, the committee reported that they had "Agreed with John Peter Zenger Printer in manner following (to wit) that he will print the same on very good Paper and in good and fair Characters for seven pounds, and the Benefitt Accruing on the sale of the Printed Copies to be for his own use; and that he will Print Six Copies and bind them up Very Neat- ly for the Corporation to dispose of or Present, to whom they shall think proper, and that he is to Print an Assembly which shall Confirms the Said Charter in the same Book." On approving the report, it was ordered "that a fair Copy of the Said Charter be made for the Printer Accordingly by the Town Clerk, and that the same Committee do take Care the same be forthwith Perfect."—Ibid, IV: 232. See Sept. 16, 1735.

Robert Luring is sworn into office for his ninth term as mayor of the city, and Cosby delivers the following address: "Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen who are chosen into the Magistracy of this City for the ensuing term of years. Cannot but this Opportunity, in a few words to you, of a Paper printed in this City, touching your Elections, in which it is wickedly insinuated, That they were carried against the Governor's Interest [see Sept. 30]: You yourselves must be sensible, that there have no intermeddled with them, but have left them entirely to the people. The People, opposed to the电池, were devoured, by the most false and scandalous Misrepresentations of my Conduct, to lessen the Regard that is due to my Character and Station among you; and, if these men should be so Wicked and abandoned, as to continue their Seditious Practices, notwithstanding all the Forbearance and Lenity they have hitherto met with, you will exert yourselves, as Preservers of the Peace, which is entrusted into your hands, and use the proper Means to bring the Offenders to Confound Punishment."—N. T. Gaz, Oct. 14-21, 1734.

After having several of Zenger's "Journals" and other Scurrilous papers tending to alienate the affections of the people of this province from his Majesties Government" laid before it, the council asks for a conference with a committee of the assembly—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 677. The request is granted by the assembly.—Assemb. Jour., I: 671. The next day the committee reported to the assembly and stated concurrence in the orders of the body. The Jour., I: 695. On Oct. 31, the assembly debated the proposals of the committee and voted to lay the matter on the table.—Ibid, I: 672. See, however, Oct. 19.

The following order is issued by the supreme court, at which Chief Justice James de Lancey, and Second Justice Frederick Philipse are present: "The Grand Jury having yesterday presented two scandalous and seditious songs or ballads lately dispersed about this city—one entitled A Song made upon the Election of the new Magistrates for this City; the other entitled A Song made on the foregoing occasion; both highly defaming the present administration of his Majestys Government, and, by their tendency, infringing the minds of his Majestys good subjects, and to disturb and destroy that peace and tranquillity which ought to subsist and be maintained in this Colony, and all other well-governed communities, of which virulent, scandalous and seditious songs or ballads they have not been able, on a strict enquiry, to discover either the author, printer, or publisher: It is therefore ordered by the Court, that the said . . . songs or ballads be burnt before the City Hall, sitting the Court; by the hands of the common hangman or whipping officer, on Monday, the 21st of this instant, at 12 o'clock, and that the High Sheriff of this city and county do take orders according—"Ibid, Nov. 5, 1734.

Regardins foundations, the Journal says that it "would not Build them for the private Advantage of any Man . . . The single Fortification of Copie is . . . estimated to cost about 12,000 Pounds, which will . . . render the Lots there, much more valuable." This is a direct attack upon the governor's plan. See April 25, 1734. Instead, the newspaper suggests the erection of batteries at convenient places "at half the Expence proposed."—N. T. Jour, Oct. 28, 1734.

The anniversary of the king's birthday is observed. The news report thus describes the celebration: "Between the hours of eleven and twelve in the forenoon, his Excellency Our Governor was attended at his House in Fort George by the Council, Assembly, Merchants, and other Principal Gentlemen and Inhabitants of this and adjacent Places. The Independent Companies posted here being under Arms, the Governor rode, under the ramparts firing while his Majestys, the Queens, the Princes and the Royal Families, and their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Orange's Healths were drank; and then followed the Healths of his Grace the Duke of New Castle, of the Duke of Grafton, of the Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, and many other Royal Healths. In the Evening the Governor returned to his House, where, and at the splendid Ball and Supper at the Fort, where was the most Numerous and fine Appearance of Ladies and Gentlemen that had ever been known upon the like Occasion, and it was no small addition to the General Joy and Satisfaction of the Day that Capt. Bryant from London on the 14th, who brought on from the Welsh News of the Health of the King, the Queen, and all the Royall Family; and that the Kingdom enjoyed at present all the Blessings of Peace, Plenty and a Flourishing Trade under his Majestys most Glorious and Auspicious Administration."—N. T. Gaz, Nov. 11, 1734.

Upon learning that the assembly tabled consideration of Zenger's Journal, the council issues following orders to the hangman or the whipper, to burn, near the pillory, numbers 7, 47, 48, and 49 of The New-York Journal, thinking it proper to you, of a Paper printed in this City, touching its nature; to the sheriff, to see that it is "effectually done" to the governor, to put forth a proclamation offering a reward of 50 pounds for the discovery of the authors of these papers; to the attorney-general, to prosecute them when discovered, and after examining the Journal, from first to last, to give it his approbation, which "reflect upon any persons in the administration of the Government;" to the sheriff, to arrest and imprison Zenger, and to the magistrates of the respective counties "to be active in their respective offices to preserve the public peace."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 642. See Nov. 5, 6, 17, 24, 1734; April 16, Aug. 4, Sept. 16, 1735.

The common council orders that "the Freedoms of this Corporation be Presented unto Capt Matthew Norris and Capt Robert Long Commanders of his Majestys Ships Tartar and Seafoad . . ." The text of each freedom is entered in full in the Minutes. Norris is described as the son of the Hon. Sir John Norris, "Admiral of his Majestys Royal Navy of Great Britain," and who, "being lately A worthy Member of the Honourable House of Commons of Great Britain, did in that House Sternly Oppose and give his Vote against the Bill passed in favour of the Sugar Colonies;" also one of "near Alliance to us by his Marriage with our Country Woman thePointerType Daughter of the Honorable Lewis Morris, Esq. A Native of this City," Both the "Tartar" and "Seafoad" are stations ships of this province.—M. C. G., IV: 234-35.

The sheriff delivers to the court of quarter sessions an order that the magistrates attend the burning of several issues of Zenger's Journal by the hangman. The court forbids the entry of the order in its records. On the following day, the sheriff's motion that the court comply with the order of the council was met with a vigorous protest by the magistrates, and all members of the corporation were forbidden to obey it. Recorder Harison, alone dissented. The sheriff then asked that this proceeding be directed to the officers of the court, but the court, holding that the whipper was an officer of the corporation, refused to give him any such order. About noon the sheriff, after reading the numbers of Zenger's Journal, delivered them to his negro servant, who burnt them in the presence of Recorder Harison, and several officers of the garrison. The members of the court did not attend.—A brief Narrative of the Case and Tryal of John Peter Zenger, Printer of the New York Weekly Journal (1st ed., N. Y., 1736, in N. Y. Pub. Library) 3:4.

The governor's council approves the draft of a proclamation for encouraging immigration from Europe.—Cal. Coun. Min., 1:253.

The governor issues three proclamations for the discovery of the authors of "two late Scandalous Songs and Ballads . . . performing the Administration," and the other to discover the authors of seditious reflections contained in numbers 7, 47, 48, and 49 of Zenger's Journal.—N. T. Gaz, Nov. 25, 1734. Cal. Hist. Misc., Eng., 532. One of each of these proclamations is preserved in the collection of the N. Y. Pub. Library; also one of the original handbills containing the two so-called scandalous songs.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to Inspect and Enquire for a proper House and Ground to be purchased by this Corporation to be Converted into a House of Correction and a Workhouse and upon what Terms Such A Convenient House can be purchased and in what place and of whom."—M. C. G., IV: 236.

The first consideration of this subject by the common council was taken on March 24, 1714 (q.v.). On Dec. 10, 1734, a resolution referred to "the Necessity and Contusional Increase of the Poor within this City," which was "very great and Exceeding burdensome to the Inhabitants thereof for want of a Workhouse and House of Correction;" and stated that "there is not yet any Provision made for the Relief and setting on Work of Poor Needy Persons and Idle Wandering vagabonds, Sturdy and beggers, and others, who maintain themselves without the Said City, who living idle and unemployed, become debauched and instructed in the Practice of Thievry, etc." The common council therefore resolved to build at its own expense "A good, Strong and Convenient House and Tenement, upon part of the unimproved Lands of the South Side of this Town, commonly called Dugan Commone Called the Vineyard." A committee was appointed "to lay out a Convenient piece of Land there, for that use, large enough to erect additional buildings thereon, for workhouse and other convenience, if occasion require, and for needful yard and garden; and cause the surveyor of this city to make a draft thereof. That the said workhouse and buildings be built then and there, as the denomination following (viz.) fifty six foot long, twenty four foot wide from outside to outside, two stories high, and a good cellar, all of stone and the same to be divided into such and so many rooms as the said committee shall direct. It was also resolved to begin work on the building as soon as the season of the year would permit, and that such work be called the "Publick Workhouse and House of Correction."—Ibid., IV: 240-41. On March 31, 1735, the building committee reported that they had agreed with John Burger "for building the workhouse and taking accounts of all the materials to be used on the stone and brick work" (VIII): for performing the above work & £80; for seventy gallons of rum for use of all the masons and laborers, £8-15s; for seventy pounds of sugar, £1.15s; for small beer, £1.10s; for hire of laborers, £50, making a total of £121.10s, of which he is paid £20 on account. The committee also reported that they had engaged John Reame to take charge of the carpenter work for £50, "with a further allowance of fifty gallons of rum, the corporation to be at the charge of the liquors in laying the beams and raising the roof."—Ibid., IV: 250-51. Payments for materials and labor were made in 1735 and 1736, including £24 for 240 loads of stone and £14 for 32 loads of salt (Ibid., IV: 250-51). The workhouse was completed in Sept., 1735.—N. T. Jour., Sept. 23, 1735. Regarding the appointment of a keeper, and the operation of the workhouse, see March 3, 1736. For the enlargement of the poorthouse, see April 15, 1736. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 971.

Zenger is arrested for publishing scurrilous libels, and imprisoned by order of the council; he is not permitted to see or speak to anyone.—N. T. Journal, Nov. 25, 1735; Col. Cour. Min., 233. Three days later, he was brought by a writ of habeas corpus before Chief-Judge James de Lancey who discontinued proceedings until the 11th. The hearing was held in the powder room, and Zenger's bail was fixed at £200, with two sureties, each for £200, but, as he was unable to furnish this sum, he was remanded to prison.—N. T. Gaz., Nov. 25, 1735. The original manuscript presentiment of the attorney-general in the Zenger case was sold at the Anderson Galleries, New York, April 20, 1920, with the library of Henry F. de Puy.—See catalogue of sale (with reproduction), item No. 2658, where it is thus described: "The document is signed by Richard Bradley, Attorney General, and possibly the whole document is in his handwriting. It is undoubtedly the copy used by Zenger's attorney, Andrew Hamilton, during the trial, as it is on the back the legal citations made by the Attorney General during his plea, noted by him at the time. This document is printed verbatim in the reports of the Zenger trial. The two pages are still fastened together with the hand-made pin of the time of Zenger."—N. T. Jour., Nov. 25, 1735; Col. Cour. Min., 233.

Zenger, in prison, is permitted to speak, "through the hole of the door," to his wife and servants.—N. T. Jour., Nov. 25, 1735. He continued to edit his paper in this manner until his acquittal on Dec. 15, 1735.—A Brief Narrative of the Case and Trial of John Peter Zenger, 46.

To provide sums necessary for building fortifications, in view of the threats of war, an act of the legislature is passed for issuing bills of credit to the value of £12,000. William Bradford is to receive 1000l at the rate of 12l 6s 8d on each bill, and must, in like manner, sign them. As the stamps bearing the arms of the city, formerly used in printing bills of credit, are too large and also much worn, it is ordered that they be broken, and that ten new stamps be bearing the arms of the city, and of a smaller size, be made by Charles le Roes Wąż, the clockmaker, and provided. Providing these bills of credit will result in the proceeds derived from duties on tallow and a tax on slaves.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 885-89. For a further issue of bills of credit, see Dec. 16, 1737; also see on early New York paper money, John Hickcox, in Transactions of the Albany Institute, V: 23-79; and item of June 8, 1709.

The legislature passes "An Act to appoint and Impower Commissioners for erecting Fortifications in this Colony." It states that "Such fortifications will tend not only to the Security of the Body of this Colony, but Disconvenience and trouble at the same time Encourage his Majesties Subjects Inhabiting within the Same to Exert their Bravery in Making a Vigorous Defence in Case Such Attempts might happen to be made." It requires "that the City of New York shall be Fortified by making a fortification on the Rocks Lying off of White Hall commonly called Coppice Rocks [see April 25, 1734] and to adjoin to the Land already there, so far Westward as the Wharfs commonly called Hunts Peer," in such manner as the commissioners, with the advice of the assemblymen from New York City and the approval of the captain-general or commander-in-chief, shall deem most useful, "to make the Said City Defensible Against Attempts upon it by Water." The commissioners named are John Cruger, Cornelius de Peyster, John Rosevelt, and John de Witt Petreus. They are also required "to cause Carriages for the great guns to be made or Repair'd, & to Erect Sheds to preserve the Same against the weather when it Shall be judged needful to keep the Said Great Guns Mounted." They are to conduct the work in the speediest manner possible. To prevent the proposed battery being rendered useless "by buildings to blind or Incumber the Same," the act prohibits the erecting of any other edifices, except for platforms, batteries, or other fortifications, "either on the River or in any part or parts which now overflows with the Water from & between the Wasterly part of the Battery so . . . to be Built on Coppice Rocks to the Place commonly called & Known by the Name of Elds Corner or Slip." For this work the commissioners are allowed £600. Other fortifications are required to be erected in other parts of the province.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 892-902. See Oct. 20, 1735. As this act implied an encroachment on the corporation's right to the water front (see digest of Montogomery Charter, Feb. 11, 1731), the consent of the common council was required before the bill was passed.—M. C. C., IV: 214-18. See also "Battery Park," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 968.

News reaches New York from London that the king has ordered the Province of New Jersey to be a separate Government from New York, and that a Commission is daily expected to pass the Seals, to appoint Sir William Keith Governor of that Colony" (New Jersey).—N. T. Jour., Dec. 2, 1734.

A committee appointed by the common council, on Nov. 29, 1734 (see M. C. C., IV: 238), to hire ten men to be the night watch of the city (together with two constables) until May 1, 1735, reports that the watchmen have been permitted to take 2510 hours from Dec. 4 to May 1. An extra allowance of 20 shillings is to be given to each watchman for special diligence, only one of whom at a time is to be on duty. Unlike the law of Dec. 14, 1731 (q. v.), this law requires the 12 members of the watch to work in two squads, of five watchmen and one constable. Each squad to work all night on alternate nights.—M. C. C., IV: 239-40. The number of the watch was regularly decreased during the summer season, May to December.—Ibid., IV: 252-53, 267, 406. See also April 20, 1714.

Cosby explains to the Duke of New Castle the position of the council regarding "a most scandalous pamphlet dispersed about this Province," which contains "a very rude reply" to the answers given by the council to Van Dam's articles of complaint against Cosby. The pamphlet referred to is entitled Heads of Articles of Complaint by Rip Van Dam Exp, against his Excellency William Cosby Exp., etc. (Boston, 1734).—N. T. Col. Doc., VI: 26. See also Aug. 28, 1735. Cosby also points out that Lord Lovelace's behavior to Colden has been "unworthy of the Character of a Councillor;" that he has been "closely link'd with ye oppressors of the Government," and is "not ashamed of being made their spy, upon all the proceedings and all the transactions of the Council." He refers to the other accused "oppressors" as "these infamous fellows."—N. T. Col. Doc., VI: 26-27.

Zenger, writing from the prison (see Nov. 24) for his Journal, 20 rebukes a correspondent of Bradford's Gazette. He denies using the language of the prize-fighter, and claims that the readers of his newspapers incline for gentlemen, and ladies. He admits being brought to America at the bounty of Queen Anne and declares that he was visited eight weeks ago by Recorder Francis Harison, who threatened to beat him with a cane.—N. T. Jour., Dec. 23, 1734.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

1735

— At some time prior to this date, Nicholas Bayard erected his home head or dwelling-house; it appears for the first time on the map of 1671. on Pl. I. of modern streets, it was situated in the block bounded by Grand, Broome, Crosby and Lafayette Sts. It was approached by an avenue called Bayard's Lane, the entrance gate being at the Bowery Road; the present Broome St. has been laid out nearly on the line of this lane.—Mon. Com. C. Hist., Vol. I. p. 28, as having been built. The house was occupied as a tavern and popular resort by Jacques M. Delacroix, in 1728, being called the Vauxhall Garden, after the London institution of the same character.—See Liber Deeds, LII: 437 (New York).

It had disappeared from the city directories by 1805, Delacroix having removed the business and the name to the site of the Astor Library, Lafayette Pl., Fourth Ave. and Astor Pl., in that year. The old Bayard mansion was demolished in 1821.—Greatesters, Old New York II: 125. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948, 981; Pl. 175, Vol. III.

Bayard's west lot lay west of Broadway, extending from Howard St. (on modern maps) to the line of the Herring Farm above the present Bleeker St., the west line beginning at Broadway, running very irregularly to the present junction of Grand and Greene Sts., to Wooster, north of Spring, to Sullivan and Spring Sts., to Houston, west of Hancoke St, thence somewhat northwesterly to the line of the Herring Farm on the north.

— Some time prior to this date, a theatre was erected, or some building was occupied as a theatre, on the site of Nos. 12 and 14 Broadway.—See Pl. 30, Vol. I. The earliest reference found to this theatre was contained in The New-York Weekly Journal of Feb. 2, 1744, when it was advertised as the "New Theatre," and there was an announcement of the production of "The Beaut Stratagem." See description of Pl. 30, I: 164–65; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 985; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

— Some time before this date, Adam van den Berg began to keep a meal-house and garden on the west side of Broadway between the present Vesey and Barclay Sts., for it is shown on the manuscript map of 1735 (Pl. 30, Vol. I). This was the Church Farm, of a part of which Van den Berg had a lease. The garden was still kept here as a pleasure resort in 1735 (N. Y. Mer. Aug. 13, 1753), and Van den Berg's house was in existence as late as 1770, when a petition was made to erect a liberty pole "opposite M. Van Derkerghus."—See Jan. 30, 1770. Valentine (Man. Com. Cown, 1865, p. 547) says that his tavern was called the Drover's Inn. This was the site in recent years of the Astor House. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 981; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

— About this time, a cultivated space adjacent to Fort George was known as the Fort Garden. As shown on the manuscript map of 1735 (Pl. 30, Vol. I), its location, according to the modern plan, was south of Bridge St., between Whitehall and State Sts. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

The tract of land described in the grant made by Dongan to John Knight on Feb. 10, 1685 (p. 9), was for the first time shown on a map, in 1735, as "The Vineyard," though illogically designated "The Vineyard."—See Pl. 90, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

The following comparative statement of the city's revenues, at five-year intervals from 1710 to 1770, inclusive, shows the amounts derived from various leases and licenses, as compiled from the city chamberlain's Ledgers Nos. 2 and 3, and Journals Nos. 2, 3, and 4, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Ferries</th>
<th>Docks</th>
<th>Marke tes</th>
<th>Fields</th>
<th>Lands</th>
<th>Water Lots</th>
<th>Buildings</th>
<th>Licences</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1730</td>
<td>£246</td>
<td>...</td>
<td>£28</td>
<td>£13</td>
<td>£3</td>
<td>£1</td>
<td>£16</td>
<td>£91</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1735</td>
<td>245</td>
<td>245</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>£13</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1740</td>
<td>307</td>
<td>278</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>£73</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1745</td>
<td>307</td>
<td>100</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>£105</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>68</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1750</td>
<td>425</td>
<td>210</td>
<td>147</td>
<td>£57</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>99</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1755</td>
<td>450</td>
<td>450</td>
<td>490</td>
<td>£147</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>175</td>
<td>175</td>
<td>524</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1760</td>
<td>650</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>650</td>
<td>£122</td>
<td>196</td>
<td>50</td>
<td>50</td>
<td>524</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1765</td>
<td>800</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>750</td>
<td>£358</td>
<td>501</td>
<td>242</td>
<td>242</td>
<td>524</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1770</td>
<td>970</td>
<td>690</td>
<td>250</td>
<td>£374</td>
<td>460</td>
<td>460</td>
<td>460</td>
<td>524</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

—Peterson & Edwards, N. Y. as an 18th Cent. Municipality, 397.

Alexander Malcolm, "Master of the Grammar-School in the City of New-York," gives notice that hereafter he will receive only twice a year, in February and in August, "meer Beginners in Latin" into the school.—N. Y. Gen. D. 30–Jan. 7, 1743 (5). In July of the following year, he announced that "such Scholars as are fit for any of the Classes will be received at any time."—Ibid, July 18–25, 1746. See May 1, 1790; Oct. 14, 1792.

The birthday of the Prince of Wales is celebrated with the usual solemnity (on Monday), but wrongly reported in the Gazette, of April 22nd, which is celebrated on Sunday. The chief incidents are as follows: "At noon the principal Gentlemen of the City and Corporation met at the Fort to drink the Royal Healths while the Guns round the Fort were Firing; and at Night the Gentlemen and Ladies were entertained with a splendid Supper, Musick and Dancing, tho' his Excellency was the Saturday before in some pain lest he should not have been able to have given the Entertainment at the Fort, for that day . . . one of the Chimneys was perceived to have catch'd Fire, which breaking through the Roof of the House, the inside was in great Danger of taking Fire also, but by the timely Assistance, and great readiness that was shew'd by People of all Ranks, in a very acceptable manner, it was happily extinguished with little Damage. His Excellency returned thanks to the People that assisted, in a most obliging manner, and gave them plenty of liquor to refresh themselves after the fatigue, which they accepted very kindly, by drinking his Excellency's and good Family's Health and Happiness."—N. Y. Gen., Jan. 28-Feb. 4, 1735.

"Lookin-glass new Silverd, and the Frames planed Japan'd or Flowered, also all Sorts of Picktures, made and Sold, all manner of painting Work done. Likewise Lookin-glass's, and all sorts of painting Coulers and Oyl sold at reasonable Rates, by Gerardus Dyczynck, at the Sign of the two Cupids, near the old Slip Market."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 20, 1735.

Joseph Johnson, a printer, is charged with counterfeiting ten-shilling bills of credit. He escapes, but his wife is imprisoned in the Goal in the City-Hall, for passing the bills—N. Y. Gen., Feb. 4–11, 1735. Johnson had previously advertised himself as a book-binder living on Duke Street, "commonly called Bayards street."—Ibid, Sept. 23–30, 1734. See also May 6, 1733; Aug. 3, 1744.

The common council gives John Schering leave "to pull down and demolish that part of his House and Wharf which stands upon the Ground of this Corporation at or near the ferry at Brookland," and to convert the materials to his own use.—M. C. C., IV: 245.

The common council appoints a committee "to lay out the High Roads from Spring Garden Gate, to Fresh Water; and from Queen Gate to the End of Queen Street to the fresh-water to meet the Other Road at fresh-water, as the same was laid out by Act of Assembly by William Anderson, Clement Elswier, and Pieter Van Oblincum the 21st day of June 1707 that they Cause a Draught to be made thereof, that the High Roads may be as 545–26. Be referred to the breadth of four Rods at the least."—M. C. C., IV: 245–46. On Sept. 16, 1735, it was ordered "that both the Surveyors of this City do Survey Stake out and lay out the Publick Commons and General Highway from the House of M. Benjamin Peck in Queen Street to the Freshwater as the same was laid out the 21st day of June 1707 by William Anderson," etc.—Ibid, IV: 275. The Spring Garden gate was at the corner of Ann St. and Broadway, and the road to Fresh Water starting thence was the present Park Row, which was the road to Boston. The gate at the end of Queen St. was apparently at about the intersection of the present Perry St. and Quebec (Pearl) St. then stopped. The "Other Road" running to Fresh Water was Pearl St. as far as the present Franklin Sq; beyond that point it took the course of the present New Bowery to its intersection with Park Row at Chatham Sq. See Pls. 26, 27, 30, and 32-a, Vol. II. and compare with map of 1754. For the report of the commissioners who planned the highways in accordance with the act of June 19, 1705 (p. 3), see June 16, 1707.

A shooting contest is advertised to be held on April 7, 8, 9, and 10, "at the sign of the Marlborough's Head in the Bowery Lane." There is five shillings for every bird and the highest or shooting the best hit at 100 yards will receive a prize of a lot of land 61 1/4 in. in breadth on Sackett St, belonging to Robert Bennett.—N. Y. Jour., Mar. 3, 1735. Sackett Street was the present Cherry Street.—Post, Old Streets, 40.
Etienne (Stephen) de Lancy wills to his wife, Anne, for her lifetime, his mansion, in which he now lives, with the warehouse, stables, garden, and lot of ground opposite, situated on Broadway north of Trinity Church.—Abstract of Will's, III: 336. The mansion and grounds occupied the present block between the Throop Street, Cedar, and Greenwich Sts. It was two stories high, of gray stone, the roof being adorned with a cupola. In the rear the ground sloped to the Hudson River.—John Austen Stevens, in Harper's Mag., May, 1890. For the subsequent history of this property (at the present 115 Broadway), which became a noted tavern and hotel site, see April 15, 1734; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977.

De Lancy, by this will, gives to his daughter, wife of Peter Warren, a bequest of $5,000. Among other bequests, he leaves to his son Stephen his "new house, messuage and tenement, ware house and ground between the Custom House street and Whitehall street." This was on the south side of Pearl St., between Moore and Whitehall Sts. His son James, also named in the will, became, about 20 years later, lieutenant-governor of the province.—Will's, III: 337-38. His wife, Anne, whom he married on Jan. 16, 1700, was a daughter of Col. Stevanus von Cortlandt. On April 11, 1700 (p. v), Col. Van Cortlandt gave the lot at the corner of Broad and Pearl Sts. on which Fraunces Tavern now stands.

The master of the sloop "Ruby Paul Painter jun.," bound for Curasao, notifies the public that, for freight or passage on his boat, arrangements may be made with him at the "Pinewalk" on the New-Dock.—N. Y. Gaz., March 11-18, 1735. In 1744, and as late as 1749, Benjamin Kiersted was proprietor of the tavern at the "Sign of the Pineapple" (ibid., Dec. 17, 1744; Sept. 6, 1749), but he had removed to a site "behind the Workhouse" before March 22, 1736 (p. 163).

The committee for building "the Workhouse and House of Correction" (poorhouse or almshouse—see Nov. 15, 1734) reports to the common council that it has entered into two agreements, one with John Burger "for Building the Workhouse and taking Necessary Materials to be used on the Stone-Bond Brick Work," and the other with John Roomer "to perform all the Carpenters Work and take Charge of the Materials to be used thereon." Burger's estimate of his expected expenses comprises the following items:

- "For performing the above Work &c. . . . . . . . $350-00-00"
- "For Seventy Gallons of Rum for the use of all the Masons and Labourers . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 65-15-00"
- "For Seventy pounds of Sugar . . . . . . . . . . . 01-05-00"
- "For Small Beer . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 02-10-00"
- "For Hire of Labourers . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 122-10-00"

Mr. Roomer's agreement calls for compensation of $500, with an additional allowance of "fifty Gallons of Rum and Tobacco to the said Mr. Roomer at laying the Beams and Raising the Roofes;" and he is "to build a shed for the Lime and securing the Workmen Tools." The committee's report is approved.—M. C. G., IV: 250-31. About Sept. 23, 1735 (p. iv), the building was completed. See March 3, 1736, regarding the commencement of its usefulness as an almshouse.

"There is now Published a New Map of the Harbour of New-York, from a late Survey, containing the Soundings and setting of the Tydes, and the bearings of the most Remarkable Places, with the Proper Places for Anchoring. To be sold by the Printer hereof" (Bradford).—N. Y. Gaz., March 24-31, 1735. This map is reproduced on Pl. 29, and described on p. 265, Vol. I.

"John Lasher at the corner of Petticoat Lane, near the Fort," advertises to sell "very good Virginio tobacco."—N. Y. Jour., April 7, 1735. Lasher figured prominently in the city's affairs prior to the Revolution as constable, assessor, and collector; also as a trustee of the Presbyterian Church.—M. C. G., V: 28, 98; VII: 34; VIII: 2.

In the supreme court (presiding justice, James de Lancy, and second justice, Frederick Philips), sitting at the city hall, James Alexander and William Smith, attorneys for Lasher and Lasher, filed their exceptions to the removal of the judges' commission.—A brief Narrative of the Case and Tryal of John Peter Zenger, 9. For facilite of the order, signed by James Lyne, clerk, see Ruther-
The practised from the Order of N. City, Richard, Mayors Augustus’s first of Roux, seal legally —CHRONOLOGY A/. After this, consented to a new principle for freedom, for the defence, for the Governor, for the military, for the colony, for the senate, for the magistrates, for the people. —N. T. Jour., July 11, 1735. This is the rebuke White-ball Battery on Copyes Rocks.—See Oct. 202 see also Landmark Mark. Key, Hl. III. 24.

A teacher’s advertisement reads: “This is to give Notice, that over against the Sign of the black Horse in Smith-street, near the old Dutch-Church, is carefully taught the French and Spanish Languages, after the best Method that is now practised in Great-Britain which for the encouragement of those who intend to learn the same, is taught for 20s. per Quarter.”—N. Y. Gas., July 21, 1735. See also “The Teaching of French in Colonial New York,” in Romancic Review, Oct.-Dec., 1919, pp. 334-76.

Obadiah Hunt advertises for sale or rent “The Lotts and Houses [his tavern] next to the Custom House in New-York, wherein are 9 Fire Places, with a large Yard, a Stable, a Cestern, a Well, and a Pump, in the Kitchen, a large Crane to the Chimney, with Stones, Dressers, and several other Things, that may be left for the Use of a Tenant.”—N. T. Jour., Aug. 2, 1735. See, further, Jan. 13, 1736.

Zenger is finally tried for libel, in the supreme court at the city hall, Chief-Justice James de Lancey presiding, with Frederick Philipse, second justice. The attempt to select a jury unfavourable to the defendant is frustrated by the court’s order that it be struck in the usual way, from the “Freeholder’s Book.” The attorney for the government offers no proof of Zenger’s papers (see Nov. 5, 1735; Oct. 19, and Nov. 2 and 17, 1734) being false, malicious, and seditious, as charged, but insists that they are libels, even though true. The court concurs in this opinion; but the attorney for the defence, Andrew Hamilton, of Philadelphia, nearly 50 years of age, who was retained by Alexander and Smith (see April 16), and who is considered the most skilful advocate in the colonies, overpowers his opponents by citing English precedents. He admits that his client has published the statements, as charged, but insists that they are true, and therefore not libellous, and offers to prove them. Despite the unfavourable charge of the chief-justice, the jury returns in about ten minutes with a verdict of “Not Guilty.”—Brief Narrative of the Case and Tryal of John Peter Zenger (1776); N. T. Jour., Aug. 18, 1735. For reproduction of page one of A brief narrative, etc. see Pl. 54, Vol. IV. See also Rutherford, John Peter Zenger (1904), Chap. III; and, for a summary of the court proceedings and Hamilton’s address, see Man. Com. Coun. (1856), 452-61.

The jury’s verdict was greeted by “three Hurra’s of many Hundreds of People in the presence of the Court.”—About Forty of the Citizens entertained Mr. Hamilton at the black Horse Tavern—see Oct. 21, 1735—so that Day at II. the Mayor, with the Acknowledgement of his Generosity on this Occasion, and at his Departure next Day he was saluted with the great Guns of several Ships in the Harbour, as a public Testimony of the glorious Defence he made in the Cause of Liberty in this Province.”—N. T. . Jour., Aug. 18, 1735. See also Rutherford, op. cit., 249.

Thus, freedom of speech and of the press were established in America. This trial also inaugurated in this country the acceptance of the principle that, in prosecution for libel, the jury shall be the judge of both the law and the facts. “The liberty of the press was secured from assault and the people became equipped with the most powerful weapon for successfully combating arbitrary power, the right of freely criticising the conduct of public men, more than fifty years before the celebrated trial of ‘Juries’ gave the same privilege to the people of England.”—Rutherford, John Peter Zenger, Nat. C Britann. Hist. of Am., Vol. IV., p. 199, 243; Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., II: 209 et seq. For bibliography on Zenger’s trial, see N. Y. State Library Bulletin, No. 56, pp. 165-68; and Rutherford, op. cit., 249.

Zenger publishes the following statements: “The printer now having got his liberty again, designs God willing, to Finish and Publish the Charter of the City of New-York next week.”—N. T. Jour., Aug. 11, 1735. See, further, Sept. 16.

A teacher of “Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic,” as well as French and Spanish, advertises his school, which is “over against the sign of the Black Horse, in Smith street, near the old Dutch Church.” His terms are “for Boys and Girls, 1s. per week, and 11s. for boarders. For Ladies and Gentlemen, 10s. 6d. per quarter for readers, 8s. for writers, and 12s. for examiners.”—N. Y. Gas., Aug. 11, 1735.

“Bedloes Island” is offered for sale by Adolphus Philipse and Henry Lane.—N. Y. Gas., Aug. 4-11, 1735. See April 20, 1676.
The funeral of the Hon. Charles Fitzroy, only son of Lord Aug. Augustus Fitzroy (see Oct. 23, 1735), and suo in-law of Sir Peter Warren, is probably typical of the more important funerals of the period. "His Corps was attended by the Gentlemen of the Council and Assembly, and the Corporation, the Merchants and Gentlemen of the Place. The Companies [of militia] Marched before with Rev'd Arms, and Minute Guns were fired during the performance of the Funeral Service."—N. T. Gaz., Aug. 18-20, 1735.

14 The committee on the enlargement of Trinity Church (see July 2) reports that the foundations on both sides are finished to the ground level. The vestry directs that the walls be raised six feet higher this autumn.—Trinity, Min. (M.). The enlargement was completed in 1737 (p. 9).

23 The governor and his family return from New Jersey.—N. T. Gaz., Aug. 25, 1735.

25 The lords of trade submit to Queen Caroline (described as "Guardian of the Kingdom of Great Britain & His Majesty's Lieutenant within the same") a statement of Cosby's charges of Dec. 6, 1734 (see that date in Addenda), against James Alexander (member of the councils of New York and New Jersey), Lewis Morris (late chief-justice of the province of New York and member of the council of New Jersey), and Rip Van Dam (late commoder-in-chief and president of the council at New York). They recommend the appointment of John Poor and Paul Richard to the council in place of Alexander and Van Dam.—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 34-35. See also Nov. 26.

Sept. Gov. Cosby, about to depart for Albany, renominates Paul Richard (see July 3) as mayor, and Capt. Wm. Cosby as sheriff.—Col. Coun. Min., 334. The nomination was recorded, as usual, on Sept. 29; and the mayor was sworn in, as usual, on Oct. 14.—M. C. G., IV: 276, 279.

16 Zenger delivers to the common council six copies of the city charter, "bound in Parchment Covers." He is paid £5 as agreed (see Oct. 14), and is permitted to dispose of the remaining copies "at such Price as he shall think Reasonable not Exceeding three shillings for each Copy."—M. C. G., IV: 270. See Feb. 9, 1736. For reproduction of title-page, see Pi. 37, Vol. IV. "This is the first printed edition of the Montgomery Charter, and the handsomest specimen of printing from Zenger's press."—Church Catalogue, 520 (IV: 1824).

The common council orders that Andrew Hamilton, attorney for Zenger (see Aug. 4), be presented with the freedom of the city, and a committee is appointed to draft it.—M. C. G., IV: 273. On Sept. 29, the committee submitted the draft, which read as follows: "City of New York, this 28th day of September 1735, by the Right Hon. the Common Council, To all to whom these Presents Shall Come Send Greeting. Whereas Honour is the Just Reward of Vertue and Publick Benefits demand A Publick Acknowledgment We therefore under A Grateful sense of the Remarkable service done to the Inhabitants of this City and County by Andrew Hamilton Esq' of Pennsylvania Barrister at Law by his learned and Generous defence of the Rights of Mankind and the Liberty of the Press in the Case of John Peter Zenger lately tried on an Information Exhibited in the Supreme Court of this Colony, do by these presents bear to the Said Andrew Hamilton Esq' the Publick thanks of the Freedom of this Corporation for that signal service which he cheerfully undertook under great Indispacion of body and Generously performed Refusing any fee or Reward. And in Testimony of our Great Esteem for his Person and sense of his Merit are hereby presented him with Freedom of this Corporation. These are therefore to Certifie and declare that the Said Andrew Hamilton Esq' is hereby Admitted Received and Allowed A Freeman and Citizen of the Said City To Have Hold Enjoy and Partake of all the Benefits Liberties Privileges Freedoms and Im- munities that are or hereafter are granted or behave to Freeman and Citizen of the same City. In Testimony whereof the Common Council of the Said City in Common Council Assembled.

1735

16 The Sept. 1735, and suo in-law of Sir Peter Warren, is probably typical of the more important funerals of the period. "His Corps was attended by the Gentlemen of the Council and Assembly, and the Corporation, the Merchants and Gentlemen of the Place. The Companies [of militia] Marched before with Rev'd Arms, and Minute Guns were fired during the performance of the Funeral Service."—N. T. Gaz., Aug. 18-20, 1735.

14 The committee on the enlargement of Trinity Church (see July 2) reports that the foundations on both sides are finished to the ground level. The vestry directs that the walls be raised six feet higher this autumn.—Trinity, Min. (M.). The enlargement was completed in 1737 (p. 9).

23 The governor and his family return from New Jersey.—N. T. Gaz., Aug. 25, 1735.

25 The lords of trade submit to Queen Caroline (described as "Guardian of the Kingdom of Great Britain & His Majesty's Lieutenant within the same") a statement of Cosby's charges of Dec. 6, 1734 (see that date in Addenda), against James Alexander (member of the councils of New York and New Jersey), Lewis Morris (late chief-justice of the province of New York and member of the council of New Jersey), and Rip Van Dam (late commoder-in-chief and president of the council at New York). They recommend the appointment of John Poor and Paul Richard to the council in place of Alexander and Van Dam.—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 34-35. See also Nov. 26.

Sept. Gov. Cosby, about to depart for Albany, renominates Paul Richard (see July 3) as mayor, and Capt. Wm. Cosby as sheriff.—Col. Coun. Min., 334. The nomination was recorded, as usual, on Sept. 29; and the mayor was sworn in, as usual, on Oct. 14.—M. C. G., IV: 276, 279.

16 Zenger delivers to the common council six copies of the city charter, "bound in Parchment Covers." He is paid £5 as agreed (see Oct. 14), and is permitted to dispose of the remaining copies "at such Price as he shall think Reasonable not Exceeding three shillings for each Copy."—M. C. G., IV: 270. See Feb. 9, 1736. For reproduction of title-page, see Pi. 37, Vol. IV. "This is the first printed edition of the Montgomery Charter, and the handsomest specimen of printing from Zenger's press."—Church Catalogue, 520 (IV: 1824).

The common council orders that Andrew Hamilton, attorney for Zenger (see Aug. 4), be presented with the freedom of the city, and a committee is appointed to draft it.—M. C. G., IV: 273. On Sept. 29, the committee submitted the draft, which read as follows:

"City of New York, this 28th day of September 1735, by the Right Hon. the Common Council, To all to whom these Presents Shall Come Send Greeting. Whereas Honour is the Just Reward of Vertue and Publick Benefits demand A Publick Acknowledgment We therefore under A Grateful sense of the Remarkable service done to the Inhabitants of this City and County by Andrew Hamilton Esq' of Pennsylvania Barrister at Law by his learned and Generous defence of the Rights of Mankind and the Liberty of the Press in the Case of John Peter Zenger lately tried on an Information Exhibited in the Supreme Court of this Colony, do by these presents bear to the Said Andrew Hamilton Esq' the Publick thanks of the Freedom of this Corporation for that signal service which he cheerfully undertook under great Indispacion of body and Generously performed Refusing any fee or Reward. And in Testimony of our Great Esteem for his Person and sense of his Merit are hereby presented him with Freedom of this Corporation. These are therefore to Certifie and declare that the Said Andrew Hamilton Esq' is hereby Admitted Received and Allowed A Freeman and Citizen of the Said City To Have Hold Enjoy and Partake of all the Benefits Liberties Privileges Freedoms and Im- munities that are or hereafter are granted or behave to Freeman and Citizen of the same City. In Testimony whereof the Common Council of the Said City in Common Council Assembled.

Papers concerning the building of the public buildings at Manhattan Island, 1734-1736.

The workhouse is completed.—N. T. Jour., Sept. 23, 1735; see also Nov. 15, 1734, regarding the building operations. It was the first public building erected within the limits of the present City Hall Park.—Man. Com. Gaz. (1865), 530; ibid. (1866), 601, where Griffin's drawing of the building is published.

The governor is invited by "most of the Principal Merchants, Oct. and other Gentlemen of this City, to a very splendid Entertainment..."
The anniversary of the coronation of the king and queen is celebrated. Zenger's news report of the event states that "they elected Magistrates with a considerable Number of Merchants and Gentlemen, not dependent on — made a very handsomely Entertainment in Honour of the Day, for Rip Van Dam, Esq. President of His Majesty's Council, Matthew Norris, Esq; Commander of his Majesty's Ship Tartar, and Capt. Compton Commander of his Majesty's Ship Seaborn, at the House of Mr John De Heunier in this City, at Noon the Company met and while the great Guns of his Majesty's Ship Tartar were Firing, they Drank the following Healths, the King, the Queen, the Prince, Duke, and Royal Family, the Prince and Princess of Orange, the Governor and immortal Memory of King William the third; Success to Coll. Morris, in his Undertakings, to a speedy Election of a new Assembly, Prosperity to the Corporation, my Lord Wilington Duke of Dorset, Sir John Norris and General Compton, and then the Company Di'd, in the Evening the City was Illuminated, the Athous and Entertainment were spent with all the Joy and Dancing suitable to the Occasion."—N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 21, 1755.

After repeated orders, on Nov. 15 and 21, 1734, and Aug. 7, 1755 (M. C. G., IV: 476, 218, 267), the common council gives a peremptory order to Christopher Bancker that, unless he "do Remove the Trepess and take Away the fence which he lately put upon the Lands of this Corporation near the fresh Water on the south side of the Run of Water lately leading to the East River" before November first, the marchals of the city will take it away.—Ibid., IV: 282-83. This seems to indicate that this outlet of the pond had been recently filled up.

The common council orders that the mayor issue his warrant to pay "the sum of Nine pounds two shillings and a penny Cur- rent" for the expense of the ponds and gardens in the City, M. C. G., IV: 284. From this it appears that bricks sold for about the same price then as they did just prior to the European War of 1914-18.

The commissioners appointed to erect a battery on Copyse Rocks (see Nov. 28, 1734), which was begun on July 16 (q.t.), desire all persons having demands for supplying material or labour to submit their accounts, that they may be paid.—N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 13-20, 1755. The commissioners, on Oct. 25, reported that they had expended £4,740.21s.7d., and that at least £875 more would be required.—Assem. Jour., I: 684.

The Mayor, the town clerk, is paid £132:12:9 for "divers services," etc.—M. C. G., IV: 286. His itemized bill includes a charge for making "a fair Copy of the Charter for the Press," and a charge for "the Freedom of Andrew Hamilton Esq. Curiously Engrossed on parchment with a Silk Lace for the Seal."—Ibid., I: 684. The city clerk's account was published by Zenger in February, 1756. See Feb. 9, 1756.

The petition of James Alexander and William Smith is read in the assembly, "praying this House to appoint them a short Day, that they may, in the most fair, public, and open Manner, lay their Complaint at large before this House." The petition is referred to the "Committee of Grievances," and it is ordered that each judge of the Supreme Court be served with a Copy of the said Petition.—Assem. Jour., I: 682. On Oct. 24, the committee reported that Smith and Alexander had appeared before it, and that "as the Matters complained of are against the Judges of the Supreme Court, for what they have acted in their judicial Capacity," the 22 petitioners ought to serve the chief-justice with a copy of their complaint, and the judge (being given time) to answer it. Accordingly, they were ordered to file their complaint with the judges within 20 days, and the judges were directed to answer within 40 days of their receipt of the complaint.—Ibid., I: 683. The "House of Mr. John De Heunier," where this committee said their meeting was held, was the Black Horse Tavern, in William St.—See Oct. 9, 1757. The Assem. Jour. reveals no further action in the case. For the text of the Alexander and Smith complaint, see Rutherford, John Peter Zenger, 51-56.

A sale of land is advertised to be held on this day at the "Corner house below the Meal Market," which is over against the sign of St. George and the Dragon."—N. Y. Gaz., Aug. 4, 1755. The latter was a tavern which stood near the corner of Wall and Water Sts. According to Bayles (Old Taverns of N. Y., 175), the house was occupied in 1750 by Thomas Lepper, who hung out the sign of the "Duke of Cumberland." It is to be noted, however, that, as late as 1784, Joseph Montgomery advertised the sale of a "Good House in Great Dock Street at the sign of the St. George and Dragon."—Rivington's Royal Gaz., Apr. 24, 1782. References to the "Duke of Cumberland" generally described the house as "opposite the Merchant's Coffee House," while the Merchant's Coffee House, itself, was alluded to as the "lower House near the Market." It seems likely that it may have been the house that at the sale was held was the later Merchants Coffee House, which a short time prior to this date was known as the Jamaica Pilot Boat. See Jan. 18, 1736.

Capt. Van Horne presents to the assembly the petition of a "great Number of the Inhabitants of the City of New-York," setting forth "That as they conceive the long Continuance of the same Representatives in General Assembly is a great Grievance, and that the frequent Election of them is a most valuable Privilege," they "therefore flatter themselves, that this House will endeavour all they can to obtain Duty from the Assembly."—Ibid., I: 674. The assembly orders "That notwithstanding the House, did of their own Motive, make Application for the Purpose above-mentioned," on Nov. 28, 1734 (without success), "the Members for the City and County of New-York, do carry to his Excellency a Copy of the said Petition, and at the same Time, acquaint him again, That it is the unanimous Desire of this House, that he will be pleased to dissolve this present Assembly after the several Acts passed, and to be passed at this present sitting, are published."—Ibid., I: 684. Capt. Van Horne reported to the assembly on Nov. 6 that he had done as advised, and that Cosby answered, as he did the previous years, "as that the adjoining, proroguing and dissolving of the Assembly, is the undoubted Prerogative of the Crowns, and that as his Majesty has been pleased to intrust me with that Power, I shall make use of it, as I find it for the Service of his Majesty, and the Benefit of the Province, which I do not yet apprehend it to be."—Assem. Jour., I: 716.

The common council, as a result of the controversy begun on July 8 (q.t.), enacts "A Law declairing to what uses the Seal of this Corporation, the Seal of the Mayor's Court and the Seal of the Mayoralty of this City shall be put unto." The "Common Seal of this Corporation commonly Called the City Seal," which is in the keeing of "the Common Clerk of this Corporation," shall not be affixed to any writing or instrument except such grants, leases, freedoms, warrants, licences, etc. "as shall Concern this Corporation in Point of Interest, or Otherwise" and only by order of the common council, or (in the case of freedoms) by order of the mayor's court.

The "small Seal," which is also in the keeping of the clerk, "commonly called the Seal of the Mayor's Court," is to be "put unto" all processes issuing from the mayor's court, and the court of general sessions of the peace; also on warrants and testimonials, and on licences granted. This is kept by the mayor, or attorneys, or victuallers. It shall be used "to no Other Intents or purposes whatsoever."

The seal belonging to the corporation, which is in the keeping of the mayor, called "the Seal of Mayalty," may be affixed by the mayor, or by the mayor and "Court of Alderman," in all writs or instruments, depositions, affidavits, exemplifications, testimonial, protests, etc., customarily certificated under the public seal of any mayoralty, for better attesting the truth of the things stated therein. This seal shall remain in the keeping of the
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1735

725. These remained the scales of the city until after the Revolution, when they were altered by the common council on March 16, 1784 (q. v.).

The market ordinance of Nov. 18, 1731 (p. v.), is re-enacted with the added provision that "the Country people and Others residing in the Market, may stand or Sit, in such parts thereof, as are not from time to time, particularly appropriated and allotted to other Person or Persons, by Lease from the Corporation of this City. . . . To make the markets "more commodious and convenient, for the Future, for the Reception and Accommodation, as well of the Butchers, being Freeman of this City, as of all Other Persons," it is ordained that "a standing Committee shall be appointed by the Common Council," who shall be ("and are hereby") empowered to "enlarge, Alter, Repair and Support from time to time, with necessary Reparations and Amendments," all the market-houses belonging to the city; and not only to order and direct such improvements, "at the Expense of this City, as they shall find Occasion," to order but also "Apportion the Size of, (and mark) Number, the several Stalls therein; and to Contract for the Letting and Setting the Same . . . for such reasonable Rents, as They, in their Discretions, can agree for, to be reserved and made payable, by equal Proportions Every Month, in the Year, to the Chamberlain of this Corporation for the Use of the Same . . ."

Certain exceptions and restrictions are added: One butcher shall not have more than two stalls or standings in the same market. "Horse-market" are excluded from leasing the stalls or standings; and it is declared lawful for other "Country people and others . . . to take up and accommodate themselves with such Stalls, Standings and places, in any of the said Marketts, which shall remain unappropriated, as they shall first happen to get Permission of the Said, and there and thereon, to Deposit their several Commodity, and to Remain and continue to Expose their Meat to Sale, by the Quarter, as They shall See convenient and all Other their Commodities to Vend, Sell and Dispose of, without Paying any Fee or Reward for the Same, in Order for the Encouragement of the more plentiful Supply of the said Marketts, and the Inhabitants of this City, with all Sorts of Provisions, at the most moderate and reasonable Rates and Prices, . . ."

"Hereafter, the "Clerk of the Marketts," who formerly "received Certain Fees for all neat Cattle, Hogs, Sheep, Calves, and Lambs, that were killed for the Markett," shall out "Intermeddle with the Receipt of any Duty, Fees or Profits, or take any money of any Butchers, or Other Persons, resorting to, or standing in any of the Common Marketts aforesaid."—M. G. C., IV: 293-94.

7 Elias Rippon asks permission of the assembly to sell one-half of his lot in the market to Mr. Henry of Harlem, amounting to the great area of 631 acres or about one square mile.—Assemb. Jour. Oct. 8: 687. Also ibid., I: 698. Rippon also owned Little Barn Island.—Ibid., I: 701-6.

8 Gov. Cosby is ill, and the council meets in his bedroom. Rippon was a member of the council.—Gaz. Nat. Min., 3: 285. Cosby died on March 10, 1736 (q. v.).

An order of the king in council declares Cosby's reasons insufficient for removing Chief-Justice Morris.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 35-37. See Aug. 23, 1735; and Aug. 18, 1735 see also the printed papers, dated 1735. In N. Y. Pub. Library, entitled The Case of Lewis Morris, Esq. Late Chief Justice of the Province of New York, who was Removed from the said Office by his Excellency William Cosby, Esq. Governor of the said Province.

1736

In this year, A Chronological History of New-England in the Form of Annals, was issued at Boston by Thomas Prince.—Church Catalogue, No. 935.

An undated song or ballad, beginning "Ridderman dicoire venum Quid vetat? . . . In ancient Days a Bental Train . . .," was published this year, (by Benjamin) in it, Francis Harrison and the assembly were ridiculed in an allegory representing an assemblage of beasts. There is one of these broadsides in the N. Y. Pub. Library. It is one of the "Parson Campbell" publications.—See N. Y. Pub. Library Bulletin, II: 313. Harrison's will was proved this year, (by Zephaniah) in it, and the estate divided among the heirs.

In this year, John Nage built a stone dwelling on the west bank of the Harlem River at the present 243rd St. Later, this became known as the "Century House."—Riker, Hist. of Harlem, p. 53. It was destroyed by fire in 1901.—See July 2, 1901.

A "concert" of vocal and instrumental music is advertised Jan. 13, to take place on Jan. 24, "for the benefit of Mr. Patchell, the Harper . . ."

In 1736, a second concert was advertised for March 9, "N. Y. Jour., March 8, 1736. The Coflee-House at Broad and Water Sts. and Todd's was two doors north on Broad St.

Obadiah Hunt advertises his slaves and household goods for sale, having leased his tavern on Pearl or Custom House St. to William English.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 6-13, 1736. English continued to occupy the tavern until his death, which occurred some time between Nov. 4, 1741 and Oct. 24, 1742 (M. G. C., VI: 18, 19, 49, 67-68), at which time a vendee was held "at the house of the Widow English." On Nov. 13, 1742, another vendee was ordered to be held at the house of the "Widow English," which was then described as "Near the Meal Market" (ibid., V: 73), that is, near Wall St.

Archibald Kennedy writes to Cadwallader Colden: "We acknowledge the favour of yours by Mr. Gatehouse and have very little to add, of newes, to the papers, Mr. Bradford . . . has Blundered out, I realy believe, a paper. . . ."

The one you'd think from appearances it was otherwise they seem cheerfull about the Fort, and they all dance as usual, Mrs. Cosby excepted [Gov. Cosby being seriously ill]." If Mr. Henderson writes as he told me He would you know the truth If it is true that Mr. Clark has sent in His Acc 11. [sic] Lacco for feet [teal] you may Guess at the rest It is certain the Ladies declare openly of the Side of the Black Horse [see Jan. 19] where there is to be a Grand Supper next Monday being the Princess Birthday according to Mr. Bradfords Acc 11. in opposition to which there is to be an other at Tods on Tuesday [see Jan. 20] being the Princess Birthday according the English Acc 11. They are happy that have the least to do on either side."—From the original letter, with Colored Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

"Last Sunday Morning [Jan. 18] at break 0' clock a Fire broke out at the sign of the Jamaica Pilot-Boat, (the Corner-House by the Meal-Market), but timely help coming in, it was extinguished without spreading farther."—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 13-20, 1736. The proprietor of the Jamaica Pilot Boat was John Dunks (see June 19, 1728). Shortly after this fire, the house was advertised for sale, and in 1736, was purchased by Daniel Brom. Dunks evidently removed the sign of the Pilot Boat from the corner: N. Y. Pasta Lane, and Pearl St.; for, on Feb. 1, 1736, the house and ground "in the Tenure of Mrs. Margaret Dunks at the Jamaica Pilot-Boat, near the Fly Market," were offered for sale.—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 1, 1736.

This day, "being His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's Birthday," is celebrated, and the Black Horse [Tavern—see Oct. 9, 1729] in a most elegant and genteel Manner. There was a most magnificent Appearance of Gentlemen and Ladies. The Ball began with French Dances, and then the Company proceeded to Country Dances, upon which Mr. Norris led up two new Country Dances, made upon the Occasion; the first of which was called The Prince of Wales, and the second, The Prince of Saxe-Gotha, in Honour of the Day. There was a most sumptuous Entertainment afterward. At the Conclusion of which the Honourable Rip Van Dam Esq. President of His Majesty's Council began the Royal Healths, which were all drank in Bumpers. The whole was conducted with Decency Mirth and Clearness.—"N. Y. Jour., Jan. 26, 1736.

An entertainment is given to rivial that of the day before (q. v.).

The "Royal Healths" are drunk at the fort, in celebration of the birthday of the Prince of Wales, but the usual proceedings are hindered by the illness of the governor (see Jan. 17). In the evening, however, there was a ball at "Mr. Todd's."—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 20-Feb. 3, 1736.

The tavern of Robert Todd, on Broad St. between Pearl and Water Sts., was a popular one. During this and succeeding years, it was often used for a place or the benefit of Mr. Patchell, the Harper. Some time between Jan. 30, 1746, and Aug. 24, 1747, at which time the tavern was being run by the Widow Todd.—N. Y. Post-Boy.
George Washington

The United States of America, 1789

To all whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

Whereas the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, has appointed certain persons to be Ambassadors, Judges of the Supreme Court, and other Officers of the United States, this act being approved by the President and Senate, and the said persons having taken the oath of office, and the President of the United States having thereupon signed the commissions, it is hereby ordered that the said persons shall be forthwith commissioned and appointed to the respective offices aforesaid, and shall continue in the same until the expiration of the present Congress.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at Philadelphia, this day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine.

George Washington, President of the United States of America.
The lords of trade, in a representation to the king, report, 6
Whitehall, after obtaining the opinion of the king's attorney and solicitor-general that the governors of the plantations "ought not in any case whatsoever to sit & vote as Members of the Council in their respective Governments."

The British legal opinion on which this advice was based, signed by J. Wille and D. Ryder, and dated Jan. 15, 1736, is particularly interesting as introducing into the language of government in New York Province, and perhaps also into that of the other American provinces of Great Britain, the word "Legislature." While not a new word in English, to signify the power that makes laws, or "a body of persons invested with the power of making the laws of a country or state" (see Murray's New English Dict., 1908, title "Legislature"), a careful page-by-page search, covering the years prior to 1736, inclusive, in the Jour. Leg. Coun., Assem.

The governors are restrained from exercising the proper advice and consent of the majority of the province, in many cases. On the occasion of the absence of a Governor. The President of the Council, if there be no Lieutenant Governor upon the Place, always acts as Governor, till a new Governor is appointed by His Majesty. "—N. T. Col. Docs., VI: 40-41.

A correspondent writes: "Passing the other Day down the Broad Way, I saw a Coach, upon which being a particular Coat of Arms, Crest and Motto, my Curiosity led me to enquire its Owner, which I found to be Coll. Morris, now in England." "—N. T. Jour., Feb. 23, 1736. Col. Lewis Morris, here referred to, wrote to his daughter in England, Aug. 26, 1743, that he had received by a late vessel "the body of the ashes [chaise] and the things sent for, except the trusses, all safe and in good order." —Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1890), 12.

Mar.

Ebenezer Grant advertises to sell "very good corks" (probably a typographical error for "corks") at "the Sign of the Dog's Head in the Portrige Pot." "—N. T. Jour., March 1, 1736. Cock-fighting was a favourite pastime in early New York. This sign "is applied to the stem of the cup, and to the stem of society, emblem as it was from early time of slovenly housewife and mean accommodation." —John Austin Stevens, "Old New York Taverns," in Harper's Mag., May, 1890.

Plans are perfected for the operation of the almshouse. A committee is appointed to consider what Terms this Corporation may hire an able and sufficient Person to be keeper of the House of Correction and Overseer of the Workhouse and Poorhouse." His duties shall be "to set the Poor to work, and to correct the coutumacious," and other persons committed to the house of correction. The committee is also to consider what furniture, utensils, and stock will be needed for these institutions; and "what may be the most suitable manner of Employing the Poor upon: Such as carding, Knitting, Spinning, Dressing Hemp or Flax; Flicking oakum or other Labour; that such Poor as are able to work, may not Eat the Bread of Sloth & Idleness, and be a Burthen to the Public." —M. C. C., IV, 305.

This order and the report of the committee, on March 31, 1736, give a clear indication of the modus operandi of the first almshouse of New York City. On the latter date, the committee informed the common council that, "pursuant to public printed Notice and Advertisements" (see N. T. Gen., March 6, 1736), several persons had applied for the position of keeper, and that they had selected John Sebring and his wife.

The committee made several important recommendations: 1. That certain specified furniture and utensils should be provided, including four spinning wheels, one or two large wheels for spinning wool or cotton, some shoemaker's tools, and leather for making shoes, two pairs of woolen cards, knitting needles, flax, wool, cotton, etc.; 2. That the keeper "be sworn truly diligently and honestly to Execute the Office," and "do Justice and shew Humanity to the poor who are not able to labour, & Correct the Incorrigible and such others as shall be permitted by the Master"; 3. That the church-wardens of the city be appointed overseers of the poor, and "have the Direction and providing of necessary supplies of Provisions for the said Workhouse and poorhouse out of the Fund for the Maintenance of the Minister and poor;" 4. That the "Master" of the house of correction, workhouse, and poorhouse shall set at work "all such poor as shall be . . . able to labour; . . . all disorders persons, parents of Bastard Children, Beggers, Servants running away or otherwise misbehaving themselves, Trespassers, Rogues, Vagabonds," etc.; and that the keeper shall correct persons who refuse to work "by moderate Whipping;" 5. That he shall "yield a true Account to Every General Quarter Sessions of the peace to be held for this City and County of all persons committed to his custody, and of the offences for which they were committed;" 6. That it be recommended to the justices to commit to the house of correction "all such sturdy Beggers as go wandering and begging about the Streets and asking Alms, according to divers Statutes in such Case made and provided there to be put to hard labour;" 7. That parish children, sent to the poorhouse for maintenance by the church-wardens and overseers of the poor, be taken by the "Master thereof" and be "religiously educated and taught to read write and cast account; and employed in spinning of wool, Thread, Knitting, Sewing or Other Labour most suitable to their Genius in order to qualify them to be put out apprentices and to services for their future livelihood;" 8. That "Fetters, Gves, Shackles, and a convenient place or whipping post be provided for the said House of Correction for punishing the incorrigible and disorderly persons . . . ;" 9. That "a large Garden be forthwith fenced, plowed up and made round the said House for the raising of all kind of Roots Herbs &c for the use of the poor in the said House; and the Overplus not expended therein to be disposed of by the Keeper, and the profits accruing thereby to be by him paid to the Church Wardens of the said City . . . towards the better Relief and Maintenance of the Poor of this City;" 10. That "the Inhabitants of this City have free Liberty and Lycence to send to the said House all unruly and ungovernmentable Servants and Slaves there to be kept at hard labour, and punished according to the Directions of any one Justice with the Consent of the Master or Mistress of such Servant or Slave; That the Master or Mistress . . . shall pay unto the Master of the said House for Entrance one shilling, for whipping or other punishment one shilling and six pence, and for discharging such servant or Slave one shilling, all of which perquisites shall be applied to the Use and Benefit of the keeper of the said House." The common council ordered to Enquire into the report and ordered that the committee provide utensils, etc.; and "cause the Garden therein mentioned to be fenced, ploughed &c made;" —Ibid., IV, 307-11.
The development of the almshouse system, prior to the Mar. Revolution, is indicated in the following digest of orders selected from Minutes of the Common Council:

The building committee was directed on April 15, 1736, to, “imploy Workmen and provide Materials for Building a Kitchen, Oven and Washhouse to the said Workhouse.”—Ibid., IV: 319.

Sebring, the keeper, was paid on May 3, 1736, “for Digging of the Garden of the Said Poorhouse, Garden Seeds, &c.”—Ibid., IV: 324.

It was ordered on May 15, 1739, that an additional building be erected for a hospital for contagious diseases.—Ibid., IV: 459.

Directions were given on April 10, 1740, to have the fence up around the Garden of the poorhouse and the Ground of John Harris.”—Ibid., IV: 485. This was removed in 1746.—Ibid., VI: 176, 187-88.

A committee was appointed on April 15, 1746, to have the poorhouse enlarged (ibid., VI: 171); on March 6, 1752, to have a bell-tower erected thereon (ibid., VI: 359); and on March 19, 1757, to fence in a piece of ground for a burial-place next to the fence on the east side of the almshouse (ibid., VII: 85).

In 1766-7, an addition to the building was built (ibid., VII: 21, 29, 45, 49, 76); and in 1769 another (ibid., VII: 173, 185, 195, 196, 197).

Regarding the exact location of the first almshouse, see June 22, 1774. With the building of the new one in 1776-7, the old building was demolished by order of the common council of June 19, 1777 (9.0). See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 971.

The subscriptions collected at the preparing of the Meat Market, the common council orders payment by the city for £2.16 to Joseph Reade for this object.—M. C. G., IV: 505. This was the market-house at the east end of Wall St.—See Oct. 4, 1709.

A “Consort of Muzick” is advertised to be held on this day “for the Benefit of Mr. Patchell. The Harpincord Part performed by himself.” Tickets for the concert may be procured “at the Coffee-House, at the Black Horse and at Mr. Todd’s.”—N. T. Jour., March 8, 1756. The Coffee House was on Broad and Water Sts. (see Jan. 27, 1702), the Black Horse was on William St. south of Exchange Pl. (see Oct. 9, 1725), and Todd’s was next the Coffee House, on Water St. (see May 28, 1733).

Gov. Cosby’s death occurs, after an illness of almost 16 weeks. His body was buried on March 13 in the king’s chapel in the fort.—N. T. Gam., March 6-15, 1736. In Dec. 1735, the governor had been “dangerously ill of a violent Feversit, and Fever that followed,” and on Jan. 15 was said to be “troubled with a Cough,” and was thought to be “Consumptive.”—Ibid., Dec. 15-23; Jan. 6-13, 1736. See April 29.

Immediately after Cosby’s death, George Clarke is elected president of the council, James Alexander not voting (see March 11). Clarke takes the chair and declares that an order of the council by the deceased, commanding that the claimant be issued giving notice of the governor’s death, and confirming all officers in their places. The seal, Cosby’s commission, etc., as well as the seal of New Jersey, are delivered to President Clarke.—Col. Guin. Min., 325.

One of the above mentioned proclamations, printed by Bradford, is preserved in the collection of the N. Y. Pub. Library. Clarke issues it as president of the council and commander-in-chief of the province, and in it states that, by reason of the suspension of Rip Van Dam from the council by Cosby’s order on Nov. 24, 1735 (4.9), the administration of the government has devolved upon him. He therefore commands that all civil and military forces shall continue to exercise their offices until the king’s pleasure is known. Rip Van Dam, who had been previously suspended from the council by Cosby (see Nov. 24, 1735), demands the commission, instructions, and seal, first of Mrs. Cosby and then of Clarke, with a statement that it is alleged to suggest the profits of the government in case he be restored. Clarke reported to the lords of trade, on March 16, that an insurrection was threatened; but that, in spite of “all their noise and threats,” he was “peaceably possessed of the administration of the Government,” and had reason to hope it is “to prevent the people by a mild and prudent conduct,” he would “clear the people to their due obedience.”—N. T. Col. Doc., XI: 42-50. The struggle between Clarke and Van Dam continued until October, when a civil war was barely averted.—See April 26, June 28, Sept. 1, Sept. 9, Sept. 20, Sept. 29.

James Alexander, one of the council, is served with a protest by Rip Van Dam against all persons who have aided George Clarke in taking upon himself, or in keeping, the administration of the government. On March 24, Alexander issued a printed bulletin denying that he had ever advised or consented to Clarke’s assuming charge of the government.—From original broadsides, of March 24, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

A letter, signed “Philo Patria,” is published by Zenger, making the following reference to the deceased governor (Cosby); “... as a true Lover of this Province, I can’t help wishing, That the Measures of his Administration may rather serve as Beacons of Danger and to be avoided, than as Examples to a future Tyrant; in this very much depends the Quietness of the Minds of a People long distressed with arbitrary Power.”—N. T. Jour., Mar. 15, 1736. Referring to this, doubtless, President Clarke wrote to the Duke of Newcastle on July 26: “Zenger has lately published a vile paper highly reflecting on the Memory of Governor Cosby . . .” Clarke adds a possible explanation of its publication.—N. T. Col. Docs., VI: 72. Cf. the writings of “Philo Patria,” under Oct. 23, 1735.

“From Cosby’s time to the end of the colonial period, the language of the New York Assembly, in reply to the Governor’s messages and orders, becomes more and more defiant, though usually the boldest defiance is accompanied by a profession of loyalty to the Crown.” For illustration of this, see New York Governors of New York and Their Part in the Development of the Colony, by Frank H. Sweeney, in the N. Y. State Hist. Ann. Proceedings (1909), XVII: 137 et seq.

The president, council, speaker, and some of the members of the assembly, as will appear in this, oppose petition for a separate governor, on the death of Cosby (see March 10). The grand jury of that state sent a similar petition the next day.—From original broadsides in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Geo. Clarke, president of the council and commander-in-chief of the province, issues a proclamation, printed by Bradford, extending the adjournment of the general assembly to the last Tuesday in April.—From original broadsides, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Regarding the legality of such adjournments, see April 26.

James Alexander causes a notice to be posted at the market and other public places, denying that he in any way aided or encouraged George Clarke to take upon himself the administration of the government. The notice is also published in the N. T. Gam., March 22-25, 1736. See March 10 and 31, April 26, and Sept. 29.

Bradford, signing himself “A Friend and Well-Wisher To all Men,” defends himself at length, in the pages of his newspaper, against the charges of falsehood contained in Zenger’s Journal. He declares he is neutral in the Cosby controversy which has been going on for two years, adding: “... yet as I am and have been above forty years last past a Servant to the Government (and consequently to the several Governors during that Time) so I have attended to my duty, some of God’s Printers have printed in the late observations which the last Governor’s Friends, thought proper to make upon what the other Party printed against him, and for my so doing Mr. Zenger, or some of the Party, have been angry with me, as I may suppose, (for I know not of any thing else that I have done by which they could be offended with me, they having formerly been my very good Friends) they have from time to time, Reflected upon me and against my Gazette, intimating that what I published was not true.” He continues thus, in a manly, honest, fashion, to state his case, and explain his position and its relation to the events of the period, stating in closing that he intends to “be obsequious to the King, and to all that are put in Authority under him.”—N. T. Gam., March 28, 1736.

The freeholders and freemen of the city complain in a petition to the common council “of the Multiplicity of Gaming Houses within this City, and the evil consequences attending the same by Debauching the Youths and Others.” Some of these consequences are thus enumerated: “our Youth are thereby greatly corrupted in their Morals render’d disordered, unruly and insolent, tempted to keep unreasonable Hours; to use unlawful Methods for maintaining their unreasonable & Extravagant Expenses, sometimes attended with Quarelling and fighting, and after unfit for any thing, unwilling to perform those Services to their Country, and we find that neither Council nor Correction are likely to be of their desired Effect, while the Spring and fountain of these Disorders are tolerated and Allowed.” The petitioners therefore request that the common council use its “Authority, Interest and Endeavours to suppress those Gaming Houses, especially all Billiard, Truck
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

1736
Tables and Cards &c. to which are owing the Impoverishment and Ruin of many in this place, who have contracted a habit of Gaming in their Youth, have not been able to Leave it till Reformed by Nature. A Committee was appointed to act accordingly.—M. C. C., IV: 311–12.

A certificate reviewing the distinguished career of James Alexander, and stating that he is "a true friend to the late glorious Revolution, and the protestant Succession in the Illustrious House of Hanover," and well affected to his present Majesty and Person and Government," is signed and sealed by the common council.—M. C. C., IV: 312–14. In the municipal election of September, 1734 (p. 90), the candidates of the popular party, under the leadership of James Alexander and William Smith, had been elected as city magistrates and common councilmen. According to Cosby's report to the lords of trade (N. Y. Col. Dockets, II: 21), this was the action of a "mised populace." This opinion, probably, was what led to the above-mentioned certificate. See also Political Sci. Quar., Dec., 1924, p. 592, regarding this point of view.

The common council asserts the right of Andrew Law, as lessee of the dock and slips of the city, to make a charge for vessels lying at the slip "from the Southernmost End of Wall Street to the End of Burnett's Key," inasmuch as this is comprehended in his lease, and he has the right to demand rates in accordance with an ordinance "for regulating the Lying of Vessels in the Dock and Slip Streets," dated April 23, 1723. See also April 9.

Elizabeth Jourdain, the tavern-keeper, a poor widow (see Sept. 26, 1717), is granted a free license to sell strong liquor by retail in the city.—M. C. C., IV: 314. She received the license free in March, 1737.—Ibid., IV: 365.

Apr. 9
At a meeting of the common council on March 31, it was proposed and Insisted on, that the whole Monies arising from Licenses to Retailers of strong Liquors, for License and Liberty to Retail or sell by the small Measure should be applied to such Uses and disposed of in such manner as the Common Council shall from time to time order and direct." After debate, involving a study of the charter, it was resolved "by all the Members then present, except the Mayor [Paul Rich]ard and Recorder [Daniel Horanmanden], that the moneys arising from Licenses aforesaid, could not be disposed of by but Order and Authority of this Court and that no Member or Members Officer or Officers of this Court, or any other person whatsoever had or have any Right or Shadow of Right or Title to any part of the said Monies without the Order and Direction of this Court." At the present meeting, on April 9, a minute is placed in the record that, "Notwithstanding which solemn Resolution and Declaration of this Court made and given after mature deliberation and serious Consideration as aforesaid, we the Members now present, or most of us, being [are] informed, that the present Mayor, contrary to the practice of his predecessors and the Resolution and Declaration aforesaid, in high Contempt and Disregard of the Duty, duty, it has long been the custom and usage of this board to give sundry and divers Sums of money by him received for Licences aforesaid. The Mayor had been asked if the report was true, and if true whether he would pay such money into the hands of the Chamberlain. He replied that it was true, and that he had resolved to retain the money. The common council now enters a protest in the record, and resolves to take measures, "when in their power," to compel the Mayor to deliver to the chamberlain such sums as "he now doth or hereafter shall unjustly, illegally and violently detain contrary to the order and Resolution of this Court, and all Damages, Interest Costs and Charges, which this Corporation are Incurred to or may suffer or sustain for or by reason of the Members," etc. See also April 9.

The committee for building the almshouse is requested by the common council to "employ Workmen and provide Materials for Building a Kitchen, Oven and Washhouse to the said Workhouse."—M. C. C., IV: 319. See March 3.

15
To "Secure the Fire Engines of this City," the city ordered also to "cause a convenient House to be made, contiguous to the Watchhouse in the Broad Street, for securing and well keeping the Fire engines of this City."—Ibid. On July 21, the carpenter's work done on "the Shed for securing the Fire Engines" was paid for.—Ibid., IV: 328.

Apr. 15
Several grants of water lots, made with certain conditions in 1736 and 1737, serve to illustrate the method employed by the city in filling up the water front and extending and wharves outward, around the lower part of Manhattan Island.

One of these begins with a petition made by Philip Schuyler, Jr., to the common council, on April 15, stating that he owns "all those sundry Messages and Tenements... on the East Side of... Counties Key and from River and... with the Lots thereunto belonging lying between the said Slip, and Fletcher Street," covering about 80 feet of the river front. He desires to purchase 200 feet of land, "to be gained out of the said East River" (water lots), fronting his land. This is allowed, and a committee is appointed to have the land surveyed, and the terms drawn up.—M. C. C., IV: 319–20. The committee's report, on June 3, states that a survey of the water lots has been made; that the breadth is 64 ft. 11 in., and will be 76 ft. 3 in. in breadth "when wharf'd out and made to the Extent of two hundred foot to be gained out of the said East River upon a Range with Burnett's Key." A plan of the locality is made part of the report. The committee recommends that the grant he made at an annual rental of 100s6d3, with the proviso that Schuyler will make a street 45 feet wide "to Range Equal with both sides of Burnett's Street," and complete it on or before March 9, 1743.48, at "that, at the Outward part of the Said two hundred foot of Ground, be gained out of the said East River and Harbour," he will by the same time "make and Erect Another good and sufficient Street or Wharf," 40 feet wide; also that he will make "the Equal half of the Street or Wharf leading from Fletchers Street aforesaid to the Extent of the Said two hundred foot to be gained out of the said East River;" also that he will make a "good and sufficient Wharf Street or Peer" of 18 feet 4 inches in breadth along "Maiden Lane Slip to the Extent of the Said two hundred foot to be gained out of the said East River or Harbour, and that the Proffits Arising for or by the use of the said Wharf Street on Peer and the Slip be Received by this Corporation for the use of this Corporation;" also that he will build a "pair of Stairs at the Extent of the Peer or Wharf leading from Maiden Lane," to be maintained by him, his heirs and assigns, for the use of the boats, etc., of the ferry-man. The report proposes to give to Schuyler "the Water and soil under the Water aforesaid fronting the Messuages and Tenements aforesaid," and all the profits "from the Outward Wharf which is to front the East River or Harbour with all Cranes Stairs and Landing places" (except the stairs above-mentioned) "to be made therein by the said Petitioner his Heirs and Assigns." It is ordered that the corporation grant the water lots aforesaid to him, and that the grant was executed July 22.—Ibid., IV: 331; Liber Deeds, B: 281. Water Street received its christening in this grant.—See July 22, 1736. Its history, however, began much earlier.—See June 16, 1696.

A printed letter, signed in M.S. by Rip van Dam, and intended for the individual subscribers, mentions "the late and very sordid and divers Sums of money by him received for Licences aforesaid." The mayor had been asked if the report was true, and if true whether he would pay such money into the hands of the chamberlain. He replied that it was true, and that he had resolved to retain the money. The common council now enters a protest in the record, and resolves to take measures, "when in their power," to compel the mayor to deliver to the chamberlain such sums as "he now doth or hereafter shall unjustly, illegally and violently detain contrary to the order and Resolution of this Court, and all Damages, Interest Costs and Charges, which this Corporation are Incurred to or may suffer or sustain for or by reason of the Members," etc. See also April 9.

The same declaration of corporate right was made on Apr. 13, 1744 (Ibid., V: 116), and Feb. 12, 1721 (Ibid., V: 343), in the case of Richard's successor, Mayor John Cruger, the elder. Regarding the later cases of Mayor Holland, and Mayor John Cruger, the younger, see April 18, 1745; Oct. 26, 1753.

The committee for building the almshouse is requested by the common council to "employ Workmen and provide Materials for Building a Kitchen, Oven and Washhouse to the said Workhouse."—M. C. C., IV: 319. See March 3.

15
To "Secure the Fire Engines of this City," the city ordered also to "cause a convenient House to be made, contiguous to the Watchhouse in the Broad Street, for securing and well keeping the Fire engines of this City."—Ibid. On July 21, the carpenter's work done on "the Shed for securing the Fire Engines" was paid for.—Ibid., IV: 328.
ABLE TO PROVIDE THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1736 Willet," is offered for sale or to let by Rip van Dam. He also offers, among other properties, "The Cellar Kitchin, at present the Poor House, kept by Mrs. Burger" (see July 5, 1715).—N. Y. Jour., Apr. 26, 1736. John Burger had contracted, on March 31, 1735 (q.v.), to be responsible for the stone and brick work in constructing the "New House."—Ibid., May 17, 1736.

20 The household furniture of the late Gov. Conby (see March 10) was advertised to be sold at public vendue on this day.—N. Y. Gaz., Apr. 15-19, 1736.

May

2 Another grant of water lots is made, with conditions similar to those in Schuyler's grant.—May 2, 1745. The Peyser and others petition the same for a grant in fee simple of 200 feet of land to be gained out of East River fronting their property, "wherein to make further Improvements for the better Conveniency of Trade and Navigation and Enlargement of this City in its buildings." The petition shows the location of their land to be in the East Ward, on the southern side of Fletcher Street (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, Ill: 1000), fronting with, the river, with lots between Fletcher Street and Rodman's Slip or Van Cliffe's Slip. The petition is granted.—M. C. G., IV: 323. The new lots to be thus formed, nine in number, are described in the grant, which is entered in full in the Minutes (May 11, 1737), with the report of the committee appointed to survey the ground. The petitioners covenant to make at their own expense a street 45 feet wide, "to Range Equal with both sides of Water Street," on or before March 25, 1746. At the outward part of the 200 feet of ground to be gained from the river, they are required to make and set out the same in directions to receive a street 40 feet wide, by the same date. They are also to extend Fletcher Street to the extent of the 200 thus gained from the river, and to maintain all of these streets and the wharves erected or to be erected there. —Ibid., IV: 573-76.

3 Van Cotte Slip is alternatively called Rodman's Slip (M. C. G., IV: 323). Sometimes, during both earlier and later periods, it was also referred to as Lyon's Slip (see 1730); it was the present Burlington Slip, now filled up and forming the termination of John St. See also Aug. 9, 1692; May 3, 1744.

7 The inventory of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.

11 "Takes out of the House of Mr. Edward Eastham [Earlham] who keeps the Fighting Cocks-Inn, in New-York, a Silver Quart Tankard, marked on the Handle, x's engraving, the Silversmiths Mark is W & A punch'd, and a Cyprell on the Lid of ES..."—N. T. Jour., May 24, 1736. The tavern with the sign of the "Fighting Cocks" stood at the present No. 28 Water St. It had existed (as a tavern) since 1711, and was leased about 1725 to Richard Bradford, and later to his son, William Bradford, and then sentenced to receive Twenty Lashes on the Bare Back at the Publick Whipping Post," the next day; but out of regard for her having two small children, and being now with Child," the court remitted the punishment, and ordered her discharge on payment of the fees.—Ibid., 164, 167.

12 The military service of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.

14 "Takes out of the House of Mr. Edward Eastham [Earlham] who keeps the Fighting Cocks-Inn, in New-York, a Silver Quart Tankard, marked on the Handle, x's engraving, the Silversmiths Mark is W & A punch'd, and a Cyprell on the Lid of ES..."—N. T. Jour., May 24, 1736. The tavern with the sign of the "Fighting Cocks" stood at the present No. 28 Water St. It had existed (as a tavern) since 1711, and was leased about 1725 to Richard Bradford, and then sentenced to receive Twenty Lashes on the Bare Back at the Publick Whipping Post," the next day; but out of regard for her having two small children, and being now with Child," the court remitted the punishment, and ordered her discharge on payment of the fees.—Ibid., 164, 167.

17 The inventory of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.

21 "Takes out of the House of Mr. Edward Eastham [Earlham] who keeps the Fighting Cocks-Inn, in New-York, a Silver Quart Tankard, marked on the Handle, x's engraving, the Silversmiths Mark is W & A punch'd, and a Cyprell on the Lid of ES..."—N. T. Jour., May 24, 1736. The tavern with the sign of the "Fighting Cocks" stood at the present No. 28 Water St. It had existed (as a tavern) since 1711, and was leased about 1725 to Richard Bradford, and then sentenced to receive Twenty Lashes on the Bare Back at the Publick Whipping Post," the next day; but out of regard for her having two small children, and being now with Child," the court remitted the punishment, and ordered her discharge on payment of the fees.—Ibid., 164, 167.

25 The military service of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.

29 "Takes out of the House of Mr. Edward Eastham [Earlham] who keeps the Fighting Cocks-Inn, in New-York, a Silver Quart Tankard, marked on the Handle, x's engraving, the Silversmiths Mark is W & A punch'd, and a Cyprell on the Lid of ES..."—N. T. Jour., May 24, 1736. The tavern with the sign of the "Fighting Cocks" stood at the present No. 28 Water St. It had existed (as a tavern) since 1711, and was leased about 1725 to Richard Bradford, and then sentenced to receive Twenty Lashes on the Bare Back at the Publick Whipping Post," the next day; but out of regard for her having two small children, and being now with Child," the court remitted the punishment, and ordered her discharge on payment of the fees.—Ibid., 164, 167.

32 The military service of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.

35 The military service of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.

39 The military service of the estate of the late Richard van Dam, whose will was proved April 14, 1736, bears this date, and shows, among other items, "1 Prospect of Ye City of New York." This evidently refers to the Burgis View. The original MS. inventory was offered for sale by a New York dealer in Nov., 1917.
John Kelly, keeper and owner of the public slaughter-houses within New York City, seeks a renewal of his lease. A committee of the common council is appointed to consider his petition.- N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 20. On Sept. 20, the mayor gave leave of a renewal, and the common council gave Kelly a lease for 21 years.—Ibid., IV: 343-44.

Daniel Horsmanden is appointed by the governor to be judge of the court of vice admiralty. He was sworn in on the 23rd.—Cal. Col. Min., 1736.

The De Lancey house, later famous as Fraunces Tavern, at this time occupied as a residence by Col. Joseph Robinson, is offered for sale.—N. Y. Gaz., July 18-25, 1736. Evidently no purchaser was found; for the same house was again advertised in January, 1735-6.—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 22, 1735. For a brief history of this site, see April 11, 1700.

Aug.

The city pays £125 for 1000, "three foot Shingles" for "the Poor House" (almsgouse).—M. C. C., IV: 339.

Sept.

The Clarke-Van Dam controversy is reviewed at length in a letter of this date published in Zeeger's Journal of Sept. 13, 1736, also in A Letter To one of the Members of the late General Assembly (pub. separately by the same printer in 1736). This episode was a renewal of the bitter conflict which marked Cosby's administration, Clarke being supported by the court faction, and Van Dam by the popular party.

With friendly irony, Bradford addresses a long editorial to "Brother Zenger" on the subject of faction, and loyalty to the crown, claiming "That the Administration of the Government is right, and Lawfully lodged in Mr. Clarke's hands, and must remain so till the King's Pleasure be known."—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 13, 1736.

A printed letter, headed "The Sentiments of a Principal Freeholder. Offered to the Consideration of the Representatives of the Province of New York, who are about to meet, and sit the 14th of Sept. 1736," is distributed, in which Stephen Clarke is urged to stand up for the administration of the government.—See one of these original broadsides, in the N. Y. Pub. Library, on which has been written, by the hand of James Alexander, a reference to Zenger's Journal, of Sept. 27, 1736, for a refutation of it. An open letter "To one of the Members of the late General Assembly," unsigned, was printed by Zenger, expressing the writer's opposition to the views of the printed letter entitled "The Sentiments of a principal Freeholder" (written from Westchester), and antagonistic to Clarke's claim to the presidency of the council.—From original broadside, in N. Y. Pub. Libr., Oct. 12, 1736.

The assembly having been adjourned by Clarke to this day, he issues a proclamation, printed by Bradford, adjourning it further to the second Tuesday in October.—From original broadside, in N. Y. Pub. Libr. See Oct. 14.

In letters to the Duke of Newcastle, to the lords of trade, and to the Board of Trade, N. Clarke urges that the suspension of Van Dam be confirmed by the king.—N. T. Col. Docs., IV: 74-77.

Disaffection in the assembly over the suspension of Rip Van Dam from the council (see Nov. 24, 1735; June 18, 1736) continues. Clarke informs the lords of trade that the administration forces (the court faction) are "terrified by Zengers Journals."—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 75.

The Clarke-Van Dam controversy (for a connected account of which, see Man. Com. Coun., 1865, pp. 722-25) becomes more serious when each assumes the right to nominate the municipal officials. Clarke is advised by Clarke's nominee for mayor, while Van Dam names Cornelius van Horne. The council on Oct. 1 ordered a proclamation to be published warning all officers against Van Dam. Military preparations followed, including the purchase of gunpowder, camp utensils, and equipment for the garrison of Fort George, and an inventory of all military stores.—Col. Min., 327. Clarke ordered all the regular forces with their officers into the fort, where a strict watch was kept day and night.—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 20-Oct. 4, 1736. Clarke wrote to the lords of trade that he had removed from his house to town for the benefit of the council. He expressed the belief that factional troubles would end as soon as Zenger's name is removed. In Ibid., 327, the authors of articles appearing in Zenger's Journal, and Zenger himself, were sent home (to England).—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 80. The common council, in doubt whether to accept the appointees of Clarke or Van Dam, on Oct. 12 ordered all the attorneys practising in the mayor's court to attend on Oct. 14, "to give their Opinion and Advice in what manner this Corporation ought safely to Act for the Preservation of this City, Relating to the Nomination of the Officers."—M. C. C., IV: 154. A contest between the forces of Clarke and Van Dam was averted when, on Oct. 13, a ship arrived from London bearing a royal confirmation of Clarke as president and commander-in-chief of the province.—N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 11-18, 1736. Van Dam was therefore compelled to yield, and Clarke's appointees were sworn in at the regular time on Oct. 14 (q.v.).—M. C. C., IV: 359-52.

The motive forces in the Clarke-Van Dam controversy are explained in a recent essay by Dr. G. W. Edwards, entitled "New York City Politics before the American Revolution," published in the Political Sci. Quar., for Dec., 1931, pp. 793 et seq. The city was now on the brink of civil war. Two companies of the king's forces kept in the fort alone prevented the popular "faction" from taking up arms.—Ibid., citing N. Y. Gaz., Oct. 11, 1736.

Journal No. 3 of New York City's Department of Finance of 10-day carries contemporary entries from Oct., 1736, to June, 1737.—See the original MS. volume, at N. Y. Hist. Soc.

President Clarke receives from the home government instructions relating to the form of prayer for the royal family.—Cal. Coun. Min., 327.

A Subscription Plate—On the 13th of October next, will be run for, on the Course at New York, a Plate of Twenty Pounds Value, by any Horse, Mare or Gelding, carrying ten Stone (Saddle and Bridle included) the Best of three heats, two miles each heat. Horses intended to Run for this Plate, are to be ent'd the Day before the Race, with Francis Child, Fresh Water Hill, paying a half Piatre [Piaton] each, or at the Post on the Day of Running, paying a Piatre. And the next day (being the 14th) will be Run for, on the same Course, by all or any the Horses that started for the Twenty Pound Plate (the Winning Horse only excepted) . . . All Persons on Horse-back or in Chaises, coming into the Field Clerk's Office, with their Subscription, will be given as a Gift. Horses only excepted are to pay Six Pence each to the Owner of the Ground."—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 20-27, 1736. See also Nov. 5, 1735. A few years later (see Oct. 11, 1742), the race-track was on the Church Farm, west of Broadway.

Clarke's speech to the assembly refers to the need of their session—"To heal the unhappy Divisions that have sprung up in this Province, to provide for the Safety, the Defence and Prosperity of it; To encourage Trade and Navigation, and To promote the raising and Manufacturing such Commodities as may be Advantageous to your selves, and the Queen's Subjects. For the Correction of the neglect of ship-building in recent years, and urges its renewal. He recommends the completion of fortifications now under way, particularly those in the Mohawk country.—From the original broadside, printed by Bradford, in N. Y. Pub. Libr.; Jour. of the Votes and Proceedings (1736).

Up to this time, the provincial council, with governor or president presiding, held its meetings in the fort, and the general assembly met in the city hall. Now, Chief-Justice Delancy, as speaker of the council, reports to that body that the corporation of the city has offered the council the "free use of their Common Council Room in the City Hall during every Session of Assembly and that they would with all convenient speed, fit up the same for their reception, in Such manner as the Council shall think proper, and that the same was at their Service, until the necessary alterations could be made therein."—Jour. Leg. Coun., 1: 665. The next day, the council passed a vote of thanks, and recommend the common council "give some Declaration of Trust which may effectually Secure the use of the Common Council Room for the members of his Majesty's Council for the future, whenever they shall think convenient."—Ibid., 1: 664. On Oct. 21, the common council of the city passed the following resolution, which was entered in the provincial council minutes of Oct. 26:

"Forasmuch as his Majesty's Council of this Province, in their Legislative Capacity, during the sitting of the General Assembly, are to sit and Act in their Legislative Capacity, as a Distinct Body by themselves (without the Presence of the Governor or Commissa-

The series of Zenger's articles appeared in Chief of this Board, William Smith, and Lewis Morris, Jr., the authors of articles appearing in Zenger's Journal, and Zenger himself, were sent home (to England).—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 80. Clarke and Van Dam.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1736 General Assembly: And Forasmuch as the Chamber in the City Hall of this City commonly Called the Common Council Chamber is under the same roof, where the General Assembly do usually meet and sit, whereby both Houses of the Legislature, may have speedy Recourse to Each other for their greater Ease and more speedily accomplishing the Publick Affairs of this Province. It is therefore Resolved and Ordered that the said Chamber in the City Hall of this City, commonly Called the Common Council Chamber, be with all Convenient Expedition Handsomely fitted up and furnished, and a Convenient Closet or more be made in the same, and that the same Chamber be for General Assembly, Picture Maps, Prints and other useful Furniture; and that the same . . . be secured for the sitting of his Majesty’s Council in General Assembly, in such Manner and Form as this Court shall be advised by Council learned in the Law. A committee of the common council was appointed to carry the resolution into effect. — M. G. C., IV: 357-58; see also Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 665. The council took up its quarters there on Oct. 36.

It should be observed that this is a very early if, not the earliest, use of the word “Legislature” in the original official records of New York Province; such usage being prompted, possibly, by its use in the opinion of the King’s attorney on Jan. 15—See under Feb. 6. O’Callaghan has adopted this designation freely, however, in his “Historical Introduction” of the Jour. Leg. Coun. (1861), I: xi; xv et seq. Regarding legislative nomenclature in the English colonial period in this province, the student will find useful hints in the taking of journals or analysis with references:

The “Charter of Liberties and privileges granted by his Royall Highness to the Inhabitants of New Yorke and its Dependencies,” Oct. 30, 1683 (p.c.), stated that “the Supreme Legislative Authority under his Majesty and Royall Highnesse John Duke of Yorke Albany &c Lord proprietor of the said province shall forever be and reside in a Governor, Council, and the people mett in General Assembly.” The act defined the manner of choosing the persons who should sit “as representatives in the General Assembly;” when its sessions should be held, etc. — Col. S. 16. The general assembly was the name of the lower house of the provincial legislature; it was not the name of the united branches, the upper and lower houses, or what we now call the legislature.

So, in Slaughter’s time and later (see March 19, 1691), the lower house was concurrently called in its own minutes the “General Assembly” (Aemb. Jour., 1764, I: 1 et seq.), or the “House of Representatives” (ibid., I: 2 et seq.). It was most frequently referred to as “the House” (ibid., I: 2, 5 et seq.); its members were called “Assembly Men” (ibid., I: 1), or “Representatives” (ibid., I: 2), or “Members” (ibid., I: 2). All of these designations were employed in the Jour. Leg. Coun., as far as we find them printed (through 1765) for the colonial period.

The upper house was always the “Counsel,” but known in the title of its journal as the “Legislative Council.” — See Jour. Leg. Coun. (1861), Vol. I and II. Its gathering was also called “Counsel.” — Ibid., I: 1 et seq. The council minutes mention the lower house as the “Assembly” or “house of Representatives,” and its members as “Members of the Representatives.” — Ibid., I: 2. An address to the king was signed by “the Governor Council and the Representatives of this Province.” — Ibid., I: 7. In joint session the two branches were referred to as “Council & Assembly.” — Ibid., I: 80. No common name covering both bodies was employed by the provincial records; for it would be observed that the use of the word “Legislature” (noted above as in M. G. C., IV: 533-54) first occurs, not in the journals of either house, but in the minutes of the common council of the city of New York, and is quoted in the Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 665.

The same testimony is found in the colonial laws. Prior to the adoption of the state constitution (see April 20, 1777), when laws began to be enacted in the name of “the people” of the state of New York, the style employed for the enactment of the colonial laws was: “Bee enacted by the Governor Council and Representatives in General Assembly met,” or some verbal variation of this style. From this form, the inference has been erroneously drawn that the name “general assembly” was intended to be applied to both legislative branches taken together. After the adoption of the federal constitution of the United States, the colonial laws are: “Bee enacted by the General Assembly” (ibid, 144 et seq.), a style in frequent use (1683 et seq.), due to the original inception of laws in the lower house; or “Bee it Enacted . . . by the Governor Council and Representatives Oct. now assembled” (ibid., I: 171), which was the authorized way of stating the same purpose in accordance with Dongan’s instructions of May 29, 1686—N. Y. Col. Docs., III: 570. Andro’s instructions, dated April 16, 1688, contained the same limitation as Dongan’s: “And you are to observe in the passing of laws that the Stile of enacting the same by the Governor and Council, be henceforth used by no other.” — Ibid., I: 218.

Following this, however, Slaughter’s commission, Nov. 14, 1689, gave him authority, with the advice of the council, to call “other general assemblies.” The persons elected should constitute the people’s share in the legislative power, and this gave their representative body the name “General Assembly” (see March 19, 1691).

We find in the Col. Laws N. Y. after Slaughter’s time, from May 6, 1691, onward, and in the Jour. Leg. and Jour. Leg. Coun., the style: “Bee it . . . enacted . . .” By the Governor and Council and Representatives met in General Assembly (Col. Laws N. Y., I: 225), or some slight verbal variation of it, without change of meaning or intent, pointing out the three essential branches of the law-making power, the governor, council, and general assembly; but with no one general name like legislature, to designate the two interacting bodies, the upper and lower houses of the legislative branch of the government.

Chief-Justice De Lancey notifies the council that as the business of the supreme court requires his constant attendance, he cannot regularly and conveniently attend the council as speaker. A resolution is therefore passed “that the eldest Councillor present shall at all times hereafter, therefore, preside and officiate as speaker.” — Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 665. See also Cumming’s “Historical Note” in Col. Laws N. Y., I: 221.

The common council orders that the inhabitants of the East Ward have liberty to enlarge the market-house at Countess Key (the Fly Market) at their own expense. — M. G. C., IV: 574. See also Sept. 6, 1709; 1759; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 958; Pl. 174.

Inhabitants of the East Ward are given permission by the common council to enlarge Old Slip market-house at their own expense. — M. G. C., IV: 354. See references to the Old Slip Market under Apr. 18, 1701; July 8, 1701; Apr. 24, 1718; also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 959; Pl. 174; De Voe, Market Book, 93.

The council meets for the first time in the “Council Chamber” in the City Hall.” — Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 665-66. See also Oct. 19, 1736; March 27, 1739.

George Clarke receives the king’s commission as lieutenant governor—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 84. The next day, he took the usual oaths of office and published his commission at the city hall. — Col. Coun. Min., 318.

The governor’s council orders that henceforth the assembly be prorogued instead of being adjourned.—Col. Coun. Min., 328.

A New York news item states that, on this date, “Archibald Kennedy, Esq., Collector of His Majesty’s Customs and Receiver General of that Province, was married to Mrs. Schuyler, Widow of Arent Schuyler, Esq; Deceased, a Gentlewoman of a Plentiful Fortune.” — Boston Gaz., Dec. 20-27, 1736.

Daniel H miraculato writes from New York to Cadwallader Colden: “Zeager is perfectly Silent as to Polllicks. his Correspondent! I believe heartilyCrop Sick. And old Morris retired to Hell Gate to eat his own Sapan & Milk, & says the Devil may take ’em all: But if his natural disposition will let him be at rest, I’m mistaken in the Man.” From the original letter, with the Golden Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

1737

A census of the city and county of New York for this year shows a population (in parentheses) of the city, 4,526; 189; 2,566; 79; 3,278; 541; 1,773; 753; 1,873. The total for the province is 60,437, an increase of this county numbers 1,079.—Ibid., VI: 134. See 1738.
The work of enlarging Trinity Church, first proposed in the vestry in 1718, is now fully completed.—Berrian, An Hist. Sketch of Trinity Church (1847), 53.

In this year, Abraham Benson bought a farm of about 90 acres, "lying north of Harlem plains, and known in our day as the Samson A. Benson or Race Course Tract; its title was disputable, but its origin hitherto an enigma to the professional conveyancer."—Riker, Hist. of Harlem (1881), 487. It is still true that, to the present time (1962), New York title searches are unable to state why this Benson property was called the "Race Course Farm." The solution may be found in a notice published on Feb. 22, 1762 (q.v.), for a horse-race to be run at the "New Course, at Harlem."—Jan.

The oil mill, chocolate mill, and bolting mill of John Roosevelt, all of which are of wooden construction, situated near the Fly Market, are destroyed by fire. The neighbouring houses, "which are stately and according to the new Method of Building," are little damaged.—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 10, 1737; Boston Gaz., Jan. 24-31, 1737. The date of the fire is printed "February 22," evidently by mistake.

John Richard, writing from New York to his brother-in-law, Henry van Rensselaer, of Albany, says: "We have here a very Cold winter the Ise Does a Great Deel of Damage to the forte-feacon and the New Wharfs that was Built Last Year, we have a Bundle of Ise here, two Days before Christmas there is a Bundle drove away and Amboy with two in tidings of them Yet So we believe that they are Drove to Sea."—From the original MS. in the Van Rensselaer-Fort Papers, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

"It appears impossible any longer for one man to serve effectually as jailer, and at the same time as supervisor of the watch, cryer and bell-ringer of the mayor's court, and marshal; for the common council now orders all the Goods and Rooms in the Upper Story of the City Hall (Except the Store Room) for Debtors and the Gaol below Stairs for Criminals" to be given over to the custody of high sheriffs. Robert Crannell Jr., who retires as jailer but continues in his other offices, is permitted still to occupy and be custodian of the room in the hall in which he "now dwelleth," as well as "the Room Opposite unto it, and the Room wherein the Fire Engines were lately Kept."—M. C. C., IV; 362. See Pl. 72-b, Vol. I. A later order (ibid., IV; 423) required Crannell "to Remove out of this City Hall or before the first day of May next" (May 1, 1738), and James Mills, a city marshal, who has been "Victualling Poor Prisoners in the Common Gaol," and who is subsequently termed "Keeper of the Gaol" (ibid., IV; 155), to move into Crannell's apartment with his family. This is double the expression of the council's conviction that the jailer must live in the building if the prisoners are to be securely guarded. Regarding Mills' service in this capacity, see Peterson & Edwards, N. Y. as an 18th Cent. Municipality, 304.

The common council decides to "present the Freedom of this City to Daniel Horsmanden Esq" Barrister at Law, one of his Majesties Co: Council for this Province; and to order of his Corporation as A Mark of their great Esteem for him and for his good services done for this Corporation."—M. C. C., IV; 362. The seal of the corporation was not affixed to the "freedom" until Oct. 14, 1740.—Ibid., V; 6.

"Instantly as it appears to the Vestry that if the South Gallary be removed directly back to the Wall of the New Building pursuant to the rule made the last Vestry that the pillars must be placed in the Ile [sic] and be inconvenient it is resolved that the said Gallary be enlarged in breadth so as to place the pillars so as not to intercept the Ile or the pew."—Trin. Min. (1763).

Feb. 5-10, 1736.—See Dec. 7.

Mar. 3. "All Sorts of Garden Seeds, lately Imported from England, by the Governor's Gardiner, Enquir'd of the said Gardiner in the Fort, where you may Supply'd with the said Seeds at a Reasonable Rate."—N. Y. Gaz., March 18-25, 1737.

2 A committee of the common council is appointed "to Ascertain the Cause to be Staked out, the Publick Highway from the Corner of Mr. Freds House in Queen Street to Fresh Water," which shall "be Continued the breadth of four Rodd at the least as the same is directed by Act of General Assembly,"—M. C. C., IV; 364. This is a part of the present Pearl St., which runs in a generally north-west direction. The act referred to is that of June 19, 1703 (q.v.).

Benjamin Peck petitions for a grant of water lots "Contiguous to his Houses in Queen Street in Montgomery Ward," and the common council appoints a committee to have the ground surveyed and to agree with him.—N. Y. Gaz., March 18-25, 1737; M. C. C., IV; 364-65. The committee reported on Oct. 4 that they had agreed with him, his heirs and assigns, the lots 50 feet wide from high to low-water mark, with permission to build "A Peer or Wharfe next Adjoining to the East Side of the Premises," 18 feet wide, from high to low-water mark, on or before March 25, 1746.—Ibid., IV: 368-9. For an account of Peck's Wharf, and also Peck's Slip, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 990. The wharf was shown as early as 1730, on Pls. 16, 27, and 27-a, Vol. I, just south of Ferry St. Peck's Slip was at the foot of Ferry St; it was ordered filled up in 1772 (M. C. C., VII; 366), but remained an open slip at least as late as 1797.—Pl. 64, Vol. L. In modern times, this slip was the easiest end of Ferry St., just as Burling Slip was the easterly section of John St.—See Pl. 174, Vol. III.

A warrant is issued to pay Edward Brewen, the public whiper, £210, his quarter-year's salary, and 15 shillings "for Setting in the Pillory and whipping through the Town at A Cart's Tail one Patrick Butler for Issuine Counterfeit Dollars &c: and whipping four Other Criminals."—M. C. C., IV; 365. When the annual salary of the public whiper was first instituted, it was £5 (see Oct. 14, 1713); it is now £10.

The governor's council orders that the mayor of New York proclaim on the man-of-war "Tartar" (Capt. Norris), and appoints a committee to inquire about desertions from the ship.—Cal. Cown. Min., 328. On March 30, the mayor wrote to Capt. Norris that he could not comply with this order, and the council decided that it had no power in the matter.—Ibid., 329.

Bradford advertises the publication of An Essay Way to get Money and be Rich, which he sells at 6d. It describes "A Scheme by striking Twenty Thousand Pounds (Paper Money) to encourage the raising of Hemp, and the Manufacturing of Iron in the Province of New-York."—N. Y. Gaz., March 28, 1737. A contributor to the same issue of the Gazette discusses the same letter in a broadside, contending that, as the present governor has an estate in this country, he will be likely to favour the scheme if it passes the legislature because it is for the good of the country; although "other Governors have been paid for Acts to strike Paper Money."—Ibid.

In accordance with a council order of March 29 (Cal. Cown. Min., 329), Clarke issues a proclamation appointing Thursday, April 21, as a day for public rejoicing and thanksgiving for the deliverance of the king from "the late pernicious storm he met with on his passage from Holland to England." He directs that divine service be performed in the forenoon in all the churches and chapels in the province.—N. Y. Gaz., April 4, 1737.

Clarke, in an address to the assembly and council, says: "We have the pleasure to see peace restored to this once divided Province."—Jour. Leg. Cown., I; 676. He undoubtedly referred to the political disorders of the preceding three years. See Sept. 31, 1734. He asks that the part of the barracks in the fort left unfinished when the rest of the barracks were repaired (see April 7, 1731) be put in order.—Assemb. Jour., I; 696. On Sept. 2 (q.v.), repairs were not yet made (ibid., I; 705), for Clarke then reported the barracks in bad condition, and urged their completion.—Jour. Leg. Cown., I; 683. See June 21, 1738.

A committee of grievances is appointed to meet every Thursday at 5 p.m., at the house of John de Honner (the Black Horse Tavern).—Assemb. Jour., I; 696.

Agreeable to Clarke's proclamation of March 31 (q.v.), this day is observed as a day of thanksgiving in the manner required. After attending the morning service in Trinity Church, the governor returned to the fort; "he was attended with the principal magistrates and gentlemen of the city, where the Royal and Provincial healths were drunk, under the discharge of the cannon from the fort (His Majesty's regular troops being the whole time under the fire), and the evening was concluded with illuminations and the other usual demonstrations of joy."—N. Y. Gaz., April 5, 1737.

William Bradford "is now Removing to the Sign of the Bible near the Fly-Market, next Door but one to the Treasurers",—N. Y. Gaz., April 18-25, 1737; M. C. C., IV; 364. For previous note see New York Gaz., Mar. 15, 1737. The "Treasurers" here referred to was Abraham de Peyster, Jr., treasurer of the province. From an examination of the real estate records, the premises into which Bradford moved were at the present 190 Pearl St. He must have rented them, as his name does not appear as a grantee.

27 The committee appointed to consider the matters of revenue, referred to in the address of Lieut.-Gov. Clarke on April 3, renders a statement of accounts, one item of which is for Lt.-Col. A. C. Clarke of the town of Manhattan, for services of several years, completion of which was requested by the Governor on May 25 of this year, in preparation for the Assembly.——Assemb. Jour., I: 780. These meetings were held at the Black Horse Tavern of John de Neveur on William St.—See Oct. 9, 1772.

May

The committee appointed Jan. 24, 1735, to engage an overseer of fire-engines selects Jacobus Turk, a gunsmith, whose duties are to be "to keep them Clean and in good Repair." The city pays him a year's salary in advance and in addition "to enable him to go on with finishing A small fire Engine he is making for an Experiment."——M. G. C., IV: 367. Turk succeeded Anthony Lamb as overseer.—See April 6, 1735.

9 "A Fire-Engine that will deliver two Hogsheads of Water in a Minute, in a continual stream, is to be Sold by William Lindsay, the Maker thereof. Enquire at Fighting Cocks, next Door to the Exchange Coffee-house, New York."——N. Y. Gen., May 9, 1737.

June

Peter Warren, Esq. a parcel of land bounded, according to the modern map, as follows: westerly by a line east of Eighth Ave. from 14th to 21st St. (the old Fittyrow Road); northerly by a line north of 21st St., from Eighth Ave. to a point east of Sixth Ave. (same course) and thence by a patented a patent by a line east of Sixth Ave., from 17th to 21st St.; and southerly by a line running diagonally from 17th St. and Sixth Ave. to 14th St. east of Eighth Ave., these last two courses being along the old Southampton Road.—See original deed in possession of N. Y. Hist. Soc; see also June 18, 1737, and Aug. 17, 1741. In this conveyance, for the first time, "Greenwich House" is mentioned. See Supplemental Landmark List, "Greenwich House"; and, for the above described parcel, see the Sir Peter Warren Estate under Farm Titles, Vol. V.

Besides the water lots granted on this day to Abraham de Peters and others (see May 5, 1736), for the purpose of developing the East River water front, other lots are granted for the same purpose to Henry van Borsum, son of the late Egbert van Borsum, who petitioned on Nov. 15, 1714 (M. G. C., IV: 236) for such lots fronting his property "on Queen Street Wharf in Montgomery Ward between the East Side of Van Cliffs Slip and the Ground of Lewis Gomes." Van Borsum is required to make at his own expense a street 45 feet wide "to Range Equal with both sides of Water Street," out of the 200 feet to be gained by filling in along the river front, or on before March 25, 1746. At the outward part of the 200 feet to be thus gained he is to make a street 40 feet wide with a sidewalk 10 feet wide, and a 40 foot street on either side of the street, or Peer," 12 feet 4 inches wide, along Van Cliffs' slip the full extent of the 200 feet, etc,—M. G. C., IV: 377-79. The several grants of water lots made in the summer of 1737, all containing somewhat similar obligations, are recorded in Liber Deeds, B: 256-364.

John Peter Zeiger is appointed by Lewis Morris (the newly named speaker of the assembly) to be printer of the Votes of the assembly. His first work under this appointment was to print The Speech of the Honourable George Clark, Esq., etc. of the occasion of his arrival at the city of New York. On Feb. 20, the secretary of state (Newcastle) expresses to the lords of trade the king's direction that draughts of a commission and instructions be prepared. On June 22, the lords of trade wrote Clarke of the appointment, requesting him to do his utmost "to preserve the Tranquility of the Province" until the arrival of "Delaware," the required commission was ready on June 30.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 96-98. Lord Delaware did not come to New York, however. In a biographical note by O'Callaghan (ibid., VI: 163), it appears that he resigned "in September following," on being made colonel of the first troop of life-guards. A report of the same date in the Gazette and signed by "George Clarke Jun.," asks him to intercede with the secretary of state in behalf of the elder Clarke, who is still lieutenant-governor; that he may succeed Delaware as governor; and the younger Clarke offers to pay Delaware 1,000 guineas "to indemnify" the latter "for any loss, or expense occasioned thereby," this amount being "all that the Gov'n1 there under its present circumstances" allows him to offer.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 63-64.

There is no evidence that the contrary, George Chato was appointed governor, in 1741, "in the room of the Lord Delaware."——See April 30, 1741.

A teacher's advertisement reads: "This is to give Notice that I John Hastier Goldsmith in this City, have at my House a Frenchmaster, who teaches to Read and Write French, as also the Arithmetick in a very short Method. Whoever inclines to learn may apply to the said John Hastier at his House who will agree on reasonable Terms.

"Any Persons that desire to be Taught at Home, may be attended at reasonable Hours, provided the Time does not interfere with the Hours of his School."——N. Y. Jour., June 27, 1737. For an earlier notice concerning the teaching of French, see July 21, 1735. Sometimes instruction in the other romance languages was combined with that in French (see Oct. 26, 1747).

These are to inform all persons that there is a ferry settled from Ambrose over to Staten Island, which is duly attended for the conveyance of those that have occasion to pass and repass that way. The ferriage is fourteen pence, Jersey currency, for man and horse, and five pence for a single passenger."——N. Y. Gen., July 4, 1737. The provincial council of New York, a year earlier, had granted a patent for a ferry from Staten Island to Elizabethtown.—Col. Coun. Min., 326; Col. Land Papers, 221.

Henry Holt, a dancing master, advertises that on July 4 there will be a "Ball" at the house of "Mr. De Lancy, next Door to Mr. Todd."——N. Y. Weekly Jour., July 4, 1737. The De Lancy house stood on the sewest corner of Broadway and Pearl Sts., adjoin the house of Robert Todd, on Broad St. In 1765, it became Queen's Head Tavern. See also April 21, 1737.

These desiring freight or passage on the sloop "Mary and Margaret" bound for Curacoa, are asked to arrange for same with the master, William Burrows, at the "Cocoa Nut-Tree, Richard Bakers on the New-Dock."——N. Y. Gen., July 11-15, 1737. The "Cocoa Nut-Tree" stood at Wall and Water Sts., and was situated, according to a later notice of William Burrows, "over against the Merchant's Coffee House."——*N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1745." Baker secured a five-year lease on the L. I. ferry, from March 25, 1743 (M. G. C., IV: 75), but on Sept. 4 of the following year, "being sick and weak," he devised all his estate to his wife Martha and his children, Richard and Sarah.—Abstracts of Will's, IV: 50 in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1865). He died before Jan. 16, 1743; his widow then surrendered the lease of the ferry to Edward Willett.

The House, for a time by a public lottery, voted, on Dec. 11, 1751 (p. 78) we find Peter de Joncourt conducting a tavern "next Door to the Merchant's-Coffee-House."

The common council appoints a committee "to lay out the 39 Highway from the Run of Water late at the foot of Fresh Water Hill between the Corner of the Pasture house called the Drover's Pasture" —M. G. C., IV: 382. This was at the head of the present Chatham Square.—'Man. Com. Coun., (1866), 615. The "Highway" here means the King's Highway or Road to Boston, being the present Park Row, from Pearl St. to the Bowery at Division St., traversing what is now Chatham Sq.—See pl. 74, Vol. III. See also remarks regarding the Dutch ministers' plot (the Dominie's Pasture of the foregoing entry in the Minutes of the Common Council) in comments on pl. 36-4, I: 277-78.

Lieut.-Gov. Clarke states, in an address to the council, that "that part of the barracks in Fort-George which for want of money was left unfinished, demand Adolph Schuyler for a ferry from Staten Island to the Dock, and if the Dock is not ready, it is requested he repair it. I therefore earnestly recommend them to your present consideration, as I do likewise the new Fortifications which want the finishing hand."——Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 62. See also Sept. 5, 1738.

In the election of July 24, this day, the contest is between Adolph Philipse and Cornelius van Horne for the office of representative in the general assembly. Party feeling runs high.

Both parties call out their whole strength. The sick, the blind, the lame, Jews, soldiers from the garrisons, many who had been bedridden, men from used to德尔沃an, and the vote was received with favor to the election of the Field. Fighting and quarrelling are the disorder of the day.—See Wm. Smith Papers (MS.), III: 187-89.
On Oct. 10, the scrutiny showed that, on Oct. 8, Philipse had a majority of 21 votes over Van Horne (Boston Gaz., Oct. 10—17); and on Oct. 12, Philipse was declared elected and was sworn in (B. & M. Jour., Nov. 1).

Regarding the disqualification of the Jews to vote at this election, as ordered by the general assembly, nearly all writers on the history of New York refer to this disqualification as lasting thereafter throughout the colonial period. One writer, however (Macklin, The Sufferings of the Jews, 1739, 4th. ed., 1879, p. 111) says that, at the beginning of the assembly, at New York, says that he allows the passage of "an Act of Parliament to qualify them to vote for representatives, for which they paid an immense sum of money."

In a letter to the author on this subject, Mr. Samuel Oppenheim calls attention to the fact that there was no prohibition before 1737 against Jews voting; also that it appears they were voted for other officers (M. C. G., III. 165, 167, 177), that under their letters of denization, acts of naturalization, or as natives, they were entitled to the same rights in the colonies as other persons, some of them even being elected constables and tax collectors; that, under the colonial laws, freemen and freeholders, to which classes Jews could, and did belong, were entitled to vote, and that the laws not excluding Jews (Col. Laws N. Y., I. 405, 451) that the colonial laws were considered as binding upon the authorities in the province, even though inconsistent with, and not conforming to, the laws and practice in England (Blackstone); that, under an act of parliament passed in 1773, the Jews were specifically permitted to be naturalized in all the colonies, and were exempted from using the words "upon the true faith of a Christian" in taking the oath of allegiance and abjuration, which act may have been the one referred to by Smith, supra, though no evidence has been found of their spending immense sums to have them inserted in the various newspapers, etc., to induce the electors to vote for Representatives.

The action of the general assembly in 1737 in rejecting votes of the Jews was not binding upon subsequent assemblies, as each body was the judge of the qualification of its own members, and was not bound by the action of its predecessors, and that there is no record of any subsequent assembly rejecting the votes of Jews at elections; but on the contrary that Peter Kalm, who was in New York in 1748, speaks of the Jews then "enjoying all the privileges common to the other inhabitants of this town and province" (Kalm's Travels into North America, 245—46, p. 5, ed. under Oct. 30, 1748).

The Reformation, or the large list of titles to the cultivated estates, a thing not known before. It caused many warm debates among the people, and the loss of much time among the labouring classes, who spent a large part of the day contending with each other about the result—Boston Gaz., Oct. 10—17, 1737. On Sept. 21, the assembly voted that the action of Sheriffs Cosby had not invalidated the election—Assem. Jour., I. 712.

In the course of the scrutiny of the votes in the Philippe—Van Horne contest (see Sept. 10 and 12), it appeared that the Jews were largely in favour of Philippe—Wm. Smith Papers, III. 187—89. He was on friendly terms with the wealthy and influential of any testimony by Jews at the hearing. The house sustained him—Assem. Jour., I. 712.

On Sept. 23, Smith also objected to having the votes of the Jews received in the election. He appealed to the religious passions of the members, reading from a Bible in his hands of the sufferings of Jesus Christ, and so affected his audience by his illogical argument that the house resolved that the Jews, not having the right to vote for members of parliament, could not be admitted to vote for representatives of the province—ibid.; Wm. Smith Papers, III. 187—89, and Smith's New York (Continuation, 1830), II. 47—50. Van Horne, however, lost the election, however; Van Horne's name was determined in the house, by which Philipse received many votes which Smith thought should have been rejected, agreeably to the laws of the province—ibid. This was to allow non-resident freemen to hold office—Assem. Jour., I. 712.

This being the anniversary of the king's coronation, a double watch is provided for this and the two succeeding nights, as there is reason to apprehend that many unruly persons will assemble and create disorder "by friging Squibs, Guns and Other Fire Workes; and in Rambling about the Streets in a disorderly manner." — M. C. C., IV: 392.

Mayor Richard, reappointed on Sept. 29 (M. C. C., IV: 387), is too ill to swear in (ibid., IV: 394). Gerrardus Burrusen, the deputy mayor, presided at the meetings of the common council from Sept. 20, to Oct. 17 inclusive. — Ibid., IV: 385-96. For the first deputy mayor, see June 27, 1665. Wm. Beekman served as deputy mayor for over two years (1681-3) when Mayor Dyer was in England (M. C. C., I: 87-95).

The common council appointed a committee to prepare a bill to be presented to the assembly "to enable this Corporation to Repair and New Cover part of the City Hall of this City, and to defray the Expense of A Constables Night Watch for the Ease of the Poor of this City, and Other purposes therein mentioned." — M. C. C., IV: 399. On Nov. 4, 1772, the bill was approved for presentation to the assembly and the committee was permitted to add a clause regarding the appointment of firemen. — Ibid., IV: 404. The freemen's act passed the assembly as an independent measure on Dec. 16, 1772 (c.c.), carrying the desired provisions on this subject. See also Sept. 19, 1772.

The king's birthday (which occurred Oct. 30) is celebrated with the usual ceremonies. — N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 7, 1772.

The inhabitants of the East Ward, living near the Fly Market, complain to the common council that the pier "before the Houses at the Fly Market, and in vacant lot Generally metly," also "To New lay or Cover the floors of the Assembly Chamber Lobby and Court Room and Other Repairs Necessit and Necessary to be made to the Said City Hall;" and "To Repair and make weather tight the Cupolo of the Said City Hall, To Amend Repair & Enlarge the Get of the City, and to Amend and Repair many Other parts and places of and in the Said City Hall to make the same more usefull and Convenient for the purposes the same was built and designed for." The work on the city hall is to be paid for out of the fund of £200 authorized to be raised by the act of the general assembly "to the Eleventh Year of his present Majestys Reign." — M. C. C., IV: 401-402. See also, July 15, 1783.

November

Inhabitants of the East Ward, living near the Fly Market, complain to the common council that the pier "before the Houses at the Fly Market, and in the vacant lot generally metly," also "To New lay or Cover the floors of the Assembly Chamber Lobby and Court Room and Other Repairs Necessary to be made to the Said City Hall;" and "To Repair and make weather tight the Cupolo of the Said City Hall, To Amend Repair & Enlarge the Get of the City, and to Amend and Repair many Other parts and places of and in the Said City Hall to make the same more useful and Convenient for the purposes the same was built and designed for." The work on the city hall is to be paid for out of the fund of £200 authorized to be raised by the act of the general assembly "to the Eleventh Year of his present Majestys Reign." — M. C. C., IV: 401-402. See also, July 15, 1783.

The town is observed in memory of the discovery of "that horrid and Treasonable Popish Gun-Powder Plot to blow up and destroy King, Lords and Commons" (the Guy Fawkes plot of Nov. 5, 1605). The War Office of his Majestys Council, the Assembly and Corporation, and other the principal Gentlemen and Merchants of this City waited upon his Honour the Lieut. Governor at Fort George, where the Royal Healths were drank, as usual, under the discharge of the Cannon and at Night the City was illuminated. — N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 7, 1772.

[The Corner House, on the North side, below the Meal-markets, is offered for sale by Francis Childs.] — N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 28-Dec. 5, 1773. This was the later Merchants Coffee House, on the northwest corner of Water and Water Sts. — Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 979.

A. B., Hereby solemnly Vow and Swear in the Presence of Almighty God and this Right Worshipful Assembly, That I Will, in Law and Conscience, to the utmost of my power prevent the Secrets or Secrecy of Masons or Masonry, that shall be revealed unto me; unless to a True and Lawful Brother, after due Examination, or in a just and Worshipful Lodge of Brothers and Fellows well met.

Further more Promise and Vow, That I Will not Write them, Print them, Mark them, Carry them, or Engrave them, or cause them to be Written, Printed, Marked, Carved, or Engraved on Wood or Stone, so as the Visible Character or Impression of a Letter may appear, whereby it may be unlawfully obtained.

"All this under no less Penalty than to have my Throat cut, my Tongue taken from the Roof of my Mouth, my Heart pluck'd from under my Left Breast, them to be buried in the Sands of the Sea, the Length of a Cable Rope from Shore, where the Tide ebbs and flows twice in 24 Hours, my Body to be burnt to Ashes and be scatter'd upon the Face of the Earth, so that there shall be no more Remembrance of me among Masoos. So help me God." — N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 21, 1782. See also, in the usual manner of such a proceeding of the time, on the subject of women joining the Masons, was published in ibid., June 19-26, 1778. For reference to the Masonic meeting-place, see Jan. 22, 1793.

Late in the summer of 1772, William Johnson, nephew of Dr. Peter Warren, sailed for America, and arrived in New York early in December. He spent the winter here as guest of Lady Warren (daughter of Stephen de Lancey). — W. Max Reid, Story of Old Fort Johnson (1906), 7. For the records of his activities as Indian commissioner, see Doc. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), II: 317-354.

An attempt is made by the "Trustees of Brooklyn" (and continued Dec. 6, 7, and 14) to secure through the legislature the repeal of part of the Ferry Act of Oct. 14, 1732 (g.v.), so far as it relates to Brooklyn. The bill is opposed in the assembly by James Alexander, and referred to the committee of the whole house. A hearing on it is then ordered, to permit the city of New York to be represented in opposition to the design of the bill, which is to break this city's ferry monopoly. A postponement of the hearing checked further proceedings. — Assem. Jour., I: 728-29, 729, 730. Another attempt of the same sort was made nearly ten years later. — See Jan. 7, 1796.

The Corner House, on the North side, below the Meal-markets is offered for sale by Francis Childs. — N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 28-Dec. 5, 1773. This was the later Merchants Coffee House, on the northwest corner of Water and Water Sts. — Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 979.
CHRONOLOGY : THE ENGLISH PERIOD : 1664—1763

A bill is presented to the assembly to repeal part of the act regulating and establishing the rates of the ferry between this city and Brooklyn. It is ordered read a second time.—Assemb. Jour., I: 735. For further actions of the assembly, see Dec. 6.

A bill to restrain Taverne keepers and Inholders from Seling Strong Liquors to Servants and Apprentices and from giving large Credit to others.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 953; N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 117.

The legislature passes an act continuing “An Act to Encourage a Publick School in the City of New York.” Alexander Malcolm, “the Present publick School Master,” is retained.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 973—77. Another act is passed the same day “to Restrain Hawkers and Peddlars within this Colony from Selling without License.” The schoolmaster (see Dec. 6) is given authority to issue such licenses. Every hawker, peddler, or “petty chapman” (as defined in the act) is required to pay “Alexander Malcolm or the Master of the Publick School of New York for the time being,” a duty of $5 per annum and a license fee of three shillings. The schoolmaster shall keep account of the money received, and out of this revenue the said Malcolm shall be paid $50 a year. Violators of this act are to be deprived of their fruit, and victuals are excepted from the operation of the act; also persons who make and sell their own wares, and tickers, tailors, or other persons who make or mend various articles mentioned in the act.—Ibid., II: 988—92. For Clarke’s comments on these acts, see June 2, 1738.

The legislature passes “An Act for Emitting Bills of Credit for the Payment of the Debts and for the better Support of the Government of this Colony, and other Purposes therein Mentioned.” These bills, amounting to $40,350, are to be engraved by “Charles Le Roux, or Such other Person as the major part of the Said first Signers of the Said bills of Credit will agree with.” They are to be printed by John Peter Zenger.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 1095—90. See Nov. 28, 1734. The treasurer was ordered to pay the engraver $134 for 28 stamps for these bills of credit (ibid., II: 1038), but no certain evidence appears that Charles Le Roux was actually the engraver. The act, it will be noted, authorized the legislature to appropriate funds to the assembly that had been laid for a foundation for a future revenue fund “by striking paper money, (which was much wanted) to he let out on Interest.”—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 110. On June 3, 1738, he explained the purpose of this act.—Ibid., VI: 116.

For several years the city has paid various municipal charges “for the Ease of the poor Inhabitants.” It has “Defrayed the Expence of the Night Watches, Built and Erected a Convenient Tenement for a Workhouse and House of Correction Repair’d the Market Houses Dock wharfe & Bridges for the benefit of Trade and Commerce and Expended other large Sums of Money in Repairing and Cleaning the City Hall Grounds and other Necessary and Contingent Charges whereby the Treasurer [sic] of the said Corporation is so much Exhausted that they are at present unable to make these Repairs to their City Hall which are now Absolute...” An act of the legislature is therefore passed to enable the city to raise $250 by taxation, of which $240 is to be “applied for Slining and New Covering the said City Hall Laying or Covering the floors of the Assembly Chamber Lobby and Court Room and other Repairs needful and Necessary to be made to the said City Hall.”—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 1061—63.

The legislature passes “An Act for the better Extinguishing fires that may happen in the City of New York.” The preamble states that “the Inhabitants of the City of New York of all Degrees have very justly acquired the Reputation of being Singulary and Remarkably famous for their Diligence and Serviceableness in Cases of fires” and that they have supplied themselves “with To fire Engines And various Sorts of Poles Hooks Iron Chains Ropes Engines Engines and Tools and Instruments for the Extinguishing of fires.” Notwithstanding this, destructive fires have occurred. To prevent these in great part in the future, it is enacted that the common council of the city of New York shall “Ellect Nominate and appoint a Sufficient Number of Strong able discreet honest and Sober Men willing to accept (not exceeding forty two in Number) whereby an equal Number shall be Elected or appointed out of the Six Several Wards of the said City on the South Side of fresh Water of the Inhabitants being firemen or freeholders of the said City to have the Care management working and using the said fire Engines and the other Tools and Instruments for Extinguishing of fires that may happen within the said City.” The persons so appointed “shall be Called the firemen of the City of New York and who with the Engineers of the same City are hereby required and Enjoyed always to be Ready at a Call both by Night as well as by Day” to use the engines, etc., to extinguish fires. An authority is given to the common council to remove any firemen who are not “Diligent Industrious and vigilant” and appoint others to fill their places. Firemen are made exempt from service as constables, surveyors of highways, or jurors. They are not compelled to serve in the militia of the city, “Except in Cases of Invasion or other imminent Danger.” The common council shall establish rules and regulations for the government and duties of firemen, and impose reasonable fines, penalties, and forfeitures for neglect of duty. The act further requires that, when a fire breaks out, “all Sheriffs under or Deputy Sheriffs High Constables Petty Constables and Marshals (upon Notice thereof) shall Immediately Repair to the place where the said fire shall happen with their Rods Staves and other Badges of their Authority;” shall aid both “in the Extinguishing the said fires and Causing People to work as also in preventing Goods being Stolen,” and shall “give their utmost Assistance to help the Inhabitants to Remove and secure their Goods.”—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 1064—67. The number of firemen was increased on Dec. 1, 1761 (ibid., IV: 675), and on Dec. 31, 1768 (ibid., IV: 1048). See also “Sketch of the Origin of the Fire Department, of the City of New York, as at present organized,” in Man. Com. Coun. (1836), 521.

“...There are letters in Towa (by way of Boston) from Persons that may be depended on (dated in October last) which advise, That my Lord De La Warre continues Governor of the Province of New York, and that his Lordship intends to set out for his said Government early in the Spring.”—N. Y. Gaz., Dec. 27, 1737; May 21, 1738. See further, March 13, 1738.

In this year, New Jersey, on petition to the king from the people of that colony, was separated from New York, and Lewis Morris was appointed its governor.—Winnis, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 220.

A manuscript census sheet of this year shows the population of New York County to be 10,659, of whom 8,940 are whites and 1,719 blacks. The ten counties of the province show a total population of 60,372. Albany County, with 10,681, outnumbers New York.—From the original MS. filed in box labelled “New York, 1700—1760,” N. Y. Hist. Soc. See further, in this year, a membership list of the New York militia companies was prepared, showing the personnel of the Blue Artillery Company under John Waldron, and of the several militia companies under the command of General Bastian, Capt. Charles Le Roux, Capt. Stuyvesant, Capt. Richards, Capt. Boden, Capt. Cornelis van Horne, Capt. Henry Cuyler, Capt. Joseph Robinson, and Capt. Mathew Clarkson, respectively; also of the company formerly... commanded by John Moore.—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), IV: 43. See "A List of officers issued for New York, with the dates of their commissions." (All in Aug., 1778) shows that Charles le Roux was made a major on Aug. 15, and Abram Vanwyck appointed captain of his company; also that John Moore was made a colonel on Aug. 17, and Guilielum Verplanck appointed captain of his company, and that John Mahon was colonel and, Mr. Ran-

6 Consisting of the House above Turtle Bay, known by the name of the Union Flag, and the real estate left by Maryje Andri-
sen; on the 20th of February next, for Title and Conditions of Sale

7—See Jan. 24, 1775.

8 William Cornell petitions the common council, proposing, as he has leased the Long Island ferry, to make landings at Clark's Slip, if the persons in the neighbourhood of the landing may be allowed to repair the slip and market-house there; this is granted.

9—M. C. C., IV: 411-14. Clark's Slip was at the foot of Wall St. and the market-house was the Meal Market, which had been erected in 1709. How long Cornell operated this ferry does not appear, but in 178 (Jan. 29) the common council ordered a dock and stairs to be built near the Meal Market, "for the Convenience of the ferry Boat which is to Land there."—Ibid., VI: 217.

10 In response to an order of Jan. 5 from Lieut.-Gov. Clarke, in council, Surveyor-Gen. Cadwallader Colden addresses to him answers to various queries from the lords of trade and plantations, which he entitles "Observations on the Situation, Sail, Climate,

11 William Cornell, the new lessee of the ferry between New York and "the Island of Nassau," claims in a petition to the common council that he has "had a house at Clark's Slip, and the house is "much out of repair and some Conveniences wanting" for the better landing and departure of the ferry-boats. He therefore seeks permission for the inhabitants who live near by "to mend and Enlarge the Said Market House and make such Conveniences in the Said Slip as shall Be Necessary and Convenient for the better landing and Preserving the Boats in Landing and unlading there." Granted.

M. C. G., IV: 410-14. For "Clark's Slip or Meal Market Ferry," see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 382. See also Jan. 29, 1748.

Mar. 29

12 The sloop "Mary and Margaret," William Burrows, master, is about to sail for Jamaica. Arrangements for freight or passage may be made with the master at the "Sign of the Slip above the D. new House, March 14, 1778. The Meal Market was at Wall and Pearl Sts., a popular tavern locality for many years.

13 The "House at the old Bowling Green took Fire and in a few Minutes was reduced to Ashes. The Wind at that Time was high and the Smoke was carried far from any Auditorium. Mr. Miller who lived in it with great Difficulty saved him self and his Wife, being rather to eager to save some Good which they could not effect.
To avoid the Flames they were obliged to leap out of the Windows one Story high."—N. T. Jour., Apr. 5, 1778. The Old Bowling Green was a garden on the North River, which was Champlain and Warren Sts. (see 1770), and was, with the property of Trinity Church, being on a part of the Church Farm. An investigation was therefore made by a committee from the church, who decided, on May 7, that the fire was accidental. On July 11, Miller gave permission to turn back his lease, upon the payment of £10. He was to relinquish any pretensions he might have to the Bowling Green, and vacate the church's farm by March 25, 1779.

N. T. Min. (4to ed.), XIII: 271. Miller, who had been gardener of the place, was removed to a house "next Door to Samuel Heaths, near the Fort," where he offered for sale "fresh seeds, snuff, pigtail and cut tobacco."—N. T. Jour., March 26, 1739. A year later he was again offering sale "At the Sign of the Thistle and Crown Near Spring Garden or at the Old Bowling Green."—Ibid., March 10, 1740.

The Old Bowling Green, with the lane leading to it (see Apr. 11, 1721), is shown on the MS. Map of 1755 (Pl. 50, Vol. I). See also Pls. 26 and 27, Vol. I. On Feb. 13, 1752 (q. v.), Adam van Denberg leased the Bowling Green for 21 years, but evidently retained it for only a few years, as it was again leased, on Feb. 1, 1779 (q. v.), to John Marshall, and called Mount Pleasant. On Nov. 10 of that year, the militia company of grenadiers met here to celebrate the king's birthday, when they roasted an ox and ate and drank loyally.

N. T. Post-Bey, Nov. 12, 1759. Marshall undertook to open the house for breakfast every morning during the season, and solicited the patronage of ladies and gentlemen (ibid., Nov. 10, 1759);
but his venture was evidently unsuccessful, for on Oct. 27, 1762
(q. v.), the house and gardens were again offered for sale. John Elkin succeeded Marshall and, in addition to breakfast, offered an afternoon tea with "Feyes and Tarts," as well as meat and Madeira

In 1764, Samuel Francoues, most famous of all New York innkeepers, succeeded Elkin and renamed the place Vauxhall, but the follow-ning year the premises were occupied by Major James, whose attitude towards the enforcement of the Stamp Act brought upon him the vengeance of the mob, on Nov. 7, 1765 (q. v.), when his house furnishings, books, liquors, and other belongings were burned and destroyed. On June 16, 1768 (q. v.), Francoues, who had been conducting a tavern at the Sign of the Queen's Head in Philadelphia, advertised the re-opening of Vauxhall which, "since his Absence from this City," had been "occupied by Major James."

In 1774, Erasmus Williams succeeded Francoues and once more renamed the place Mount Pleasant. By 1802, this site, so long a bowling green, garden, tavern, and place of public resort, had been turned over to the proprietors of the Cupola Iron Furnace.—N. T.
Post-Bey, Aug. 17, 1802.

The common council orders that an acre of land in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward, on the west side of "Inclayenberg," be leased to Arnout Webber for a brick-yard.—M. C. G., IV:
419. This was probably in the vicinity of the present Fifth or Sixth Ave. and 37th St.—See "Inclayenberg" in Landmark Map Ref.
Pl. III: 906.

Clarke writes to the Duke of Newcastle that he has read "the Apr.
malancholy news of her Majesty's death in the public prints."—N. T.
Col. Dict., VII: 115. Queen Caroline, wife of George II, died Nov.
20, 1737 (q. v.).

"Capt. Terret Lester is Removed to the House where Thomas Inglis lived on the Dock in Amboy, where there is good Entertainment for Man and Horse. He also keeps a Passage Boat to ply between New York and Amboy..."—N. T. Gaz., April 3, 1738. For later N. Y.—Amboy ferries, see Sept. 9, 1745; Oct.
13, 1750; Aug. 13, 1751; Oct. 30, 1751; June 4, Sept. 24, 1751; April 22, 1754; Feb. 25, 1756; Jan. 20, 1757.

A list of 56 inhabitants of 56th south ward in 56th beat of Capt.
Mathew Clarkson," bearing this date, appears to be a list of millmen, numbering 65 with officers, under Clarkson's command.

Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), IV: 145. See also the list referred to under 1738, supra.

An advertisement, offering for sale a farm of 44 acres at Turtle Bay, "within four Miles of this City," describes the place as having "a very good Grist Mill and two Boiling Mills, a large Quantity of New fencing stuff..." an old Orchard that makes Thirty Barrels of Syder, and fifty young Trees planted last Spring, all grafted of the best Kind of Fruits." It formerly belonged to Theophilus Elseworth (sic).—N. T. Jour., April 10, 1738.

"The Petition of the Inhabitants of the West Ward praying leave to Erect a Market House in the Broadway fronting to Crown Street," which was Chambers and Warren Sts., was referred to a committee, is now read again. It states that the 1758.

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

March 5, 1722
Trinity vestry appropriates a pew in the south gallery for the captains and officers of the king's ships of war. It is ordered that the chancel be wainscotted with mahogany.—Trin. (MS.).

Inhabitants of the Dock and South wards petition the common council for permission to build "A Publick Markett House at our own Cost & Charge in Broad Street between the Watch House and the South wharf, for the use and comfort of all persons going to and from the Market..." and a committee was appointed "to Assemble and State out the Place." The market-house is "to Remain A Publick Markett House for the Publick use and Benefit of this Corporation."—M. G. C., IV. 416-27.

The watch-house was the one "In Broad Street before the City Hall," erected in 1731 (v. July 9). De Voe fixes the location of the last house at the corner of Flatttenbrack St. (Excise Pl., running west of Broad St.). He is of the opinion that no market-house was ever erected here, as he finds no notice of it in the laws, advertisements, etc.—Market Book, 260. There was, however, a court order, in 1746, directing the sheriff to take down a market in Broad St., near the watch-house.—Min. Court of Gen. Quarter Sessions (MS.).

Custom-house officers are required by the governor's council to examine certain sloops for goods forbidden to be exported. Depositions are taken of the masters of other sloops, including the Georgia packet-ship, the Elizabeth, and other issued forbidding supplies being carried to St. Augustine.—Col. Curr. Min., 331. The examination of shipmasters was continued on May 8. Sloops owned by Mr. Walton were allowed to be cleared under bond on May 10.—Ibid.

The common council appoints a committee to lay out a lot at the south side of the Broadway "between Markay Street (Commonly Called Pettycoat Lane) and Beaver Street."—M. G. C., IV. 428. From this it appears that the name Pettycoat Lane (see Pl. 25, Vol. 1) was still in common use, although it had yielded place to Marketfield Street on all the maps (Pls. 26, 27, 274, Vol. 1). See Landmark Map Rel. Key, III: 1005.

The assessment that is made of the real and personal property in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward for raising a tax of 25c or 2 1/2d, which includes the allowance of ninemarsh for the collectors and disperse for the city treasurer on every pound, in accordance with an act of the Assembly. The tax-rate is 9 1/2 pence on every £5. The list, signed by the assessors, John and Philip Minthorne, contains the names of 81 persons together with their individual assessments.

From a MS. entitled "Head of the Tax Role," among miscellaneous MSS. in the Vander Water Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. "To Be Sold. A Choice Collection of Law Books, consisting of Reports of all the Chief and Eminent Lawyers, the Statutes at large, Domat's Civil Law Institutes, &c., with a number of other Books upon various subjects, being above 300 Volumes, as may be seen by a Catalogue of the same. Whoever inclines to Purchase the same, or any part of them may apply to John Roberts near the long Bridge in New York."—May 21, 1756. For that time, a library or collection of books numbering 300 volumes was unusual.

Clarke writes to the lords of trade concerning two acts of the assembly—one "for the further encouragement of a public school in the City of New York for the teaching latin and Greek and the mathematicks," and the other for supporting the school-master through a fund derived from peddlar's licenses: "Being confident that publick schools for the education of youth will always find countenance from your Lordships I will lay the two last Bills before you without any further remarks in their favour; I wish the Assembly had made the reward greater than it is like to be, from the last of these Bills, that money was apply'd before, to the like use but fell short of the sum intended, nor could the school master get any redress tho' he petition'd for it or got some of his friends to move the house in his behalf; it is not likely it will bring in more now however the master having at present no other way of living is obliged to submit."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI. 115, 116. See Dec. 16, 1752, Nov. 17, 1757.

Answering enquiries of the board of trade, Clarke states, among other things, that: "In the town of New York is an old fort of very little defense cannon we have, but the carriages are good for little, we have ball but no powder... There is a battery which commands the mouth of the harbour whereon may be mounted 50 cannon this is now having been built but three years but it wants finishing."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII. 120. See also ibid., 145, 155, and under Sept. 5.

George Clarke, Jr., son of the lieutenant-governor, is appointed secretary of the province, and Frederick Morris is appointed his deputy, in a Col. Curr. Min., 332, note. His office was a sinecure, from which an income was derived with little or no employment on Clarke's part. It was also one of a remarkably long series of positions held by his father and himself, for a period of over 70 years from the time of the elder Clarke's arrival, July 15, 1752 (ibid., 129), and a long period of time to the secretarieship.

The father was appointed clerk of the provincial council March 24, 1705 (ibid., 203); member of the council May 30, 1716 (ibid., 261); deputy auditor-general July 2, 1718 (ibid., 267); one of the commissioners for running the Connecticut boundary-line Oct. 28, 1718 (ibid., 268); elected to act as president of the council March 10, 1726 (ibid., 215); and appointed lieutenant-governnor Oct. 30, 1736 (ibid., 318), holding this office until the arrival of his successor, George Clinton, Sept. 22, 1745 (q. v.).

By royal mandate the younger Clarke was made a member of the provincial council Oct. 28, 1738 (ibid., 353); and was twice reappointed to this office, Oct. 13, 1753 (ibid., 370), and March 22, 1766 (ibid., 315). He held the office of provincial secretary, either concurrently or ad interim, in person or by deputy, nearly to the Revolution. We find, July 29, 1745, a commission was given to John Catherwood to be secretary during Clarke's absence (ibid., 349), and that, in the following year, July 3, Secretary Clarke appointed Goldbroth Banyer to be his deputy, who was already transferred to Banyer by Catherwood (ibid., 354). On Dec. 1, 1772 (q. v.), Gov. Tryon described an astonishing number of offices, then held by the younger Clarke, in a report to the home government, but evidently without the result of disturbing Clarke in the office of secretary; for a list of the offices show that, as late as April 16, 1774 (ibid., 501), Clarke appointed Samuel Bayard his deputy to the office he had held so long.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1738 The council makes an examination of shipmasters concerning June small-boat in the West Indies.—Cal. Coun. Min., 332. On June 24, 1738, it ordered that vessels from here and South Carolina be quarantined near "Bedlows" (Bedlow's Island).—Ibid., 332. See June 28.

24 The city is quarantined, through fear that small-boat and other vessels may be brought in from South Carolina, Barbados, Antigua, and other places, where they have occasioned great mortality. Bedlow's Island is made the first quarantine station. The mayor procured on June 27 the order of council which required "that one of the Pilots for this Fort be Constantly in the Watch by Day and Night," and vessels and inform all the shipmasters from those places "that it is the Order of this Board, that before they come into this Harbour they first Anchor as near as may to Bedlows Island, and there wait till they be Visited by some of the Physicians of this City, and not put on board any of the Goods or Persons on board, nor suffer any to Come on Board of them but such as shall be sent by the Mayor to Visit them, till Report be made to the Mayor of the Condition and State of health of the People on board, and till he has leave to way Anchor and Come into the harbour and unload." When any the common council appoints Dr. Rosloff Kiersten to execute the order of council, and to report to the mayor regarding the health of the persons on board such vessels, that measures may be taken to prevent "any Infectious Pestilential or Malignant Disease or Distemper" being brought into the city. The city marshals and constables are also given special orders to make a proper order of council more effective.—M. C. C., IV: 410-30. See April 6, 1742.

July The committee for repairing the city hall (see Oct. 28, 1737) 15 having represented to the common council "that the Cupola of the Said City Hall is so Very Rotten that it Cannot be Repaired and that the same is dangerous to be kept Standing any longer for fear of its falling," and "this Court" having viewed it and taken the advice of workmen, it is resolved that it be taken down and that the committee "Employ Workmen and purchase Materials for the taking down the same and for Erecting a New Cupola in the Room thereof of the like dimensions with all Convenient Expedients."—M. C. C., IV: 453.

There is advertised to be sold on Sept. 2 at public vendue, at 24 "the Exchange Market House, near the Long Bridge," the planta- tion of the late Thomas Codlington, of 36 acres, described as: "All in the Bounds of Harlem, in the Out-Ward of the City of New York. The said Plantation is Pleasantly situated, about five Miles out of Town, on the South East Side of the Island, fronting the River, and is in bread along the Waterside, Forty Rods. There are great plenty of Lobsters and Fish near the House ...—N. Y. Gaz., July 24, 1738. This market-house was called by Dey "the Exchange Market House."—Market, 77-85. Cf. Pl. 27, Vol. I. See also July 9, 1691; Feb. 18, 1692; and Landmark Map Rep. Key, III: 936.

The church containing the rector and two wardens of Trinity Church, is appointed to inquire into the claims of the heirs of the Rev. Everard Bogardus to part of the Church Farm.—Trin. Min. (M.S.). This action was taken more than 70 years after the sale of the farm to Lovelace.—Dis. Hist. of Trinity Church, I: 210. It marks the first claim set up by the heirs of Anneke Jans to Trinity Church Farm. For some accounts of these cases, see Press for over a century, see "Title, Parish Rights and Property of Trinity Church" in Trin. Church Pamphlets (1857) Bogardus vs. Trinity, Sandford's Chantry Rep., IV: 695; ibid., 615.

The common council orders that Abel Hardenbrook, the store- keeper, move "the Raft Office to be placed round the Hill or summer where the Powder House of this City is Erected."—M. C. C., IV: 455. See June 7, 1728.

Trinity vestry orders "That a Subscription paper for an Organ for the Church be prepared and laid before the Vestry at their next meeting."—Trin. Min. (M.S.)—See June 1, 1739.

The committee for carrying on the building of the church is instructed to have Colonel Jourdan's armory put up in the most convenient place.—Trin. Min. (M.S.)—See July 1, 1737.

The lieutenant-governour, assembly, and council join in an address of condolence to the king on the death of the queen.—Jour. Leg. Coun. I: 717. See Nov. 20, 1737.

Clarke, in a message to the assembly, recommends the finishing of the "New Fortifications, that they may to all Events be in a Condition of Defence," and the making over of "that Part of the Barracks in the Fort, which were left unrepaird, when the others were repaired."—Assemb. Jour., II: 735. He made the same recommendation to the council.—Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 717. See Sept. 2, 1737; Aug. 20, 1739.

To fulfil the requirements of the act of the legislature of Dec. 16, 1737 (p. e), entitled "An Act for the better Extinguishing of Fire that may happen in the City of New York," the common council nominates and appoints 30 men as firemen, and orders "that their Names be Registered and Enrolled with the Clerk of the Peace." Their names and occupations are entered in the Minutes of the Common Council under this date. They are described as "All Strong, Able Discreet honest and sober Men and are Freeman or Freemen or Freeholders of New York; and have "Voluntarily Offered themselves and are willing to Accept of the said Office of Firemen of the said City for the County and to perform the Terms mentioned in the said Act."—M. C. C., IV: 436-38. To this entry in the Minutes is added "A Law for Regulating and Declaring the Duty of Firemen in the City of New York."—Ibid., IV: 438-40. There is a copy of this law, printed by Bradford, in the N. Y. Pub. Library. A digest of these rules and regulations was published in the Mar. Com. Coun. (1856), 249.

As the lieutenant-governour did not appoint a mayor on Sept. 29, as usual, Mayor Richard continued in office, as permitted by the charter in such cases; he now administers the oaths to the new aldermen and other officials.—Ibid., IV: 444-45.

Samson Benson receives from the town of Harlem the privilege 25 "to place a mill, with a dam, on the Mill Camp, wherever it may suit him best." This right is to revert to the town should the mill cease running for two years. He chose to erect his mill on the south of the Mill (Benson's) Creek, south of the present 106th St., near its intersection with Third Ave. "It was scarcely finished when he died, in 1730."—Riker, Hist. of Harlem, 591. On May 30, 1753, Benjamin Benson, son of Samson, obtained a deed for the Mill Camp, which was situated north of the Mill Creek. "During the revolution the old mill on the south side of the creek was burnt, and, after the fire, he says, "David Grim, on his map [Pl. 31-3, Vol. I, marks it down with the name I have adopted for it." The Bakewell View of 1746 (Pl. 31, Vol. I), he says, "shows this market-house, directly at the foot of Broadway street, but no reference is given to it. A mistake, however, is made, by noticing the 'Meal or Wall Street Market- House' as the Exchange, (No. 15.) The 'Old Exchange' in Broad Street was not built, or commenced, until the year 1724; and the intention, no doubt, was to represent this old 'Broad Street Mar- ket' as Lyne did, when he called it 'the Exchange,' on his map. De Voe adds: 'I find no further reference to it; and as it had stood more than fifty years, I am inclined to think that about the period of 1726 it was taken down.'—Market Book, 77-85. Cf. Pl. 27, Vol. I. See also July 9, 1691; Feb. 18, 1692; and Landmark Map Rep. Key, III: 936.

The Treaty of Vienna, between France and Austria, is signed. Nav. 8:18 1739

A published notice states that the meetings of the "Ancient and Honourable Society of Free and Accepted Masons" will hereafter be held at the "Montogomeries Arms Tavern."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 24, 1739(9). On Sept. 24, another meeting was announced to be held at this same tavern. Its location is not recorded.—N. Y. Gaz., Sept. 17-24, 1739.

"The Brethren of the Ancient and Honourable Society of Free & Accepted Masons, are desired to take Notice, That The Lodge, for the future, will be held at the Montogmery Arms Tavern, on first and third Wednesdays in every Month. By Order of the Grand Masters, C. Wood, Secretary.—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 16, 22, 1739. The secretary was Charles Wood.—Ibid., Sept. 24, 1739.

At Mr. Hall's long room, there is to be performed on this day Feb. "A new Pantomime Entertainment in Grotesque Characters called the Adventures of Harlequin and Scaramouch or the Spanish Trick'd. To which will be added an Optick, wherein will be presented in perspective several of the most noted cities and remarkable Places both of Europe and America. With a new Prologue 1739 and Epilogue address’d to the Town, The Epilogue to be spoken Feb. by Master Holt, etc. The advertisement is signed “Vivatere.”

12 N. Y. Jour., Feb. 5, 1739. This “Optick” is the earliest example found, in New York City’s annals, of what may be considered a predecessor of the modern newspaper advertisement. A similar optical contrivance, for showing foreign views and other pictures, was in use in this city ten years later—See Dec. 5, 1748, where it is more fully described. See also the essay on “Peep-show Prints,” by F. Weltenkamp, in N. Y. Pub. Library Bulletin, XXV: 359 (June, 1931).

13 To be painted by John Miller formerly Gardner of the Old Bowling Green, several sorts of Garden seeds, of the best sorts, and fresh at reasonable Rates and all Sorts of Snuff, Pigtail and cut Tobacco at his House, next Door to Samuel Heath’s, near the Fort in New York.—N. T. Jour., Feb. 19, 1739.

14 A second performance of “The Adventure of Harlequin and Scaramouch, or The Spaniard Tricked,” was advertised to take place on the evening of this day at Mr. Holt’s long room.—N. T. Gm., Feb. 13-20, 1739. Holt was a dancing teacher. On July 4, 1737 (q.v.), he advertised a ball at the house of Mr. De Lantey, on Broad and Pearl Sts., and it is possible that the “Long Room” used for this pantomime performance was there, although no other reference has been found to its conversion into an inn until 1762.

15 This being the day appointed for electing representatives for the city and county of New York to the general assembly, six candidates are “put up in the Field,” where “usually” they choose them “by Vote being demanded,” they adjourn to the city hall, where the poll is continued until about midnight. Adolph Philipse, Col. John Moore, David Clarkson, and William Rood are chosen. James Alexander and Cornelius van Horn are defeated by a close vote, the total number cast being 2,552.—N. Y. Gm., March 15-20, 1739.

16 Opposite “the New Bowling Green” is the address given for a vendue sale at a private residence in Broadway.—N. T. Gm., March 15-20, 1739. For the origin of the Bowling Green, see April 6, 1735.

20 At this period, the general assembly meets in “the Assembly Chamber in the City-Hall.” The “Council Chamber in the City-Hall” is another apartment in the same building (Assemb. Jour., I: 749); and still another room used for legislative purposes is “the Council Room in Fort-George” (ibid., I: 731). See also Oct. 26, 1736.

21 Clarke advises both the assembly and the council that one part of the barrackes in Fort George will tumble down if not speedily repaired.—Assemb. Jour., I: 750; Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 726. See Sept. 5, 1738. For further comments by Clarke regarding repairs to the fort, see April 13-24, 1741.

22 John Allen informs the assembly of Trinity that, pursuant to an order made at the last meeting, he has paid Richard Nicholls, deputy receiver-general, the quit-rents due to “his Majesty” for the church’s farm and garden, and takes the following receipt for them on the back of the grant from Lord Cornbury: “New York 12th March 1738/9. There received of Mr. Joseph Robinson one of the Church wardens of Trinity Church in the City of New York Sixty Bushels of wheat being the Rent Reserved on a Lease from his late Majesty King William to the Rector and Inhabitants of the New York in Communion of the Church of England as by Law Established for a farm and Garden with their appurtenances then Called the Kings farm and Garden, which said Sixty Bushels of wheat is in full of the rent reserved from the Commencement of the said Lease which was on the first of August 1698 to the Vacating the said Lease by Act of General Assembly passed in the year 1699. Also Received from the said Mr. Joseph Robinson four pounds Nineteen Shillings and three pence proclamation money paid full of the said rent reserved out of the aforesaid farm Garden and appurtenances to the said Rector and Inhabitants by Letters patent under the great Seal of the province of New York bearing date the 21st Nov 1702 which said Sum is in full of the Quit rent reserved (being three Shillings 6d. Annum) to the 26th December Last I say received by me Richard Nichells Dep’t Rct. Gen’l.”—Trin. Min. (MS.), Apl. 4.

As one-third of the members of the assembly have not had the small-pox, and “scruple to attend the Service of the House in this City,” the house adjourns to meet at the home of Captain Warren at Greenwich the next day.—Assemb. Jour., I: 751. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, I: 1003.

23 Trinity vestry, agreeable to its resolutions of May 19, 1738, and April 3, 1739 (see Trin. Min., MS.), applies to the common council for permission to enlarge the churchyard by taking into it, on its south side, the lane or alley between the churchyard and the church’s garden, which the city has permitted for some time to be used as a passage-way. The vestry proposes to make instead another alley, at least 20 feet wide, on the south part of the church’s garden, adjoining the Lutheran Church, to be called Robinson Street; and “the Post and Rail fence,” which is on the street fronting the churchyard, will be extended along the north side of the proposed new lane. The common council grants the petition, with the understanding that the new alley “shall Remain as a Publick Lane or Alley forever and that the same shall be Recorded as such.”—M. C. C., IV: 456. The vestry had given its committee power the day before “to agree with the members of the Lutheran Church about taking in some part of their Land for the Convenience of a Street or Lane on the South part of the Churches Garden fronting the broadway and giving them other Lands in Lieue thereof.”—Trin. Min. (MS.). Robinson St., thus laid out, was later called Aurchemy St., and then Rector St. Long after the name of Robinson St. was abandoned for this street, it was applied to the street that later was named Park Place.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1008.

24 In recognition of advances of “A large sum of Money,” without interest, which Christopher Bancker made out of “his own Moneys” to be used in repairing the city hall and ferry-house, the common council presents him with the “Tackle and Block which was used in Repairing the City Hall.”—M. C. C., IV: 454. This date probably marks the completion of these repairs. See Oct. 28, 1737.

25 The assembly having, on April 4, transferred its sessions from the ferry hall to Grutchward, ordains that the clerk prepare an account of the expense of moving, etc.—Assemb. Jour., I: 754. The change was due to the prevalence of small-pox in the city. On April 14, the house returned to the assembly-room of the city hall, although the small-pox was “still very rife.”—Ibid., I: 755.

18 On April 18, Clarke notified the Duke of Newcastle that, “the Small Pox being in Town and one third part of the Assembly [nine of the 27 members] not having had it,” he had given them leave “to sit at Greenwich, a small village about two or three miles out of town, but there too their fears of that distemper continuing,” he was obliged, on their request, “to give them leave to adjourn to the fourth Tuesday in August” at “Mr. T. Col. Docx.”, (VI: 145). The assembly did not convene before Aug. 28.—Assemb. Jour., I: 755. At that time the disease was still raging, see Aug. 30.

26 “On Board the Ship Charming Polly, Capt. Edward Bayley Master, now riding at Anchor in the Harbour of New York, there are several Palatine and Switzer servants are there, some are Farmers and some are Tradesmen. To be agreed for on board the Ship, and taken off from thence by the Buyer.”—N. Y. Gm., April 16-23, 1739. The modern construction put upon this announcement and others like it might readily be that white people were sold into slavery, but this was not the case. See June 19 and Nov. 14, 1728; June 9, 1729. See Apr., 12th, 1738; Aug. 19, 1751; May 3, 1774.

27 The city grants to Henry Bogert a water lot extending from the May rear of his lot on the Hudson River (between the present Morris Street and Battery Place) to a line 200 feet beyond low-water mark, with the obligation that whenever three or more owners of lots of land and water lots in the neighbourhood shall agree to make wharves and begin filling up their water lots, he shall wharf out and fill up as far as his neighbours do and make a street 40 feet in width over high-water mark.—M. C. G., IV: 458-59; Lith. City Grants, B: 353. Several other grants of water lots in the neighbourhood were made on similar terms within a few years (See N. Y. Col. Docx., VI: 145.) The other street, 40 feet wide, is Greenwich St. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1001, 1011.

28 A committee of the common council is appointed “to make an additional Building at the Poorhouse of this City for A Receptacle and Conveniency of Such unhappy Poor as are to be held with any Malignant or Oebnoxious disease.”—M. C. G., IV: 459.
The ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1739 William Cornell, tenant of the ferry-house and ferry at Nassau Island, obtains an abatement of a part of his rent on account of losses due to the spread of small-pox, "which deters both Strangers and Travellers from Coming to Town, and the Country People from Coming to Market as Usual." His petition states that, when he took the ferry on March 23, 1738, he "provided himself with Boxes, and with other Conveniences."—M. C. C., IV, 461. This seems to indicate that negro slaves were used to man the ferry-boats.

26 Lewis Morris says in a letter: "James Alexander who lives in New York is now building a large house there, this will require his attention the whole summer." As explained by Livingston Rutherford, the house was situated in Broad Street, and was sold in 1764 by William Alexander to Peter van Brugh Livingston. The following description of it was written by a great-grand-daughter of James Alexander: "It contained apartments innumerable, sumptuously furnished in all the pomp of that period. There was the great dining room and the lesser dining room, the room hung with blue and gold leather, the green and gold room, the little front parlour and the little back parlour and the great tapestry room above stairs besides red rooms and green rooms and chintz rooms up stairs and down, furnished with damask hangings, costly carpets and pictures set off with a mass of plate. Adjoining this place there was a large garden running back for a considerable distance and extending on one side to the Jews Alley now Mill St. And here in their proper seasons might be found in great profusion the favourite flowers of our ancestors, paws blooming of all hues, lilies, roses and lilies intermixed with flowers, herbs and vegetables and herbs for pharmacy, all bound and hemmed in by huge rows of neatly clipped box edging."—Rutherford, Family Records and Events, 42.

June

Trinity vestry agrees to employ John Clemm of Philadelphia to make an organ for Trinity Church.—Trin. Min. (M.S). See Aug. 25, 1738; Aug. 5, 1741.

4 All persons having demands on Obadiah Hunt, "late Tavern-keeper," are desired to come to his house in Dock (Pearl) St. "Likewise the Houses and Lots in Custom-House-street [Pearl St.] next door to the Old Custom House, wherein Mr. W. English [tavern-keeper] now lives, are to be Sold at a reasonable Rate by the said Hunt."—N. Y. Jour., June 4, 1739. It appears probable, from this reference to the "Old Custom House" (see also April 10, 1740), that, prior to this date, the custom-house had been moved to No. 1 or No. 3 Broadway.—Cf. May 19, 1740.

9 The grand jury brings in a bill against John Ten Eyck "for pulling Down and Impairing part of the fortification Called the Battery." He is fined 30 shillings.—Min. Gen. Sessions of the Peace (MS), 164, 116-17.

16 Clarke receives from the Duke of Newcastle a letter of June 19, empowering the governor to authorize Clarke to grant letters of marque and reprisal against the Spaniards. The next day he issued a proclamation authorizing reprisals.

London newspapers which came into New York two days later alarmed the people of New York with apprehensions of a rupture with Spain, "with whom they fear France will take part against us, in which event as we are a frontier Province bordering on Canada they expect the first attack will be made upon us . . ." Clarke therefore sent to the lords of trade, on Aug. 30, an account of the stores, etc., in the fort at New York.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI, 147; Col. Coun. Min., 338. See Aug. 21.

There is adopted by the provincial council the form of commission and instructions to be given to commanders of private men-of-war (privateers), as well as the form of bond for their owners.—Col. Coun. Min., 334. This was in accordance with the bills of exchange received Aug. 16 (p. 9). Other forms of the same kind were adopted on May 17, 1749, after the declaration of war.—Ibid., 335.

The common council appoints a committee who, with the assistance of the city surveyors, are required "to make a Survey and Draught of A Street to be laid out at or near High Water Mark on the Hudson River, from the Lott Laste of Charles Sligh in the Broadway [No. 1 Broadway] this City to the Lott of Gerardus Comfort," and report as soon as possible.—M. C. C., IV, 463. This was the beginning of the laying out of Greenwich St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1001. Comfort's lot was near the present Little West 13th Street and was provided for in a water grant made to Trinity Church in 1751.—M. C. C., V: 330-31. The common council ordered that it be surveyed north of Lippard's in 1758.—M. C. C. (MS), XII: 375. It was ceded by Trinity Church from Brannon (Spring) St. northward to the north boundary of the church property, 1808 (ibid., XVIII: 37-39), and in the same year ordered opened between Charlton and Christopher St. (ibid., XIX: 215, 222); further order for opening to Christopher St. was given in 1809 (ibid., XX: 169, 241); continued through the land of Richard Amos, 1810 (ibid., XXI: 350); regulated between Hamersley and Christopher Sts., 1818 (ibid., XXXIV: 197). In part, Greenwich Street was the old "Road to Greenwich." The early maps to be consulted are Macʳehack's, 1755 (Pl. 34, Vol. I); and Rutter's Survey of 1787.

Clarke, in an address to the legislature, refers to the decay of ship-building, "which for many years has been much regretted but little attempted to be retrieved." One cause of it, he says, is "not in the power of the merchant or Builder at present to remove nor do I see any other way whereby a Remedy may be applied than by your aid. If the Demands of the Builder be higher than in the neighbouring Provinces, the Merchant will not, cannot build here without injuring himself. If the Builder undertake the work at the same Rate that is given in the neighbouring provinces, he will find and I fear with too much trouble to be undone for the excessive wages of Carpenters which he must be obliged to hire for want of apprentices runs away with his profit and he cannot take apprentices being unable in his present poverty to maintain them."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I, 731-32.

Clarke, in a message to the town May 16, asks for "finishing the battery at New York before it is too late to "be put in such a Condition as may secure you from the Attempts of an Enemy."—Assemb. Jour., I, 756. On Sept. 4, in reply to a request of the house for his estimate of the expense of repairing and finishing the battery, he sent them an estimate of £1,800.—Ibid., I, 758. See Sept. 15.

Clarke writes to the lords of trade: "The orders I have received to Grant letters of marque and reprisal against the Spaniards, and the English new[e]l papers of the month of June have possessed the people of this Province with apprehensions of a sudden war with Spain, with whom they fear France will take part against us."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI, 147. See Aug. 16.

The members of the assembly who have not had small-pox, being "still scrupulous to attend the Service of this House, in the City of New-York, because it is not yet free from that Distemper," suggest that they meet at the "House of Mr. Harmanus Rutgers, near the Fresh-Water." This is agreed to.—Assemb. Jour., I, 756. For the use of the same house during a previous epidemic, see Aug. 25, 1731.

The commissioners appointed to erect a battery in the city are ordered to lay before the House an account of the £5,000 "received by them for that work."—Assemb. Jour., I, 752. On Sept. 7, they reported that they had expended, "for Materials and Workmanship for the said Battery, and making 16 Carriages, building a Store House and other Materials," £5,913:16:2, and still had in their hands £86:10:—Ibid., I, 758.

Rutgers petitions for payment for his services as printer to the colony from June 14, 1737, to Oct. 28, 1738.—Assemb. Jour., I, 759. On Oct. 17, he was allowed £1,210.—Ibid., I, 760.

Rutgers petitions for a grant of a piece of ground 50 feet wide at the place where his Drain is now laid into Hudsons River Afore-said as far as low Water Mark for the Mending and Erecting thereon and therein such sufficent fences, Works Engines or Machines as may be proper and useful for securing & preserving the Said Drain." This grant is made in fee simple at a yearly rent of six shillings.—M. C. C., IV, 467-67. See April 6, 1733.

Clarke, with the aid of a contractor, estimates the expense of repairing the barracks at Fort George at £500.—Assemb. Jour., I, 759-60. An appropriation of £525, to rebuild barracks at Fort George, was made on Sept. 21, 1744 (p. 9).

A committee of the assembly passes a resolution allowing £4,000 for putting the battery at "Copsey in the City of New York in a posture of Defence." This sum includes £631:110, still in the hands of the commissioners who erected the battery.—Assemb. Jour., I, 760, 761, 765. See Sept. 1, 1739; and July 6, 1745.

Again the Militia Act is revised. For the last revision, see July 24, 1744. The military exercises are now less frequent, being "at least once in every six months," and on such occasion "Shall require." The troops for the city and county of Albany shall be clad in
A. PART OF FIRST PAGE OF INVENTORY OF GOV. MONTGOMERIE'S EFFECTS, 1731. SEE P. 523.

B. CHARLES LE ROUX'S BILL FOR MAKING THE MAYORALTY SEAL, SEPT. 16, 1735. SEE P. 41.
THE Being Bridge, one Battery, so Foundation, a quantity sufficient, American next advice with amount of this war, as is, before, from 16 to 60 years inclusive. The companies of Cadets &c. blew artillery in the City of New York are each to consist of 100 men besides officers. The furnishings of foot soldiers are as in the law of 1724. No "Military Commission officer" shall be liable to serve as constable, unless the commission is obtained after election as constable.—Col. Laws N.Y. T., III: 3-4. An amendment on Nov. 3, 1740, provided generally for employing the militia in cases of sudden emergency in keeping watch (ibid., III: 69); and another on Nov. 27, 1741 (q.v.), made this specially applicable to the city of New York. The law expired Dec. 1, 1743, and a new law was enacted Dec. 17, 1743 (q.v.).

See also June 13, 1743.

The sundry branches of the city's revenue for the past year were: ferry rent, £18,105; licenses, £237; rent of water lots, £5,4197/12; freedoms, £24; dock rent, £1813; land rents, £618; ropewalks, £210; fines, £118; total, £237106v. —Journals of the City Chamberlain, III: 39. A committee of the common council appointed this day to audit the public accounts reported on April 10, 1740, that it found, on examination of the treasurer's books from Oct. 14, 1737, to Oct. 14, 1739, that there was a balance to the city of £3213.168.—M. C., IV: 485.

John Cruger (see July 8, 1748) takes the oath of Office, succeeding Paul Richard.—M. C. C., IV: 472. He was continued mayor for five terms, and died in 1744 still in office.—Ibid., V: 111. For a brief sketch of his life, see Man. Com. Coun. (1835), 406-8; Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 258.

England declares war on Spain because English merchants have been forcibly prevented from trading with the Spanish-American colonies. This struggle later became merged in the War of the Austrian Succession. Peace was signed at Aix-la-Chapelle on Oct. 7, 1748.

The amount appropriated by the act of Nov. 28, 1734 (q.v.), for erecting a battery on Cocksey Horns in New York, proving insufficient, another act is passed "for Completing and Building the Fortifications," and for other purposes "for the Defence and Security of this Colony." This new act states that the battery was erected on Cocksey Horns. It authorizes John Cruger, John Rosewell, John D. Witt Peirce, and Capt. Cornelius D. Peyster, with the advice of the New York members of the general assembly, and with the approval of the governor, "To cause a sufficient quantity of Large Stones to be Lay'd or thrown so far Round the outside of the Said Battery Somewhat higher than the Lower part of the Wall; And to secure the Bottoms of the Foundation, to fill up with Earth Sand or other proper Materials round the Inside about Twenty feet more than is filled already, and so much at the East & West End of the Store House, as by the advice aforesaid Shall be Deemed necessary." They are also "To purchase at Least Thirty New Carriages more for the Great Guns, &c., To remove the Great Guns designed & Intended for the Said Battery, to their Proper Places on the Platform thereof; To provide one or Two good Engines and Ropes for mounting them, and to make of Sods So much of the Parapet as Shall be Judged proper & when that is Done to Dispose of the Brick & Stone the Same is now composed of to the best advantage."—Col. Laws N. Y. T., III: 14-15.

The death of William Sharps occurs. He had held the office of town clerk and clerk of the peace of New York City "for about 46 Years" (see Oct. 14, 1693), "to the Universal Satisfaction of all." He was buried Nov. 6.—N. Y. Flor. Nov. 12. The common council expressed concern at the loss of one who had served them "with great Integrity."—M. C. C., IV: 479. For an inventory of the records turned over to his successor, see Nov. 21.

Col. Morris moves "that as the Road from New-York to King's Bay, so far as Bowery, that Chales and Chaises, cannot pass or repass the Dock at New-York, as well as inconvenient for other Carriages, he might have Leave to bring in a Bill, at the Beginning of the next Meeting of this House, for extending the Ruttis of [widening] the said Road."—Assem. Jour., I: 773. Regarding the repair of this road, see Nov. 7, 1745.

A law was passed to apply the moneys granted for the support of the government to certain specified purposes. Among the many payments mentioned in the act are the following: To Alexander Lamb (door-keeper of the assembly), £915 6e. for expenses incurred in cleaning and repairing the assembly chamber, and for "Removing of the Chals Books & Papers to and from Greenwich as the Act for adjourning the House from the House of Mr. Her- manus Rutgers near the Fresh Water; to John De Durck, £1,41.5.0. for making a table for the assembly at Greenwich, and for "fitting & fixing it" afterwards at Mr. Rutgers'—Col. Laws N.Y. T., III: 35, 40.

An agreement is made by Henry Cruger, Henry Cuyler, Joseph Scott, and Gerardus Duycking to pay Adam van Allen, of Albany, for building a wharf fronting one entire block in the Dock Ward. This wharf is to be made of substantial timber 30 feet long, laid as close together as possible, on water lots belonging to "the parties of the first part," 200 feet from their wharves, beginning 170 feet from the west corner of the Old Slip wharf, commonly called Martin Clock's Corner, and running westward on a direct line with the Dock Street wharf. The breadth of the lots is 90 feet. The height of the wharf above high water is to be the same as the dock lately made by Henry Cuyler fronting his dwelling in the East Ward. The following specifications are made: Wall plates are to be supplied on the whole length and breadth of the wharf. Every eight feet, an anchor of oak timber 20 feet long is to be fixed in the wall plates. At five foot intervals a strong fender is to be driven into the ground, and fastened to the wall plate, for preserving the wharf and every 20 feet a cedar post is to be set into the soil for fastening ships. This work is to be finished before Sept. 20, 1740, when Van Allen shall receive £146 from the partners; each paying in proportion to the breadth of their water lots. They are to supply Van Allen with the necessary stone, and furnish a bond of £500. From the original agreement, filed in box labelled "New-York, 1790-1760," in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc. For location of Cruger's wharf, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 69. By July 1, 1740, it was "begun and partly sunk."—M. G. C., IV: 494.

John Chambers produces, at a meeting of the common council, letters patent appointing him "Common Clerk and Clerk of the Peace of this City in the Room of M' William Sharpes deceased" (see Nov. 4). It is ordered "that the Executors or Executrix of the Said Late M' Sharpes Do Deliver the Charter, the Seal of this Corporation, and all the Records, Books papers And Other things Whatsoever Relating to his Office as Common Clerk of this City into the hands of the Said M' Chambers," etc.—M. G. C., IV: 479. For a brief sketch of the life of John Chambers, see Man. Com. Coun. (1860), 609. For the list of the records, etc., delivered to Chambers, see May 14, 1740.

Dr. John Nicola of this city writes in a letter the following facts regarding the Rev. George Whitefield, the evangelist, now on his way to Georgia: "As soon as he arrived here, he applied himself to the Parson of the English Church (as his Manner is) for the Use of his Church, which was denied him: Application was also made to the Dutch, for their large Church which being also denied him, he went out and preached in the Fields to a very large Auditory of all Professions, Jews and Gentiles.... Being denied the other Churches, and the Weather being excessive cold, we offered him our Church [Presbyterian] which he was pleased to accept of, and lectured that Evening to above fifteen hundred People, and so he continued to preach and lecture every Day, while he stayed in the Place, which was but four days."—Am. Mercury (Phil.), Dec. 17, 1739 (in Antiquarian Soc. collection, Worcester, Mass.). See also Belcher, Geo. Whitefield: A Bibliography, 111-19. He visited the city again the following year.—See April 29, and Oct. 31, 1740.

1740

In this year, in pursuance of the act of 13 Geo. II, Chap. 7, a book was opened for entering the names, etc., of naturalized citizens of the province of New York. The original volume is now in the custody of the N. Y. Pub. Library. An alphabetical list of the citizens of New York admitted as freemen between 1685 and 1740, and a chronological list of the same admitted between 1710 and 1748, was published by Valentine in his Hist. of the City of N. Y. (1853), 356-78, 385-93.

About this time, the house of Leonard Lippencott was erected, in what is now the bed of Hudson St., on the south line of Desbrosses St.—Rec. Title Guarantee & Trust Co.; cf. Sandfords.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1740

Chancery Rep., IV: 711. A tablet has been placed on the building 1758

Hudson St. to mark this site. Col. Lispenard's mansion was surrounded with ample grounds, and it was here that he received General Washington when the commander-in-chief reached 1775 New York on his way from Philadelphia to Cambridge, June 23, 1775 (6:4, 1775, June 23). Mr. Ann. Hist. Soc., 4th Rep., 1785, 355. The house was removed about 1835.—Rec. Title Guarantee & Trust Co. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 950; Pl. 175, Vol. III.

In this year, Sir Peter Warren built a country seat at what is now the intersection of Charles and Van St. Leger, in the district known as Greenwich (see Nov. 17, 1735). The lawns before the house sloped down to the Hudson River. In 1735 (see Dec. 17, 1745), when the small-pox raged in the city, the assembly accepted Sir Peter's tender of his country-seat for their deliberations. This structure (later known as the Van Nast Mansion) was torn down in 1865.—N. Y. Eco. Post, Aug. 18, 1881. See also a history of this property in "Miscellaneous MSS." in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. under heading, "Van Nast Mansion;" Man. Com. Coun. (1834), 538; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 953; and "A Map of the Lands belonging to the Estate of the Late Sir Peter Warren lying in Greenwich in the Outward of the City of New York" (1773). Addenda Pl. 5-b, Vol. III, with description on pp. 86-67.

In or about this year, Lady Warren established at Greenwich a school for the neighbourhood children.—See an annotation made upon a map by Gerard Bancker, surveyor, completed for Col. John Bancker May 3, 1734, to box Ger. Bancker Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library. On the modern map, the site of this school is the bed of Eighth Ave., near the corner of Jane St. It is shown on Pl. 41, Vol. I; and on a map by Bancker, now in the author's collection, dated Aug. 1773, which is reproduced as A. Pl. 5-b, Vol. III.

The dry-goods advertised for sale at this period (see also Nov. 18, 1745) include men's velvet, black padoys (peau-de-soie) and white padoys, green aligene, taffey, satinet, silk tabby, shagreen, widows' cape, brocaded lutestring, striped sarlettes, silk cambert, poplin, embroidered cloth, damask, barline, cherry derry, blue English damask, French double ala-mode, blue satin,orgaman (geograin), Persian, blue tabby, India brocade, flowered Spanish silk, black figured everlasting, plissi, rushall, callimimo, India dimity, and coarse muslin, also hoop petticoats of three, five, and six rows, pink and white mantua, and scarlet stockings.—From "Hist. of the Domestic Affairs of the Inhabitants of N. Y." in Man. Com. Coun. (1838), 508.

Valentine illustrates the details of the business establishment of a leading merchant, about 1740, by describing that of Adolphus Philips, who was the son of Frederick Philips, probably the wealthiest of the Dutch burghers. Adolphus was an importer dealing in every variety of goods. "His store was of the best class of buildings in use for that purpose, and was three stories in height, exclusive of the 'garret' or space under the steep roof, which afforded considerable room. This part of the building being divided into five apartments, was sold for storage purposes for grain and other bulky goods. The next or third story was principally used for the sale of light dry goods, hardware, and as a general variety store, similar to the country store of the present day [1788]. The second story was occupied by the same diversity of goods, but in bulkier quantity, and was the proper wholesale department for country merchants. On this floor also was the great chest in the market, (there were then no banks of deposit,) jewery, silver-ware, pearls, and wampum, were kept for safety. On the next or first floor were kept the heavy articles (excluding dry goods,) appropriate to a general mercantile establishment. In the cellar was iron, iron work, etc. Attached to the premises was a store-house in the yard, and in the rear of the lot on New street was also a small store-house." Valentine describes also, the Philips mansion-house at Tarrytown.—Ibid. (1838), 519. See also Abstracts of Wills in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1846), 371, 372.

For an enumeration of the household furniture and groceries of Rip van Dam, at this time, see ibid., 520-21.

Jan.

The tavern of John de Hoorne, known as the Black Horse Tavern (see Oct. 9, 1727), which stood in William St., south of Exchange St., was said to have been closed prior to the time that house of Nicholas Ray was advertised as being "opposite to the late Black Horse Tavern."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 19, 1740.

Mar. 24

A public vendue is announced for this day "at the House of Mr. Schurlock, at the Spring Guarden," of several lots of land.—Mar. N. Y. Gen., Feb. 26-March 4, 1740. Spring Garden was first 24 mentioned in the Minutes of the common council on Nov. 1, 1712 (p.v.). It lay on the east side of Broadway in the block between Ann and Fulton Streets, and included part of the property of the church. Its exact location may be seen by a reference to Pls. 26, 27, and 30, Vol. I. The old house or tavern, of which Schurlock seems to have been proprietor at this time, stood in the northeast corner of the garden, directly opposite the later St. Paul's Church. According to Bayles' Old Taverns of N. Y., (1865), it was the place where most of the political meetings were held and the occupation of Isaac de Peyster.—Liber Mortages, I: 300. Although Spring Garden was so often referred to in the early records of the city, only two proprietors of the old tavern, besides Schurlock, are known. George Roper apparently had the house in 1765 (see Beverley's GM., May 16), and standing the British by 1774 (see July 3, 1774). It is quite true that Dowers had a tavern on his corner lot on Fulton St. and Broadway, but he did not occupy the old Spring Garden House, as stated by Bayles. In 1769, according to Du Similie, the old building was still in existence, but "had not been improved as a tavern for many years."—See description Pl. 21, 257. Mearns, City and Forest, collects, "Rector and Church Wardens do from time to time Deliver them to the Reverend Mr Charleston the Societies Chatschist in order to be by him given and distributed to such Caretakers as he shall think proper."—Trin. Min. (1821), 3.

Petitions from two parties, Jacques Cortelyou (2d) et al. and Thomas Stillwell, are received by the council asking for the ferry rights from Long Island and Staten Island. On April 12, Cortelyou's petition met with opposition, and, on April 24, it was withdrawn (see Gaz., April 24, 1745). On the same day, Stillwell, stated, in his petition, upon whose map of the city in 1745 (Pl. 34, Vol. I) reliance can be placed, shows no buildings in Spring Garden except the old tavern in the north-west corner. "Ordered that the Rector and Church Wardens be pleased to purchase Such number of Lewis's Expedition of the Church Catchism lately reprinted by William Bradford in this City as they shall think proper and that the said Rector and Church Wardens do from time to time Deliver them to the Reverend Mr Charleston the Societies Chatschist in order to be by him given and distributed to such Caretakers as he shall think proper."—Trin. Min. (1821), 3.

The king issues a proclamation at St. James's to encourage trade with America. Referring to an act (Statutes at Large, VI: 379) passed for that purpose by "this present Sessions of Parliament," he points out that he and his successors are empowered by it, "from time to time, during the Continuance of the present or any future War," to grant charters or commissions to enable persons to join in Expiditions by Sea or Land, and to sail to, and in any of the Seas in the world, on any voyage, or for the purpose of any Ships, Goods, . . . Settlements, Factoryes, Forts, Castles, and Fortifications" belonging to the enemy. Full rights of title to such property are assured to the persons taking them. The proclamation is made to inform the soldiers and sailors of the new rights intended for those "during the continuance of the Regulation of the War."—From original broadside in the N. Y. Pub. Library. The war was declared on Oct. 19, 1729 (5:7).

The common council orders "that Aldermen Roome have the fence Up between the Garden of the poorhouse and the Ground by John Harris, And that he agree with the Said John Harris A bout Such part of the fence As is in Standing."—M. C. G., IV: 483.

A vendue of the docks and ships is ordered to be held on April
A Small folio Book With a parchment Cover Stiched on May being Amendment, Explanation, &c. of the Laws from the Year 1665 Inclusive.

A folio book bound in parchment, Publick Orders and Minutes of Common Council begun the 17th day of October 1675 and Ending the 14th day of October 1691.

A folio book bound in parchment Containing Minutes of Common Council begun the 15th day of October 1691 and Ending the 15th day of February 1702-3.

A folio book bound in parchment Containing Minutes of Common Council begun February the 24th 1702-3 and Ending the 9th day of March 1721-2.

A Large folio book bound in Vellum or parchment Containing Laws orders, Ordinances, and Minutes of Common Council begun April 24th 1722 and Now in Use five books bound.

One Tax book Now in Use began february the 6th 1724/5.

Two books of Entries of Actions Commenced in the Mayors Court.

One book of Entries of Actions in the Mayors Court Now in Use.

Six blotters or minute books of the Mayors Court.

One blotters or minute book of the Mayors Court Now in Use.

A book bound in Leather Containing the Copy of the Charter Carefully Examined With the Original.

A Vestry book bound in January the 9th 1692/3. With a paper Cover and Ending the 8th day of January 1716 [1-17].

A Vestry book bound in parchment begun the 8th day of January 1716 & Now in Use. Four books of Registering Indentures of Apprentice Ship, Three book in parchment, And the Last (Now in Use) in Leather the first beginning february the 15th 1694 [5-9].

A book of Grants from the City beginning the 17th day of November 1685 No 15 bound in parchment.

A book of Grants from the city No. 24 bound in parchment begun June the 4th 1701 and Now in Use.

Book of Transports No. 12 beginning the 15th day of November 1675 and Ending July the 14th 1683.

Book of Conveyances No. 13 begun the 16th July 1683 and Ending October the first 1687.

Book of Deeds, bonds, Mortgages, Letters of Attorney &c No. 18 beginning the 10th November 1689 and Ending the 20th of August 1694.

Book of Records of Conveyances, Mortgages Letters of Attorney Bonds Deeds No. 21 beginning the 20th of August 1694 and Ending the 21st November 1698.

Book No. 23 Conveyances Mortgages Letters of Attorney bonds &c begun the 18th November 1698 and Ending the 21st November 1701.

Book No. 25 Conveyances Mortgages Letters of Attorney and Other Instruments Recorded beginning December the first 1701 and Ending the 11th day of May Anno Domini 1705.

Book No. 26 Conveyances Mortgages Letters of Attorney &c begun May the 25th 1705 and Ending the 25th day of December 1712.

Book No. 28 Conveyances, Mortgages, Letters of Attorney and Other Instruments Recorded &c begun January 26th 1712-13 and Ending the 26th day of August 1719.

Book No. 30 Conveyances, Mortgages, Letters of Attorney and Other Instruments Recorded &c begun August 28th 1719 and Ending the 26th day of June 1744.

Book No. 31 Conveyances, Mortgages, Letters of Attorney and Other Instruments Recorded &c begun August the 17th 1724 & Ending the 12th day of October 1734.

Book No. 32 Conveyances Mortgages, Letters of Attorney and Other Instruments Recorded &c begun the 17th day of October 1734 And Now in Use.

Book of Freemen of the City of New York bound in Vellum.

Book Alphabet of Freemen of the City of New York, bound in Vellum.

A book of Court of Lieutenancy begun October the 16th 1686 bound in parchment.

One Large folio Book blank November 7th 1739 bound in leather bought by the Above Named Mr Sharpess for the Use of the Corporation: A Textbook now in Use.

One book of the Minutes of the Council and the Minutes of the Mayors Court Omitted in the Above Catalogue.

The Old and New Charter to the City of New York together. with a patent for the land between the Walleboht and the Red
May
hock on Nassau Island and a Certificate in a Tin box, the City Seal, The Loan Officers Bonds—"M. C. C., IV: 485-88. For a comparison of the above list with the record-books now existing, see Bibliography, Vol. V. For the earliest inventory of city records,
see Jan. 14, 16. —

The mayor informs the common council "that there are Some War like Stores in the Custody of this Corporation which may be Usefull, to the Commissioners of Fortifications at the New Bat-ing," and it is ordered that he "Deliver Such of the said Stores to the Said Commissioners as they may have Occasion for."
M. C. C., IV: 28-90. This step is taken in preparation for the war with Spain.—See April 13.

19

The governor's wife, Anne Hyde Clarke, dies. Her body was buried May 24 in a vault in Trinity Church beside the remains of her mother, and the late Lady Cornbury. "And as it was a Pleasure to Her in Her life to feed the Hungry," so on the day of her funeral a loaf of bread was given to every poor person who would receive it.—N. Y. Gan., May 26, 1740; N. Y. Jour., May 26, 1740. "She was the eldest Daughter of the late hon. Edward Hyde, Esq., who descended from one of the most ancient Families in England.
They were originally of the Principality of Wales, but settled at Hyde in Cheshire about one hundred years before William the Conqueror came to England . . . The two Noble Families of the Claremonds and Rochesters are descended from that of the Hyde, as was the late Queens, Mary and Anne, from the Claremonds."— N. Y. Min., IV: 185.

20

"The two Houses in the Broadway, near the Fort, lately in the tenure of Archibald Kennedy, Esq. are to be Let. Enquire of Peter Bayard, at second River in New Jersey, or Mr. Walter du Bois, Junior in New-York."—N. Y. Gan., May 12-19, 1740. One of this, New Broadway, was occupied as the Which remissus-house.
Mark Map Ref. Key, III: 974. Kennedy was the owner of these houses (Nos. 1 and 5 Broadway) when he made his will, March 13, 1745 (q.v.). See also April 21, 1745; Sept. 3, 1744.

21

The council lays an embargo on all provisions.—Col. Coun.

22

June

Cov. Clarke receives instructions for the expedition against the Spanish colonies. The council orders that a proclamation he issued for the encouragement of volunteers.—Col. Coun. Min., 335.

23

July

Orders are issued by the provincial council on this day and later throughout the month appointing various New York citizens to be officers of the companies raised by them.—Col. Coun. Min., 316.

16

The Moravian missionary, Henry Rauch, arrives at New York, having been sent by Count Zinzendorf of Saxony to visit the Indians of the provinces of New York and Connecticut.—A Native of the Mission of the United Brethren, etc. (1740-1808), By John Hebbelmann, and William E. Conklin (of the Society for the promotion of the beginnings of the Moravians or United Brethren in New York City soon after this (1741-1756) is given in a letter from John Etttwein, of Bethlehem, Pa., dated Sept. 14, 1799, addressed to the Rev. Samuel Miller, 158 Broadway.—From records of the United Brethren, in Miller Papers (MSS.), L in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

24

Permission is given to several gentlemen, who had "Undertaken to finish the Street Already begun thro the Hill by the Windmill," to proceed.—M. C. C., IV: 496. This was the extension of the Boston Post Road. See Sept. 8, 1714; Nov. 7, 1741, and PE. 27, Vol. I.

Aug.

A sufficient quantity of provisions having been secured for the expedition (see April 3), the embargo laid May 29 is raised.—

25

A city ordinance is passed "to Prohibit Negroes and Other Slaves Vending Indian Corn Peaches or any other Fruit within this City." This law explains that "of Late Years great Numbers of Negro Indians and Molatto Slaves have made it a Common Practice of Buying. Selling and Exposing to Sale, not Only in houses. out houses & yards but Likewise in the Publick Streets Within this City, great Quantities of Baked Indian Corn. Pears Figs. Peaches and other kind of fruit. . . ." The ordinance practice is not only Detrimental to the Masters Mistresses and Owners of Such Slaves in regard They Absent themselves from their Service: But is also productive of Encreasing if not Occasioning Many and Dangerous Vourous, and other Distempers & Diseases in the Army. —M. C. C., IV: 387. Vending boiled corn was a regular custom of the poor of the city a century later.—See Hot Corn, by Solon Robinson (N. Y., 1854).
1740. The common council allows John Roome £313 for work performed by him on the city hall and the stocks.—M. C. G., V: 8.

4 This is the last reference in the Minutes to the stocks. For a later reference to the pillory and cage, see Sept. 10, 1744; and for discussion of various methods of correction, see May 1, 1847, 352-711. ibid. (1849), 366-610, 421-223, 429; ibid. (1856), 430; ibid. (1879), 490; ibid. (1861), 451; ibid. (1862), 629-935; ibid. (1864), 535-58; ibid. (1864), 765; ibid. (1865), 669-702; ibid. (1868), 891; ibid. (1869), 852 also Peterson & Edwards, N. Y. as an 18th Cent. Municipalty, 154-99.

Dec. Zenger writes: "Our streets are fill'd, with confused Heaps of Snow, so that the Lovers of Sledding can scarcely use them without Danger, the whole Mass fell in one Night's Time, and now the Cold is so excessive, that I am Writing in a Warm Room by a good Fire Side the Ink Freezes in the Pen."—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 21, 1740.

22 In advertisements of dwelling-houses for sale or rent at this period, the number of fireplaces is often considered worthy of special mention, as showing the size and completeness of the residence. For example, the house "over against the Weigh-house next Door to the Custom House," occupied by William Inglis, is described as containing ten fireplaces.—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 22, 1740.

27 Abraham van Home's will of this date recites, among other legacies: "I leave to my son David the dwelling house and ground where I now live, also my store house and ground adjoining, both situate on the south side of Wall street. . . I leave to my son Samuel my dwelling and baking house and ground, both situate on the north side of Wall street. . ." He makes a legacy also, conditionally, for the children of his "late daughter Mary, late wife of Governor William Burnet."—Abstracts of Wills, III: 340. The lot left to David van Home was that now (1924) occupied in part by the National City Bank building (formerly the custom house), and it also included (according to Pelletreau) Hanover St. south of Wall St. Pelletreau further states: "Governor William Burnet had three children by his second marriage, but one of them seems to have died before the above will was made."—Ibid. for the original grant of this ground, see May 25, 1688.

1741

In this year, the Church of the St. Esprit (see July 8, 1704) was thoroughly repaired.—Wittmer's Introduction to Vol. I of Collections of the Hayden Soc. of Am., XXIII. It stood on the site of the present 18-22 Pine St. (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 92), and was described in 1757 as "of Stone, nearly a square [it] was 75 feet long, and 50 feet wide, plain both within and without," "fenced from the Street," and having "a Steeple and a Bell."—Smith, Hist. of the Province of N. Y. (1757), 193; Disbury, The Earliest Churches of N. Y., p. 21. See, further, Aug. 24, 1741. This church can be seen on Pl. 28, Vol. I. A water-color sketch, signed by A. J. Davis, and dated 1834, is in the author's collection.

In the archives of the Reformed Dutch Church of New York, there is a list of the ministers, elders, and deacons of this church from 1741 to 1767. It is printed in N. Y. Jour., Vol. IV: 1747-55. The winter which ushered in this year (ever since called the hard winter,) was distinguished by the sharpest frost, and the greatest quantity of snow, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The weather was intensely severe from the middle of November to the latter end of March. The snow, by repeated falls, was at length six feet above the surface of the earth; and the Hudson river passable upon the ice, as low as the capital, within thirty miles from the open sea: cattle of all sorts perished by the want of fodder; and the deer of the forests were either starved or taken, being unable to browse or escape the depth of the snow. The poor, both in town and country, were distressed for food and fuel; and, by the scarcity of these articles, the prices of almost every thing else was raised, and though since reduced, yet never so low as in the preceding year.—Smith, Hist. of N. Y., II: 632 see also Conv. Gen. (New London), May 15, 1799.

Jan. The first magazine published in the United States made its appearance this month. This was The American Magazine, or a monthly view of the political state of the British Colonies. It was projected and edited by John Webbe, and was printed and sold by Andrew Bradford, in Philadelphia. Its appearance was hastened by a number of subscriptions from those who desired to see the first American magazine.-Evans, Am. Bibliography, II: 174. Another magazine of similar name made its first appearance in Boston in Sept, 1743 (p. 9).

The provincial council receives a letter from Admiral Vernon regarding Spanish and French naval movements; and the council forbade the exportation of wheat, but an exception was made on Feb. 6; also the exportation of beer and candles already loaded on board a brigantine before the order of Jan. 19 was allowed.—Cal. Colon. Min., 377.

The contributors to charitable relief having agreed that their fund of £500 shall be placed in the hands of Abraham Lefferts and Abraham van Wyke, "to be imploýd by them from Time to Time, to such Poor House Keepers, Widdows, and other necessitous People as may stand most in Need of Relief, during the Severity of this Season," Lefferts & Wyke propose to be at the house of Nicholas Roy (or Ray), "opposite to the late Black Horse Tavern," three days a week—Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays—from nine to twelve a.m., "as well for the Ease of those who are in Real Want, as for the more regular Distribution of the Money, for the End it has been given." In this connection, the following notice is published, which serves to explain further the methods of this early instance of charity organization and relief:

"First, That there will be Provided at the said House, a Stock of suitable Provisions and Cloathing, and that all those who shall stand in Real Need of Relief, may Make Application for it at the Police and Tinlins Office. . ."

"2dly, That all those who are so Good as to make Enquiry about the Circumstances of the necessitous People, in their respective Wards, are desired to give Information thereof to the Gentlemen above named, and to assist them with their Advice, in making proper Distributions.

"3dly, That if upon such Enquiry and Information it appears that any Credible Families are in real Want, and scruple to make it known, Care may be taken to have their Necessities Supply'd by private Hands.

And lastly, That all those who, out of their Alliances, are disposed to send to the House above mentioned, any Provisions, Cotathing or Covering, it shall be kindly Received, and duly applied To Feed the Hungry & Cloath the Naked."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 12 and 19, 1740. See also incidents of distress mentioned in ibid., Jan. 5.

The Beaux Stratagem is to be presented "at the new Theatre in the Broad Way."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 2, 1741. This theatre was on the site of parts of 12 and 14 Broadway. It is shown on the manuscript "Plan of the City of New York in the Year 1735."—See Pl. 50, and its description, p. 264, Vol. I. The house of the theatre is mentioned at the tavern of John Hughson on the North River. Suspicion fell also upon Hughson, who was believed to have received goods stolen by negroes. On the evening of March 3, his house was searched.—Ibid. 3.

Horsmanden firmly believed in the "Plot," in which opinion he was supported by some of the best intellects of the time. Notwithstanding these facts, the opinion of most writers who have calmly reviewed the occurrences of these troubled times abounds not only the Negroes but also the Roman Catholics from any widespread plot to destroy or obtain possession of the city or government. Nevertheless, the occurrences which followed in such quick succession throughout the years 1741 and 1742 are of such interest and importance, as depicting the frame of mind and attitude of the people, that it has been thought worth while to trace with some particularity the development and details connected with an episode which must always remain a blot upon the history of New York. See also the account of these events as they appeared in the record books, and in other sources. Prince, another negro, is also arrested and examined, but he also denies knowing anything of the robbery. Hughson's house is searched several times but none of the missing articles is discovered.—Horsmanden's Jour., 25.

Mary Burton, in her "General Magazine," confesses that she knows something about the robbery at Hoggs' (see Feb. 28), but she is afraid to reveal it, for fear she "should be murdered or poisoned by the Hugheons and the Negroes." She is lodged, for safety, in the city hall with the under-sheriff. Hugheun is thereupon examined again, and he finally admits that he knows where some of the stolen articles are hidden; he delivers these to Alderman Bancker.—Horsmanden's Jour., 3.

Maiden makes a deposition, declaring (1) that the negro Caesar (who goes under the name of John Quin) came to Hugheun's house at about two o'clock on the morning of March 1, and later gave her two pieces of silver and some linen, and her master a lump of sugar; (2) that, soon after, Mr. Mills came to inquire for John Quin and Henry Hughson, and Hugheun, silver, and other goods; and (3) that as soon as Mills had gone, her master lopped the linen, first in the garret, then under the stairs, and finally gave it to Mrs. Hugheun's mother. Hugheun admits that he received the linen and the silver, but he refuses to sign a confession. He and his wife are admitted to bail and recognizances are entered into for their appearance in the supreme court.—Horsmanden's Jour., 3–4.

White, a plumber, is mending a leak in a gutter between the governor's house and the chapel (in the fort), when a fire breaks out of the roof of the former building.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 5 and 6. As the structure is covered with cedar shingles, and full of old floors and wainscot, it is past saving before an engine can be brought up.—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 156–57; 18:86. With a strong wind blowing from the south-east, the secretary's office, the barracks, and the chapel are also consumed in less than two hours. The fires of the officers, guards, and carriages are not damaged. Part of the governor's furniture, and most of the books and records, are saved by the activity of the magistrates and inhabitants.—N. T. Jour., March 23, 1741. For the connection of this fire with the so-called "Negro Plot," see N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 185–86; 187, 196, 197–98, 201–3. Jour. Leg. Coun., I: 794. Regarding the rebuilding of these structures, see Sept. 17, 1741. See also "Governer's House in the Fort," in Landmark Map. Ref. Key, III: 974; "Secretary's Office (first site)," in ibid., III: 975; and "Church in the Fort," in ibid., III: 974. See also reproduction of the manuscript page of William Smith's compilation of his history of the province, where the fire is mentioned, PL, 35, Vol. IV.

The recorder, Daniel Horsmanden, having conveyed to the common council a representation from the lieutenant-governour and council "that in the Dreadful Calamity Which happened Yesterday the Secretary's Office was Entirely Destroyed," and the lieutenant-governour having "Desired that this board would Assign the Common Council Room for the Keeping the Publick Books and Records of the Province. During the present Exigency, Untill Another proper place Can be Provided by the Legislature," the board expresses its approval and appoints the recorder to inform the lieutenant-governour.—M. C. C., V: 16; Col. Coun. Min., 337.

The common council orders 100 new leather fire-backets with the words "City of N. York" painted on them.—M. C. C., V: 16–17. As many more were ordered during the ensuing summer.—ibid., I: 168. The common council grants Johannes Myers £28.8.0. "for Repairing the High ways between this and Kings bridge in the Late Great Snow."—M. C. C., V: 16.

Fire starts in the house of Captain Warren, "near the Long Bridge at the S. W. End of the Town." The fire-engines prevent it from doing much damage. It is supposed at this time that the accidental firing of a chimney was the cause.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 6.

Early this morning, it is discovered that some live coals had been put under a haystack near the stables of one John Murray. The coals had gone out "of themselves," otherwise the nearby dwellings would have been greatly damaged. "The five several fires that March 18th had, upon 15, April 1 and silver, have happened in so short a Time, succeeding each other, and The Attempt made of a Sixth on Mr. Murray's Haystack; it was natural for People of any Reflection, to conclude that the Fire was set upon Purpose, by a Combination of Villains; and therefore occasioned great Un- easiness to everyone that had Thought" (about it).—Horsmanden's Jour., 6–7.

Two more fires break out in the city, and suspicion centres on the negro population. The magistrates meet at the city hall to examine the negroes, and, while they are in session, two other fires start. A negro is seen coming out of one of the houses, and this raises the alarm that the negroes are rising. "Many People had such terrible Aprehensions upon this Occasion, and indeed there was Cause sufficient, that several Negroes were committed to the Streets, after the Alarm of their rising, were hurried away to Goal."—Horsmanden's Jour., 7–8.

The lieutenant-governour orders that a military watch be kept this evening and this was continued all summer.—ibid., VIII.

Hugheun and his wife are committed to goal, "being charged as Accessories to divers Felonies and Misdemeanours."—Horsmanden's Jour., 8.

The governor orders the militia to aid the magistrates in a general search. This was made on April 13, but no stolen goods were found or suspicious strangers reported.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 10.

In speaking of the numerous fires in the city, the recorder declares at a meeting of the common council that "every one that reflected on the Circumstances attending them, the Frequency of them, and the Causes being yet undiscovered; must necessarily conclude, that some evil design or design was at work by some villainous Confederacy of latent Enemies amongst us." He therefore moves that the common council offer rewards for the discovery of persons implicated. The board resolves upon the following rewards: £100 to any white person who gives information leading to the arrest of the incendiaries; £25 and his freedom to any negro who gives information, and £25 to his master; £25 to any free Negro or Indian who reveals the culprits. It is also decided to make a general search of the city for stolen goods. The governor orders the militia to aid in this search.—Horsmanden's Jour., 10.

Pursuant to the order of April 11 (g.r.), a search of the city is made, but no stolen goods are discovered, nor suspicious strangers found. Two negroes, having things "thought improper for, and unbecoming the Condition of Slaves," are arrested.—Horsmanden's Jour., 11.

The governor's council, at the request of the common council, of the city, orders that a proclamation be issued offering a reward for the discovery of incendiaries.—Col. Coun. Min., 337. See April 17.

Clarke, addressing a joint session of the legislature "at his present Residence," states that for more years the people never questioned "the King's royal Prerogative and undoubted Right, to appoint Officers for the Management of his Revenue," but, "whether grummon wanton by Prosperity, or whatever else it was, they began to deviate from the Example of the Parliament, de- manding to have the first province of the Receivers of the Receipt and Management of the Money to be given, not for the Support of Government, but for extraordinary Uses; and being indulged in this, they soon grew in their Demands, and insisted upon hav- ing the Revenue likewise put into his [the treasurer's] Hands, it being constantly before managed by the King's Officer, his Majesty's Receiver General, who had, and still has, a Salary allowed him for that Service, which is paid out of his Majesty's Quit-Rents. This prosperous Beginning encouraged them to go on further, . . ." After the "Expiration of the Revenue, in 1709," he explains, they "refused to support the Government unless they had the particular Appointment of the Officers Sal- aries, thereby making themselves Judges what Officers were proper, what not." They left the auditor-general without any salary; this was an office established in the time of Charles II designed to have inspection and control of the king's accounts. The salary of this officer had been established soon after the revolution of 1689–91, and constantly paid. The people of the province, in abolishing this salary, which they had been paying to a British appointee, took upon themselves the dependence of officers whom they themselves provided, "for Men are naturally Servants of those who pay them." This, in effect, Clarke asserts, "sunked the Constitution," in that they assumed to themselves "one undoubted and essential Branch of his Majesty's royal Preroga- tive." Now, he says, only a return to "a just Sense of their Duty to his Majesty, and the Example of that august Body, the Apr. Parliament, should be their rule of action. "This, and only this," he adds, "will remove, as to this Province, a jealousy which for many Years has been excited in England, and which can not without Thoughts of throwing off their Dependence on the Crown of England." (The italics are so in the printed journal of the assembly, published by Gaine in 1764.) He therefore urges that this assembly give the king such revenue as will enable him "to pay the Rent of his Owners and Servants, whereby they will be reclaimed to their proper Dependence." This, he says, "the flourishing Condition of the Province" will amply admit of; as "the great Increase of Trade, and People," is well known to be vastly more rapid than it was 40 years ago.

Moreover, that, as there is "great Cause to apprehend a speedy Rupture with France," New York City be better fortified, "by erecting Batteries in proper Places upon some of the Wharfs facing the harbour, others upon the side of Hudson's River adjoining to the Town, and one at Red-Heeck, upon Long-Island, to prevent the Enemy from landing upon Nuten-Island." He explains the appropriate application of the stores of war, including ordnance ordered by the king to be sent, which will govern the site of the batteries to be built. Revenue must be supplied to meet the expense of placing these stores, mounting guns, etc., when they arrive.

He further advises that the militia be put under better regulation; and that an agent in England for this province be provided.

He refers to "the late fatal Fire that laid in Ashes the House, Chapel, Barracks and Secretary's Office, in his Majesty's Fort in this Town, accidentally occasioned by sending a Gutter on the Roof of the House, adjoining to the Chapel," and reminds the assembly how necessary it is that they be "speedily re-built," adding: "The frequent Fires which have happened in this Town, since that at the Fort, giving Room, from many Circumstances to believe, they have been kindled by Design, call for some effectual Law to restrain the too great License that the Negroes are allowed, or that they take any Part in them, in any of the Houses, whether at Times and in Places that give them Opportunities for Cabaling." The great losses sustained, when goods have been removed to preserve them from the flames, require "some Method to secure them for the future from being stolen." He recommends that "A night Guard of the Militia, will be very proper to be constantly kept on Foot, especially in Time of War," bound to their duty by proper penalties. Provision should be made, also, "for billeting the Men, who may be ordered to this Town for it's Defence, whenever Occasion requires."—Assemb. Jour. I, 1792-93. See, further, "The Hist. of Political Parties in the Prov. of N. Y., 1760-1776" by Carl L. Becker, comprising "Bullis of Unive. of Wisconsin, No. 286, History Series, Vol. II, No. 1.

At the request of the common council (M. C. C., v. 17), lieutenant-governor Clarke issues a proclamation offering a reward for the discovery of any person or persons "lately Concern'd in setting Fire to the said House," and adds that the rewards are as follows: £100 to a white person, and pardon if he is concerned in the crime; £50 to a slave, his pardon if a participator, his manumisition, and £5 to his master; and £5 to a free negro, mulatto, or Indian.—N. Y. T. Jour., April 20, 1741; Horsmanden's Jour., 10.

The supreme court begins its session for the trial of the negroes arrested in connection with the fires in the city.—Horsmanden's jour., 11-12. See also David Grim's manuscript notes of his recollections of the "Neck Plot" (in package marked "1753-1749") in box of MSS. labelled "New-York, 1700-1760," in N. Y. Hist. Soc., and the numerous indictments in Col. Hist. MSS. Eng., 53-68.

Clarke informs the lords of trade that, since the fire in the fort, much consternation has been caused by the recurrence of fires, sometimes as many as four in a day, and some pretty knidled by design. He has endeavoured to discover the perpetrators by offering a reward and otherwise. Several negroes have been imprisoned on suspicion, but no proof has yet been found against them. He keeps a night guard of militia who constantly patrol.—N. Y. Col. Docs., vi. 186.

Mary Burton testifies before the grand jury that her master, John Moore, and Margeret, a Negro woman, lived in the house, together with a number of negroes, conspired to burn the city and murder the inhabitants. The accused persons were forthwith arrested and tried.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit., 15. 14. For an account of the institution of slavery in New York, see Mon. Apr. Com. Coun. (1858), 506-7.

The judges of the supreme court decide that, though there is "an Act of the Province for Punying Negros and other Colomies, for all Manner of Offences," as this seems to be a "Sentence of Villainy" in which White People were confederated with them, and most probably were the first Movers and Seducers of the Slaves," it requires "great Secrecy, as well as the utmost Diligence, in the Conduct of the Exemplary Concerning it." Margaret Kerry is examinied and urged to confess all she knows, but she denies every-things—Horsmanden's Jour., 14.

An address from the assembly to Lieut.-Gov. Clarke states that there was "lately erected at a vast Expence, a noble Battery, ornamented with upwards of fifty great Guns, at the Entrance of the Harbour of this City" (see July 16 and Oct. 20, 1755). This state-mint is made to defend the house from the charge of neglecting the matter of fortifications. The address continues: "To what is mentioned of a Jealousy in England, that the Plantations are not without thought of throwing off their Dependence on the Crown of England; we shall say the less, as your Honour declares you hope and believe no Man in this Colony, has such Intention; and we dare vouch that not one single Person in it has any such Thought or Desire."—Assemb. Jour., I, 792-97.

A committee of the common council disposes of the lease of the city docks and slips at public auction to Bartholomew Skaats for $500, payable quarterly. He is also to remove 60 scows load of mud from the dock.—M. C. C., v. 19.

A committee of the whole house resolves that, for the security of the city, several other batteries and platforms ought to be created, and a special committee is appointed to consider where these should be placed.—Assemb. Jour., II, 800.

The king having appointed George Clinton governor of New York "in the room of the Lord Delawar" (see June 20, 1737), the lords of trade are required to prepare drafts of a commission and instructions.—N. Y. Col. Docs., vii. 187. The commission was submitted to the House on May 20, great News, that a copy of it appears in N. Y. Col. Doc., vii. 185-95. The instructions, submitted to the justices on Aug. 20, were in the usual form; excepting that an additional salary was allowed for providing a house for Clinton, the former house having been destroyed by fire; excepting also that mention of New Jersey was omitted (as that was now a distinct government), and accepting two or three other minor changes.

—Ibid., vi. 200-1.

Two negroes, Caesar and Prince, are convicted of robbing May the house of Robert Hogg (see Feb. 28)—Horsmanden's jour., 18. On May 11, they were executed, the body of Caesar being hung in chains.—Ibid., 15. David Grim stated in 1713 that the gibbet was erected "at the south-east corner of the old Powder-house, in Magazine Street, (now Pearl street)." He added that the place where they were chained to a stake and burned to death was "in the valley between Windmill hill and Pot-baker's hill, (now Augusta Street) in the centre of said street, and midway of (now) Pearl and Parley streets."—Description of PI. i-x. A: 176. For "Augusta" (Augustus), and "Parley" (Barley) Streets, see PI. lx, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, Vol. III.

Arthur Price, a servant, deposes that Margaret Kerry confessed to him that the Hughesons, Prince, Caesar, and Cuffer (another negro) were in the conspiracy to set the town on fire, and that she declared that if Caesar and Prince were hanged the other negroes would be revenged.—Horsmanden's jour., 17.

Hughson, his wife, and Margaret Kerry are found guilty of receiving stolen goods.—Horsmanden's jour., op. cit., 18. The next day, Margaret Kerry made a confession, accusing John Romme.—Ibid., 20.

The common council orders that "all the Pigione holes under the City hall shall be forthwith taken Down and Removed."—M. C. C., v. 20. The printed transcription of this record has been verified by an examination of the original manuscript volume of Minutes.

"Pigione holes" in the city hall are nowhere else found mentioned in descriptions or records of the period.

Caesar and Prince (see May 1) are sentenced to be hanged.—

Lieut.-Gov. Clavon as a warrant to Lewis Morris, Jr., to grant letters of marque and reprisal to George Cunningham, on the petition of George Moore and Henry Cruger.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 545.
Under examination, Margaret Kerry declares that she heard John Romme urge the negroes to "burn the Houses of them that have the most Money, and kill them all, as the Negroes would have done their Masters and Mistresses formerly" (in 1712) and to "burn the Fort first, and afterwards the City; and then to steal and rob, and carry away all the Money and Goods they could procure." Romme's wife confesses that the negroes used to frequent her house, but denies all knowledge of the conspiracy.—Hornsmann's Jour., 21-24. See May 18.

11 Arthur Price deposes that Cuffee (a negro) has confessed his implication in the conspiracy and revealed also that Quack (another negro) was in the plot. Cuffee declares there were two parties, the "Long-Bridge Boys" and the "Smith's-Fly Boys."—Hornsmann's Jour., 26-27.

18 John Romme (see May 9) having been arrested at Brunswick, N. J., is brought to the city and committed to jail. He denies all connection with the conspiracy.—Hornsmann's Jour., 39.

23 A committee of the assembly votes the following appropriations: a sum not exceeding $600 to erect, "on or near the Flat Rock behind Fort George, a proper and sufficient Battery, for about twenty great Guns, leaving between it and the River, a sufficient Space for a pursuing two blockships at Coney Battery, one at the East Side, and the other at the West Side of the present Store House already erected there;" and $576 for filling up with sand or other material "the Space of ten Feet more of the inside of the Battery on Coney Rocks," the floor of which is to be repaired, and, on the outside of which a beam or scanling is to be fixed "to prevent the Guns from recoiling beyond the said Floor."—Assemb. Jour., I: 803.

Quack and Cuffee are arraigned on two indictments, one "for a Conspiracy to burn the Town, and murder the inhabitants," the other for two actual burnings.—Hornsmann's Jour., 36. See May 29.

28 Quack and Cuffee are found guilty on both indictments (see May 28), and sentenced to be burned at the stake.—Hornsmann's Jour., 36-45. See May 30.

30 Quack and Cuffee are burned at the stake. Quack confesses that Hughson originated the plot, that he (Quack) set fire to the fort, and that many negroes were implicated. Cuffee also accuses Hughson, admits that he set fire to the store-house, and declares "About Fifty" were concerned.—Hornsmann's Jour., 45-48.

Hughson, his wife and daughter, and Margaret Kerry, are convicted of complicity in the burning of the fort, and the city.—Hornsmann's Jour., 59; and N. Y. Jour., June 8, 1741. All except the daughter were hanged on June 12. Their execution is described as follows: "He [Hughson] stood up in the Cart all the Way, looking round about him as if expecting to be rescued; as when the Cart came to the Barriers, he appeared in . . . At the Gallows his Wife stood like a bellered Truck, with the Rope about her Neck tied up to the Tree; she said not a Word, and had scarce any visible Motion. Peggy seemed much less resigned than the other two, or rather unwilling to encounter Death: She was going to say something, but the Old Woman, who hung next to her, gave her a Shove with her Hand, as it was said by some, so Peggy was silent. But they all died, having protested their Innocence to the last, touching the Conspiracy."—Hornsmann's Jour., 72.

For a news report of their part in the conspiracy, see the N. Y. Jour., June 15, 1741. See also De Voe, M. Jour., June 16, 1741.

6 Negroes, Jack, Cook, Robin, another Caesar, another Cuffee, and Jamaica, are found guilty of conspiracy. The first five are sentenced to be burned at the stake; Jamaica is ordered to be hanged.—Hornsmann's Jour., 61-63.

The assembly allows $500 to finish the battery of 55 great guns on Coney Rocks.—N. Y. Jour., June 8, 1741. See April 28, May 25. See also "Whitehall Battery," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946.

7 Negro, Jack (see June 8), convicted of connection with the conspiracy, is pardoned.—Col. Com. Min., 338. Cook, Robin, Caesar, and Cuffee convicted on June 8 (p. 32), are executed.—Hornsmann's Jour., 66.

8 Bastian, Francis, Albany, and Curacao Dick (negroes) are found guilty of conspiracy to burn the city and murder the inhabitants.—Hornsmann's Jour., 67-68. On June 11, they were sentenced to be burned at the stake.—Ibid., 69. All except Bastian (see June 13) were executed on June 12.—Ibid., 73.

The execution of Sarah, daughter of John Hughson (see June 11), is ordered postponed until June 19.—Hornsmann's Jour., 69. See June 17.

The grand jury, on being thanked by the speaker of the assembly for detect the "horrid Conspiracy," presents a petition to the House" for "the better regulating of Slaves, and for preventing other Irregularities in this City." The circumstances of the conspiracy are reviewed, and reveal the fact that "the great Number of publick Houses, in which Negroes have been entertained and encouraged to buy Rum and other strong Liquors, has been a principle Incentive to those detestable Villanies," also that the conspiracy was "formed and agreed to, by great Numbers of Negroes, meeting together on divers Sundays, and was intended to be put in Execution on some Sunday Morning, during the Time of publick Service;" as also "fetching Tea Water on Sundays, has been found to tend to the forming of the said Conspiracy, by giving Occasion to great Numbers of them, to meet in the same Place." The grand jury therefore recommends that a law be passed "to limit the Number of publick Houses within the City of New-York, also to oblige all Keepers of publick Houses, under severe Penalties, to keep good Order in such Houses, and to prohibit them to sell any Spirituous Liquors, unless by express Leave of their Masters, in writing," to prohibit receiving goods from negroes, except by such permission; to restrain negroes "from fetching Tea Water on Sundays;" to punish persons who harbour and entertain negroes; and to prevent negroes "being absent from their Masters Houses on Sundays, unless by the publick Worship of God, or by the express Leave of their Masters, for some necessary Service signified in Writing, and to be delivered to such Negro."—Assemb. Jour., I: 806. See also WInsor, Nar. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 201, 242. Laws were passed on Nov. 7 to meet these conditions, one entitled "An Act to Let Farm the Excise on Strong Liquors in the Colony in one Year Ending" Nov. 1, 1742 (Col. Laws N. Y., III: 152); and the other "An Act to Revive an act, Intituled an act, to Restraine Tavern Keepers & Inhabitants from Selling Strong Liquors to Servants & Apprentices and from giving Large Credit to others" (Ibid., III: 166).

The negro, Bastian (see June 10), another of those convicted in connection with the conspiracy, is pardoned.—Col. Com. Min., 318.

A provincial act is passed "for the better Fortifying of this Colony and other Purposes therein Mentioned." The preamble declares that the Province is ordered to be "a great Number of Cannon" and a "large quantity of other Stores of War" for the use of this colony, which awakened "strong apprehensions, That a Rupture is like to happen with a Power more Capable, to annoy this Colony, than that with which his Majesty is in Actual War at present." It also "generally assented and it necessarily is, that the Province is to have a better Posture of Defence for its Security in all Events, by amending our Present Fortifications, and Erecting New Batteries & Platforms on which the Said Cannon may be Placed . . . ; and at the Same time to Erect such Buildings as are more Immediately wanting in Stead of those which lately had the Misfortune to be Burnt down in Fort George."

The law therefore enacts that the act now in force, which lays a duty on tonnage, shall be continued to July 1, 1751. It allows £260 for building a new secretary's office, "in a more convenient Place and Seat Room, Less liable to the like accident of fire," as well as a Repoit & preserve the Publick Records of this Colony in, as for Transacting the publick affairs which properly appertain to the Said office." This sum is "for Building Completing and Finishing a Such part of the East Ward Side of the Garden adjoining to the Said Fort, as the Lieutenant Governor or Commander in Chief for the time being, Shall approve of, a New Secretaries office, not Less than Forty two feet Long, Twenty Feet wide, and one Story of Ten feet high, with a Chimney in the Middle arched with Iron and Bricks fit for two Fire Places; and the Beams to be not Less than nine Inches by Seven, at a proper Distance fit for Ceelng." John Roosevelt has undertaken to erect this building, and provide at his own expense "all Manner of Materials & Workmanship, not only for Building it, but likewise to Partition the Same into Two Rooms and an Entry, and to make a writing Desk and Benches in each of
June 13

Chromology: the English Period: 1664-1763

569

Them, as likewise a Sufficient number of Shelves with Drawers or Boxes between them as well to put Publich Papers in, as to Remove them Speedily without Loss in Case of Accidents; also to put Four Sashes of good Glass with Shutters in the two Rooms and a proper Light over the Door, if judicious needful; Ceder Gutters all round the Building on which the Front one is to be a Connial Gutters; and Trunks to convey the Rain Water into the Street; to Paint all the Wood Work, without and within in the usual manner, to Cover the Roof with Patent Shingles, to Lay the hearths with one Row of Bristol Stones and the back part with Bricks on their Edge; and in General to furnish all necessary Iron Work Locks & Hinges, and to finish both the outside and the Inside workman Like to the Turning of the Key, in such manner as Shall be Directed & Approved of by the Said Lieutenant Governor or Commander in Chief. . . Excepting never the less, that he Shall have the Liberty to make use of so many of the Bricks of the Ruins of the old Building in the Said Fort as are proper or Necessary for Building of the Said office. On the completion of his contract, Mr. Roosevelt is to be paid by the treasurer of the colony the sum agreed upon (£600), in three payments,—“one third thereof when the Foundation is carry’d to the height of the Ground Floor; one other third when the Roof is cover’d, and the Remaining Third when all is Finish’d.”

The law also provides “That there Shall be Erected in the West Side of the Battery a new Brick of the same Length & Breadth as the old one was which Stood on that Spot, of two Stories high and that it be Divided into So many Rooms & Fire places, as Shall be approved of by the Said Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief for the time being; The Stories to be no higher than between Six & Seven feet under the Beams, all partitions of the Rooms, to be one Bricks Length in thickness; every Chimney to be Arched with Iron and Bricks, and all the Heaths wide to prevent Fire, The Roof to be no Steeper than is necessary to make it Tight and to carry off Rain Water; and one or Two dormant Doors in the West Side of it for Receiving and Issuing of his Majesty’s Stores; and all the Hinges and other Iron Work which is Saved of the Former Barracks, as likewise the Bricks of the Ruins in the Said Fort, Shall and may be Employed . . . towards Building of the Barracks.” The sum of £500 is to be paid by the treasurer to build the barracks.

This law further states that in case “an Enemy should make an attempt upon this City by a naval Force, a good Battery upon and near the Flat Rocks behind Fort George would very much Annoy them, and at the same time be able to Flank the Battery already Erected on Copsys Rocks.” For this purpose, the law specifically requires that “a good & Proper Battery, on which about Twenty great guns, can be mounted, Shall be Built . . . on and near the Said Flat Rock, in Such Form as Shall be Judged most conducive for the Service it is Intended, and at a sufficient distance from the River, That a proper Space may be Left for a Passage between them, The Merlons to be made of Stones & a Substantial Body, The floor to be level, and at the front Side a Beam or Scantling fixt to prevent the Guns from Recoiling beyond it in case of Action and that New Carriages be made for Such of the great Guns Lying in the Pasture near the Said Rock as Shall be found Serviceable & Judged proper for that Service, Unless the Cannon does in the mean while arise which his Majesty has been pleased to order for the use of this Colony.” For this work £600 is allowed.

As “it is conceived that the ground already made in the Battery on the Copsy Rocks would not afford Room enough for our People if we should have the Misfortune to be attacked by any number of Ships of War,” it is provided that £76 shall be allowed “for Filling up with Earth Sand or other proper Materials round the Inside of the Said Battery, the Space of Ten feet more than is filled up already;” and £23 is allowed “for amending and Reparing the Floor Thereof, and to Fix at the outside of the Said Floor a Beam or Scantling, to prevent the Guns from Recoiling beyond it in case of action.”

As, in case of attack, “it would be Requisite to have Some works on the Inner part of the Battery on Copsy Rocks, as well to Clear it from an Enemy, as to Shelter our People who should be placed upon Duty there,” it is provided “That there Shall be Erected two Forts on the Said Rocks, one for Keepirg the Port, and the other at the West Side of the Store House already Erected there.” To build, cover and complete these, there is allowed the sum of £20. As “the great Guns on the Said Battery, as well as those intended for a Battery on the Said Flat Rock, ought to be Proved (as they have not been made use of in a great many Years past) at least Some of which should be wound or destroy Some of our own People in time of Action,” the sum of £120 is allowed for the purchase of powder for such tests.

That the money, amounting to £1,880, may be duly applied to the objects for which it is intended (that is, “For new Barracks, For a Battery on the Flat Rock, for filling up Ten feet more of Ground in the Battery on Copsy Rocks, and amending its Floors, For two Block Houses on Said Battery, For powder to prove the Great Guns, and for Removing and Replacing Them”), four commissioners are appointed to manage the several undertakings. These are John Crager, William Roome, John Roosevelt, and Capt. Henry Row.

In case an attempt should be made to attack the city with a naval armament, the act provides that “a Flat Form at Dominic Hook on Hudsons River might be very Serviceable to annoy Them. The sum of £20 is therefore appropriated to erect it when necessary.

The act further provides for paying Gerrit Couter Jr. £211.11 for the expenses incurred by him for materials and labour in making suitable conveniences in the common council room of the city hall, “as well to preserve the Records of this Colony and Sorting the Publick other Writings and Paperings and other Papers” of the Said [secretary’s] office in until another be Built for that Purpose.”

The secretary’s office and the barracks were completed before Nov. 26, 1741 (p. v.).

The sum of £600 is contributed by the province to encourage the fitting out of two large sloops to go in pursuit of Spanish privateers cruising off the coast.—Col. Lewis N. T. III: 134-98.

A provincial act is passed “for the more Equal Keeping Military Watches in the City of New York,” rendered necessary by the recent negro disturbances. Under the act of Oct. 3, 1739, for regulating the militia, commissioned military officers and troopers were exempted from service as constables, thus placing the burden of the city’s military watch upon tradesmen and the “middling Sort of People.” To alleviate this situation, all persons residing in New York City are now required to watch in their respective turns, or to provide able-bodied substitutes. Those exempted from this order are the deputy secretary, the clerk of the council, judges of the supreme court, all members of the council and assembly not bearing a military commission, and the firemen.

Another important requirement of this act of June 13 is the erection of three beacons, one on the western part of Rockaway (“where it can best be Seen from the stands on the Island of Nassaw, & Statin Island”), one at the Narrows on Nassaw Island, and the third opposite it on Staten Island. Persons living near the beacons are to light them “upon the Sight or Appearance of Seven or a greater number of Ships,” and “When the allarm is given by one, the others are also Immediately to be Set on Fire, to the End an allarm may be conveyed to New York in the Speediest manner.”—Ibid. III: 148-50.

“Intimation having been given for some Time past, that there had of late been Popish Priests lurking about the Town, diligent Enquiry had been made for discovering them, but without Effect; at length Information was given, that one Urty, alias Jury, who had lately come into this City, and entered into Partnership with Campbell, a School Master, pretending to teach Greek and Latin, was suspected to be one, and that he kept a private Conventicle; he was taken into Custody this Day; and not giving a satisfactory Account of himself, was committed to the City Jail.”—Horsmanden’s Jour., 94. See Feb. 28 and June 15.

On account of the trials of negro conspirators in New York, the circuit courts, which were customarily held “up Albany river,” by the judges from New York, are postponed for a year.—Col. Coun. Min. 338.

Three negroes are hanged and two burned alive. They all protest their innocence of the conspiracy. Negroes are being committed daily so that the jails are crowded.—N. Y. Jour., June 22, 1741.

The execution of Sarah Hughson is further postponed until June 26.—Horsmanden’s Jour., 95. See June 25.

The House, on the 15th, in a proclamation “taking Notice of the Conspiracy which had been set on foot, abettet, encouraged and carried on by several White People in Cooplication the day following, another was burnt at the stake, there accusing several persons, both blacks and whites.—N. Y. Jour., July 6, 1741.

The judges of the supreme court recommend 40 of the negroes now in jail to the lieutenant-governor for transportation.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741.

The execution of Sarah Hughson is further postponed.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741. See July 10.

Sarah Hughson deposes that "she had seen John Ury [see June 14] the Priest often there [at her father's house] when the negroes were there, and speak to them; tell them to keep Secessy, and to be true, not tell of another, if they were to dye for it; that they should burn the Town down; and in the Night cut their Master's and Mistress's Throats with Knives they should get."—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741-43. See July 14 and 29.

John Ury denies "being any wise in the Conspiracy for burning the Town and killing the Inhabitants," and declares that "he never was any wise acquainted with John Hughson, or his Wife, or Margaret Kenny, nor did he ever see them in his Life, to his Knowledge."—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741. See July 15.

Six negroes, arraigned for conspiracy, are ordered to be transported and nine are pardoned.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1740.

John Ury is indicted for implication in the negro conspiracy, and for coming into New York province and there "celebrating Masses, and granting Absolution, &c."—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741-43. See July 22.

The sentence of John Hughson is read, and he is directed to the negroes Quack and Othello, who were 16 to be burnt, is changed to hanging.—Cal. Coun. Min., 338.

The negro Jasper, belonging to Robert Bond, and Toby, belonging to Hercules Windover, are pardoned.—Ibid.

Six negroes are hanged and one burnt at the stake.—N. Y. Jour., July 20, 1741.

The Rev. John Ury is brought to trial, charged with being a 22 party to the conspiracy.—Horsmanden's Jour., 92, cit. 149, where a detailed account of his trial is given. See, further, July 29 and Aug. 29.

The military watch (see June 13) is continued. The new fortifications are "very forward."—N. Y. Jour., July 27, 1741.

John Clemm, Jr., the son of the organ-builder, is engaged by Trinity vestry as organist for one year, beginning Aug. 10.—Trinn. Min. (M.S.).

It is ordered by the common council that the mayor issue his warrant to pay Johannes Room "for making a Gallows: two Gibbetts: and work done to and Materials found About the City watch House: making Ladders and fire hooks," etc.—M. G. C., vi. 25. For location and use of the gallows, see May 1. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III.: 972.

Sarah Hughson pardoned.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741.

John Ury is found guilty of encouraging the negro Quack to burn the governor's house.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741.

Eighteen negroes are pardoned.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741. Aug. 1

The term of the supreme court is extended.—Cal. Coun. Min., 338.

John Ury is sentenced to be hanged.—Horsmanden's Jour., 1741.

See Aug. 29.

John Clemm informs Trinity vestry that he has completed the organ in Trinity Church. A balance due him of £520 is to be paid, and payment made for "Shortening the Case and Making two pair of Bells over and Above the Agreement."—Trinn. Min. (M.S.). See also June 11, 1739.

Daniel Horsmanden writes to Cadwallader Colden an account of the Negro Plot. He charges that it is a Catholic conspiracy. Of Ury he says: "He appears to have been a principal promoter & encourager of this most horrible & Detestable piece of Villany, a Scheme whi must have been brooded in a Conclave of Devils, & hatched in the Cabinet of Hell." Horsmanden speaks of the executions of negroes and whites.—From the original letter, with the Colden papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The governor's council orders that four Spanish negroes brought to New York for Capt. John Lash be pardoned; and that a fifth one, belonging to Capt. Suryie, be executed.—Cal. Coun. Min., 338.

A Spanish negro, "deeply concerned in the late hellish plot," is hanged.—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 10, 1741.

Cornelius Webber, of the City of New York, yeoman, conveys to Peter Warren, Esq., of the city of New York, a parcel of land bounded, according to the modern plan, as follows: easterly by an
Aug. 1751 to 2315 St. (following the line of the old Minetta Brook); northerly by a line along 2315 St., between Fifth and Sixth Aves.; westerly, by a line paralleling Sixth Ave. to the eastward, from 17th to 21st St.; north-westerly by a diagonal line running from the corner of Sixth Ave. and 17th St. to the intersection of Greenwich and Eighty Aves., then southerly along Greenwich Ave. to Christopher St., then westerly along Christopher St. to W. 4th St., and southward to the intersection of W. 12 St. and MacDougal St., then north-esterly to a point on Waverly Pl., between Fifth and Sixth Aves. —See original deed in possession of N. Y. Hist. Soc.; and Chronology, June 18, 1731, and June 4, 1737. In this conveyance an unusual reference is made to the Minetta as the "Devil's" water.
See Supplemental Landmark List, Vol. V; and, for the above-described parcel, see "Estates of Sir Peter Warren" under Farm Titles, Vol. V.

29 The Rev. John Ury (see Aug. 22) is hanged. His last devout declarations on the scaffold, previously written, express his entire ignorance of the plot or of the persons connected with it.—Horsmanden's Jour., op. cit.; N. Y. Jour., Aug. 31, 1741. See also Clarke's report to the Duke of Newcastle and the lords of trade Horsmanden's denunciation of Ury, see John Gilmary Sheehan in 13 The governor's council orders that a proclamation be issued announcing a day of thanksgiving for deliverance from the "wicked

Sept. A proclamation is issued setting apart Sept. 24 as a day of thanksgiving for deliverance from the "Negro Plot." It is to be observed by conducting divine services in all churches of the city.—N. Y. Jour., Sept. 14, 1741.

17 Clarke, addressing the joint session of the legislature "in the Council Chamber, at his present Residence," urges that provision be made "for rebuilding the House, and Chapel and the Rest of the Barracks, and Edifices for the Fort, that the military might not be destroyed in the late Fire . . . ." Also, he thinks it necessary "that the People be obliged, by some good Law, to continue their Military Night Watches, and the Officers thereof, authorised under proper Regulations, to preserve the City from all Dangers in the Night Time."
The act lately passed "for the more equal keeping Military Watches" is soon to expire by its own limitation.—Assemb. Jour., I: 807. See July 13 and Nov. 7, 1741.

10 The assembly replies to Clarke's address of Sept. 17, 1741
(p. 2), and expresses regret that the governor (George Clinton), about to arrive, "will be deprived of so noble a Residence, as his Predecessors have enjoyed." However, a number of the towns in the town is being prepared for his immediate accommodation. The reply of the assembly further states that the burned buildings in the fort "were erected by Degrees under the Administration of several Governors," and that during most of that time the colony "had the good Fortune to Stand undamaged." This new financial condition of the colony now permits only the erection of a barracks and a secretary's office (see June 13), which are conceived most necessary, and it is impossible to build a house "suitable for the Residence of a King's Governor," much less a chapel and the other edifices recommended by Lieut.-Gov. Clarke. Instead, it is proposed to ask subsidy from the king for this work.
The assembly refers also to the misapplication of money granted by it during past years. The lieutenant-governor is reminded that, "In the Beginning of the last War against France, an Act passed here, for raising the Sum of One Thousand, Five Hundred Pounds, towards building two Batteries at the Narrows [see June 19, 1703; May 29, 1706; Oct. 9, 1718] and by all that we can learn, not one Stone was ever laid, or any other Work done towards erecting either of them. We beg leave here to observe, that by a later Method of putting Money, granted for Fortifying, under the Direction of Commission this, the several Forts and Fortifications mentioned in the Address [of April 15, 1740, p. 2], have actually been erected, besides some others since."—Assemb. Jour., I: 810-11.

Oct. The common council applies to the general assembly for leave to bring in several bills to be considered in the coming session.
Among these are a bill to establish schools in any public houses.—M. C. C., VI: 31. Such a bill became a law on Nov. 27 (p. 2).

Clarke informs Newcastle that he has last by the fire in the fort between £2,000 and £3,000.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 205. He received a parliamentary donation which more than reimbursed him for these losses. When he returned to England his estate was estimated at £10,000. How he lost it he states—thus: "By his offices of secretary, clerk of the council, counsellor, and lieutenant-governor, he had every advantage of inserting his own, or the name of some other person in trust for him, in the numerous grants, which he was in a condition for nearly half a century, to quieten or retain."—Smith, Hist. of N. Y., II: 83.

Five of Hugbston's relatives, charged with being concerned in the negro conspiracy, are pardoned.—Horsmanden's Jour., 177-78.

A "Law for the Further Regulating the Publick Marketts" is proclaimed, containing a proviso "for the Country people to Sell or Expose to Sale: in the Meal market and Broad way Market of this City Beef: pork: Yeast: Mutton & Lamb by the Joint or by pieces or Cut up the same in pound or pounds pieces:
or in Great or Small Quantities: or parcels as they shall See Convenient: first paying the fees or Rates: to thefarmer of the Marketts; Or Such Other person or persons as by the Common Council Shall be thereunto Appointed: in the Same Manner: Quantity and proportion that the Butchers are to do." It also provides "that the Marketk house at the Lower End of W. Street: Commonly Called the Meal Marketk; and the Marketk house in the Broad way: Commonly Called the Broadkett; are hereby Appointed and Declared to be the public Meal Marketts whiere all persons whatsoever may Sell Utter [dry their wared] or put Out to Shew or Sale any manner of Meali Wheat Rye: Barley: Oats: Indian Corn: Buck Wheat: or any other Sort of Meali: Corn and Grains: brought to marketts." No person shall sell grain or meal elsewhere under penalty. Furthermore, country people are to "have Liberty to Cut up their meat, in the Marketts," and advertisements to that effect are required to be printed in the newspapers.—M. C. C., IV: 41-44.

On Dec. 1, the common council appointed 36 night watchmen to serve one year to be divided into three divisions, each division having an officer and 11 watchmen. These were to watch each night, and each division in turn.—M. C. C., V: 45-46. A new regulation went into effect Dec. 21, 1742 (p. 4).

The common council having sought permission to introduce a legislative bill "for keeping in Repair the post Road from this City to King's Bridge, and the other principal roads:" The bill was denied under the form of the road "from Spring Garden to fresh Water." (M. C. C., V: 37) The council was allowed to have such an act is passed. To remove doubts regarding the course of this road "from Spring Garden gate at the End of the Broadway towards Fresh Water," it is enacted that it shall be "on a Straight Line or course from Spring Garden Abroad, through the New Road Lately cut through the Hill by the House of Captain John Brown where the Wind Mill formerly Stood until it meets with the old Road."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 156-62. See Pl. 27, Vol. I.

Observing "how incorrect the Laws of this Colony are printed 13 and the irregular Manner in which they are bounded up," the assem-blly resolves to have them printed on good paper with gold letters and notes. Daniel Horsmanden agrees to prepare this work, and to deliver one "complet Book thereof, bound in Calve's Leather, to the Governor or Commander in Chief for the Time being, for the Use of the Council, and another for the Use of the General Assembly," for £50.—Assemb. Jour., I: 823-24. On Nov. 27, 1741 (p. 2), a law for this purpose was passed.

The council and general assembly address a joint petition to the king asking for a grant of money to rebuild the burned buildings in the fort. It recites the fact that there have been erected from time to time, "as the circonstances of the Colony did enable them," in the Fort, which has the Honor to bear your Majesties name, a House, Chappel, Secretaries Office, as likewise Barracks for the
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1741
1742

Troops, in so stately a manner, that it was allowed none of your Majesties Governors in America Enjoyed So noble a Residence.

The petition refers to the fire of March 18 (p.c.), and adds "That since the melancholy Incident the Colony hath erected good new Barracks for your Majesties Troops, and a Secretaries office to press, they are ordered to make a muster and to appoint an overseer for each pump and well. These officers are to keep the pumps and wells in repair, and meet these expenses by, an assessment on the property of persons in each locality. As Nov
Nov
Nov

Disorderly Persons have frequently been guilty of cutting the Well Roaps & breaching the Handles of Pumps," a fine of 20 shillings is fixed for such offenses.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 181-84.

Agreeable to the assembly resolution of Nov. 15 (p.c.), an act is passed communicating to Daniel Hammon 1st to Revise, Digest & Print the Laws of this Colony from the Happy Revolution."— Col. Laws N. Y., III: 192-94. He had not completed his task by July 4, 1745 (p.c.) and it was finally done by Livingston and Smith. See Nov. 12, 1750, also Smith, Hist. of N. Y., II: 30.

Since "Gamestamps by Seas & other Publick Houses for Money or Strong Liquor hath by fatal Experience been found to be Attended with many evil Consequences, the provincial legislature passes "An Act to Restrain disorderly & Unlawful Gaming Houses." No incooper is permitted to have a "Common Billiard Table, Truck Table or Shuttle board Table
. . . or Suffer any Person or Persons whatsoever to Play or Game either by Day or night," on penalty of a fine of £30. Nor is liquor to be sold to any youth under 21 years of age, or to any apprentice, journeyman, servant, or common sailor.—Col. Laws N. Y.,

A letter of this date mentions the arrival of a rich prize captured by the "Huming Bird." Another privateer is being fitted out to cruise against the Spaniards, under the command of one well acquainted with those coasts.—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., I: 145.

In a report to the lords of trade, Clarke states that when he first entered upon the administration of the government (1736) "ship building was almost wholly laid aside nigh an hundred houses in the town stood empty for want of Tenants and the rents of those that were tenanted were fallen very considerably many people having left the "Town and Province to seek the quiet in another place hoping likewise to follow their several occupations to more advantage they having then no prospect of seeing trade revive here which had for some time languished." As a result of his efforts, he states, "the houses that stood empty are now all tenanted and now as many more since the Island of St. John was given up to the Indians—say, this is as the province, he believes, "was never in so flourishing a condition as it is now," no matter what a "sedition nigardly people say to save their money." He adds: "they say they could not build the Barracks and Secretaries Office but by borrowing from the Fonds," but this, he says, is untrue; they can erect these and all the other buildings "by a Provincial Tax which would hardly be felt;" they have no general tax at present, nor have they had for several years; "there is not in America a Province less benthed

The common council votes the sum of £50, which is to be remitted to Samuel and William Baker, merchants of London, for purchasing a "Good bell of 200 lb Weight of the best Metal," and shipping it "for this place by the first Coveneant Opportunity for the Use of this Corporation."—M. C. C., V: 45. See June 15, 1747.

Trinity vestry orders that the Church Wardens be Desir'd to Send to England by the first Coveneant Opportunity for a New Sett of Furniture for the Communion Table Pulpit and Reading Desk of the best English Cimnatic Flower'd Damask with a plain Silk fringe Lining and Tassells.—Trin. Min. (Ms.). These articles, which cost currency in the most part for any persons coming to the city with goods for sale. Such persions to be give a sworn statement of the value of their wares, and to be taxed accordingly.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 179-81.

A provincial act is passed empowering the alderman and assistants are ordered to make a muster and to appoint an overseer for each pump and well. These officers are to keep the pumps and wells in repair, and meet these expenses by,

As many people possessing considerable personal estates assume residence in New York City after the tax for the minister and the poor has been laid, a statute is enacted to prevent such evulsion. Until the December following the levying of the tax, all vessels are ordered to lie in the Harbor to prevent any person from coming to the city with goods for sale. Such persions to be give a sworn statement of the value of their wares,
and to be taxed accordingly.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 179-81.

A provincial act is passed empowering the alderman and assistants are ordered to make a muster and to appoint an overseer for each pump and well. These officers are to keep the pumps and wells in repair, and meet these expenses by, 1742 moisture is to be observed "in every cellar." He added: "there — is no constant and sufficient care of the drains by which the cellars are aired from stagnating waters."—From "Observations on the Health of the inhabitants of the City of New-York in 1742 and the
In The American Medial and Philosophical Register (1811), I: 310-30. Colden recommended draining the wet grounds, filling up the slips, and emptying all slitt into the river, which could be affected only by putting the care of the drains into the hands of the city official. He remarked: "A fresh water pond and meadow of stagnating water, not half a mile to the northward of the city of New-York, has been lately drained for the benefit of the soil, without any thought of any advantage to the health of the neighbouring inhabitants, though its effects in that respect be very manifest;"—Ibid., II: 329. That Coldeen was in error is proved by the petition of Anthony Rutgers on April 6, 1752, to the common Council, for permission to drain his swampsland near the Fresh Water Pond, which, it was believed, would "greatly Contribute to the health of this City."—M. C. G. T.: IV: 179.
Dr. Isaac du Bois, a graduate of Leyden in 1749 (see Medical Register, 1869-9, p. 253; 1886-7, p. 258), wrote to Dr. Coloden, regarding the yellow fever epidemic of this period, in part as folows: "what regards y^e Infection or Contagion of said fever that was so much talked of & frightened So many out of Town, I shall dis not say much about: but this is certain, that y^e epidemic—all fever chiefly resident in the South flows between y^e 18th Heal Month & M'r Gerard: Besicks Man Slip where it begins & ended, what that proceeded from y^e lowness & dampness of y^e Situation, from whence Sulphurous noxious vapours might arise & put y^e first causes that were lying bid in y^e Body then disposed for y^e Disease, in action, I leave to y^e Learned to determine."—From the original letter, with The Golden Papers, in N. Y.
Hist. Soc.

The city, as it existed during the period of 1742-4, is shown on a plan drawn from memory in August, 1815, by David Grim, and now preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. On the back of the plan is a statement, written by Grim, giving in detail the number of houses on the principal streets in 1742 (p. tv), as well as much other interesting information. This plan is reproduced and de-

Landmark No. 33 on this plan is "Rutger's Brew House," on the north side of Maiden Lane west of William St. There is an excellent undated survey of this brewery property, covering the site of the present 43-59 Maiden Lane, in the Bancroft Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library.

By this year, streets were laid out as far north as the present Spruce St. The Common was not fenced in, or otherwise enclosed, and its sides were not bounded by a line of houses on the principal streets in 1742 (p. tv), as well as much other interesting information.

21 The discovery of the late most execrable Conspiracy, and the hellish and barbarous Designs of a perverse and blood-thirsty People, for the Ruin and Destruction of the whole Province, and the Inhabitants thereof; and that even at a Time when all Things were ripe for Execution, and the intended Desolation was so nigh at Hand; one would think our signal Preservation could never he forgot: and that no one could be so blind to himself, and regardless of his future, as to suffer the Negroes to have private and public Meetings, in great Numbers ... I must therefore require you, as you value the Peace and Safety of this City and Province, and your own Preservation . . . to see the Laws against Negroes duly and publicly executed; suffering no Meetings of them within your City and County and several Districts . . ."—Horsmanden's
Jour., 175-80.

The "House and Ground now in the Tenure of Mrs. Margaret Dunks at the Jamaica Pilot-Boat, near the Fly Market," is offered for sale by Andrew and Peter Fresneau.—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 1, 1742.

15 The sign of the Jamaica Pilot-Boat had formerly hung out from the tavern kept by John Dunks at the corner of Wall and Water Sts., the later Merchants' Coffee House.—See June 19, 1728; Jan.
18, 1776.

A fire is discovered in a "shed . . . next the Fence of the Old Dutch Church-Yard." A negro, Tom, confessest to having started the fire, and declared that he had been invited to it by other negroes, who said that the fire in the shed "would fire the whole Town, and then the Negroes in Town, with the Negroes that were to come from Long-Island, would murder the White People."—Horsmanden's
Jour., 182-83.

Tom is sentenced to be hanged.—Horsmanden's Jour., 183-87.

3 The government and council now order that the negro Tom be executed, having granted, on March 10, a reprieve of the sentence that he be hanged for burning the house of Widow Bratt.—Cal.

12 The negro Tom is executed.—Horsmanden's Jour., 187.

A Tanner's "Barbhouse . . . in the Swamp at the East End of this City" is set on fire, but little damage is done. It is agreed "on all Hands, that the Fire must have been put there on Purpose."

"Horsmanden's Jour., 187-88.

Col. Joseph Robinson hands in to the governor's council a letter found under his door, addressed to "Capt." Robinson and revealing some design against the city. An opinion on it is given

An ordinance is passed forbidding slaves to fish on waters on Sundays from any source save the pump or well nearest their abodes. Nor is a slave permitted to ride through any street of the city "or on the Common," on penalty of being whipped "at the Publick Whipping Post" not exceeding forty lashes.—M. C. C., V: 50. This ordinance was passed as a result of the "Negro Conspiracy" of 1741.

"Gallows Hill" is the name now applied in the city records to the place where the negroes were executed (see May 1, 1741).

— M. C. G., V: 23, 491 and description of Pl. 32-a, I: 270.

A "Bundle of Linnen set on fire" is thrown into the gutter adjoining Beuson's brew-house, but it is discovered before it does any damage. Several servants and others were examined in connection with this, but no clue was found. —Horsmanden's Jour., 190.

A report is received that small-pox is raging at Curacao, Apr.
and the council orders that vessels arrived from there to be

See April 6.

The common council sends John Tenbrook to Bedlows Island (see June 28, 1758) to see that no one enters or leaves a house where any person has small-pox, save by order of the mayor.—
M. C. C., V: 50. See Feb. 29, 1744.

Frederick Phillipse and Daniel Horsmanden certify that Mary Burton is entitled to the reward claimed by her for giving information leading to the conviction of the conspirators in the negro plot; an order of the governor's council to this effect having been given the day before.—Cal. Coun. Min., 340. See Sept. 3.

Clarke urges upon the assembly the need of making ample provision for putting the fort in "a Posture of Defence," owing to the critical state of affairs in Europe. The fort is in a wretched condition, he says, "some Part of the wall being already fallen down, and other Parts in a tottering Condition, the sod Work mouldered away, and the Bastions and Curtains without Platforms." He also urgently recommends to the assembly the rebuilding of "the House and other Edifices, that were consumed in the Fort, as well as the Stables and Coach-House without it." He hopes "that when the Governor [Clinton] comes, he may not be unprovided of an Habitation."—Assemb.
Jour., I: 827. To the council, Clarke said on April 24 that the new governor was soon expected and that he knew of no house "to be hired" that was fit for the city government.—Ibid., Leg. Coun., I: 797.
On Nov. 26, 1741 (p. v.), the assembly and council addressed a
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

May 8

The mayor informs the common council that, on May 7, Mary Burton applied to him, in the presence of two witnesses, for the presentation of the reward of £200 which had been proposed by the board on April 11, 1741, and offered by the lieutenant-governor's proclamation on April 17, 1741 (q.e.), to be given to the white person who made the first discovery of the persons formerly concerned in setting fire to houses in New York City.—M. C., V.: 72-73. On Sept. 2, 1748, the deputy-secretary of the province presented to the common council a copy of an order of the court of chancery of the province appointing him guardian of Mary Burton; whereupon it was ordered that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay "the said Moore to and for the Use and Benefit of the said Mary Burton," the sum of £20 formerly paid "for the freedom and Others Necessary to and for the Use and Benefit of the said Mary Burton," makes a total of £500, "in full of the Reward offered by this board . . ."—Ibid., V.: 66-67. It may be fairly inferred from previous enactments that Mary Burton was the only person, directly or indirectly, in the service and pay of the city, for as early as June 19, 1741, two months after the proclamation offering the reward, the common council ordered the mayor to issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay to Thomas Willson or Order the Sum of Two pounds Current Money of this Colony in full for the time of his Servant Mary Burton: and for the Casks he has purchased for her he the said Thomas Willson Assigning her Indenture to this Corporation."—Ibid., V.: 72. And, again, on March 6, 1742, it was ordered that "the Indentures of Mary Burton be Delivered up to her: and that She be Discharged from the Remembrance of her Servitude," and also that "the Mayor Issue his Warrant to the treasurer to pay to the Said Mary Burton or Order the Sum of Three pounds Current money of this Colony: in Order to buy her Necessary Comforts."—Ibid., V.: 48. See Sept. 3.

A provincial act is passed to apply the sum of £871.15.4 for repairing Fort George, for transporting volunteers to the West Indies, and for other purposes. The preamble states that "the Fort in New York is very much out of Repair and the Battery on Cossy Rocks somewhat Endamaged by the Ice." John Cruger, William Roome, John Roosevelt, and Capt. Henry Row are empowered to go West face of the Battery and, in the vicinity, to the West Side of the Fort Gate, and Sunday other Places in the Wall to be repair'd, to cause a good new Parapet of Sodds to be made on the Said Flag Mount, and so along the Curtain & west part of the North West Bastion, and a good Platt Form to be laid along the Same of thick Squair'd Stones, and the outside of the Battery on Cossy Rocks to be Repair'd with good Sound Oak Plank.

As, "upon the Arrival of the Stores of War latterly brought from England in the Ships Judith and Mirabella, several Charges have Arisen in the Receipting and Sending Them to Proper Station." the act provides that various sums are to be paid for such services. The commissioners appointed by the act of June 13 (for fortifying the colony), "for Erecting a Battery on the Flat Rock behind Fort George, have Purchas'd Materials of Wood for the Plattform of the Battery & at being conceal'd, it being conceiv'd that a Plattform of Squair'd Stones will be more Serviceable," these commissioners are empowered "to Sell and dispose of the Said Materials of Wood already provided by Them, and to Import the Produce thereof Towards making the Said Plattform of Large thick Squair'd Stones."—Col. Let. N.V., 1729.

June 15

A warrant is issued for the payment of £24 "for the freight of the two New fire Engines from London to this port." Jacob Turk is allowed £16 per annum "for his Care of the four Engines" from May 28, 1741. A committee is appointed to "Agree with proper persons for the New bell and Nott to be made and the old Bell if they think it Necessary: and also for Erecting a proper place for the Keeping of the fire Engines."— the slips of this period in bundle of MSS. marked "1739-1747," in July box labeled "New York, 1700-1760," at N. Y. Hist. Soc., is evidently in error in some particulars.

29 Capt. Will. Ellis, of the man-of-war "Georport," having written that he has orders to sail for South Carolina and is in need of men, the council issues warrants. On Aug. 5, he asked that an embargo be laid on all ships until he completed his crew, but the council advised against it.—Col. Coun. Min., 341.

24 Clarke informs the lords of trade that the last assembly voted funds for the repair of Fort George, but not half enough "to put it in a defensible condition."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI. 215. See May 22.

26 The common council orders that one alderman, one petty constable, and four firemen, shall patrol the streets, lanes, wharves, and alleys of the city every Sunday from daylight to the time of setting the military guard, and from five in the afternoon (or the discharge of the military guard) to the evening. On the following Sunday, one assistant alderman, the high constable or a marshal, one petty constable, and three firemen are to perform this duty. In this manner the aldermen, etc., in one group, and the assistants etc., in the other group are to take turns. These steps are taken "to prevent the Scandalous and unchristian irregularities lately So much Practiced: by Negroes Children and others on the Sabbath day in this City."—M. G. C., V: 59. In December following (see Dec. 21), this plan was abandoned and, instead, a guard composed of a constable and 12 men was ordered to watch from sunrise to sunset.—Ibid., V: 81.

29 The provincial council receives a letter from Cadwallader 1 Colden concerning Luke Barrington, arrested for seditious and treasonable words. Barrington, who has passed himself off for a schoolmaster and a Methodist preacher under the name of Singleton, is ordered to be kept in prison.—Col. Coun. Min., 341.

20 On John Chambers' application, the common council orders "that the Lease formerly Made by this Corporation to Coll. Philipse M'John Roosevelt and himself [see Oct. 1, 1743]; for the Land of the Bowling Green near the fort in this City be renewed for Eleven years to Commence from the Expiration of the first Lease upon payment of Twenty Shillings per annum for the said Eleven years to Come."—M. G. C., V: 61. See also Man. Coun. (1859), 672-73.

3 On the petition of Mary Burton, who is under age, George Jos. Moore, the clerk of the council, is appointed by the council to be her guardian for receiving the reward offered in the case of the negro conspiracy.—Col. Coun. Min., 341. See April 10 and May 8.

22 A horse-race is scheduled to be run on this date, the horses are set "entered the Day before the Race, with Adam van den Berg & others on the Church Farm, or at the Post on the Day of running . . ."—N. Y. Jour., Sept. 13, 1743. The tavern and garden of Adam van Denberg stood on the west side of Broadway between the present Vesey and Barclay Sts., upon the site of the later Astor House, and the race-track also was in the Church Farm. The tavern, or "meat-house," of Van Denberg is indicated upon the Map of New York, 1777, Col. Coun. Min., 434. It was ordered shortly after Feb. 5, 1728, when the vestry of Trinity Church decided to lease "that part of the Churches farme opposite to Spring Garden from the South Bounds thenceforth to be not comprehended in M't Lake's & Harisons Lease."—Trin. Min. (M.S.). According to the deposition of Jacob Koonsing, aged 81, made May 18, 1751 (Sandford, Chan. Rep., IV: 651-52), Van Denberg's house was near the old thatched farm-house of Dirck Secker (Seckers, Siecken), the first tenant of the King's Farm, who leased it on March 25, 1677, for 60 bushels of wheat, annually.—Ibid., IV: 646.

14 A water-rite is appointed by the common council to wait on the Chief Justice & Desire his opinion whether any Law Exempts the people Called Quakers from Serving as Constables in this City."—M. G. C., V: 67. On Feb. 25, 1743, the committee reported the opinion of the chief-justice to be "that no Quaker was Compellable to Serve in the Office of Constable it being an Office of Trust."—Hurst, T. 2, 22.

22 The corporation of New York City petitions the assembly, stating that "besides the great Loss and Damages, which the City and its Inhabitants have sustained, by the late wicked Conspiracy of the Negroes, a Demand is now made on the Corporation for thewages of the Men (Boat) by this Law [the act] for wages for those who have already so greatly suffered by the said Conspiracy." They therefore ask for payment for the negroes, their trials, and executions, out of some public fund of the province, or for some other reasonable relief.—Assmb. Jour., 1743, p. 897.

22 As a result of the so-called "Negro Conspiracy," 14 blacks were burned at the stake, 18 were hanged, and 71 transported.—Hersman's Jour., Appendix, 12-15. See Feb. 28, 1741.

27 The petition of Francis Cowenbrowen and Samuel Bayard to the common council for a ferry over the Hudson River to "Wehawke" is read and referred for further consideration.—M. G. C., V: 67. This is the first suggestion in the records of a ferry across the Hudson. The petition does not appear to have been granted. For later developments, see Feb. 23, 1753.

29 A vendue is ordered to be held on Oct. 27 at the "house of the Widow English," for letting the stalls and standings of the public markets.—M. G. C., V: 67-68. On Nov. 13, another vendue for farming the L. I. ferry was ordered to be held on Nov. 27 at the house of the "Widow English Near the Meall Market."—Ibid., V: 71. The death of William English, whose tavern was next the old Custom House on Pearl St., evidently occurred between Aug. 7, 1729 (see "the House of William English" in N. Y. Gaz. of that day), and Oct. 22, 1742, soon after which his widow must have removed to this new site, which was near the corner of Wall and Pearl Sts.

20 The act of this year appropriating various sums of money for the support of the government provides, among other things, for the payment of the lieutenant-governor's house rent ($50 per annum, as before). The commissioners appointed by the act for May 25 for repairing Fort George are allowed $250 for that work and "for completing the Stone Platformes already begun in Fort George and in the Battery on the Flat Rock behind the Said Fort."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 333-41.

21 A public vendue is advertised to be held on this date for leasing the L. I. ferry for five years from March 25, 1745, "at the house of the Widow English Near the Meall Market."—M. G. C., V: 73. A new "the Night Watch" is approved for publication. For the previous law see Dec. 14, 1731. This is declared to be necessary "to prevent the Conspiracy Insurrection or plotting of Negro's & other Slaves." The law requires that one of the constables of the six wards south of Fresh Water, in his turn, together with 11 watchmen (or as many more as the mayor and three aldermen shall appoint), shall keep watch every night or find a substitute. The regulations are full and explicit regarding hours, routes, and duties of the constables and watchmen.—M. G. C., V: 77-81. See also Aug. 26; and Man. Coun. (1859), 507.

1743

New York was described at this time as "the pleasantest & best built City in all British America. It now contains 2000 Houses [cf. Grim's statement, 1744], most of them of Stone, & has a great Trade in Furs, Logwood, and other Commodities."—The British Monitor, engraved by John Newkhem and published by act of parliament, Oct. 1, 1748, p. 170.

4 James Parker begins publication of The New-York Weekly Jan. Post-Boy. The date of first issue is determined by the date of the earliest issue found, that of Feb. 1, 1743 (No. 5).—See Bibliog. of Am. Newspapers,” by Brigham, in Am. Antiq. Soc. Proc. (1917), 511. For the subsequent changes in the name and ownership of this paper, see Early Newspapers, II: 427. This was the third newspaper established in New York. At that time the other papers published in the city were The New-York Gazette, of William Bradford & Henry de Forest (ibid., II: 430), and The New-York Weekly Journal, of John Peter Zenger (ibid., II: 431). At first, the Post-Boy was of quarto size, but with the issue of July 25, 1744, it was enlarged to folio. The last issue bearing the original title was that of Jan. 12, 1747 (No. 208). For the first change in name, see Jan. 16, 1747.

5 In an advertisement for the sale of the house occupied by John Waddell, together with a coach-house opposite the house of Anthony Rutgers, application is to be made to Daniel Bloom at "the Merchants Coffee House."—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 16, 1743. This is the first recorded reference to Bloom's tavern (formerly the Jamaica Post-Boy) by this name, which later became so famous. For history of this tavern, see June 19, 1728.

6 It is ordered by Trinity vestry "that a pew be Built for the FY Governor for the time being (if his honour [i.e., Lieut.-Gov., Clarke] Approve thereof) Where the puppet Lately Stood; and 1 that a Pew for the Council be on one Side and a pew for the Mayor and Aldermen be on the other Side thereof. And that the Mayors pew now in the Gallery be taken down. — Trin. Min. (MS).

Mar. 15. We are hereby notified that upon the Galleries under the 15 Crown and Churls Heretofore. Instead of all Churls. — Trin. Min. (MS).

The common council finds it necessary to pass a special ordi- 5 fare, “for the better preserving the Forestalling of Provisions Coming to the Publick Markets.” It recites an ordinance of Nov. No. 7, 1743, V. 6. 71, which fines for the privateering shippings, and calls attention to the fact that this large forfeiture “prevents persons Informing against the Offenders.” It is thought that a less fine should be paid, not only by the forestaller but also by the person selling to him. The old law, in this respect, is amended by a new provision which requires that, after April 20 next, no one shall buy or sell within the city any food supplies coming to any of the “Common Markets,” or make any contract to do so, “before the Same Shall be brought into one of the said Markets ready to be there Sold (Fish of all Kinds only Excepted),” on pain of a forfeit of six shillings, which fines are fixed by the chamberlain and the other half to the informer. If any slave is guilty of “Buying or Contracting for any Victualls or provisions So Coming to any of the Common Markets,” he shall receive “35 Lashes on the bare back at the Publick Whipping post,” and added, “All being performed entirely by Clock- Work, in imitation of St. Bride’s Bells in London.” — N. Y. Jour., July 18, 1743.

A woman having gone on board the privateers “CASTOR” and “Pollux,” is seized and ducked from the yard-arm, and tarred from head to foot. — N. Y. Post-Bull., July 25, 1743.

William Ellis, lately commander of H. M. S. “Gosport,” who 15 Aug. died on Aug. 12, is interred “Under the Altar piece of the English Church.” — N. Y. Post-Bull., Aug. 15, 1743, and Upcott Collection, N. Y. Hist. Soc., I, 179. Why the rare designation of an interment “in the chancel of Trinity Church” is used, we are without information for the commander of this ship-of-war is not stated in this record.

In this month, The American Magazine and Historical Chronicle, Sept. printed by Rogers & Fowle, Boston, made its appearance. As 17 stated on the title-page, it was “sold by S. Eliot & J. Blanchard, in Boston; B. Franklin, in Philadelphia; J. Parker, in New-York; J. Powny, in New-Haven; C. Campbell, Post-Master, New-Port.”

Capt. Warren informs all deserters from the ship “Launcet* 19* that if they return before Oct, 5 they will be forgiven; otherwise, they will be prosecuted. — N. Y. Jour., Sept. 19, 1743. See May 30.

“George Clinton, the new governor of the province, having 22 arrived at the proper time.” In his Majesty’s Ship the Loo, lands near the new Battery, under the Discharge of the Guns of the Loo and the Fort, and is received by “his Majesty’s Council for this Province, the Mayor and Corporation, the Officers of the Militia, and principal Gentlemen of this City;” he proceeds “to his Honour, the Lieutenant Governor’s [George Clarke’s residence] that day being lined by his Majesty’s Commanding Officer, publish his commission in Council, and takes the usual
THE HOWARD

Charter

OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK;

Printed by Order of the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City aforesaid.

TO WHICH IS ANNEXED,

The Act of the General Assembly Confirming the same.

NEW-YORK,

Printed by John Peter Zenger, 1735.

There was but one Printer in the Province of New-York, that printed a publique News Paper, I was in hopes, if I undertook to publish another, I might make it worth my while; and I found my Hopes were not groundless. My first Paper was printed, Nov. 15th, 1733, and I continued printing and publishing of them, I thought to the Satisfaction of every Body, till the former Ballance; when the Chief Justice was pleased to annull it upon the Doctrine of Libels, in a long Charter given in that Term to the Grand Jury, and afterwards on the third Tuesday of October, 1734, was again pleased to charge the Grand Jury in the following Words.

"Gentlemen, I shall conclude with reading a Paragraph or two out of the great Book, concerning Libels; they are arrived to that Height, that they call loudly for your Attention; it is high Time to put a Stop to them; for at the two chief Magistrates are now carried on, when all Order and Government is endangered to be trampled on; Reflections are cast upon Persons of all Degrees, must not these Themselves in Sin and fornication, not being prevented; Levies, you have been not as a punishment, it comes you then to Enquire after the Offenders, that we may in a due Course of Law be enabled to punish them, if you, Gentlemen, do not inquire, consider whether the ill Consequences that may arise from any Disturbance of the publick Peace, may not in part, I see at your Door.

Hawkins, in his Chaper of Libels, considers three Points, 1. What shall be called a Libel. 2. Who are liable to be punished for it. 3. What Manner they are to be punished. Under the 1st, he says. § 7. For can there be any Treason, but that a Writing which defames a private Person only, is as much a Libel as that which defames Persons in the publick Capacity, in a word, any miserable insinuations and threats, and to cause a Disturbance of the publick Peace: it is certain, that it is a great Perturbation of a Libel, that it is to be forwarded to the Government, by reflecting on those who are concerned in the Affairs of publick Good, which does not injure the publick Peace, as of other Matters, but also has a direct Tendency to breed in the People a Dislike of their Government, and induce them to Factions and Seditions. As to the 2d. Point he says. § 8. 9. It is certain, not only he who composes or produces another to compose it, but also he who writes it, or procures another to publish it, are in Danger of being punished for it, and it is said not to be material whether he who compiles a Libel, knew any Thing of the Contents or Effects of it or not, for nothing could be more

A. TITLE-PAGE OF FIRST EDITION OF THE MONTGOMERIE CHARTER, 1735.
SEE P. 542.

B. FIRST PAGE OF FIRST EDITION OF THE ZENGER TRIAL, 1736.
SEE P. 541.
Oaths, "proceeds to the city hall, attended as before, and there publishes his commission with the usual solemnity."—N. Y. Jour., Sept. 23, 1743. Upcott Collection, in N. Y. Hist. Soc., I, 181; Col.館. Coun. 1743, I, 314; Jour., I, 457; Hist. of N. Y., VII, 679. Clinton's annual salary was $1,560.—N. Y. Col. Coun., VI: 820. Clarke says in his novel [1745] he returned to England. He had grown very wealthy and had purchased a fine estate in Cheshire — and a tablet was raised to his memory in one of the chapels of the church of the Rev. John Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 258; Man. Coun. (1869), 764.

18 The common council having ordered the draft of an address to His Excellency George Clinton, captain-general and governor-in-chief, it is read and approved. He is congratulated upon his services and returns to the bench and hands the committee his "speech to the Late Assembly on Tuesday Last," and is voted the freedom of the city, which is to be handsomely engraved on parchment, with the affixed seal of the corporation encased in a gold box of about $20 value to be made by Charles Le Roux, goldsmith.—M. G. C., V: 80-97. The early completion and delivery of the freecess suggests the probability that Le Roux anticipated the order for the box, and prepared it in advance.

Oct. 17. There is advertised a "Solar or Camera Obscura Microscope," no to be seen at "the house of Mr. John Kip, in Broad street, where the sun will serve all the day." The provincial Inhabitants have passed a "Septennial Act" (followed by the precedent of parliament which, in the first year of the reign of his Late Majesty," passed such an act), limiting the continuance of the general assemblies in this province to seven years, unless dissolved by the governor or commander-in-chief.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 195; 1743. This act remained in force down to the Revolution.—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4 ed.), IV: 165 (footnote).

The act of this year providing for the payment of the expenses of the government contains, among other provisions, one for the governor's men's rent, at the rate of $100 per annum.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 386-93.

A letter of Dec. 10 from William Smith and Samuel Cowles, 30 addressed to Alderman Johnson, is referred to the common council by the deputy-mayor; the letter states that, at the last supreme court, on motion of Hendrick Remson, Smith was appointed councilor for Remson "in an action Belonging to the Right of the People of Brooklyn to Free heritages to and from the City of New York."

—Under June 7, 1743. The letter asks that the city be represented by an attorney at the next court. A committee of the common council is appointed to secure the services of Mr. Murray, Mr. Alexander, and Mr. Chambers, to defend the suit.—M. G. C., V: 110-11. The action of "Remson vs. The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonality of the City of N. Y.," continued in the city and supreme court records for over 30 years, and was settled finally, in 1775, in favour of the plaintiff's heirs.—Ibid., IV: 152; 176; 442-43; 444; 450; 452-53; VII: 343; and Parchment Roll, II: 239-40. As in the county clerk's office, this result seems to have been justified by the terms of the Montgomerie Charter, and by the Ferry Act of Oct. 14, 1732 (q. v.). A collateral attempt to break the city's ferry monopoly was attempted by an appeal to the assembly.—See Jan. 7, 1746. The whole subject of the city's ferry rights is discussed in Hoffman, Treatise on the Estate and Rights of the Corporation, I: 1-302.

1744

1 A Plan of the City and Environs of New York," showing the principal landmarks at this time, was drawn from memory in 1813 by David Grinn, then 76 years of age. It is now preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc., and is reproduced as Pl. 32-a, Vol. I, with an accompanying description. On the back of the original, Grinn gives the number of houses in the city in this year, as follows: "The west side of Broadway, to the 40th Street. The east side of Broadway, with the west side of Broad Street. The east side of Broad Street, with the west side of William Street. The east side of William Street, with the west side of Pearl Street. The east side of Pearl Street, to the east River."

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1744

... Not long before this, the water out of ye Fresh Water Pond, now called Krolley, ran down to both rivers, to ye North by a ditch, & to ye East by a small rivulet; wch with rains frequently increased to so wide as to require to [wzőo~] leg to be laid across to walk over—on ye Hill near ye run was a Windmill. Some years before this Wetwall was a Windmill between what is now called Liberty & Courtland streets.

... "I have seen in 1745 & afterwards, severall indians canoes come down ye East & North Rivers, & land ye cargoes in ye bason near ye Long-bridge."

John Moulinar, silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York in this year. Two specimens of his work are described in Met. Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y.

Jan.

5 Forty pounds in full of the Gratuity promised him by this Board if he made a Compleat and Good Organ, the Said Mr Clem giving it under his hand that when a Good Organist Comes here and finds any Real fault with the Organ, that he will come here and Amend it; the Vestry paying the Charge of the Organ, and he will change three Treble Stops that are now in Wood for Pewter if Requir'd for the Sum of fifteen pounds, and will also Change the Trumpet Stop for a Double Cornett for the Sum of fifteen pounds, and will Make a Pedal compleat for the Organ for the Sum of Twelve pounds if Required.—Trin. Min. (MS).

9 There is offered for sale "The House wherein Capt. John Wadell Ivess, opposite to Capt. Waldron's, with a Coach-House opposite to Mr. Anthony Rutgers's."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1744.

16 Dr. Spencer advertises "another Course of Experimental Philosophy," beginning Feb. 1.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 16, 1744.

22 James Alexander writes from New York to Cadwallader Colden in part as follows: "Parker has printed the English part of your paper very well, as to the Latin he has indeed blundered but that is not of so much moment—the paper I believe and hope has had the Effect desired to witt to Convince a Majority of our Magistrates of the necessity of removing Skinners Tanners & to fresh water & of Either Cleaning or filling up the Slips before Summer and measures are talcing for doing those things & putting their former Laws as to the keeping clean the Streets & Docks in better Execution—All whom I have talkt to on that subject think themselves & the City very much obliged to you for that paper than which nothing could be more necessary or Seasonable."—From the original letter, preserved with the Golden Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Feb.

17 by the grand jury for tolerating certain nuisances, a committee of the common council is appointed to consider means of removing them. The Board orders that the ordinance for cleaning the streets, lanes, and alleys of the city shall be published in all the "publick papers," and that 40 notices of this by-law shall be printed and "affixed" in the most public places, with the warning that "for the future the Breach of the Said law will be duly punished."—*M. C. C., Vi: 111-12.

29 The brig "Mary and Ann" arrives from Jamaica with small-pox on board. It is quarantined off "Bedlars" Island (see June 28, 1738), and the health certificate issued by Dr. Roelof Kiersted is called into question. James Jauncey, master of the vessel, refuses to come to quarantine, and prosecution against him for contempt is ordered. After Dr. Kiersted is examined, the brig is allowed to come up to the town. General quarantine measures are now ordered.—Cal. Coun. Min., 343.

Mar.

1745

Clintion issues a proclamation forbidding masters of vessels to come into the harbor until the ships have been visited and the certificate of health issued.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 5, 1745. The proclamation has been reprinted from the Post-Boy in Man. Com. Coun. (1865), 755-56.

It is announced that on this date a race will be run "between a Mare called Ragged Kate, belonging to Mr. Peter De Lancey, and a Horse called Moke, belonging to the Hon. William Montagu, Esq; for 200 l."—*N. Y. Jour., Jan. 30, 1744. No mention is made of the location of the track, but it was probably held on the Church Farm.—See Oct. 11, 1742.

The grand jury of the supreme court having indicted the city for maintaining public nuisances, and the common council having appointed a committee on Feb. 17 to consider how these ought to be removed (M. C. C., Vi: 111-12), this committee now reports that the Grand Slips in Montegomery Ward should be paved; that the Fly Slip is "a great and Intolerable Common Nusance;" that there is "filth: and Nastiness" under the Meal Market and on the ground in front of it at low-water mark; and that Old Slip is "a Great and Publick Nusance." All of these nuisances should be removed at the city's expense.—ibid., Vi: 113-14. A provincial act to remove certain other nuisances was passed on May 3 (p. v). See also Feb. 28, 1746.

France declares war against Great Britain. This was the beginning of King George's War, which lasted about four years. See March 24.

Members of the assembly are notified by "circular Letters" that they are to meet April 17, according to Adjournment.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 19, 1744. Whether these were conveyed by regular post or by special messenger is not stated in this record.

Charles Johnson sets out and returns to London and reports that he intends "(as soon as the weather is warmer and proper encouragement is given) to teach Writing in all its hands, Arithmetick and Latin (as also to teach the Grammar scholars twice a day, Writing gratis),"—a work "so requisite in this flourishing city.

He is "at Mr. Wood's Farm, near the Wall street."—Y. Post-Boy, March 19, 1744. Of a similar advertisement in ibid., Jan. 13, 1746.

"The Boston and Philadelphia Posts will set out on Monday the 26th instant, at Three o'clock P. M. to perform their Stages Weekly during the Summer Season."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 19, 1744. See Dec. 17.

The London Gazette prints the statement that, on Feb. 28, the British minister at Paris was notified by the French secretary of state that France could no longer avoid declaring war against Great Britain; also that "last Wednesday" news reached England from Calais that war was actually declared.—Assemb. Jour., II: 80. This item of news was read in the assembly on May 11.—ibid. For the official action thereon, see May 21. This third intercolonial war between England and France lasted until Oct. 7, 1748 (p. v). It was known in Europe as the War of the Austrian Succession; and in America as King George's War. It was closed by the treaty of Aix-Chapel, by which France ceded Louisiana, East and West, to Great Britain (1763) and Spain (1768), the last vestige of French power in America. In The Political Hist. of Eng, 1793-1760, 378-418; Winvott, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 434-49.

To inform persons applying to the supreme court to be naturalized, Parker publishes a clause of the act of parliament, "passed the 17th Year of his present Majesty's Reign," entitled "An Act for naturalizing such foreign Protestants, and others therein mentioned as are settled, or shall settle, in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America." It prescribes that no person, except Quakers and Jews, shall be naturalized, "unless such Person shall have received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in some Protestant or Reformed Congregation within this Kingdom of Great Britain, or within some of the said Colonies in America, within Three Months next before his taking and subscribing the said Oaths, and making, repeating and subscribing the said Declaration; and shall, at the Time of his taking and subscribing the said Declaration, produce a Certificate signed by the Parish minister, attested by two credible Witnesses, whereof an Entry shall be made in the Secretary's Office of the Colony, wherein such Person shall so inhabit and reside, as also in the Court where the said Oaths shall be so taken, as aforesaid, without any Fee or Reward." This person applying to be naturalized must bring with him to court the witnesses to the certificate, that they may be questioned whether they saw the minister sign the certificate.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 26, 1744.

The common council orders "that all the Owners of the Houses between Mr. Dr. or de Vries' or de Kruyff's Houses and the Bowling Green have Liberty to Range their Fruits in such Manner as the Alderman and Assistant of the West Ward Shall think proper."—*M. C. C., Vi: 117.

Mar. 1
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1744

It is ordered by the common council that, in the future, no market shall be erected at Maiden Lane Slip unless it “Shall be contiguous and Adjoining to the Market house now built there.”—M. & P. Sept. 6, 1744.

Gov. Clinton recommends to the assembly the consideration of “what may be wanting to complete the Fortifications in the City.”—Assem. Jour., II: 14:15. See May 19.

30. Parker announces that “The New-Printing Office is now removed from John Jas. Roylby Dearborn, corner the Corner-House next Door to Mrs. Parrmyter’s, where all Persons may have Printing done as usual.” On May 7, he announced that his print-office was “now removed.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 30, May 7, 1744.

For his last previous move, see July 25, 1743.

May 3. An assembly of merchants passed and entitled, called “A Law to Remove and Prevent Nuisances within the City of New York,” beginning with the allegation that “during the latter part of the two last Summers a Most Noisom Smell was Generally Perceived by all who went into the South East part of this City.” This condition, it is alleged, is due to the foul state of the docks and slips, to tan-pits, tan-fats, the pits of skimmers, leather dressers, curriers and glowers, uncurd hides, skins, leather, and blubber, in the neighborhood of which “the Said Mortall and Infections Dis-temper broke out.” The offensive smells are often occasioned, also, by the keeping of swine, the ditty of hatters, the putrid materials of starch makers, the blood and garbage of small cattle killed within the city, the entraits of fish cast into the streets, and the fish and oyster-shells lying in cellars or yards of dwelling-houses.

It is therefore ordained that, after May 25, 1744, no one shall make or keep any “flatt or pits of Standing Water Whether for Tannery, Sin House, Jet Boys Doest, Corners, the Corner-House or any other use whatsoever that may be a Nuisance to the Inhabitants within this City to the Southward of Fresh Water or within One hundred Yards to the South Side thereof under the Penalty of Ten Shillings for every Day for every Such flut or Pits so had Under no pretense, nor by the up with Earth not over the occupant of the land where these pits are made filled them up with earth, under the same penalty for neglect. No one is permitted to keep “any Live hog or hogs to the South Ward of the Fresh Water;” also “no Dye of Hatters or other dyers or Corrupted Noisom Water of Starch Makers shall be Poured or Suffered to Run into the Channels of the Streets of this City Either by Night or by day,” from March 25 to November 1 each year, “Nor Suffered to Remain in the houses and yards or other places of the Inhabitants of this City Living to the South Ward of fresh Water.” It is further ordained that “no Dirt flith; Shells of Oyster Clams or any Shell fish from the first Day of May to the first Day of October in Every Year Shall be Suffered to Remain in the Houses; Cellars; Yards or other places of any of the Inhabitants of this City to the Southward of Fresh Water” for more than 24 hours; “Nor Shall Any person or persons Presume to Lay any Dung; Dirt; flith; or any part of the Commod or Vacant Lots to the South Side of the Poorhouse and the House Commonly Called the Guard house of this City.”

A penalty is prescribed for failure to perform each of these requirements; half the amount collected to be paid to the churchwardens for the use of the city’s poor, and the other half to the person or persons who shall institute and prosecute the suit for recovery against the offenders. Persons having “flatt or pits” in Beekman’s swamp (see Vol. 1, Pl. 30), which are already made or have been placed there during the tenure of the present owners, are exempt from the operation of the law.—M. C. V: i: 118-21. The pits had been banished from the city by order of June 7, 1676 (p. 50).

On this day, a young girl is “run over by a Chaise & bruised so much that she died the next Morning.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 7, 1744.

Street vehicles, by this time, evidently had become so numerous that by Oct. 1, 1744, it was necessary to pedestrains.—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1892), 12.

Before the publication of city or trade directories, tradesmen relied upon advertisements in the newspapers to make their places of business known to the public. The following are examples of a topographical character:

7. The Printer hereof having by him a Tabell of several Mennonites, who lately plotted the Destruction of this City; and as he has been a considerable Looter by printing that Book, he proposes to sell ’em very cheap, viz 3s. A Piece, stich, which is not quite one third of what they were at first sold for; And as it may be a necessary Memento in all Families in this City; so this Printer are willing to sell them at so low a price, that no person will ever have the Inconvenience of getting them so cheap again; and those who are inclined to purchase, are desired to be expeditious, lest they may be disappointed.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 10, 1748.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1744 Merchants having made contracts to supply the French at Cape Breton Island with provisions and military stores, a proclamation is ordered by the provincial council to be issued, forbidding the exportation of these commodities.—Col. Coun. Min., 344.

17 Gov. Clinton, in urging the assembly to make additional provision for fortifications, asks that "the Walk round the Battery on Copey Rocks, be raised with Sed wood, as it will strengthen that Battery, and defeat the Attemps of an Enemy to land there, and that an officer's Guard of the Militia, be kept there every Night; for which Purpose the Guard Room ought to be fitted for their Reception; Gates erected at each End of the said Battery, and two or more Centry Boats placed there, and a Quantity of Candles sufficient for that Guard."—Assem. Jour., II: 32. Such a bill was passed on May 19 (q.v.).

18 Brandt Schuyler is appointed a city surveyor.—M. G. C. V., 122.

19 A provincial act provides for repairing fortifications, rebuilding the governor's house in the fort, and defraying the expense of other undertakings for the well-being of the city and security of the province. At present, "the Fortifications of this Colony are not in sufficient repair to oppose the Attemps of a Formidable Enemy, or to encourage the good People thereof, to make a vigorous Defence, in case of an Attemp. Attempts placed there, and the present Situation of affairs in Europe is such as render it absolutely necessary, to repair & compleat Them at this critical Juncture." The act also states that "the usual Residence of the Governors of this Colony Still Lays in the ruins occasioned by the late wicked conqueror; conceiv'd highly necessary, as well for the accommodation of the Governors... as for the Credit & Reputation of the Colony, To Erect a new commodious House in or near the Place, where the old one Stood." It is therefore enacted that, out of the revenue derived from the liquor excise, the treasurer shall pay to the said commissioners, Peter Peir, John Roosevelt, and William Roome, who are appointed to apply the money to the objects specified, the following sums:

For mounting cannon "on the Flat Rock Battery, and Erecting one or Two Centinell Boxes," £16;

For erecting a fence at both ends of this battery, with a "Gate to open fit for a Cart to go in upon Occasion, and a Turn Pike," and also a "Turn Pike at the north end," £1715;

For repairing the sod work on this battery, £710;

For putting "the Brasses on the Carriages and Purchasing others that are wanting," £515;

For "Building a good & sufficient Stone Wall at the Foot of the South West part of the Flag Mount to support the ground thereof," £45.

For "Repairing & Painting the Walls of Fort George," £252.

For "Building a good New Plat Form on Copsey Battery of Planks & one Centinell Box," £140; in a letter Governor Clinton says: "Twelve Inches wide clear of Sap, on good Substantial white Oak Sleepers, not less than Five under the Length of one Plank," £285;

For "Painting the Carriages on the Several Batteries," £47;

For gunpowder to be stored in the powder house of the city, £300.

For "Building & completing a House for the Residence of the Governors in the Place before mentioned," £6000. It shall be 50 feet long, 45 feet wide, three stories above ground, the two lower to be 11 feet each and the upper one 8 feet (high), with "a Low Roof and no Dormant windows, conformable to a Plan Signed & approved of by his Excellency the Governor," etc. The commissioners are directed "to make use of all the Sashes, Doors, Locks, Hindges, Iron, and other Materials Saved of the late House," and they are empowered "to dispose of the Plank and Timber of the Old Plat form on the Copsey Battery," and to "Employ the produce" in finishing the new platform.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 339-46.

The appropriation of £6000 for rebuilding the governor's residence, as provided by this act, proved inadequate, and additional appropriations were made: Attest, May 3, 1745; June 21, 1745; Aug. 14, 1745; Nov. 19, 1745. On May 19, 1747 (p. 79), the assembly respond to Clinton that the governor's house, which was then almost finished, had been erected according to plans approved by him, at very great expense to the colony. This residence was not completed, however, on Feb. 21, 1748 (q.v.).

A letter by Clinton to the provincial council from Gov. Shirley, with news of a declaration of the war with France, Gov. Clinton, by order of the council (Col. Coun. Min., 344), issues a proclamation beginning: "Whereas there is the greatest Reason May to believe, that War has been for some time actually declared betwixt the Courts of Great Britain and France; and I having been informed, that since the Account thereof has been brought into this Province, a great Quantity of Gun-Powder has been bought up in order to fortify the Harbours, it is therefore enjoins all Persons not to export any Gunpowder out of the province, "more than shall be sufficient for the Use of the Vessels carrying the same."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 28, 1744 Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 569. See also March 4/15 and 24.

Connecticut is called upon to help in case of an attack on New York City.—Col. Coun. Min., 344. (At the top of page 344 in this Calendar, 1743 is a misprint for 1744.) Connecticut responded on June 14 by promising to raise 200 men if needed—ibid.

Two persons (perhaps commission merchants) advertise for sale a curious assortment of property:—To Be Sold. The Sloop 'King Solomon,' Burthen about 100 Tons (more or less) with all her Guns, Tackle and Apparel, now lying at Stephen Bayard's Wharf, in New York: Also a House and Lot of Ground in New York formerly known by the Name of the Anahabitant Meeting house: Also a Negro Woman that understands all sorts of House Work, and a Negro Boy; A Marble Chimney Piece, three Marble Tables, three Riding Chairs and a single Horse Chaise; 16,000 two foot shingles; 150 Elephant's Teeth; three Desks, two Cases of Drawers, a Mahogany Book Case, six Dozen of Boston Axes, 360 Gallons of Spirits sundry sorts; Whoever inquires to buy any of above may apply to Thomas Noble and Joseph Scott, in New York."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 28, 1744.

As explained by Mr. Geo. W. W. Houghton, editor of The Hub, in a paper read before the N. Y. Hist. Soc., March 4, 1890, "The Colonial 'chaire' was the progenitor of the modern New England or Boston chair, immortalized by Dr. Holmes in his poem 'The Deacon's Masterpiece, or The Wonderful One-boss Shair'; and it so closely resembled that well-known one-knee, hooded vehicle, slung on thurroughbars or straps connecting with long wooden braces at the rear, that no further description is required. The oft-mentioned 'chair' was not the Sedan-chair, as might at first be thought, this being the period when the wheelless Sedan, borne by porters, still retained its aristocratic glory. The Colonial 'chair' was simply a small chaise from which the hood was omitted. But the Deane advertisement [see Feb. 27, 1766] also mentions the Sedan, and thus shows that it was to some extent in use in New York as late as 1766. I regret that I have not been able to discover other references to it."—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. T., 19.

A violent earthquake shock at Boston is felt with considerably less violence in New York and on Long Island. The Boston occurrence is described in N. Y. Post-Boy, June 14, 1744.

The two New York newspaper men, the brigt Hester (Capt. S. Bayard) and the sloop "Polly" (Capt. Jellie), return to port (see Oct. 17, 1743) "with their Prize so much to their joy, and from Cape Fare." The prize is "a beautiful Ship, almost new, of near 200 Tons, and laden chiefly with Cocoa; but we don't hear that the Pieces of Eight have been found, as was reported: After unloading her at Cape Fare, several of the Men took their shares and left the Vessels: It is said such Qualcommers about 1,100 wt. of Cocoa per Man." N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1744.

The sloops "Clinton" and "Mary Ann" are fitting out at New York as privates, and are soon to sail "for a cruising Voyage against his Majesty's Enemies." All "Gentlemen Sailors and Officers," accordingly, are invited to go with the sloop "Jamaica Arms on the New Dock, where they may see the Articles." N. Y. Post-Boy, June 11, 1744. See Oct. 1.
Doctor Alexander Hamilton, a Scotch physician residing at Annapolis, comes to New York City for a sojourn which lasted nearly all summer. He recorded his observations in a private journal, which has the manuscript title "Trinity Church," the name of which remained unknown to historians until its publication, in 1957, by its present owner, Mr. William K. Bixby, of St. Louis. The printed title is Hamilton's Itinerarium, being a narrative of a journey from Annapolis, Maryland, through Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, from May to September, 1744. This publication is edited by Albert Bushnell Hart, LL.D., professor of history at Harvard University. Mr. Bixby gives a brief history of the manuscript; while Dr. Hart's Introduction is a biographical essay relating to Dr. Hamilton's time in New York City. "The record," he writes, "contains abundant evidence of the crudity of much of the Colonial life;" but the author's comments on what he saw and heard are told with entertaining good humour, and reflect, vividly, the personalities and characteristics which he encountered and described. The following extracts are selected for the facts and descriptions relating to New York City, of which they are in some instances the only, and in many, the best, record that now remains to us:

"... I put my horses up at one Wagborn's at the sign of the Cart and Horse [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 979]. The hotel was conveniently located near the city's town hall, and belonged to an old Scotman, by name James Bixby, sheriff of the city, and two aldermen, whose names I know not." He describes the sheriff and the scene. (pp. 48-49.)

After I had sat some time with this polite company, Dr. Colchoun [Dr. Alexander Colcoun], surgeon to the fort, called in, to discuss the state of medicine, and he called at the tavern, which is kept by one Todd, an old Scotman, to sup with the Hungarian Club, of which he is a member, and which meets there every night." Dr. Hamilton describes the company. When he left, he went to his lodgings, "at Mrs. Hogg's in Broad Street." (pp. 49-50.)

The taverns of Robert Todd stood at the present 101 Broad St. See Map 25, 1733.

On June 16, he records: "I found the city less in extent, but by the stir and frequency upon the streets, more populous than Philadelphia. I saw more shipping in the harbour. The houses are more compact and regular and in general higher built, most of them after the Dutch model, with their gavell [gable] ends facing the street. There are a few built of stone; more of wood, but the greatest number of brick, and a great many covered with pantile and glazed tile with the year of God when built figured out with plates of iron, upon the fronts of several of them. The streets in general are but narrow, and not regularly disposed. The best of them run parallel to the river, for the city is built all along the water, in general."

"This city has more of an urban appearance than Philadelphia. Their wharfs are mostly built with logs of wood piled upon a stone foundation. The city is built along the river. There is a spacious church [Trinity Church], belonging to the English congregation, with a pretty high, but heavy, clumsy steeple, built of freestone, facing the street called Broadway. There are two Dutch churches, several other meetings, and a pretty large Townhouse at the head of Broad Street. The Exchange stands near the water, and is a wooden structure going to decay. From it a pier runs into the water called the Long Bridge, about fifty paces long, covered with plank and supported with large wooden posts. The Jews have one synagogue in this city.

The women of fashion here appear more in public than in Philadelphia. They are genteel in their dress. They come abroad generally in the cool of the evening and go to the Promenade. ..." (pp. 51-52.)

Referring to services which he attended in Trinity Church, on June 17, he says: "... There was a large congregation of about a thousand ... This church is above two feet long, and 80 wide. At the east end of it is a large semicircular area in which stands the altar, pretty well ornamented with painting and gilding. The galleries are supported with wooden pillars of the Ionic order, with carved work of foliage and cherub's heads gilt betwixt the capitals. There is a pretty organ at the west end of the church, consisting of thirty pipes and a bass, but I had not the satisfaction of hearing it play, they having at this time no organist; but the vocal music of the congregation was very good." (p. 52.)

"The castle, or fort, is now in ruins, having been burnt down three or four years ago by the conspirators, but they talk of repairing it again. The Lieutenant-Governor had there a house and a chapel, and there are fine gardens and terrace walks, from which one has a very fine view of the city. In the fort are several guns, some of them brass and cast in a handsome mould. The new battery is raised with ramsprats of turf, and the guns upon it are in size from twelve to eighteen pounders. The main battery is a great half-moon or semi-circular rampart bluff upon the water, being tuft upon a stone foundation, about four paces in length, the platform of which is laid in some places with plank, in others with flagstone. Upon it there are fifty-six great iron guns, well mounted, most of them being thirty-two pounders." After dusk, Hamilton states, this platform is the general rendezvous of "the courtesans." He goes on to describe, with entertaining characterization, the conversation of the tipping landlord, Todt (pp. 54-55.)

On the evening of June 19, he wrote: "I went to a tavern fronting the Albany coffee-house along with Doctor Colchoun, where I heard a tolerable concerto of music, performed by one violin and two German flutes." (pp. 56-57.) He heard another violinist, on July 6, at "the tavern where he went in company with Abraham de Peyster, the treasurer of the province.

Under date of June 22, Dr. Hamilton describes the new Dutch church, completed in 1731 (see Oct. 12, 1739), as "a pretty large but heavy stone building, as most of the Dutch edifices are, quite destitute of taste or elegance." The pulpit is a pretty large, and handsomely bell, cast at Amsterdam, and a publick clock. From this steeple we could have a full view of the city of New York." (p. 60.)

On board a sloop bound for Albany on June 22, Hamilton passed "a little town, starboard, called Greenwich, consisting of eight or ten neat houses, and two or three new ones that on the same shore, a pretty box of a house, with an avenue fronting the river, belonging to Oliver Dulancie [Dulany]. ..." (pp. 60-61.) See Pls. 40 and 41, Vol. I. Returning to New York on July 6, Dr. Hamilton continued to write animated particulars of persons and places. Some of his observations may well be placed among the choicest bits of early American humour.—See, for example, pp. 101-2, 104-6.

On July 7, he records: "... I waited upon Stephen Bayard, to whom my letters of credit were directed. ... I dined at Todt's, and went in the afternoon to see the French priests in the harbour. Both of them were large ships about 300 tons burden,—the one Le Jupiter and the other Le Saint François Xavier. Warren, who took the St. Francis, has gained a great character. His praise is in everybody's mouth, and he has made a fine estate of the business. ..." (p. 103.)

Recording the events of July 9, Dr. Hamilton observes: "The people of New York, at the first appearance of a stranger, are seemingly civil and courteous, but this civility and compliance soon relaxes if he be not either highly recommended or a good toaster. To drink stoutly with the Hungarian Club, who are all bumer men, is the readiest way for a stranger to recommend himself, and a set among them are very fond of making a stranger drunk. To talk bawdy and to have a knock at punning passes among some there for good sterling wit. Governor Clinton himself is a jolly toaster and gives a good example, and for that one quality is esteemed among these dons."

"The staple of New York is bread flour and skins. It is a very rich place, but it is not so cheap living here as at Philadelphia. They have very bad water in the city, most of it being hard and brackish. Ever since the negro conspiracy, certain people have been appointed to sell water in the streets, which they carry on a sledge to great casks and bring it from the harbour to the different parts of the city, for it was when the negroes went for tea water [see "Tea-water Pump," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 976] that they held their cabals and consultations, and therefore they have a law now that no negro shall be seen upon the streets without a lantern after dark."

"... There is as much writing here betwixt the members of the Legislature as in any of the other American Provinces."

"They have a diversion here very common, which is the barbe- cooning of a turtle, to which sport the chief gentley in town commonly go once or twice a week."
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1744

"There are a great many handsome women in this city. They appear much more in public than at Philadelphia. It is customary for the streets to be adorned with flowers. When the ladies walk the streets in the daytime they commonly use umbrellas, prettily adorned with feathers and painted.

"There are two coffee-houses in this city, and the northern and southern posts go and come here once a week. I was tired of nothing here but their excessive drinking, for in this place you may have the best of company and conversation as well as at Philadelphia." (pp. 106-8)

From July 10 to Aug. 30, Dr. Hamilton was absent from New York on a tour of Long Island and New England. On his return he bought a new horse, judge, and put up the "wayfaring", a public house, whose landlord he mentions with characteristic good humour. (p. 210) He describes the Indians "singing for oysters in the gut before the door." Of his ride towards New York, on Aug. 31, he writes: "About three miles before I reached New York I saw the man-of-war commanded by Commodore Warren lying in Turtle Bay. This was a festival day with the crew. They were roasting an entire ox upon a wooden spit, and getting drunk as fast as they could, Warren having given them a treat. I was over-taken here by a young gentleman who gave me a whole packet of news about prizes and privateering, which is now the whole subject of discourse." (pp. 211-12)

Arriving in New York, Dr. Hamilton again put up his horses at "Waghorn's," and met Stephen Bayard, who took him to dine at "his brother's." Here he met a "great company of gentlemen," including Chief-Justice James de Lancey, Adrien Hageman, the county clerk, and Albert Moore, a lawyer. He describes some of those present and their conversation. (pp. 212-14)

On Sept. 1, he again went to the Hungarian Club at night, where were present "the Chief Justice, the City Recorder, Mr. Phillips [Adolphus Philipse], the Speaker of the House of Assembly, and several others." He received news "of the Dutch having declared war against France, and the capture of some of the barrier towns in Flanders by the French..." (pp. 214-15)

Dr. Hamilton dined, on Sunday, Sept. 4, with Stephen Bayard. He records in his journal the following incident: "Just as we had done dinner, we heard two raps at the door solemnly laid on with a knocker. A gentleman in the company was going to see who it was, but Mr. Bayard desired him not to trouble himself, for it was only the damper. I asked who that was. He told me it was a fellow that made a course thro' one quarter of the town, giving two raps at each door as he passed to let the people in the houses know that the second bell [for church] had rung out. This man has a gratuity from each family for doing every new year. His address when he comes to ask for his perquisite, is: 'Sir, or Madam, you know what I mean.' So he receives a piece of money, more or less, according to the wealth of the family. This custom was observed when they had but one bell to warn the people to church, and that bell happened to be cracked, so, for the sake of the sexton, the sextons have kept it up ever since. Such a trifling office as this perhaps is worth about forty pounds a year. York currency, tho' the poor fellow sometimes is drubbed for his trouble by new comers who do not understand the custom." (pp. 215-16)

On the morning of Wednesday, Sept. 5, Dr. Hamilton went with Mr. Hogg "to the Jews' synagogue [on Mill St.], where was an assembly of about fifty of the sect of Abraham, chanting and singing their doleful hymns round the sanctuary (where was contained the ark of the covenant and Aaron's rod) dressed in robes of white silk. They had four great wax candles lighted, as large as a man's arm. Before the rabbi, who was elevated above the rest in a kind of desk, stood the seven golden candlesticks, transformed into silver gilt. They were all slip-shod. The men wore their hats in the synagogue, and had a veil of some white stuff, which they sometimes threw over their heads in their devotion; the women, of whom some were very pretty, stood up in a gallery like a hen-coop. They sometimes paused or rested a little from singing, and talked about business. My ears were so filled with their reiterated sounds that I could not get the sound out of my head all day." (p. 218)

On Sunday, Sept. 9, Dr. Hamilton went to the French Church (on King St.), and heard Rev. Louis Rou preach. "He is reckoned a man of good learning and sense; but, being foolishly sarcastical, he has lost his shaky ground in disquisitions, so that the congregation has now dwindled to nothing." In the afternoon, he went "to the Presbyterian meeting and heard there a good puritanic sermon by one Pemberton." (pp. 219-20)

Dr. Hamilton left New York on Sept. 11, taking the boat for Elizabethtown Point. Referring to his visit, he wrote: "I was sorry to leave New York, upon account of being separated from some agreeable acquaintance I had contracted there, and at the same time I cannot deny that I was glad to remove from a place where the temptation of drinking (a thing so incompatible with my limner constitution) threw itself so often in my way. I knew here several men of sense, ingenuity, and learning, and a much greater number of fools, whom I chose not to name, not so much for fear of giving offense to those who are so much financial at my manner of living, but because I was afraid that names are not worthy to be recorded either in manuscript or printed journals. These does commonly hold their heads higher than the rest of mankind, and imagined few or none were their equals. But this I found always proceeded from their narrow notions, ignorance of the world, and low extraction, which indeed is the case with most of our agrandized upstarts in these infant countries of America, who never had an opportunity to see, or (if they had) the capacity to observe the different ranks of men in polite nations, or to know what it is that really constitutes that difference of degree." (pp. 237-39)

Parker announces: "His Majesty's Declaration of War, as June 25, 1744. also that for encouraging his Ships of War and Privateers, are both come to hand, but neither Time nor Room permits them to be in this Week's Paper; but at the second of these Declarations will be printed at large immediately on his Excellency's Return, any of my Subscriptions may then have them for sending."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 18, 1744.

"Four Privateers are now fitting up here with the utmost Expedition, viz. one Brig. and three Sloops, who will all be ready to sail in a few Days; they are almost madly already; it is impossible to express with what Alacrity the Volunteers enter on board, and 'tis affirmed by all that understand the Matter, that the Articles are the most favourable to the Men of any Privateers since the Commencement of the War."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 18, 1744. A week later, they were ready; two more privateers were "in great Forwardness" to cruise against the French and Spaniards, and another was being prepared for the same service.—Ibid., June 25, 1744.

The "brave Commodore Warren" comes into port "in his Majesty's Ship the Lancaster, with a French ship of 300 Tons, called Le St. Francois Xavier, which he took on the second Instant, in the Lat. 27.31. in his Way from Antiqua to this Place; She has on Board 500 Hogsheads of Sugar, 300 whereof are white Sugar, 52 Pound weight of Bar Gold, and 3000 Spanish Dollars, besides some Indigo, &c. This is the 15th French Vessel taken by this Country, that began to be sent from New York to several other Vessels, and the great Acclamations of the People, as a Testimony of the Sense they have of the signal Services done by this Gentleman during the continuance of the War. The Lancaster being very leaky, and long off the Careen, proceeded immediately to Turtle Bay, where she is to be fitted with all possible Expedition."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 25, 1744. The Sugar was to be sold at public vendue on July 7 at "the Store house of Messeurs Stephen De Lancey and Company."—Ibid., July 2, 1744. See Aug. 275 and Oct. 9, 1744.

The government having returned from Albany on June 26, the king's declaration of war against the French King, and his declaration for the encouragement of his ships of war and privateers, are proclaimed with the usual solemnity; "the streets being lined with the militia of this city, from His Excellency's house to the Fort, where they were first proclaimed, and from thence to the City Hall to both which places is subsisted by all our privates and by members of His Majesty's Council, the Corporation, and a great number of the principal gentlemen of this city. After the solemnity was over, they returned to His Excellency's house, where His Majesty's and the Royal Family's healths were drank. —N. Y. Post-Boy, July 3, 1744.

At some time prior to this date, possibly as early as 1742 or July 1743, William Bradford took his former apprentice, Henry de Forest, into partnership, and from this time on The New-York Gazette bore both their names as printers.—See Early Newspapers, II. 490; and "Hist. of the Amer. Newspapers," by Brigham, in Am. Antq. Soc. Proceedings (1932), 416. See Nov. 19.
It is ordered by Trinity vestry that "the Pulpit and Canopy " shall be Painted a Mahogany Colour."—Trim. Min. (M.S.).

The privater loop "Elizabeth" (Capt. Thomas Barnes), mounting 10 carriage guns and as many side guns, and having with over 300 men, sails "on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies," the fifth of the kind from New-York.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 9, 1744. See Aug. 31.

The privater loop "Don Carlos" (Capt. Abraham Kip), of 12 carriage guns and about as many swivels, to carry 100 men, is fitted and armed. Easy Business," he writes to New York "on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 16, 1744. It sailed on Aug. 2 (p. 5). The ship "David" (Capt. William Axon), of about 170 tons, is fitting out for this purpose, to mount 16 carriage guns and 16 swivel guns, and to carry 50 men. He advises "every man, inclined to enter on board the said Privater, may repair to the Sign of the Jamaica Arms, on Mr. Cruger's Wharf, where they may see the Articles."—Ibid., July 16, 1744. This ship "fell down" (to Sandy Hook) on Sept. 2.—Ibid., Sept. 3, 1744.

Gov. Clinton, in a message to the assembly, states that he has "ordered the Brass Cannon on the Flag-Mount, in Fort-George, to be repaired;" also that "Ninety Five Shot Boxes (one for each Gun) four more Centinel Boxes, a new Flag Staff, and a Platform on the South East Bastion in Fort-George," be forthwith made; also that "Leaden aprons" be made "for the Cannon on Cosepy Battery, and a Fencce from the East to the West side thereof." Eight cannon "be removed to Mr. Rutger's Wharf, on the North-River, and Eight to Burnet's-Key, on the East River, for Land Bateries in Case of an Invasion," are other recommendations. In addition, the governor recommends that "The Magazine in Fort-George, and the South East Bastion," be immediately repaired "for the Reception and safe Custody of Gun-powder," and that a greater quantity, sufficient for the entire garrison, be provided (see July 3, 1745). "The rest of the Barracks in Fort-George," he says, "should be rebuilt, for the Accommodation of the two Independent Companies which cannot be lodged without them" (see Aug. 24, 1744). "A Battery at Foot Bank, should be raised along the inside of the Parapet on Cosepy, and the Flat-Rock Bateries, to a proper Height, for the Musketeers to fire over." He advises that "The Beene on Cosepy Battery" be filled up "with Solid Wood, to prevent the Enemy's Landers there," and that "every other Gun on Cosepy" should be taken away; that "each other Embrasure" should be filled up with "Solid Wood;" that "Tomplins and Lead Aprons should be made for all Cannon;" that "Provision should be made for sorting all the Cannon Shot, and placing them in Boxes, next to the proper Gunners," and that "Marrasses with proper Office should be provided for, to be kept in constant Exercise."—Assemb. Jour., II: 25. On July 51, the governor made the following additional recommendations: "a Battery of Six Guns at Red Hook on Nassau Island . . . maintained by the Force of the County," also "a Battery on the Front of this Battery, in order to flank the east side of Cosepy Battery as the Flat-Rock Battery does to the Westward."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 290. For the assembly's action on these recommendations, see Aug. 24.

Aug. 2. The privater loop "Don Carlos," commanded by Capt. Abraham Kip, mounting 12 carriage guns and 12 swivels, with upwards of 90 men on board, sails out of Sandy Hook, "on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies." Two other vessels, a ship and a brig, are fitting out here for the same purpose.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 6, 1744.

The State of New Jersey is tried before the supreme court of the province of New York "for counterfeiting the Bills of Credit of this Province, and uttering them knowing to be counterfeits." On Aug. 7 he was sentenced to death.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 15, 1744. His plea for pardon was rejected by the governor and council on Aug. 25.—Col. Coun. Min., 345. He was executed Aug. 24.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744. See Feb. 4, 1755; Aug. 5, 1745.

Four privaters, the sloops "Clinton" (Capt. Seymour), "Mary-Anno" (Capt. Tucker), and " Polly" (Capt. Jeffereis), and the brig "Hester" (Capt. Bayard), bring in six French prizes, consisting of two Caraches and a man-of-war with over 300 men, on July 21 and 22, "off the Grand Caycosseys, after an obstinate, tho' not a very bloody Engagement of 10 Hours in which our Privater had only one Man killed and 5 wounded by the Enemy, one Man kill'd by a Swivel's bursting, and 7 drowned by a Boat's over-setting. Their Cargoes consist of 192 Hids. and 72 Barrels of Sugar white and brown, 40 Hids. and 18 Bar. of Indigo, 116 Casks Coffee, 26 Packs of Deer-Skins and 14 of Salted Hides, 17 Half-Sides of tann'd Oxhide, some Cocos, and to the Value of about 10,000 Pieces of Eight in Gold and Silver . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1744.

Mayor John Cruger dies suddenly.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1744. For his obituary, see ibid., Aug. 20, 1744. By virtue of the charter, Gerardus Stuyvesant, the deputy mayor, becomes mayor.—M. C. V., 151. He presided for the first time as mayor at a meeting of the common council on Sept. 11.—Ibid., V: 125.

William Bradford (jr.), a "Purveyor in Hanover-Square," advertises "Cannon four Pounds, and Swivel Guns, Cannon Shot of all Sizes," as well as pig and bar iron, pots, kettles, etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 13, 1744. See also July 1, 1745. The elder Bradford did not suspend the Gazette until Nov. 19, 1744. He died May 23, 1742 (q.v.).—Of March 12, 1750.

Gov. Clinton recommends that some provision be made for the maintenance of prisoners of war. "It is utterly improper they should, contrary to all Precedents, be suffered to go about at large, viewing our Situation and Fortifications; a Practice not suffered by any other Country, in the time of the profounde Peace . . ."—Assemb. Jour., II: 32. On Aug. 31, the governor had received no reply regarding their letter from the assembly and demanded an immediate answer. He said it was unsafe to allow prisoners the liberty of the city, but on the other hand it might "be thought cruel to commit them to Goal, without a certain Subsistance provided for them."—Ibid., II: 35. The assembly replied on Sept. 12, by advising that the French prisoners be sent out of the colony as quickly as possible.—Ibid., III: 24-25. By Oct. 1, it had been decided to send them with a flag of truce to some of the French islands, to be exchanged for English prisoners.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 1, 1744; Col. Coun. Min., 345-46. The "French Islands" here referred to are probably the French West Indies (ibid., 249, 554, 559, 625, 656). See also Nov. 5.

The assembly approves of a resolution allowing £255 for repairing the forts in New York, and erecting the Batteries, recommended by the Govt., but a motion "that the South East Bastion of Fort George should be repaired," is defeated.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII, 612.

James Parke, publisher of the Post-Boy, complains that letters left for him at the Merchants Coffee House have been destroyed or carried away by others. He hopes the legislature will take some action as "this most scandalous, base and pernicious Practice is but too common and notorious in these Parts."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

H. M. S. "Launceston" (Commodore Warren's ship), having undergone repairs—see June 23—is about ready to sail.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

On Sept. 10, the ship had fallen "down below the Fort," and the officers and crew were "heating up" for volunteers.—Ibid., Sept. 10, 1744. See Sept. 24.

It is computed that, with the completion of a brig in a few days, "an even Half-Score" vessels from New York will be completed for privateering against the French.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

An open letter, signed "Reborah See—o," who describes herself as a poor widow, protests against the act of May 3 (q.v.) for banning fishing boats out of the city. She recounts the benefits of possessing live hogs, and the many useful parts of the dead animal, and points out, with good-humoured cynicism, several nuisances in the city that might be dispensed with to greater advantage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1744.

The crew of Commodore Warren's man-of-war, which lies at Turtle Bay, holds a celebration. This is described by Dr. Hamilton, who remarks that "prizes and privateering" are now "the whole subject of discourse."—See June 15.

The French prize ship "Le Bon," which was captured on Aug. 8 near Cape Breton and brought into New York, was privately commanded by Capt. Barnes (probably the "Elizabeth," see July 5), is brought into port, loaded with salt, flour, and cordage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1744.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

On or about Sept. 1, 1794, was received in New York "of the Dutch having declared war against the French."—See Dr. Hamilton's notes, in The Evening Post, Sept. 6, 1794.

The following is a characteristic example of a large class of advertisements found in the newspapers of the period, which, taken collectively, furnish much information regarding the appearance of the sparsely settled portions of the island. Draft or Chart of the New York waters, from the Battery to the Out-Ward of the City of New-York, containing Thirty Acres, adjoin'd upon the East River, a little beyond Turtle Bay, and opposite the Sign of the Union Flag; it is very conveniently situated, and has a commodious safe Landing-Place and Harbour in a Cove, shelter'd fromIce and storms. The owner, a Good small Farm or Plantation in the Out-Ward of the City of New-York, containing Thirty Acres, adjoin'd upon the East River, a little beyond Turtle Bay, and opposite the Sign of the Union Flag; it is very conveniently situated, and has a commodious safe Landing-Place and Harbour in a Cove, shelter'd from Ice and storms. The owner, a

Another sail of a consignment, was advertised to shallow waters, and arteries, the sign of the Griffin, near the New-Dock, where they may see the Articules.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1794.

This tavern was probably at or near the foot of Wall St. On Nov. 3, 1794 (g.v.), William Creed was proprietor of a tavern on the new dock, "at the Green Dragon," very probably the same as the earlier "Griffin." Mark Valentine had become proprietor by Aug. 14, 1794 (g.v.). The sign had been taken, prior to Apr. 6, 1794 (g.v.), to "Golden Hill" (William St.).

A committee was appointed by the common council on July 30, 1794, to consider the application of Capt. Peter Warren for "a Grant of a Small piece of Land adjoining to his Own Land near John Horner's" (M. G. C., V. 92); and this committee was required, on July 23, 1794, to cause this piece of land to be surveyed and laid out, and to "Agree with Capt. Warren for the Same" (ibid., V. 124). This committee now orders "that the Swamp Meadow, and the Slip of Upland Adjoin'd thereunto Situate At or near the House of the Late John Wood, in the Out Ward of the City of New York be Granted" to him, his heirs and assigns, at the annual rental of "one pepper Corn," for seven years from the date of such Grant or Lease. This is done in acknowledgment of Sir Peter Warren's services to "the Kingdom of Great Britain in General, but for this City & Colony in particular," etc. From the termination of the seven years, he and his heirs and assigns forever are given "the Said Swamps: Meadow & Slip of Upland" for eight shillings per acre.

The committee further reports that, at this time, it is "Im-practicable to make an Exact & Authentic Draft or Chart of the Number of Acres Contained in the Said Swamps & So as to Settle and fix the Whole Annual Rent being prevented and Interrupted by thick and interwoven Briers, Thorns Wood and Brush." The grant is nevertheless made, subject to a future survey.—Mr. C. (V. 125). On Apr. 19, 1794, Brannan Schuyler, a city surveyor, returned a chart of the land, and it was ordered that the grant be made at the annual rent of $4.—Ibid., V. 144. On April 20, 1745, it was ordered that the grant, which was for ten acres "in the Bowery," be engrossed, sealed, and executed.—Ibid., V. 148. The original survey, which is in colours and dated May 3, 1745, is preserved with the Warren papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

A committee of the common council is appointed "for Laying out and Regulating the Streets in Monticello Ward."—M. C. C., V. 127. See March 20, 1747, to the same effect, with the committee's report. Regarding Queen Street, see M. C. C., V. 343, 358, V. 141, p. 6; V. 178. Regarding George and William Street, ibid., V. 25-26; Gold Street, V. 26-27; Ferry Street, V. 31-32; Cherry Street, V. 60-61; Frankford Street, V. 256.

The commission of Chief Justice De Lancey, held "during the pleasure of the King," is withdrawn, and a new one, to be held "during his good behavior," is issued.—N. Y. Col. Docs., V. 216; Col. Coun. Min., 345-46. See also Dawson, Sons of Liberty, 40; Cadwallader Colden, writing in 1765 to the Earl of Halifam, commented on this event as follows: "After Mr De Lancey had, by cautioning Mr Clinton, received the Commission of Chief Justice during good Behaviour, the Profession of Law enter'd into an Association, the effects of which, I believe your Lordship had formerly opportunity of observing in some striking instances."—The Golden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1786), I: 469.

Dr. Brune Bickley, of London, conveys to James De Lancey "the pretty house" which his relative Mr. May Bickley had built, about 1724, "on the Bowery."—Liber Deeds, XXXII: 489 (New York). This house was situated in the block bounded by the Bowery, Delancey, Rivington, and Chrystie Sts., on modern maps. It was in a ruined condition by 1794 (see under April 27, 1794), and was demolished some time between 1797 and 1799.—Cf. Pls. 64 and 70, Vol. I. See J. 266; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 499; Pl. 175, Vol. III.

Although the Militia Act of Dec. 17, 1743 (g.v.), was to be effective until Dec. 1, 1744, it is re-enacted with amendments at this time. The uniform of the troops in Albany, changed (see July 24, 1724) to provide for a hat lined with gold instead of silver laces; also "a Bloom Coat & Breeches with gilt or Brass buttons," and "a Scarlet Westcoat" (instead of a scarlet coat trimmed with silver, and a black bag or ribbon for the hair or periuk, as in the earlier laws). This law contains also the new provision that "a head Gunner & Eight Men most of them should Frequently Exercise the Cannon on the Batteries of the Said City [New York], whereby they as well as others may by Seeing such Exercise, be Enabled, to make a Proper Use of them, whenever there shall be Occasion for it." These soldiers shall not be obliged "to Watch & Ward," and shall be exempt from service by Articulars, by the Governor, or by Judges upon jury or inquests. Provision is made for the disposition of militia in the county of Albany, which, "by its remote Situation is most Lyable to the Invasion of the French by land;" also for sending intelligence of any invasion, insurrection or rebellion to the next adjacent county, and information regarding military plans. The commanding officer of each county is so informed, shall then "dispatch an Express" to the governor or commander-in-chief, notifying him of the danger, and of the strength and motions of the enemy; and for this purpose he shall have "full power to Impress Boats & Hands Men & Horses and ye Service may require for ed dispatch of such Intelligence," and until orders are received for "drawing ye Militia of his County in Such place or places as he shall Judge most Convenient for opposing the Enemy." The law as a whole embodies the principal provisions heretofore enacted in earlier laws of this character.—Col. Laws N. Y. II, III: 38-99. The next re-enactment, with amendments, was on Feb. 27, 1746 (g.v.).

Wharfage rates are established by a provincial act affecting uniformly three wharves: Burnets Key, "another Free Wharf between the Great Slip & Conies Dock, in the Dock Ward," and "one other Free Wharf hereby granted in Second Street, between the Two Ward of the said City,"—See Pls. 27A and 20, Vol. I. The act establishes also certain other wharfage regulations. It is stated, for example, that these wharves "are often so Incumbered by Lumber, Millstones or other Merchandise, That it Incommodes the Loading and Unloading of the Ships and the Receiving of Carts on Them." The wharfinger is authorized to warn the owner to
Chronology: The English Period: 1664-1703

Stephen Bayard is appointed mayor of New York City—Sept. M. C. G.: V. 129. He was continued in office for three years.—Ibid., V. 155, 180. For a brief account of him, see Man. Com. Coun. (1853), 408.

The "Laocoon." (Commodore Warren's ship—see Aug. 27 and Sept. 24) sails from New York on a cruise.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8, 1744.

The New York privateer sloops "Clinton" and "Mary Ance" (see June 11) "fell down" (toward Sandy Hook), and "design to sail this day."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 1, 1744. They sailed Oct. 7.—Ibid., Oct. 8, 1744. Regarding the success of the "Clinton," see Aug. 21, 1744.

Gov. Clinton writes to the Duke of Newcastle: "I beg leave to acquaint your Grace that I have had an interview with the five nations of Indians, and have remov'd a treaty of peace and alliance with them. In my opinion I demonstrated to them the base conduct of the French Court, and how necessary it was on their parts to guard against the false insinuations and designs of that Crow, and strongly encouraged them to be faithful and steady in our cause, with assurances to protect them against the assaults of their Enemies."

"There met me upon this occasion Comiss's from the Governrs of the Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut to treat with those Indians, by my permission, in behalf of their Governments, to which I consented. The Gentlemen from Massachusetts Bay had also a Commission to treat with me in conjunction with the Province of New Hampshire, and colonies of Connecticut and Rhode Island, upon measures for sending a proper number of forces into Canada to distress the French in their Settlements, and to act jointly in concert with them for his Majy's service, in all respects against the common Enemy. To this I could give no other answer, but that I would recommend it to the Assembly, when they meet, and for my part, I should be ready to contribute every thing in my power for that end."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 259. Gov. Clinton encloses in his letter the proposals he made to the Indians on June 18 (Ibid., VI: 262-63), the Indians' answer of June 20 (Ibid., VI: 264-66), and the proposals made to him on the latter date by the commissioners of Massachusetts (Ibid., VI: 265). Wiscoe states (N. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 611-12) that Clinton submitted to this conciliation of deputies and sachems a plan of union somewhat like the early New England confederacy.

Clinton writes to the Duke of Newcastle that a decision of the judge of the admiralty court has been against the officers of the customs of New York, who claimed duties upon prizes brought into this port by men-of-war and privateers. "Commodore Warren was the first who brought in a French prize, since the commencement of the war, he refused to pay any duty for the same, and says there was not demanded in the West Indies where he has sent many prizes.

"The Merchants of this City have been extremly active in fitting out privates, at a very great expense, and have brought in several prizes consisting chiefly of sugars, which from the nature of the duty claimed, would anticipate most of their gains.—I must therefore beg leave to move Your Grace, that you'll be pleased to interpose (in behalf of this city) with the commissrs of the Customs to drop their pretensions to said duties which will greatly discourage his Majy's subjects, to annoy the Enemy."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 260, 362.

A price, having been refuted "and very richly loaded for Boston, had the Misfortune to be cast-aways in going through HellsGate, and it is thought the Ship and Cargo will be Entirely lost."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1744.

The king's birthday is celebrated with the following demonstration: "In the Forenoon the Militia were drawn up under arms in the Broad-Way, from whence the Artillery Company first march'd in two Divisions, one to each Battery, where they were posted at the Gunes, and were follow'd by the first Division of the Regiment and Cadees [saddles], who regularly manned the Batteries, and discharged three Volleys of their Small Arms; then the second Division march'd and reliev'd them, and having fir'd three Volleys, as before, they were again reliev'd by the third. During this Time his Excellency, attended by the Council and a great many of the principal Gentlemen of this City, went up to the Fort, where his Majesty's and other loyal Heaths were drank under the Discharge of Pieces of Cannon, and Night concluded with Illuminations, &c."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1744.

29

24

23

21

"2

"2

"2

"2

"2

24

Commodore Peter Warren, being informed that boatsmen and others intending to come to "the Market of New York" with wood and other necessaries are apprehensive of being "impressed for his Majesty's Service" (see Aug. 27), publishes a notice that "no man will be impressed, but such as belong to inward bound Vessels from Sea."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1744.

For maintaining prisoners of war, £5,650:8.—Col. Laws N. T., III: 404-14. For further expenditures, see July 6, 1743; May 3, 1743; Aug. 21 and Sept. 1743.

For raising and building a Complct Battery of Six or Eight Guns on the Red Hook, on Nassau Island, upon the Land of Tys Van Duyck, £50.

For purchasing an additional quantity of Gun Powder for the use of this Colony, to be stored in the Powder House, £200.

For maintaining prisoners of war, £5,650:8.—Col. Laws N. T., III: 404-14. For further expenditures, see July 6, 1743; May 3, 1743; Aug. 21 and Sept. 1743.

For altering Copsey Battery, & Reducing the Same to a Thirty Six Gun Battery, with an addition of Five foot Sod Work on the Inside of the Parapet, £450.

For raising & building a Complctt Battery of Six or Eight Guns on the Red Hook, on Nassau Island, upon the Land of Tys Van Duyck, £50.

For the military and naval establishments, £5,650:8.—Col. Laws N. T., III: 404-14.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1744

Oct.
31: John Kelley conveys to Philip Pell land on the north side of Cherry St., 56 feet more or less under Waverly St. —"Where Deeds,"

8

18

21

30

Nov.
5

8

11

11

12

1744

Aug. 30, 1744

John Kelley conveys to Philip Pell land on the north side of Cherry St., 56 feet more or less under Waverly St. —"Where Deeds,"

Another

Be a means to encourage them to continue their care & to carry it further where either the want of time to do all that was requisite or other obstructions prevented them. & edly it will induce the people more cheerfully to submit to their orders and regulations even in cases where their private profit or ease may seem to suffer edly It will be of use to this City & to other places hereafter when they shall fall under the misfortune of such like Epidemical Distempers in taking the proper Methods to remove them & to prevent them & lastly that such of the Magistrates of New York who have distinguished themselves in so beneficial & benevolent an Undertaking may receive a public & honourable Testimony of their care & Vigilance in performing the Duty of good Magistrates as may be due to their Merit While we were engaged in party disputes many pretended to a great concern for the publick now when the publick benefit may be pursued without the inconveniences which necessarily attend party struggle in this matter of no concern & this gives room to think that the publick Benefit was not really the Motive to those who formerly made so great a bustle about it.—From the original draft of the letter, preserved with the "Colonel Papers," in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

In an advertisement to secure men, the privateer ship "Prince Charles" (see Nov. 12) is thus further described: "Barbute 380 Tons, to mount 24 Carriage Guns, most of them Nine Founders, and 34 Swivels; to carry 200 Men, and will sail in 12 or 14 Days, at farthest. She is to be completely rigged and fitted as a Ship of War, and is a prime Sailer; most of her Guns are already on board, and the men are to draw two Thirds of all Prices, without any Deduction for Arms, Ammunition and Provision. All Gentlemen Sailors and others, who are minded to go the Cruize, may repair to Mr. Benjamin Kiersted's, at the Sign of the Pine Apple on the New Dock, where they may see the Articles." —"N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 3, 1744."

She sailed from Sandy Hook Jan. 7, and arrived at the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

As indicated in the following advertisement, "The Swamp," at this time, was beginning to show its distinctive character as the centre of the leather trade: "John Browne, lately married to the Widow Breane, continues to carry on the Leather Dresser's Trade, at the Dwelling House of the late John Breene, in the Smith's Fly, near Bedeman's Swamp or Cople-Bush, at the South End of the House a Staff is erected, with a Vane on the Top of it; He sells all ..." sorts of Leather, and Leather Breeches, also Alham, Glue, rasped and chipt Logwood and Redwood fit for dying, and Copperas ...”

13. The first proposal to tax the colonies by means of stamped paper is made this year by Liet-Gov. Clark. Gov. Clinton, writing to the Duke of Newcastle on Dec. 13, says that Clarke’s object is “to obtain the appointment of the Commissioner of Stamps in America, as well as the inferior officers under him.” Clinton doubts the expediency of the measure.—Dawson, The Sons of Liberty (1859), p. 41. The governour adds that the “People of North America are quite strangers to any duty, but such as they raise themselves, and was such a scheme to take place without their knowledge it might prove a dangerous consequence to His Majesty’s interest.”—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 268. See also Mon. Com. Coun. (1890), p. 208.

17. “All Gentlemen Adventurers, inclinable to go the Cruise” on the privateering vessels “Lincoln” and “Triton,” are “desired to repair to the House of Mr. Benjamin Pain, at the Jamaica Arms.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 17, 1744. This tavern stood on Cruger’s wharf at the foot of So. William St. It was one of the resorts of privateers and a place of venue for “prizes” captured. See ibid., Aug. 6, 1744.

19. “The Albany Post sets out to-morrow, at 2 o’clock in the Afternoon; those who are minded to make Use of this Opportunity, are desired to send their letters to the Post Office by that time.” The Boston and Philadelphia Posts set out last Tuesday [Dec. 11] in order to perform their Stages but once a Fortnight.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 17, 1744. See March 19.

31. “For the Benefit of Mr. Rice: on Wednesday next will be performed, A Concert Of Vocal and Instrumental Musick, at the House of Robert Todd, To begin precisely at Five o’clock. Tickets, at 5s. each, to be had at Mr. Tudor’s in Broad-Street; and at both Coffee-Houses.—” N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1744. Commenting on this benefit, The Post-Boy of Jan. 7, 1745, said: “I was thought by all competent Judges, to exceed Any Thing of the Kind ever done here before.”

1745

— At about this time, Sieur Augustin de Langle and his son Charles migrated from Mackinaw, Canada, to Green Bay, and started the first permanent settlement in the present state of Wisconsin.—Wisconsin His. Coll., III: 197-201; Strong, Hist. of Wisconsin Territory, 43-44.

— A “Plan and Elevation of the Old City Hall (etc)” during the period 1745-7 was drawn in October, 1818, from memory, by David Grim, and is now preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. It is reproduced and described in Vol. 1, Pl. 32-b.

— In this year, George Ridout, silversmith, was appointed as a Freeman of New York. He kept his shop “near the Ferry Stairs.” Two candlesticks and an alms-basin, made by him, are described in Met. Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J., and the South (1914), 45-46.

Jan. — During the January term of the supreme court, a baker and bolter was convicted on three counts for selling unmerchantable bread, for short weight, and for “false Tare of his Casks.” He was fined £60. Others are to be prosecuted for similar offences.— N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745.

Sir Peter Warren is appointed to the provincial council.— Col. Coun., Jan. 21.

“Last Wednesday [Jan. 16] the Ship Lincoln, Capt. John Jaunsey [cf. Nov. 12, 1744], fell down to the Watering-Place [at Staten Island], and this day her Consort the Brig Triton, Capt. Francis Rosewell, falls down to join her, in order to sail on a Cruise against his Majesty’s Enemies. And as those two Vessels were built on Purpose for the Privateering Service, and fitted and equipped in a most extraordinary Manner; it is not doubted, but they will in very few days be as completely man’d. These make up the Number of Thirteen stout Vessels of War fitted out here.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1745.

A farm of 30 acres belonging to the late Mangel Roll, situated on the East River a little beyond Turtle Bay, and “opposite to the sign of the Union Flag,” is advertised for sale. It is described as “very conveniently situated, and has a commodious safe Landing Place and Harbour in a Cove, shelter’d from Ice and stormy Weather; it has two Houses upon it, and a good bearing Orchard, a Stream of Water running through it, and the River before it abounds in great Plenty of Fish, Lobsters and Crabs; the Rear thereof adjoins to the King’s Highway.” Persons desiring to buy are directed to Samuel Beekman, or Philip Minthorn, “living next to William Sackerly’s in the Bowery Lane.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1745. The Union Flag was a tavern on the road to Boston.—See Jan. 24, 1757. William Sackerly, or Shackerly, was a tavernkeeper. See also Sept. 2, 1744.

On Jan. 22, a negro named Cuffee belonging to James Alexander received sentence of death from the supreme court “for feloniously breaking open and stealing several goods from his mistress’s shop.” On Jan. 25, he was to have been executed but, the executioner grew suddenly ill the evening before the sentence was to be carried out, and the execution was rescheduled until Jan. 29.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745.

Arbitrators appointed to settle the differences between the four Privateers formerly arrived here with Six French Prisoners will meet “at the House of Robert Todd every Friday Evening ‘till the whole is settled.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745. This notice is to be found in the newspapers up to and including May 6, when it is to be assumed the “differences” were adjusted.

Madeira wine is advertised for sale “at the Sign of Admiral Vernon,” at 8s. a gallon or 7s. 6d. a gallon for 5 gallons or more.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1745. If a tavern existed with the “Sign of Admiral Vernon,” its location is unknown, and the innkeeper’s name has not been found. There was, however, a tavern with the sign of Admiral Warren, of which Andrew Ramsay was proprietor in 1749, and without doubt earlier. This tavern stood “near the Exchange” (Broad and Water Sts.). See Feb. 20, 1749.

The provincial council receives letters from Gov. Shirley Feb. regarding the intended expedition against Cape Breton, and asking for men, money, and artillery. The council records its answer, that guns can be sent, but the assembly has to meet before any answer in regard to money can be given.—Col. Coun. Min., 347.

On Feb. 12, a conference was held with the members of the assembly then in town.—Ibid.

“The Bowling-Green” near the fort is “to be new laid with Turf, and rendered fit for Bowling, this Summer. Whoever inclines to do that Service, may leave their Proposals with the Printer hereof.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 25, 1745. See also April 6, 1733.

Archibald Kennedy, receiver-general of the province (M. C. C., Mar. III: 488), adds to his will the following provision: “I by this codicil devise my two houses in Broadway, in the City of New York near the Fort which I have lately purchased of the widow of Peter Bayard (see Sept. 3, 1744), in one of which I now live and in the other the Custom House is kept ... to my dear wife,” etc.—Abstracts of Wills, v: 286. At this date and somewhat before, the custom-house was kept on either the north or south half of the lot later built upon by John Watts and known as No. 3 Broadway.—See July 14, 1731; Aug. 26, 1736. In the day of the receiver-general, there were two small houses upon this plot, and there is no means of knowing in which of these he lived and in which he kept the custom-house. — See Lover Deeds, XIV: 245 (Albany); also see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 974; and May 19, 1740; April 21, 1745; Sept. 3, 1744.

“Several very good Riding-Chairs and Kittereens, to be sold at reasonable, by Josiah Milliken, near the Old Slip Market.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 18, 1745. For definition of the “riding-chair,” see May 26, 1744. Regarding the “kittereens,” Houghton says: “I am obliged to confess complete ignorance as to the chapurier of the ‘kitteren’; it was certainly not an English vehicle, and the name suggests Dutch influence, if not origin.”—Coaches of Colonial N. Y., 19.

The vehicle is defined in Murray’s New English Dic. (Oxford,
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1745

Apr.

1901, which, however, does not give the origin of the word. The

3 and therefore 10 cause ("that we may with the better Grace, call in their Aid, should 15 be one horse

there be Occasion"), but also, particularly, to put "this Province

20 into the best Posture of Defence; and that this City may, with all 25 possible Dispatch, be at least as well fortified as at any Time hereto-

30 forth, by setting Stockades round it, and erecting Brick Houses, and 35

Batteries, at proper and convenient Distance and Rates of Money, 40

the War, and so warm a Reception, in case they should attack us, as may render their Efforts vain and ineffectual."—Assemb. Jour., II: 56.

45

50

The message was referred to the committee of the whole house, which, on the following day, arranged for the appointment of a joint committee and an ad hoc Committee of the Whole, to make proper

55

60

65

Estimates of such other Fortifications as they shall judge

70 necessary to be erected, and of such Matters and Things, to be made and done for the further Security of the Colony, as recommended by his Excellency's Message."—Ibid. See April 18.

75

80

85

On motion of Mr. Clarkson, the assembly requests the council

90 to appoint a committee to act with a committee of the assembly

95 in making estimates "of such other Fortifications as they shall judge

100 necessary to be erected," and to consult in regard to the same

105

"such other Persons as they shall judge proper."—Assemb. Jour.,

110

II: 57. See April 4. The recommendations of May 8 (p. v.)

115 were the work of this joint committee, acting with Messrs. Heyer

120 and Clement.—Ibid., II: 59. See April 20.

125

The common council orders "that in Case of any Emergency 130 that cannot at present beForeseen by Reason of the City being 135

Antedated by an Enemy or by Reason of any other Event or 140

Accident, That the Deputy Clerk of this Board Use his best 145

Endeavours to Secure the Records of this City by Removing them

150 to Such place Within this Province as he Shall Think most Safe

155 and proper."—M. C. C., V: 146. For further action, see Aug.

160

29, 1745.

165

James Parker, "Printer for this Government," proposes to 170 the common council that he be appointed library keeper to the corporation (see June 17, 1729). His application states that the city possesses "a Valuable Library which May be of very Great Use

175

180

And Service to the Inhabitants of the Province; but More

185

Especially to those of the City if a Library keeper was appointed

190

Under proper Regulations, the want of which at present Not only deprives

195

Many persons of the Use of the Said Books, But Subjects the Books

200 to be hurt Or Destroyed by the Dust and paper Worm." He 205 therefore offers, first, to prepare and print, before August first, a catalogue of all the books. Second, he proposes that he be given

210

"power to let out the Books to hire at Six pence a Week for Each Book to any person or persons Residing within this Government," under penalty for failure to return the book unjured by a stated time;

215

third, "That No person Shall hire a Book for Less than a Week, Or More for a Book person be Allowed to have More than three Books at one time," fourth,
"That all Members and Officers of the Common Council be Entituled to the Loan of any Book Gratis And be preferred before all other hirees;" fifth, that, as library keeper, he "will give his Attendance at the Library a fixed time once a Week for two hours, and will take my Books, and he will "keep a Book of his Proceedings And Profits Accrued by the Loan of the Books, which Book the Corporation May Inspect at their pleasure that he will Likewise keep all the Books in Repair at his Own Expense And if Any Book, Or Books Should happen to be lost he will Send for New of the Same Sort in the Room of them, That he Will Frist Pennil Bills And do every thing above proposed at his Own Expense without any Charge to the Corporation, he being Entituled to the money Arising by the hire or Loan of the Books to his Own Use." The proposals are agreed to by the board, and it is ordered that the key of the library be delivered to him.
M. C. C., V: 142-43. The catalogue was ready for distribution June 16, 1746 (p. v.). For an account of his activities in behalf of the library, see Keep's Hist. of the N. Y. Society Library, 72-76; also Aug. 19, 1745.

The "House of the Widow Baker" is designated as the meeting place of a commivial of a considerable French Armament at Martinique. He enumerates the war-ships and transports in the fleet; and believes that its intended direction toward British dominion in South America may be diverted by the report, which is spread in the West Indies, of the expedition at present under way against Louisbourg, he advises the assembly, not only to make sufficient provision for uniting with neighbouring provinces, in the common expresses gratitude for "the paternal Care and Becoming Zeal" Apr. 1664, for which "Our Cap'n General" has from time to time recommended to the assembly, particularly in his message of April 17 (p. v.), also to the council and house, and but "as Most of the Inhabitants are Apprehensive that Not Only they but the Colony in General are Exposed to Great and Imminent Dangers by Our present Defendence Condition," the petition asks that "Speedy and Effectual Measures" be taken.—M. G. C., V: 147. See, further, May 8.

Augustus Jay had built upon the site of the present Nos. 9 and 11 Broadway (see June 2, 1730); Archibald Kennedy was at No. 1, and William Smith at No. 7. The line of Broadway was a straight line on all the maps we have; but the line of the Beaver Path, the later Market St., now Battery Place, ran to the river on a line which formed an obstinate angle with that of Broadway, and the back streets of the Broadway area were built to the line of the Beaver Path. Under these circumstances, those who built houses facing on the west side of Broadway were permitted to build the fronts of their houses at right angles to the side walls, causing jogs or gores in each lot, as far north as No. 27 Broadway. This was what was often alluded to as the "saw-tooth" line of Broadway; it was not, however, the line of the thoroughfare that was toothed; the owners of the houses had built with slight encroachments on the street. This fact is indicated on the Map of Dutch Grants, C. Pl. 87, Vol. II. In very recent times, the corporation somewhat rectified the house-line.

May 8 (see April 18 and 20) to make estimates of, and to give advice regarding, proper fortifications to resist a possible naval attack by the French, makes its report. Col. Morris explains to the assembly that the committee has inspected "such Places as were conceived proper and consulted the Mayor and Aldermen, and some other Gentlemen of the City, and taken the Assistance of two Persons [Masters Heyer and Clement] who were said to have some Skill, both with Respect to its Defence towards the Water, as well as the Land." Being of the opinion that an attack upon the city by sea was more probable than by land, the committee believed "it most necessary to proceed, in the first Places, to any Naval Armament, by erecting Batteries." Two sets of plans, one prepared by Heyer and one by Clement, are presented to the house. In detail, the plans recommended are as follows:

1. "That a Battery of eight Guns, should be immediately erected. [Dominie's Book] [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 96] with a large Block House to cover the Men, and their Arms."

2. "That Plans should be made whereby to erect a Battery of seven Guns, on Capt. Rutger's Wharf, when there shall be Occasion."

3. "That Places should be made whereby to erect a Battery of eight Guns, on Burnett's Key, upon Occasion."

4. "That it is absolutely necessary, for the Safety and Defence of the City towards the Harbour, to have a Battery of twenty Guns, at the East End of this City [See April 7, 1745, for the governor's recommendation]."

5. "That Guns should be made for every Battery, several spare Carriages, and long Train-Carriages, for Twelve Field-Pieces, &c."

As to the Battery of twenty Guns, two Places have been proposed, one on a Wharf to be made out into the River adjoining to Lowery's; which Wharf, the Committee were of Opinion could not be made this Year. [See July 6, 1745, for appropriation of $300."

"The other Place proposed, is on Mr. Harmans Rutger's Hill; and, in Case it should be erected on this last, the Committees are of Opinion, it will be necessary to have two Block Houses to guard it, and to have a Battery of six Guns, to be erected upon Occasion, behind Peck's, according to a Plan to be made for that Purpose

"6. With Respect to the Estimate of the Expanse, the May Committees were of Opinion, that the erecting the twenty Gun Battery on a Wharf to be made adjoining to Lowrey's, besides the Delay, would make the Charge of the above Articles, amount to about Four Thousand, Five Hundred, and Fifty Pounds; and that if a Battery was to be erected on Rutgers' Hill, the Amount of the Expanse of the above Articles is estimated at, about Three Thousand Pounds."—Assem. Jour., II: 39; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 88a-89. See May 11.

The assembly approves the sites for batteries as recommended by the committee on May 8 (p. v.), and also votes the appropriations suggested.—Assem. Jour., II: 60; but see May 14 for Clinton's opinion of this action.

The governor rebukes the legislature for assuming too much power in recommending fortifications and assigning places for them at New York, which decision he claims rests with the governour. He then in anger dissolves the session.—Assem. Jour., II: 61-62. This action did not entirely interrupt the preparations for defence, for work on the battery at Cosepy Rock was in progress on May 16.—Cal. Coun. Min., 348. See May 21.

As navigation has been obstructed by Spanish and French privateers which infest the coast, the legislature allows a premium "to such Privateers as shall during the Present War take or destroy any Enemies Privateer between... Cape Hinlopen, Mrs. Easternmost part of Nassau Island, to the Northward of the Thirty Eighth degree of Latitude." For every man on board a privateer destroyed or captured within these limits the sum of £2 will be paid, if sufficient proof is presented.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 446-48.

Accounts of "building Fort George" are received by the provincial council, and Commissioners Rooame and Roosevelt (see May 19, 1744) are ordered to continue to serve.—Cal. Coun. Min., 348. The original manuscript record in the council minutes was almost completely destroyed by the fire in the State Library at Albany, only the following being now distinctly legible: "Mr. Rooame and Mr. Roosevelt two of the Commissioners attending without were called in and were directed to proceed upon Completing the Batteries and Fortifications preferable to anything Else."—Coun. Min. (Albany), XXI: 22. See May 29.

A letter received from the Duke of Newcastle, approving of Gov. Clinton, orders him to assist Commodore Warren with men, provisions, or shipping. One received from Warren, who is on board the "Superbe," at Chapeaurceau Bay, during the siege of Louisbourg, asks for assistance; as does also one from Gov. Shirley. The council orders that money be raised by subscription.—Cal. Coun. Min., 349-49.

Msns Clement, who has been employed to draw a plan for a battery at the east end of the city, presents it to the house, with the information that his work has the approval of the governor.—Assem. Jour., II: 67. See June 25.

To be Sold, A Handsome Coach and Harness about 7 Years old, not much the Wore for Five Horses. Enquire of the Printer hereof."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 3, 1745. Most of the governors, and some prominent citizens of New York had owned coaches, so their use at this time as not unusual. For other references in this period, see March 14, 1738, and Jan. 9 and May 3, 1744. By 1759, the use of carriages had become quite general, and New York's first coach-maker had established his business in the city.—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y., (1890).

The provincial council grants warrants to James Livingston, Steven van Cortlandts, Brandt Schuyler, and William Bayard to carry French prisoners to the French islands.—Cal. Coun. Min., 349. See Aug. 20, 1744.

Louisbourg and Cape Breton, the chief strongholds of the French in America, are taken by 4,000 Americans, led by William Pepperrell, a wealthy merchant of Maine, strongly reinforced by the British fleet under Warren.—McLennan, Louisbourg (1918), 164. See also J. Journal of the Late Siege by the Troops from North America, against the French at Cape Breton, the City of Louisbourg, and the Territories thereto belonging. Surrrendered to the English, on the 17th of June, 1745, after a Siege of Forty-eight Days. By James Gibson, Gentilmen Volunteer at the above Siege (London: Printed for J. Newbery, 1745) 100 leaves, contains a large folding map, engraved by B. Cole, showing the city of Louisbourg, with the harbours and garrisons on the island of Gaspe, or Cape Breton, and the fleet. The author was a Boston merchant, who, with the
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

4 New England colonists, joined the expedition under Peperrell. He superseded the removal of the prisoners to France, and disbursed over £50,000 sterling in that operation. His diary of the siege was republished in Boston in 1847, under the title of A Boston Merchant of 1745. Louisbourg was restored to France by the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, Oct. 7, 1748 (g. v.). See also July 6 and 8.

5 See entry to the Duke of Newcastle: "I beg leave to return your Grace my hearty thanks, for your answer, to a friend of mine, who took the Liberty to ask the Government of New Jersey for me, that it should become vacant, my wife being of new York, makes it convenient for me, and Mr. Clinton, with whom I have the pleasure to be well acquainted, has assured me he has no design to get that Government added to his, as it formerly was: I would by no means offer at anything that Interfer'd with his Interest, but if when he is better provided for, I could succeed to the Government of New York, I should esteem it the highest favour that could be confer'd on me."—From "British Transcripts" in the Library of Congress, the original being in the Public Record Office, London (Colonial Office, class 5, vol. 44, folio 29). See June 7, 1746.

6 The steak of the new Dutch church is set on fire, "close under the Ball," by lightning. It is one of a few cases by the Captains of a few men, who broke through the Cupola, at the Hazard of their Lives, and of having the Leeds melted about their Ears." The church elders presented them with £50, and other persons gave them presents "for their Activity and Bravery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 24, 1745. Exiles, Rec., 38, 92.

7 In the following year, at Caracas, and the provincial council at New York orders that all vessels from that port be quarantined.—Col. Coun. Min., 349.

25 Gov. Clinton recommends to the provincial legislature the strengthening of the fortifications. He says: "In order to put the Province into a proper Posture of Defence, it is necessary that such other fortifications be erected about this City with all possible Dispatch, as may be sufficient to enable us to repel any Force that may attack us on this Quarter: For this Purpose, a strong Battery of twenty Guns, at the East End of the Town [see May 8, for two localities suggested], in the Harbour, and some other Batteries in other parts of the City, should be forthwith erected; of which, I will direct plans to be laid before you. 'Tis worth considering, whether as Matters are now circumstanced, this City may not probably Share a considerable Part of the War."—Jour. Leg. Coun., I, 892. See July 8.

27 In a message to the assembly, Gov. Clinton says: "Upon enquiring of the Commissioners, concerning the Money already expended upon the House in the Fort [from appropriation of May 19, 1744], I find, that what remains in the Treasurer's Hands, appropriated for that Use may not be sufficient for the purpose; I must therefore recommend it to you, to make further Provision for that purpose, and likewise for building the Stables, and making new Fences round the Garden, and other Parts of the Fort."—Assem. Jour., II, 66. The sum of £5,200 was appropriated by the assembly July 6 (g. v.) for establishing the House. July 11. "To be Sold at Vendue, on Tuesday morning next [July 15], 1. The Plate, Household Furniture, and other Goods, belonging to the Honourable George Clarke, Esq; lately gone for England, at his House in the Broad-Way.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 1, 1745.

17 "To be Sold by William Bradford [Jr.], Pewterer, in Hanover Square in New York. Cannon, six and four Pounders, and Swivel Guns, Cannon Shot of all sizes, Iron Pots and Kettles of all sizes, Cart and Waggon Boxes, Backs for Chimneys, Fullers Plates, Pig and Bar Iron, &c., &c. Where may be had money for old Brass and Pewter.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 1, 1745. About five years later, we find that the last of these has added "Fire" to his stock.—Ibid., April 5, 1750. See also Aug. 13, 1744.

22 Anthony Lamb, mathematical instrument maker, "At the Sign of the Quadrant and Surveying Compass, near the Old Slip Market," advertises for sale "all sorts of Mathematical Instruments in Wood, Iron, &c., &c., a list of which he mentions by the title of his advertisement, including "Trible Rulers for ruling of blank Books," small compass "to fix on a Walking Stick, and lengthened to a suitable Height," "Practicors," "Trunk Telescopes, Walking Stick Spying Glasses, . . . Billiard or Truck Balls . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 1, 1745.

3 Gov. Clinton makes additional recommendations concerning fortifications (see June 25), among which is one for the storing of gunpowder in the magazine of the fort, which has been fitted up July and repaired during "the last Summer" (see July 24, 1744).—Assem. Jour., II, 69. The act for erecting and repairing fortifications was finally passed on July 6 (g. v.).

Nearly a year previously, July 27, 1744, Daniel Hornsmann specified the assembly that the laws would probably be completed the following spring. As nothing further has been heard from him, a committee is appointed to investigate.—Assem. Jour., II, 69-70. See Nov. 13 and 27, 1741. Hornsmann's work was finally finished by Livingston and Smith.—See Nov. 13, 1741. Nov. 24, 1740.

4 Henry Cruger recommends fortifying Nutten Island.—Assem. Jour., II, 70. In November a bill establishing a lottery to raise £3,175 to finance such a project passed in both the assembly and council.—Ibid., II, 82, 87. There is no mention in the record of the governor's assent to the bill. On Jan. 21, 1746, Mr. Cruger presented another bill to raise by lottery £5,375 for more effectually fortifying the city of New York.—Ibid., II, 92. This bill became a law on Feb. 27, 1746 (g. v.).

6 A provincial act is passed "for Erecting & Repairing Fortifi- cations within this Colony for defending the Charge of Several Services. The preamble of this act avers that "the monies which have been heretofore granted for Fortifying this Colony have Proved Insufficient fully to answer that Purpose." The treasurer is therefore empowered to pay the following sums for specified objects in the city of New York: To Capt. John Waldron, for making a close Room in the Red Store House on Copsy Battery & for Purchasing necessary Stores of War for the use of all the Batteries, £126,102.

To Samuel Brown, for "Cleaning the Guns on the Several Batteries," £10.

To Moses Clement, "for his Attendance on the Joint Committee of the Council & General Assembly and Drawing Plans of Batteries," £53; and to Christian Hoyes [Heyes] for similar services, £5.

To Adam Vanderburgh, "for Carting the Great Guns and Carriages Sent to Boston," £3,161; and to Jasper Bosch for freight on the same, £70.

To John Rosvelt, William Roome, and Samuel Lawrence, the commissioners of the fortifications in the city of New York, there is allowed the sum of £4,877,110, to be used toward completing the operations directed by the acts of May 19 and Sept. 21, 1744 (g. v.), for improving the fortifications and building a new governor's house. This part of the act directs the following payments by these commissioners:

For "Soddling Copsay Battery," £250.

For "Procuring & Laying Large Stones round the outside of the said Battery to Secure the Foundation thereof," £50. (See Sept. 25, 1750, for further estimate of repairs.)

For "Building a Store House between the Flat Rock Battery, and Fort George," 28 feet long and 20 feet wide, "to Secure and Preserve the Carriages and other Stores of War," £535.

For "making Axle Trees for the Carriages," £15.

For "finishing the House Lately Erected in the Fort for the Residence of the Governors of this Colony," £1,200.

For "Erecting . . . a Battery of Eight Guns upon Dominies Hook with a Large Block House to Shelter the Men," £300 (including £220 formerly allowed for this purpose).

For "Laying a Flat Form proper for Eight Guns on Capt Peter Rutgers Wharf upon Occasion," £50.

For "Laying a Flat Form proper for Six Guns upon the City Ground behind Mr. Benjamin Pecks House upon Occasion," £50.

For "Erecting . . . a Battery of Sixteen Guns upon Dominies Hook with a Large Block House to Shelter the Men," £300. (See developments under Feb. 5 and May 2, 1745.)

For "making a New Fence round the Fort Garden," £60.

For "Repairs the Spur before the Gate of Fort George," £3. The act also directs that, "for Immediate use on Extraordinary Emergencies," the store-keeper of the powder-house shall deliver ten barrels of gunpowder, to be deposited in the magazine of the fort, for the garrison "to try & Exercise the Great Guns upon the Several Batteries."—Col. Lyrte N. Y., III, 452-58.
Palisades were erected across the island, doubtless in accordance with the general provisions of this act, though not specifically mentioned or provided for by its terms. Of these, David Grim, writing in Nov., 1819, said: "I remember the building and erecting the Palisades and Block-houses, in the year 1745, for the security and protection of the inhabitants of this time much alarmed, and afraid that the French and Indians were going to invade this city, on which the General Assembly of this province voted a sum of money (£6,000) to build a line of Palisades and Block-houses, from the East river to the North river. These Palisades commenced at the house of Mr. Deshroues, No. 57, in Cherry street, (which was then the last house on the East river, to Kip's bay). From that place, it went in a direct line to Windmill lane, (late Catey M'Uzic) thence in the rear of the Poor-house, and to Dominie's book, at the North river. Those Palisades were made of cedar logs, about fourteen feet long and nine or ten inches in diameter, were placed in a trench, dug in the ground for that purpose, three feet deep, with loop-holes in the same, for musketry, and a breast-work four feet high and four feet in width. In this line of Palisades were three Block-houses, about thirty feet square and ten feet high, with six port holes, for cannon. Those Block-houses were made with logs, of eighteen inches diameter. They were placed thus: the one was in (now) Pearl street, nearly in front of Bunker street; the second in the rear of the Poor-house, and the other between Church and Chapel streets. There were four large gates, or outlets to the city, the one at the head of Pearl street, Chatham street, Bay and Green-wich street."—From statement on back of Grim's general plan of the city, the original of which is in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See also description of the Grim Plan, Pl. 22-1, P 270-71; the account of the Holland Plan, of Sept. 17, 1757 (p. 3) and Van Pelt, Flan, Pl. 34. For other references, see the "Palisades of 1746," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 395; also Man. Comm. Coun. (1865), 605.

A provincial law is passed appropriating £5,000 towards the expense undertaken by the government of Massachusetts Bay against Louisbourg (see April 17). The time is "Truly Sensible how much of the Success of that Expedition will be, for the Interest of the British Colony, and in America, being heartily willing to assist our Neighbours in so glorious an Undertaking, as far as the Circumstances of the Colony will admit."—Col. Laren N. Y., T. III: 390-391. This was a tardy contribution, for Louisbourg had capitulated on June 17 (p. 3). The news had not yet reached New York. See July 10. See also Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., 146, 410, 434, etc. (and contemporary maps and plans, 441-46). The English captured Louisbourg and the island of Cape Breton a second time on July 26, 1758 (p. 9). 8. A printer, it is said, who has been the Upper Ferry at the Narrows, on the Staten Island side, begins to run a regular ferry from there to New York. He advertises that a passage-boat will set out every Tuesday and Friday, returning the same day, if possible. He also keeps "very good Entertainment for Men and Horses." The boat may be found, on Tuesday and Friday, by inquiry at John Cregier, a "Corner-house at the Old Slip."—N. Y. Post-Bay, July 8, 1754. See also June 18, 1753. 9. Gov. Clinton having received an express, late on the night of July 9, from Gov. Shirley, "with the Most Agreeable News of the Surrender of Cape Breton to his Majesties Fleet And Forces" (on June 17, p. 9; see also July 6, the common council orders that Mr. De Joncourt be Directed to provide a Hansome Dinner for this Board and that His Excellency the Governor the Members of the Council and Members of Assembly of this City with the Field Officers be Invited to Dine with this Board," and a committee is appointed to "Order a Bonfire to be prepared without Spring Garden in the Evening and that they Order Twenty Gallons of Good Wine to the Bonfire."—M. G. C., V: 151. Peter de Joncourt's tavern stood at Pearl St. and Coenties Slip.—See Dec. 8, 1746. The dinner was given the same day,"—when all the loyal Healths were drank, with those connected and considerable Conquista of Louisbourg under British Colours for ever, while the Cannon of Conpey Battery and several Vessels in the Harbour were firing." In the evening "there was a magnificent Bonfire erected, at which the same Healths were repeated. At Night the whole City was splendidly illuminated, and the great crowd of People every Where joined in joy and Countenance upon hearing the good News. The Gentlemen at Dinner made a handsome Collection for the Person who brought the Express, which he voluntarily engaged to convey hither; And there being present at this Entertainment many of the Persons who, at the Instant of his Excellency our Governor, had engaged with him in a Subscription, immediately after the Dissolution of the late Assembly, for the Provision of Provisions to be forth-successfully every week Day, and yesterday being Sunday (three times) he had preached one sermon, but the meeting house and Windows was so full, that the People themselves were astonished to see so vast an audience.”—N. T. Eve. Post, Sept. 2, 1745.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1745

5
Gov. Clinton issues a proclamation prohibiting all traffic and correspondence between British subjects, or those who are in league with the French.—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 9, 1745.

9
Samuel Lewis, "having a very good Boat fit to carry either Passengers or Goods," advertises "To set out from New York for Perth Amboy, every Monday and Thursday; and from Perth Amboy for New York, every Wednesday and Saturday. . . . He says he found at the Eastham's in New York, or at his own House in Perth-Amboy."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 9, 1745. See also April 3, 1748; April 22, 1754.

17
The death of Stephen de Lancey occurs. He was a merchant, "a very noted young Gentleman, of a fair character; Brother to the Chief Justice of this Province, and Brother-in-law to the brave Commodore Warren."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 23, 1745.

18
Capt. Bevan, of the privateer sloop "Clinton" (see Aug. 23), gives "a very handsome Treat of a Hoghead of Punch and an Ox roasted whole, to his Sloop's Company, in the Fields, near Domino's House, in Consideration of their desiring, at his Desire, from plundering any of the Passengers, Officers, or Sailors on board the Prize Ship lately brought in by them."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 17, 1745.

26
Gov. Clinton embarks on a sloop for Albany, "in order to meet the Five Nations of Indians there, on the 4th of October, to renew and strengthen the ancient Treaty of Peace, subsisting between this Government and those Nations."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 17, 1745; Gen. Min., 349, 350.

On Sept. 25, the New York privateer sloop "William" (Capt. Nathaniel Richards arrived here; the privateer brig "Greyhound" (Capt. Richard Jefferies) arrives to-day (see Nov. 11 and 12, 1744). They were "late Consorts in the West-Indies, when they took the rich Spanish Ship so much talk'd of, in Company with two New England Privateers; which Ship with her Cargo was sold in Antigua." The prize money from this and other captures amounted to more than £50 a man.—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 30, 1745.

A "fine large Snow" is launched here, "design'd for a Privateer, and is to be fitted out immediately, to sail in Concert with Capt. Jefferies: She is called the Dragon, will mount 16 or 18 Carriage Guns, and be commanded by Capt. Thomas Seymour, late of the Clinton sloop; and is estim'd the completest Vessel of her Size for the Purpose of any fitted out of this Place."—Ibid. See Fugitive Vessels, Appendix.

Deputy Mayor Gerrardus Stuyvesant presides at the meeting of the common council on this day, when the election of city officials occurs, and on Oct. 14, when they are sworn in. As no mayor, sheriff, or recorder have been appointed by the governor, who, with Mayor Stephen Bayard and Recorder Dariel Horsman- den, is in Albany (see Sept. 26), the present incumbents are con- tinued in office for another year, as provided by the charter.—M. G. C., vi 152-58. Rarely in the English colonial period of the city's history has a deputy mayor had occasion to preside.

An advertisement informs the public "That William Grant, Stone-Cutter, and Samuel Hunterdon, Quarry, of Newark, lately arrived from England, carves and cuts all Manner of Stones in the neatest and most curious Fashions ever done in America, The said Grant is to be spoke with at Mr. Welsh's, Sexton to Trinity Church, in New-York.—N. Y. Post-Bay, Sept. 30, 1745.

Notice is published that Major Illick from Westchester to Nassau Island" (see April, 1739) will be let to the highest bidder on the first Tuesday in November, at the "Court House."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Oct. 7, 1745.

13
"Practitioners in Physick" in New York City publish a certified statute by five justices of the peace for this city and county, "That the Fever that this City was lately visited with, is very greatly abated; and that there are but few Persons at Present sick in this City; also that they do not know of anyone "that has the Distemper called the Small Pox."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Oct. 14, 1745.

Many books belonging to "the Library possessed by the Corporation of the City of New York" (see June 27, 1739) are missing. Those in folio have been advertised. The titles of the missing ones in quarto are now published; and there are several others in octavo and duodecimo. "Gentlemen and others" who have borrowed them or have them in their possession are "desired immediately to return them to the Printer hereof [Culver], who is authorized [see April 13] to receive the same, where they will be thankfully received, and no Questions ask'd."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Oct. 14, 1745. See also Aug. 19.

The privateer brig "Dolphin" (Capt. Richard Langdon), of New York, arrives with a French prize sloop of about 180 tons and to carry cargoes, having on board more than 200 hogsheads of wheaten sugar. She was taken near Porto Rico on Sept. 26, having run ashore on being chased, when all but one of her men took to a small boat and escaped. "A Fortnight before that, Capt. Langdon took a Sloop from Coracoa bound to Martinozen laden with Cordage and Beef, and 'tis said some species, which Sloop is sent into Rhode Island."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Oct. 21, 1745. See Dec. 30.

The privateer sloop "Clinton" (see Aug. 23) sails from the Hook on a cruise.—N. Y. Post-Bay, Oct. 28, 1745.

The privateer sloop "Polly" (Capt. Helmer; of Nov. 8, 1744), "being already armed, and fitted out, is designed to sail in a few days on a cruise."—Ibid. See, further, April 27, 1746.

The provincial council receives an order from the lords justices to give Peter Warren and Joseph Murray precedence over John Moore in the council.—Cal. Coun. Min., 350.

A committee of the common council is appointed to examine the city charter, with the assistance of the chief-justice, the recorder, Mr. Alexander, and Mr. Murray, with a view of suggesting amendments advantageous to the city.—M. G. C., vi 161.

By order of the common council, no one shall presume to deprive the farmers near the Fresh Water Pond of the pits they have dug there, or shall dig in the future.—M. G. C., vi 161. The tanners had been compelled to move from lands south of this locality in May (see May 3) and are thus made secure in their new location. Here their industry continued for many years. See April 16, 1751.

"Lately imported from London, and to be sold very cheap for ready money, by Thomas Duncan, at his House in Wall Street, near the Meal Market, the following goods, viz . . ."—A great variety, reminding one of a modern department store, were listed in this advertisement, the names of some of which are unknown to modern trade. The following are selected: "Broad Cloths, German Serge, Bear Skin, Duffils, Shallons, Worsted camblets, . . ." Flowered damasks, . . . Mix druggets, . . . Plain and striped callumanoes, . . . Yard-wide durance, Prunel- loes, . . . Superfine barragon, Worsted & hair shaps, Starrets, Flannels, Turketties, Evergreenings, Taupinets, Man- manusys, Striped gingham, Phantes, Chiloes, Black taffeties, . . . Striped sattens, Black velvets, Black lastering, Black bomba- zine, Mourning crapes, Silk poplin, Single and double allapines, Cloak cord, . . . cherrider, Indiana, Black mantua silk, Barcelo- na & checked silk handkerchiefs, China, and sundry India ditto, Black gauce and Scotch ditto, . . ." Then follow a mis- cellaneous assortment of articles, including pins and needles, cut- lery, hats, gloves, Scotch snuff, pewter dishes, pictures and maps, tea, looking-glasses, writing-paper, cotton and silk goods, clove, cinnamon, nutmegs, and raisins, "Tandens, Guick hollands, . . . dowlas, Tandum filetas, Flemish and Cambricks of all sorts, Mushins, Lawns, Kentiogias, Britannias, Onabrigs, Blue & white calloce handkerchiefs, Cotton comalls, Long lawns, Ferrits, Colour'd thread, & Spectacles."—N. Y. Post-Bay, Nov. 18, 1745.

News of the destruction of "Saragiptoga" is received by the provincial council.—Col. Coun. Min., 270. See Dec. 2, and 4.

A provincial statute is passed enabling the inhabitants of New York City to elect annually two vestrymen in each of the seven wards. There will thus be 14 vestrymen instead of ten as in the past (see Sept. 23, 1693). This increase is made because the "City of New York is greatly increased as well in Extent as Number of Inhabitants." As before, they are to lay taxes in conjunction with the justices of the peace.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 506-7.

A provincial act is passed for supplying £1,511,112 "for the service of this Colony." Among the expenses directed to be paid is an item of £50 to Capt. John Walbon "for his care & Service as keeper of the Colony Stores of War in the City of New York" for one
"FREEDOM OF THE CITY," AND GOLD BOX TO CONTAIN SEAL, PRESENTED TO ANDREW HAMILTON, DATED SEPT. 29, 1735. SEE P. 542.
The growth of the city during the period of 1717-46 is, to some extent, illustrated by the issue of the Burgis View (known as the Bakewell View), dated March 25, 1746. The churches built since the publication of the first issue are shown, as well as a few other important changes. It is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 33.

"I have seen wheat growing in 1746 where St. Paul's Church now stands."—From notes by Rev. John H. Abeel, D. D., entitled "Rest of Abbe's Book," in the Stiler Manuscripts of the New Hist. Soc. According to reminiscences written in 1828, there were small houses of wood about the year 1745 where now St. Paul's Church stands.—Watson, Annals (1846), 176. Both statements may be approximately correct.—See Pl. 32-a (of 1744-4), and Pl. 34 (of 1746), Vol. I.

In this year, Myer Myers, silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York. In 1755, his shop was "opposite the Meal Market." He was president of the New York Silver Smiths' Society in 1776, and continued active until 1790. For a description of some of his work, see Met. Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J., and the South (1911), 38-39.

A committee of the common council is ordered to request the representatives of the city in the assembly to notify the corporation of any motion abridging the charter, by-laws, or any of the rights and privileges of the city, that the corporation thus may have the opportunity of being heard.—M. C. C., V. 165. On Jan. 30, the "Trustees of the Town of Brookland" presented a petition to the assembly, setting forth that a great many inhabitants of that township "living near the Ferry from Nassau-Island, to New York," who had "their chief Dependence of supporting their Families, by trading to the New-York Markets," had been debarred by the Ferry Act of Oct. 14, 1772 (p. 95), "from transporting their Goods in their own Vessels, to the said Markets," and thereby exposed to hardships and expense.—Assemb. Jour., II: 93. On Feb. 1, the mayor submitted a copy of the petition to the common council. Daniel Horsman, Joseph Murray, and Joseph Mott were retained by the corporation to oppose the granting of the desired relief.—M. C. C., V: 166. The petitioners were given leave by the assembly to bring in a bill to relieve them of the hardships complained of, and this bill barely missed becoming a law.—Assemb. Jour., II: 103, 107, 117, 118-19. Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 936, 954-55. It would have destroyed New York City's ferry monopoly.—See Dec. 1, 1772; Dec. 30, 1743.

The field officers of the city, on an order from the governor, 18 are empowered by the assembly, in case of alarm or invasion, to demand of every inhabitant of this city his arms, and to deliver up to the Ordnance department the arms thereby given in the possession of the said officers. The demand of such arms shall be fixed quarterly. If a slave is killed or rendered incapable of service as a result of such an invasion, the owner shall be paid £50.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

The assembly is informed by message from the council that the latter desires a conference with the former "at Hollet's House, in the Bowery-Lane" the next day, on the subject of a pending bill for emitting bills of credit to the value of £10,000. The assembly decides that, as this is a money bill, there should be no conference with the council on the subject.—Assemb. Jour., II: 916-17.

Feb. 21

An act is passed to raise £1,735 by lottery for fortifying New York City. Several persons are named as managers to sell tickets and oversee the drawing of lots. The tickets, 15,000 in number, are to be sold at £100 each. The drawing of the tickets is to commence on or before the first of June.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 528-30. On May 3 an amendment to that act was passed which provided that if the lottery should not be drawn in time, the treasurer could advance £1,000, either from the treasury or from loans, in order not to obstruct work on the fortifications.—Ibid., III: 543-45. This was the first time that the province had undertaken to raise money for public purposes by means of government lotteries.—Mc Gown. Coun. (1854), 598; Ross, "Hist. of Lotteries in N. Y." in Mag. of Hist., V: 145.

"It might seem to one who looked over the advertisements of lotteries in the New York papers that New York was the market for all the lotteries which were organized in the colonies. And yet a glance at the Boston or Philadelphia papers would give the impression that either of those cities were bearing the chief burden of the lotteries. The fact is all the prominent lotteries advertised and sold their tickets in the leading towns of all the colonies."—Ross, op. cit., 132.

"The essential and grievous evil of the lottery business was the insuring of tickets. The disastrous effects which developed from the practice of insuring tickets was responsible more than anything else for the storm of public disapproval which resulted in the sweeping away of lotteries simultaneously in about all the states. And yet little or no mention of the subject has been made by those who have written upon the subject of lotteries in America. Of course, contemporaneous discussions of the subject teem with criticisms of the practice."—Ibid., 322.
persons have of late made it a practice to lay Boards, Masts, &c. Feb. 27 other timber within the inclosure of the fortification on Copsises Battery, and to square and work the same there to the great Incumbrance and Annoyance thereof, as well as hazard & danger, which is not only a great loss to the Towne itself, &c. Therefrom to the Projects thereto erected, from Accidents by Fire, it is enacted that, if, hereafter, anyone shall lay them there, "out of the Basin thereof," or "work & manufacture the same there," such person or persons shall forfeit the sum of 40s for each offence, to be recovered before the mayor, recorder and assessors of the aldermen of the city, on the oath of one or more credible witnesses, one-half to be paid to the person or persons who shall prosecute and sue for it, and the other half to the poor. If the boards, shavings,

The assembly to adjourn the assembly to Brooklyn.—Ibid., II: 919. For a schedule of the year's meetings actually held out of town by both council and assembly, see Jan. 31; see also the Chronology under the dates there shown.

A fine pew survey, of this date, is "Performed by Order of Messrs Francis Covenshoven & Abraham Lynseyn, and "Projected by a Scale of one Chain to an Inch by Brandt Schuyler," showing buildings in perspective, and Abraham Lynseyn's land, adjoining the lands of Admiral Peter Warren, in Greenwich, in the Out Ward of the city. This land is "bounded on the North and on the East by the lands belonging to Admiral Warrens, on the South by lands belonging to Mordcau David Gomes, and on the West by Hudson's River, at high Water Mark" (dimensions are given). It is attested as a true copy by Samuel Giles. The survey is filed with the Bayard papers (1747-1748) to N. Y. Hist. Soc.

On account of the small-pox which has made its appearance at Greenwich, and because it prevails also in the country around Jamaica, L. I. (which has been proposed for the meeting-place of the Assembly), these regulations, and other public ordinances of the city. The petitions are also permitted, "at their own Expense to Make a Slip at the West End of Pearl Street to Extend to Low Water Mark and no further."—M. G. C., V: 167. This was the Whitehall Slip Market, which stood on the present plan of the city, at Whitehall and Pearl Sts.

The locality had long been a market-place. In 1636 (p. v.), "The Market Place at the Strand" was established near it. The Custom House Bridge Market, and (a short distance above) the Broad Street Market, had already ceased to exist when these petitions were made; and their application—"Wesleyan Slip, De Voe (writing in 1662) adds: "At this period Pearl Street at the west end commenced on the shore, near where now runs State Street, and ran easterly, or at the east end of Pearl Street ended in Whitehall Street; from this the continuation was called Dock Street."—Ibid. The market-house is seen in the Bakewell View (Pl. 32, Vol. I). In 1709, an advertisement refers to it by name thus: "At Mr. John Whitley's, the corner house almost opposite the White Hall Slip Market."—N. Y. Gen., Aug. 24, 1749. It had by previously been referred to as the "Market-house at the end of Pearl Street."—De Voe, op. cit., citing "The Laws of 1748." This market stood only about four years; in April 1703.

Inhabitants of Montgomery Ward petition the common council for "Leave to build a Market House in Rodman's Slip at their Own Expense," and they are given leave to do so, "in such place and of such Dimensions" as shall be directed by a committee of aldermen, appointed to lay out the market; and to make all necessary regulations as the other public markets.—M. G. C., V: 168. This slip had been called Van Cliffey's Slip, Lyman's Slip, Rodman's Slip, and Burling's Slip before this date; later it was again called Lyman's Slip. See Aug. 9, 1621; 1730; May 5, 1736; March 2, 1744; 1753; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 985. De Voe calls the market Burling's Market (Market Book, 378), it being so named ("Burlin's Market") on the Maerschalk Map of 1755 (Pl. 34, Vol. I). The market stood about fourteen years, and is last noted of record as reference "Z" on the 1763 map by F. Maerschalk.

The council and assembly meet at the residence of Gov. Clinton in Greenwich.—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 918. The governor addresses the house: "My present Indispisition prevents my speaking to you in publick! I most earnestly recommend to you to make ample Provision, and that with the utmost Dispatch for all those services which I recommended to you the last Session and hintered to remain unprovided for."—Ibid., II: 918. On the following day, the governor communicated to the council a message from the assembly desiring adjournment until the second Tuesday in April, "as the small pox is at Greenwich where they now sit."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 918. On March 17, he placed before the council two messages of the 14th from the assembly, one descriptive of Prints from On the Buildings, where they were then sitting, to Brooklyn, and the other desiring adjournment to New York. As the small-pox was "very rife" in New York, the council advises the governor to

The assembly receives the following communication from the governor: "I find by two Messages from the House, of the 14th inst. that you are desirous of an Adjournment from Westchester, on Account of the frequent Occasions that arise, of sending Messages that Distance, to the other Branches of the Legislature, whereby the Dispatch of Business will be greatly retarded." As small-pox prevails in the city, the governor, with the advice of the council, orders the house to adjourn from Westchester to 'Brookland on Nassau Island.' The assembly convened there on March 20 (p. v.).—Assemb. Jour., II: 101; Cal. Gov. Min., 352. See also Jan. 31.

A piece of land, of 132 acres, "adjoining to Kipsborough, and fronting the King's Highway, having a very convenient Landing on the East River, being about two Miles out of Town," is offered for sale. Another piece of land, of 46 acres, about a mile out of town, "being one Half of a Lot of Land commonly called 'Leamons by the Land'" (see Pl. 175, Vol. III), is offered for sale, "to be laid out into Lots of five or six Acres, as the Purchasers shall agree, some of it being very fit for Tanners, Curriers & Gardeneres;
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1746 also a salt meadow of 16 acres adjoining Leendert's Land. "An 17 Widow Brevoort's."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 17, 1746. It should 17 be noted (see Pl. 175, Vol. III) that the marshy ground or salt 17 meadow along the East River between 13th and Houston Sts.
17 was apparently unpated land.

20 The representative meets "in the Assembly Chamber, 20 at the House of the Widow Sickle," in the "Town of 20 Brookland," having been adjourned at Westchester on March 17 20 (p. v.)—Assemb. Jour., II: 101. The meetings of the lower branch 20 of the legislature continued in London until Oct. 15.—Ibid., 20: 123. For the various movements of the council this year, see 20 Jan., 111.

Gov. Clinton, in a message to the assembly, says that he has 25 received letters from Admiral Warren and General Pepperell 25 declaring it absolutely necessary to raise levies of men to be sent in 25 the spring to Louisbourg. He urges the assembly to do all in its 25 power to raise a quota from New York Province.—Assemb. Jour., 25: 102.

The time expires on this day within which streets were to be 30 made and wharfs built as provided in the grants of water lots in 30 1746 and 1747.—See April 15, May 5, 1746; March 17, 1747.
30 The "House" (of watermen) was more accurately the completion of 30 the exterior streets on the East River, in the localities there described.

Capt. John Jauncy, "late Commander of the Privateer Ship
35 Lincoln of this Port," which has been lost, arrives "with a French 35 Tartan Prize," taken by Capt. Rosewell, of the Privateer Brig
35 Tingley, on the 23rd last, off the North Side of Hispaniola." The prize is the "Annunciation 35 (Mons. Rapillonet, commander), of 140 tons, which had only 23
35 men on board, passengers included, and two guns; her cargo con-35 sisted of wine, oil, olives, almonds, etc., "and would have been 35 acquired a pretty valuable Prize, had it not been for a busy 35 Rhode Island Privateer called the Hector, Capt. Higgins, who 35 appeared in Sight just as she struck to Capt. Rosewell, and by that 35 Means claims a Part of her."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746.
35 The "Lincoln" was lost on the Spanish coast on Dec. 11, 1745, while 35 the crew were "putting the Vessel on the Careen."—Ibid., March 17, 35 1746.

All of his Majesty's Forces that arrived here lately from 40 Gibraltar [see Feb. 3] bound for Cape Breton, march'd out" of the 40 fort and embarked on the "Ruby" to await the arrival of the other 40 troohips from Virginia, which were daily expected off Sandy 40 Hook with their two men-of-war convoys.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 40 31, 1746. See March 31.

Two pieces of land on Manhattan Island, advertised for sale, 45 are described thus: "One Lot of Land adjoining Kipsborough 45 and Thompson's Highway having lying on the East River, being about two Miles out of Town, very 45 commodious for a Gentleman's Country-Seat or Farmer, containing 45 One Hundred and Thirty-one Acres, to which belongs a Swamp
45 stored with Wood, which if cleared may be made good Meadow-45 Land . . . Also one other Lot of Land lying about a Mile out of 45 Town, containing near Forty-six Acres of good Land, some part 45 cleared and the rest well stock'd with timber and Fire-wood, being 45 one-Half of a Lot of Land commonly called Leendert's Land."— 45 N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746. "Kipsborough" or Kipshury, was 45 mentioned as early as 1678, and was the Kips Bay Farm.—Riker, 45 Hist. of Harlem, 394. Neither of the parcels advertised is part of the 45 Kip's Bay tract. The farm mentioned as including 131 acres was 45 later the John Watta estate, or "Rose Hill."—See Pl. 41, Vol. I;
45 and Pl. 176, Vol. III. The other parcel was part of Leendert's 45 farm.—See Pl. 175, Vol. III. It was probably later part of James 45 de Lancy's.

The inhabitants of the city being again called upon to mount 50 guard in the Fort, a "Centinel Citizen" proposes, in a letter to the 50 printer (Parker), that a collection be taken up immediately to 50 clean out the filth and rubbish left behind in the fort by the soldiers 50 who surrounded for Cape Breton.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 31, 1746.
50 See Feb. 3.

April. The privateer "Pollux" brings in a French prize ship, whose 55 cargo consists of "Wine, Oil, Soap, Candles, Beer-wax, Clothes, 55 and sundry other Goods."— N. Y. Post-Boy, April 7, 1746.

The prize ship "Prince Charles" (Capt. Tingley) — see 60 Nov. 12 and Dec. 3, 1745; Dec. 30, 1745—arrives with a prize, Apr.
60 "the largest and deepest laden Vessel of any brought into this 60 Port since the War," a French ship called the "Rising Sun." This 60 prize was captured Feb. 26, "out of 36 Sail and 3 Men of War, 60 which he [Capt. Tingley] had dogged for two Days before from 60 Porto rico." She had "22 fine New Guns, all 6 pounders," and nearly 60 new men, and was "bound for Marsasses, with 1117 Bush, of Sugar, 60 458 Casks of Coffee, and other Goods on board." She "would 60 hardly have been taken so easily, but for a Stratagem Capt. Tingley 60 made use of in arming a Number of his Men like Marines, with 60 Grenadiers Caps on, by which he was taken for a Man of War.
60 For there was no board the Prize was bound from."—See Board of 60 the Admiralty, who are brought in here; but the most of the Men 60 were set on Shore at Mondi. We hear the small plunder amounts to above 1000 l.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 14, 1746. See May 18, 1747.

It is resolved by the common council that the "Poor House" 65 be enlarged, and a committee is appointed to prepare a plan of 65 alterations. The plan was reported at the next meeting (May 9), 65 and the committee required "forthwith Purchase Materials and 65 Agree With Workmen for Building and Compleating the said
65 House."—M. C., 4, 187. See May 31, Dec. 9, the committee 65 reported that the work was finished.—Ibid., V: 187. See Nov.
65 15, 1748, for the building of the first poorhouse.

The provincial council receives a letter from Admiral Warren 70 asking for support, as French militia and Indians are arming to 70 attack Louisbourg.—Col. Coun. Min., 35. The council also takes cognizance of a royal order to "the 70 master general of ordnance" for sending an engineer to New York.
70—Ibid.

In a message to the assembly, Gov. Clinton says: "Pursuant 75 to a memorial presented by my Direction, to the King, in Council, 75 representing the Necessity of having a skillful Engineer employed
75 in this Province, his Majesty has been graciously pleased to con-75 desend to my Requests; and, by order in Council, of the 16th of 75 January last, has directed an able Engineer to be employed in 75 repairing our Fortifications, erecting Batteries, and building Forts, 75 upon our Frontiers, under the Direction of the Governor for the

The little privateer sloop "Pollux" (Capt. Helm) — see Oct.
80 22, 1745—arrives here from Rhode Island, "having taken and 80 sent into Newport, a Spanish Sloop laden with Cocoa, but said to 80 belong partly to Coralio; Capt. Helm saith at Rhode Island 80 in order to have her tried there . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 28, 80 1746.

We have now five of our Privateers in Port; but the Brig
85 Hester, Capt. Samuel Bayard, is again completely fitted, armed, 85 manned, and very convenient, and offers the most advantage of 85 other cruisers."—Ibid. See Nov. 15, 1746.

An act is passed to raise £13,000, by a tax on real and personal 90 estate, to fortify and defend the province more effectually (see 90 Sept. 21, 1744). Of this sum £1,300 is "to be applied for Repairing 90 the Fort at New York." Bills of credit are to be issued for the 90 money raised by this act.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 171. 548-63. The 90 governor, on advice of council, signs the act contrary to his 90 instructions.—Col. Coun. Min., 353.

The act of July 6, 1745 (p. v.), allowed £800 toward erecting 95 a battery of 16 guns on "De Brosses & Lawrys Wharfs," according to 95 a plan signed by the governor and the speaker of the assembly;
95 but doubts have arisen whether the plan can be executed on those 95 wharfs. A statute is now passed requiring that, if it cannot be so 95 erected, the council and assembly, by their major vote, approved
95 by the governor or commander-in-chief, are empowered to cause
95 such a battery to be erected, of as many guns as they think suitable 95 to answer the purposes intended, and as "best suited to the ground 95 on the Wharfs aforesaid & Lots of Ground lying between them," at 95 an expense of not over £800. They are also empowered to direct 95 payment, from the treasury of the province, to the respective 95 owners (their heirs, executors, or assigns) for their loss or damage 95 sustained by erecting the battery.—Col. Laws N. Y., II: 545-46.

A provincial law is enacted giving all attorneys of the supreme 100 court the privilege to practise in the mayor's court.—Col. Laws 100 N. Y., IV: 546-48. This nullifies the section of the Montgomery 100 Charter dealing with the regulations of the mayor's court.—See 100 case of Hill, supra, page 170.

The provincial council receives a letter from Gov. Shirley 1746. The provincial council meets at the house of James de Lancey.

The provincial council, meeting in the city hall, settles the question of quota of militia to be sent to Albany and Schenectady from Ulster, Orange, Dutchess, Westchester, Queens, and Suffolk Counties.

1746. "Terrorington" (Capt. Harry) arrives at Sandy Hook, 15 days from Cape Breton, "where having seen the Troops from Virginia safe landed [see Jan. 31; Feb. 31 March 29], is returned here to convoy the Ship with the Remainder of those Troops from this Port, which they own not then lose time to call for."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1746.

1746. Gerardus Duyckinck, Living near the Old Slip Market in New York, continues to carry on the business of his late Father deceased, viz. Lining, Painting, Varnishing, Japanning, Gilding, Glazing, and Silvering of Looking Glasses, all done in the best Manner.

"He also will teach young Gentlemen the Art of Drawing, with Painting on Glass; and sells all sorts of Window-Glass, white Lead, Oil and Painter's Colours."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1746. See also M. C. C., VIII: 259.

A committee of the provincial council reports on a letter, received on April 11 (Cal. Coun. Min., 352) from the lords of trade, relating to the Moravians.—Ibid., 354.

On complaint of Rev. Mr. Knoll, John Lodwick Hoggood is forbidden to officiate as minister of the Lutheran Church.—Cal. Coun. Min., 352. See Kretzmann, The Oldest Lutheran Church in Am. (1914), 33.

1746. A proclamation is issued prohibiting the sailing of vessels from New York for a month.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 577. June 2 is the date given in Cal. Coun. Min., 354. For the text of this proclamation, see N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746. On June 3, the council gave directions to fire on any vessel which might try to leave port contrary to orders.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354. Apparently this was thought to be a necessary war measure. For the decisive suspension of the embargo, see June 17.

Goldsbrow Banyar is appointed deputy secretary of the province by John Catherwood, who has been acting secretary during the absence of Secretary Geo. Clarke, Jr. (see June 24, 1739), and he is sworn in at this meeting of the provincial council at Greenwich.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354. See July 3.

It is ordered by the council that a proclamation be issued calling for volunteers for the defence of Louisbourg. The draught of this proclamation was read and approved on June 7; and ordered to be printed.—Ibid.

Clinton, in his capacity of "General and Governor-in-Chief of the Province of New York, and the Territories thereon depending, in the Island of the same, and Vice-Admiral of the Red Squadron of His Majesty's Fleet," issues a proclamation prohibiting the sailing of any vessel from this port for the next month.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746; Cal. Coun. Min., 354.

The provincial council, meeting in the city hall, orders that French prisoners be sent to Jamaica, L. I.; also that vessels trying to leave port contrary to orders shall be fired upon.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354.

The population of the city (and county) of New York is 11,718; and of the province, 61,589, exclusive of Albany County, which could not be enumerated "on account of the enemy."—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4th ed.), 1147. According to the Rancher MSS. (in N. Y. Pub. Library), the population of the city was 12,017; and of the province, 74,853.

The common council permits the inhabitants of the West Ward "to Make an Addition of Twenty One feet at the South End of the Market in the Broad Way at their Own Charge."—M. C. C., V: 172. See April 13, 1738.

The provincial council, meeting in Brooklyn, issues orders to the sheriffs of Kings and Queens Counties in regard to French prisoners.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354.

The provincial council, meeting in New York, orders issues to the sheriffs of Kings and Queens Counties in regard to French prisoners.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354.

1747. James Parker, the snow "Dragon" (Capt. Seymour) and the brig "Greyhound" (Capt. Jeffries)—see Sept. 26, 1745—return with a capture, the ship "Grand Diable," a Spanish privateer, which they "made Conform of." The following recital is typical of the sea-fights of the period: "On the second Day of May last, as Capt. Parker was in the Bay of Mexico, they fell in with a large Spanish Ship of 36 Guns, and upwards of 300 Men, with whom they all engaged for the greatest part of two Days; but were at last obliged to leave her, after expending most of their Ammunition. They did all that was possible for Men to do with a superior Force, and left her a perfect Wreck, but at the same time were not in a better Condition themselves, having almost all their Masts so much wounded, that they every Moment apprehended them going overboard, and after fighting them were obliged to make the best of their Way home. The Dragon lost not a Man in the Engagement, but had several wounded, and Capt. Jeffries himself unhappily received a small wound near the right Eye. Of the Enemy they saw many fall, and their Colours were 3 times shot away, but always hauled again immediately."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1746. Concerning later exploits of the "Dragon," see March 30, 1747.

Sir Peter Warren writes from Louisbourg to the Duke of Newcastle: "Since my letter to y^e Grace dated the 6th inst, I have recei an account of the Death of Governor Morris of the new Jerseys; as my little fortune Lyes in the Colony of New York: where I married I shall Esteem it as the highest favour if your grace will be pleased to Appoint me to y^e Government, with a prospect of succeeding Mr Clinton when it shall be agreeable to him to leave New York. I flatter myself I can do his Majesty as much Service in that Situation as any and yt it will be a meant of re-establishing my health. . . ."—From "British Transcripts" in the Lib. of Congress, the original being in the Public Record Office, London (Colonial Office, class 5, Vol. 44, folio 27).

The council orders that the governor's speech and the addresses of the council and assembly be printed separately; also in the N. Y. Post-Boy.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354.

The council orders that bounty be given to volunteers.—Cal. Coun. Min., 355.

Goldsbrow Banyar puts forth a proclamation forbidding carpenters in the city to perform any work other than on the bateaux which are being built for the war against Canada.—Cal. Coun. Min., 355. More drastic action was later taken in this matter.—See July 2; see also ship-building measures in Queen Anne's War, June 27, 1711; and in the French and Indian War, May 3, 1755.

It is ordered by the governor's council that the governor's speech and the addresses of the council and assembly be printed separately; also in the N. Y. Post-Boy.—Cal. Coun. Min., 354.
The assembly appoints a committee to receive and entertain July 15
Brig. Gen. Gooch on his arrival in New York, and congratulate him upon his diligence in the enterprise against the French in Canada. After adopting an address of allegiance and congratulation, to be sent to the king, the assembly returns to meet in Brooklyn on July 29. Meetings were held in Brooklyn through Oct. 8 (see Jan. 31, 1746).—Assemb. Journ., II: 112–21.

A Spanish flag of truce arrives at the fort with letters for Gov. Clinton. On July 21, these were translated and sent to him.—Cal. Com. Min., 356–57.

Whereas some malicious and evil-minded Persons, have lately been guilty of doing very considerable Damage, both to the Walls and Tombs of the Jewish Burying-place, near this City: This is therefore to give Notice, that if any Person or Persons, shall discover the Offender or Offenders, so that he or they may be brought to Justice, they shall receive a Reward of Five Pounds, paid by Jacob Franks.—N. T. Post-Boy, July 21, 1746. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927.

The provincial council issues a warrant to Henry Holland to impress carpenters, etc., for building bateaux.—Cal. Com. Min., 366.

Oliver de Laney gives notice that he will be ready to sail for Louisbourg with provisions in three weeks.—Cal. Com. Min., 357. See Aug. 20.

The provincial council issues orders to the colonies of militia in Westchester, Queens, Suffolk, Kings, and the lower part of Orange, counties, in case of alarm; and a letter is written to John Hamilton, president of New Jersey, asking him to establish a beacon on the Highlands of Navesink and to send the Bergen and Essex militia to New York in case of alarm. Hamilton’s answer was received July 30, and on Aug. 28 the council ordered that a letter of thanks be sent to him.—Ibid. 357–38.

John Peter Zenger dies.—N. Y. Eve. Post, Aug. 4, 1746. Presumably, the first issue of The New-York Weekly Journal after this date was the one which first bore the imprint of his widow, Catherine (sometimes spelled Catharine) Zenger, although the earliest issue containing it which has been seen is that of Sept. 1.—Brigham, Bibliog. of Am. Newspapers, in Am. Antiq. Soc. Proc. (1917), 574.

"Upwards of Two Hundred Men of the new-raised Troops" from New York "embark’d last Week in several Vessels for Albany." Quotas are sent from other colonies, and the men "begin to be impatient to hear the News of the Arrival of the Fleet and Forces from England, that they may take the Field before the cold Season comes on."—N. T. Post-Boy, July 28, 1746.

The provincial council of New York receives Gov. Shirley’s commission appointing certain representatives of Massachusetts for a conference or congress to be held on an Indian treaty.—Cal. Com. Min., 360. See Aug. 18. At the meetings of the provincial council, during the latter part of July and the beginning of August, Archibald Kennedy alternated as presiding officer with Chief-Justice De Laney.—Cal. Com. Min., 357.

This day is proclaimed by Gov. Clinton a day of thanksgiving "to Almighty God for the Success of his Majesty’s Arms against the Rebels in Scotland, &c."—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 4, 1746. This was the rebellion in 1745–6, centring around "Bonnie Prince Charlie," grandson of James II.

Philip van Cortlandt, by will of this date, leaves to his son "Aeg. John his two houses and lots fronting the City Dock, in the Dock Ward in New York, one known by the name of the Coffee House, and the other the Fighting Cocks, now in possession of David Cox and James Napier"—Abstracts of Wills in N. Y. His. Soc. Collections (1895), IV: 378.

The Exchange and the Coffee House stood on the north-east corner of Broad and Water Sts., and the "Fighting Cocks" at 28 Water St., one door east.

"Tuesday last [Aug. 5] departed this Life, in the 68th Year of his Age, Mr. Anthony Rutgers, of this City, Brewer and Merchant: He was of the Dutch Congregation, to which he was a great Benefactor, and was commonly inter’d the next Day in the Family Vault."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 11, 1746. The house of Anthony Rutgers, erected about 1725, stood at the present 232-6 Church St.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 952.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1746 Gov. Clinton having conferred with the chiefs of the Six Nations at Albany, assurances reach New York that the Indians will "take up the Hatchet against his Majesty's Enemies," and the probability that "upwards of 700 warriors of those Nations" will join the Canadian expedition.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 18, 1746. See Aug. 19.

19 The provincial council records the proposals made by Gov. Clinton to the Six Nations, and to the delegates of the Missisagi, a false council.—Cal. Coun. Min., 361.

20 Oliver de Lancey gives notice that the sloop "Griffin" (William Brown, master) will be ready to sail with provisions for Louisbourg in three weeks.—Cal. Coun. Min., 358. See July 15.

23 The common council enunciates its interest in the lottery system by ordering, "Nemine Contra Dicentes," that the board "Attend the Drawing the Government Lottery in their Turn Visit the Mayor And Recorder the first day, and then the Senier Alderman with his Common Council Man the next day and So on till they have all Attended And then begin Again and go on in the Same Order till the whole is finished."—M. C. C., V: 176. See Feb. 27. Again, on Nov. 11, 1748, the order was: "That the Commonalty do attend the drawing of the publick Lottery of this Province in the following order Visi 143 the Mayor & Recorder, next the deputy Mayor with his Assistant, then the Aldermen with each his Assistant according to Seniority in their Turns till the Whole drawing be done."—Ibid., Oct. 4. On April 21, 1774, we find the common council passing an order that the city treasurer "take 1000 tickets of the Bridewell Lottery" at the city's risk.—Ibid., VIII: 27.

The deputy clerk is required by the common council to "Order proper Boxes to be Made to put in the Books, papers, And Records of this Corporation so that the Same May be more Readily Removed on any Emergency."—M. C. C., V: 176. On Oct. 29 a joiner was paid £4:11, "for Making Seven Chests for putting in the City Records."—Ibid., V: 185-84.

Sept. During this week all the troops raised in New Jersey for the expedition against Canada passed New York City, "with their Complement of Battoes," on their way to Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1746.

Desertions are so frequent in the newly raised troops that Gov. Clinton, from Albany, causes a notice to be printed offering a reward of three pounds for the apprehension of any deserters and threatens with the "utmost Ripour of the Law" anyone harbouring a deserter.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 11, 1746. On Sept. 22, another proclamation by the governor appeared, promising free pardon to all deserters who would repair to their respective companies or surrender before a justice of the peace before Oct. 1. Anyone harbouring a deserter would be fined £500. Ibid., Oct. 6. On April 21, 1774, we find the common council passing an order that the city treasurer "take 1000 tickets of the Bridewell Lottery" at the city's risk.—Ibid., VIII: 27.

The deputy clerk is required by the common council to "Order proper Boxes to be Made to put in the Books, papers, And Records of this Corporation so that the Same May be more Readily Removed on any Emergency."—M. C. C., V: 176. On Oct. 29 a joiner was paid £4:11, "for Making Seven Chests for putting in the City Records."—Ibid., V: 185-84.

8 Last week all the Troops raised in the Province of New Jersey for the present Expedition against Canada, passed by this City, with their Complement of Battoes, in their Way to Albany."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1746.

13 Four companies of "his Majesty's Troops raised in the Province of Pennsylvania" pass through New York on their way to Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1746.

15 A large French prize ship, the "St. Joseph," taken on Aug. 29 by the privateer brig "William" (Capt. Arnold), of New York—see Sept. 26, 1745—arrives here. There were two smart engagements to effect this capture, "the first in the Evening of, before, about an Hour, wherein the Privateer had one of her Swivel Guns burnt, which Kill'd one Man and Wounded 4; and the other in the Morning of above 5 Hours, wherein they had one Man killed and 5 Wounded." The price is "about 350 Tons, with 12 Guns four pounders, and had 57 stout Men on Board; their Second Lieutenant was kill'd, and 5 Men wounded, some of which mortally: She had a Cargo of 400 Guns, 200 Bows and 20 Casks of Coffee, and was bound from Martinico for Marseilles."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1746.

20 The council at New York learns from letters received from Gov. Shirley and Admiral Warren that Brig.-Gen. Samuel Waldo has been appointed commander-in-chief.—Cal. Coun. Min., 361.

The royal coaster pilot Capt. John Fred, and the three pilots, are required by the provincial council to consider what part of the channel between this city and Sandy Hook "it would be proper to fill up, in order to defend the city from the attacks of the enemy."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 380. Their report was received the next day.—Ibid., and Cal. Coun. Min., 358, citing the original Council Minutes (Albany), XXI: 153.

Chief-Justice Lewis Morris and Daniel Horsemann prepare a memorandum for a proposed disposition of the "Regim' & Indep't Co. of N. Y. Artillery," in case of alarm. It is an answer to questions regarding the placing of men and guns. It advises, among other things, that half the regiment, on signal, repair "to the Parade before the Fort," and the other half place themselves "in & about the City Hall," also it advises "The Guns for Domine's hook only to be Ready mounted, to Carry thither as Occasion may require," and it raises the question, "If the Firemen [are] Stationed to particular guns, how [are] they to be relieved in case of fire [?]." It closes thus: "The Council to have a Meeting with the Field officers to morrow evening (being Friday 26th Sept Instant) to Confer upon the Subject Matter of the foregoing Memorandums at Mt De Jocourts at Six o'Clock."

From the original document, filed with "Horsmanden Papers" (p. 739) in N. Y. Hist., on Oct. 29, 1746.

A French prize snow arrives, "which was taken the 14th Day of August last, the North Side of Hispaniola, by the Privateer Brid Triton [see Jan. 21, 1745], Capt. Man, Commander, of this Port: She is called the Le Borie, Mons. Bonnie Master, bound from Rochelle for Cape Francois, and is a handsome well-built Vessel of about 115 Tons Burth, mounts 6 Carriage Guns, and had 21 Men on board. Her Cargo consists of about 20 Tons of Wine, 15 Tons of Flour, with some Soap, Candles, and Dry Goods . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 29, 1746.

That the harbour is being closely guarded is evident from a letter of this date, from Capt. John Hamilton to Gov. Clinton, relating to the accidental burning of the beacon light at the Highlands of Neversink, and recommending increased vigilance.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 380.

The provincial council receives a letter from Admiral Warren regarding the appearance of a large French fleet off the island of Sables. Armament is ordered for Lourie's battery; and orders are issued to Captains Van Wyck and Waldron how to act in case of alarm; also to Captains Isaac de Peyster, John Provost, Pierre de Peyster, and Robert Livingston. John Honeymao is commissioned captain, and his two lieutenants appointed. It is also ordered that the papers of French vessels must be examined to discover the destination of the French fleet.—Cal. Coun. Min., 359. See Sept. 30.

The list of the French fleet under command of the Duke d'Anville is found, and is to be sent to neighbouring governors.—Cal. Coun. Min., 359.

H. M. S. "Fowey" (Capt. Taylor) arrives at Sandy Hook from Virginia, "with several Transport Vessels under Convoy, having on board the Forces raised in Maryland and Virginia, for the Expedition carrying against Canada, consisting of three complete Companies from Maryland, and one from Virginia. The Transports came up to this City the same Evening," the forces designing to start for Albany on Oct. 6.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 6, 1746. They remained here, "Wind bound," for a week or more.—Ibid., Oct. 13 and 20, 1746. See Oct. 20.

Ammunition is ordered by the provincial council for Lourie's battery, and for the batteries at Burnet's Key, Rutgers' Wharf, and Red Hook.—Cal. Coun. Min., 359.

Gov. Clinton returns from Jersey to his home at Greenwich.

Oct. 3

The Virginia troops, of 6500 Men, destined for Albany, are in need of many necessaries.—Ibid. See Oct. 8.

The cargo of the prize snow "L'Orbie" is advertised to be sold at public vendue at the house of Benjamin Pain on the dock. —
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 6, 1746. This house, the sign of the "Jamaica Arms," was at the foot of So. William St.—See Dec. 17, 1744.

8 The provincial council deems it advisable not to withdraw troops from Albany for the defence of New York, but to hold the Virginia and Maryland troops in this city for that purpose.—Cal. Coun. Min., Oct. 11.

11 The council orders that the Maryland troops be sent to Albany.

One Thomas Barnes, recently arrived from Liverpool, is ex- examined about the French fleet.—Ibid.

II: This Colony are adjourned from Brickly on Nassau Island, to the Assembly Chamber, at the City Hall in this City, to meet Tomorrow for the dispatch of Business.—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 13, 1746.

Parker announces that he has printed a catalogue of the books in the library in the city hall, of which he is "Keeper" by appointment of the common council. Books are loaned at "Four Pence Half Penny" a week for each book, and security for its safe return at the end of one, two, three, or four weeks; "but no book to be kept longer, without renewed obligations, and a double Penalty in Case of Failure."—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 11, 1746.

14 Pilots for the transports to carry the Maryland troops to Albany (see Oct. 11) are, by order of the council, to be impressed. —Cal. Coun. Min., 359.

Benjamin Franklin writes from Philadelphia to Cadwallader Colden in part as follows: "It will not be long after my Return from Boston before you will see the first Number of the Miscellany. I have now Materials by me for 5 or 6. The want of a good En-graver is a great Difficulty with me. The Mention of Engraving puts me in mind, that M's Evans told me you would permit me to take off some Copies from a Plate you have of the N American Coast. I shall be obliged to you for that favour."—From the original letter, preserved with the Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Henry Bayard in an address to the Provincial Council and Assembly, refers to his political troubles as follows: "It is always to be wished that a perfect Harmony may subsist between the several Branches of the Legislature, which never was more necessary than now, as we are exposed to a powerful cruel, and deceitful Enemy."—Assemb. Jour., II: 125. On Oct. 20, Henry Holland, by an order from Col. Roberts, broke open the store-houses at Albany and seized a large quantity of provisions.—Ibid., II: 128. Sharp notes were exchanged between the governor and the assembly on Nov. 4, 8, and 10.—Ibid., II: 150-53. On Nov. 26, the assembly passed a resolution "That Major Kennedy, pursuant to the Resolutions of this House of the 5th Instant, is in no Respect satisfactory; and that this House cannot, in Faithfulness to the People they repre- sent, pass any Bill for a further Allowance for Provisions, for the Forces raised on the Expedition against Canada, whilst the notori- ous Abuses committed in such as have been already provided are openly avowed and encouraged."—Ibid., II: 139. Because of the assembly's refusal to grant further appropriations, Clinton charged it with gross negligence.—See Dec. 12. For the development of the controversy between Gov. Clinton and the assembly, see April 24, June 21, July 24, Sept. 12 and 27, Oct. 9 and 27, Nov. 25, and Dec. 15, 1747; Feb. 13, 1748; Feb. 24, 1749.

Nicholas Bayard publishes a notice threatening to prosecute any- one firing a gun in his woods, or in any inclosure on his farm "near Fresh water." A fire had started on Oct. 18, through the careless- ness of a hunter, for proof of whose identity Bayard now offers a reward of £10.—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 20, 1746.

The Maryland forces are all sail'd for Albany, but the Vir- ginia Company [see Sept. 30] is encompassed in our Fort; and it is now hoped all Well-wishers to their Country, will endeavour effec- tually to prevent the Desertion of any of those Forces, by stopping and apprehending all Traitors that can be a very good Account of themselves."—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 20, 1746. Regarding pro- visions for the Maryland troops, a letter from Gov. Bladen of Maryland, received by the council, states that he ought to have nothing to do with it after the troops have left his province.—Cal. Coun. Min., 460.

By resolution of the governor and council, Rev. Henry Bar- clay is named to succeed the Rev. Mr. Vesey, deceased (see July 11), as rector of Trinity Church.—Cal. Coun. Min., 360.

The leading Presbyterian of the Synod of New York obtain from Gov. Hamilton a charter for the "College of New Jersey."—Maclean, Hist. of College of N. J., I: 23-44, 70. In May, 1747, the college was opened at Elizabeth-town.—Ibid., I: 114. The next year it is removed to Newark, where the first commencement was held on Nov. 9, 1748.—Ibid., I: 115, 128-38. In Sept. 27, 1752, the trustees decided "That the College be fixed at Princeton." The building erected here was opened to the students in the Autumn of 1756, under the name of Nassau Hall (after William III, of the house of Orange-Nassau).—Ibid., I: 142-55.

The Rev. Henry Barclay, having been chosen by the vestry of Trinity Church, and admitted by Gov. Clinton, to succeed the late William Vesey as rector, is inducted into the office.—Eccles. Rec., IV: 292-70.

We have advice from Albany, that the Forces raised in this Province, having been reviewed at the Place of Rendezvous, do amount to 150 effective Men, exclusive of Officers; and that last Week, these Forces, together with those raised in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland, have all marched from Albany to the Carrying-Place.—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1746.

The common council agrees to a proposal of the "Joint Com- mittees of the Council and Assembly" that the city "Cause to be Built a Small Watch House near the Powder House," with the understanding that "the Said Committees Would provide a proper Number of Watchmen to Watch the Said Powder House this Win- ter." A Convenient Magazine for the same to be fixed within the Stockade by.—Ibid., I: 1746.

The provincial and municipal officials review the militia and then drink "His Majesty's and all the Loyal Healths." Cannon are fired and the city is illuminated.—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 3, 1746.

The sheriff advertises for sale, on execution, "at the House of William Creed,increase to a Dragon on the New Dock," the effects (including a young negro), of a blacksmith.—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 3, 1746. See Sept. 1, 1744.

The privy sac "Hester" (Capt. Troup), completely fitted and manned, falls down to Sandy Hook, "in order to proceed on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies;" also the privy sac "Dolphin" (Capt. Beely).—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 1, 1746. See April 27, 1746; April 6, 1747.

Capt. Beverly Robinson advertises for the recovery of four soldiers who, on Nov. 18, deserted from his "Company of Foot, now Fitting For" with Maj. His Excellency's Resolutions to the Resolutions of this House of the 5th Instant, is in no Respect satisfactory; and that this House cannot, in Faithfulness to the People they repre- sent, pass any Bill for a further Allowance for Provisions, for the Forces raised on the Expedition against Canada, whilst the notori- ous Abuses committed in such as have been already provided are openly avowed and encouraged."—Ibid., II: 139. Because of the assembly's refusal to grant further appropriations, Clinton charged it with gross negligence.—See Dec. 12. For the development of the controversy between Gov. Clinton and the assembly, see April 24, June 21, July 24, Sept. 12 and 27, Oct. 9 and 27, Nov. 25, and Dec. 15, 1747; Feb. 13, 1748; Feb. 24, 1749.

Nicholas Bayard publishes a notice threatening to prosecute any- one firing a gun in his woods, or in any inclosure on his farm "near Fresh water." A fire had started on Oct. 18, through the careless- ness of a hunter, for proof of whose identity Bayard now offers a reward of £10.—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 20, 1746.

The Maryland forces are all sail'd for Albany, but the Vir- ginia Company [see Sept. 30] is encompassed in our Fort; and it is now hoped all Well-wishers to their Country, will endeavour effec- tually to prevent the Desertion of any of those Forces, by stopping and apprehending all Traitors that can be a very good Account of themselves."—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 20, 1746. Regarding pro- visions for the Maryland troops, a letter from Gov. Bladen of Maryland, received by the council, states that he ought to have nothing to do with it after the troops have left his province.—Cal. Coun. Min., 460.

By resolution of the governor and council, Rev. Henry Bar- clay is named to succeed the Rev. Mr. Vesey, deceased (see July 11), as rector of Trinity Church.—Cal. Coun. Min., 360.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

William Smith records that the college project was "early in the eye of the patrons of the public school, formerly trusted to the care of Mr. Malcolm [who, for services as schoolmaster, was paid by the town]" on May 4, 1733, and April 4, 1739. - M. C. C., VIII: 346 (Index), favored by the pupils of that institution now rising to manhood, and forced by a general spirit of emulation on discovering the sundry advantages our youth had acquired by an academical education in Great Britain and Ireland, but chiefly at the neighboring Colleges of New England. He refers to the origin of the "seminary" at New Haven, from which "many of the western churches in New-York and New-Jersey were afterwards furnished with their English Clergymen," and adds: "Mr. Smith who was a tutor and declined the Rector's chair of Yale College, by the removal of the Col. Cutler, was the first lay character of it, belonging to the colony of New-York. Their numbers multiplied some years afterwards, and especially when, at his instance, Mr. Philip Livingston, the second proprietor of the manor of that name, encouraged that academy by sending several of his sons to it for their education.

To the disgrace of our first planters, who beyond comparison surpassed their eastern neighbours in opulence, Mr. Delaney, a graduate of the University of Cambridge, and Mr. Smith, were, for many years, the only academies in this province, except such as were in holy orders; and so late as the period we are now examining, the author of the "Glimpses of a Knyght above thirty years of the young gentleman of whom his bachelor's degree at the age of seventeen, but two months before the passing of the above law, the first towards erecting a College in this Colony, though at the distance of above one hundred and twenty years after its discovery and settlement of the country, have arrogated many of their props to Amsterdam." He adds in a footnote: "The persons alluded to were—Messrs. Peter Van Brugh, Messrs. William Peartree Smith, John Livingston, Benjamin Woolsey, William Smith, Jun. William Livingston, John McEvers, Benjamin Nicoll, John Van Horne. Hendrick Hansen, [of. PI. 53-54, Vol. I]

"These being then in the morning of life, there was no aca-

The Post-Boy of this date contains a paragraph censure

The common council orders payment of £131155, balance due to

An advertisement in the Post-Boy gives a view of the business

A French prize taken by the "Greyhound," and suspected of having smallpox on board, he was landed the next day, on which the prize was taken, and the prize ordered to be examined. A report on

The free lace buyers and other traders who would give them other things, and as an enemy gets possession of the Fort, all the Batters must fall into their hands, because the Fort commands them... In order more perfectly to conceive what power a small faction may obtain, it must be observed that the Assembly of this Province, as all the others in North America, consists of ordinary Farmers & Shop keepers of no education or knowledge in public Affairs, or the World, & in this Province the greatest numbers are Foreigners, or of Foreign Extract, many of which do not understand the English Language and are generally led by some cunning Attorney or Reader of pamphlets."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 462. Thereby is probably meant in Clinton's remarks regarding extravagance and waste in re-

In this year, "Little Bloomingdale," a farm or tract of land

The lottery consists of 10,000 tickets, offered at 10s, of which

The town's lottery act for the benefit of the college (see Dec. 1746) are published in the Post-Boy. The lottery consists of 10,000 tickets, offered at 10s, of which

Mr. Smith, in his "Remarks on the Habitations of the French in the New-York Post Boy..." "Tickets are to be had at the Dwelling-houses of Messrs. Peter Valette and Peter Van Brugh Livingston, who are appointed Managers."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 5, 1747. No record has been found of the "late Lotteray" here referred to. Quite possibly it was not connected with the proposed college, although an earlier lottery was referred to in the trustees' report of Nov. 1, 1754 (p. 6), which shows that the lottery of 1747 was the second. —Assem. Jour., II: 397. See, further June 1. The provincial council issues an order in regard to "La Fleur," a French prize taken by the "Greyhound," and suspected of having smallpox on board, he was landed the next day, on which the prize was taken, and the price ordered to be examined. A report on this was returned on Jan. 15, and orders issued the next day. —Cal. Coun. Min., 362-63.
Fire breaks out from the roof of the city hall. The flames are soon extinguished by the magistrates and the inhabitants, "who have always been remarkable for their Readiness & Dexterity on such Occasions." Especially noteworthy is the work of "Francis Davison, a Carpenter (being the same Person that was so instrumental in extinguishing the Fire formerly in the Cupola of the New Dutch Church) who got out upon the Roof with an Axe, and cut the Roof open where the Fire was, the Engines at the same time playing the Water upon him, & the Weather being intensely cold, by the time the Fire was out he was cloathed with Ice." Two persons, Duncan Brown, mate, and John Evetts, mariner, also render praiseworthy assistance. It is also said that the fire was started by prisoners in the building, as it broke out in a room under the roof where they were confined, at a distance from the chimney.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 19, 1747. On the following day, the common council granted to the three men the freedom of the city; in addition, Davison was presented with $5 and the others with $5 each.—M. C. G., V: 190. See also March 20.

Edward Willet, lessee of the ferry, in a petition to the common council, states that "he has been a Great Sufferer by the Dispute Subsisting between this Corporation and the Township of Brook-lond (also by the violent Disturbance. It is complained that he has been in this City," In consequence he asks for an abatement of his rent. A committee is appointed to inquire into the matter.—M. C. G., V: 190. In consideration of his losses, he was allowed a reduction of $166 from his rent.—Ibid., V: 191.

With the issue of this date (No. 209), James Parker changes the name of his newspaper from The New-York Weekly Post-Boy to The New-York Gazette, revied in the Weekly Post-Boy.—See Jan. 4, 1743. For the next change of title, as well as ownership, see Jan. 1, 1753.

Another board the ice-bound ship "William," aground in the harbour between two other ships at a distance from the shore, is extinguished by the exertions of the inhabitants, who "at length got an Engine to play upon her."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 26, 1747. This was an unusual instance of the use made of the city's fire-engines.

At a consistory of the Dutch Reformed Church, the elders request the ministers not to preach more than one hour, "so as to remove the complaints of long sermons, to increase the audiences and hold the people together, and so enlarge the alms and other revenues of the church." The ministers promise to comply.—Eccles. Rec. IV: 27.

Feb.

Because of continued cold weather, firewood has become "so scarce and dear as was never equalled here before," having raised a cost of 40s. to 50s. a cord. Many inhabitants of the city are in want, also, because of the high price of provisions; for example, butter, which scarcely exceeded 7½d. as has lately been sold for 5s. a vast Fowl for 1s. 6d. a pound of Butter for 14d. and many other things proportionable: Under all these Disadvantages, what must our Poor suffer!"—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 9, 1747. See also De Voe, Market Book, 250-51.

Mar.

The common council resolves to cause the common sewer "Under the Exchange at the Lower End of the Broad Street" to be "Arched with Stone and the Floor Laid with flint Stones," at the city's expense. A committee is appointed to buy materials and hasting the work.—M. C. G., V: 191. Payment of $151.81 was made to Josie Brinkerhoff on Jan. 26, 1748, for these "repairs of the Common Shore [sewer] and Exchange."—Ibid., V: 216. From this record it appears the floor of the "Exchange" was flagged.

It is ordered by the common council "That the last Committee for Repairing the City Hall the 19th of April 1745 be Revived And that they forthwith Cause the Damage done by the Late Fire [see Jan. 14] to be Repaired."—M. C. G., V: 191.

A committee of the common council is appointed "To Regulate and Lay out the Several Streets in the North and Montgomerey Wards."—M. C. G., V: 191. On Sept. 1, the committee duly reported "that having Measured the Distance from the Middle of the Smith's fly to the Street opposite or of New-York Commonly Called Peck's Ship to the House of James Lowry now in the Tenure Or Occupation of John Nicoll [they] found it to be 442 feet;" and they proposed a descent of four inches every ten feet from the house to the slip. It was ordered that the alderman and assistant of Montgomerey Ward do regulate the same accordingly.—Ibid., V: 193. The work of regulating the other streets of these wards was continued by other committees, appointed from time to time.

Mr. Horsemann having informed the common council "That it is the opinion of the Government and Council and the Committee (which was appointed to have a Conference with the Poor House) that the Most proper place for Building the Magazine," the board consents that work proceed, provided the city "have the Appointment of the Keeper and the Benefit of the Storage of all Powder lodged there being private persons."—M. C. G., V: 192. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 92.

There is a recent advertisement for sale at public vendue "at Mr. Valentine's on the New Dock," on March 31, the cargo of the prize ship "St. Anthony," recently captured and "sent in here" by the privateers "Pandoun," "George," and "Warren," of Philadelphia, the "Defiance" of Rhode Island, and the "Dragon" of New York. The ship is to be sold on April 13; she is a likely pink sterno ship, about 140 Tons, well found, and it is almost new."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 30, 1747. See Sept. 26, 1745; June 6, 1746.

There is advertised for sale at public vendue, on April 6, "at Tortle Bay," the prize ship "La Fleur," now lying there, recently captured, and "sent in here" by the privateer "Greyhound" (Capt. Jefferies); "Barthen about 400 Tons, 20 Carriage Guns, a prime Sailor, and almost new; together with all her Tackle and Apparel: An Inventory . . . at the Merchants' Coffee-House."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 30, 1747.

A petition to Gov. Clinton from "Several of his Majesty's Loyal Subjects & Freemen of this flourishing City of New York," asking for relief against the encroachments of out-of-town workmen upon those of this city, is read in council, and referred to a committee for investigation.—Col. Coun. Min., 56. It states that inhabitants of neighbouring provinces, particularly the Jerseys, "make a practice of coming into this City after the laying of Our Taxes yearly, there to exercise their several handicraft Trades such as Carpenters Bricklayers, &c., undermining Us, the ancient Freemen of the 3d [foresaid] City, by offering the Services of themselves, Journeymen, &c., at lower Rates of Money, at the rate of £20 or £30 per job (or distinct article of workmanship) less than has been agreed for by us . . . . The names of about 100 petitioners are inscribed at the end of this petition. —From a manuscript copy or duplicate of the petition, filed with the Horsemann Papers (pp. 175-77) in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The document is endorsed in Horsemann's handwriting: "Re- port upon it verbally to April 1747. Advised the Govt to give answer to the petitioners that they should pursue the ordinary & regular method prescribed by the Law of the City." See also Col. Coun. Min., 164. A complaint of this sort occurred again on Aug. 24, 1746, and on Jan. 31, 1747, for which see the common council.

"By Vessels from the West Indies we have an Account, that Capt. Troup, in the Privateer Brig Hester [see Nov. 30, 1746], of this Port, had lately met with a Danish Vessel which had a Spanish Merchant with 8,000 pieces of 8, on board; Capt. Troup thought proper to accept of the Money, and paying the Dane his Freight very civilly dismissed him."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 6, 1747.

The assembly orders that "the Commissioners for building the Governor's House in the Fort [see June 27, 1745], do lay before this House, as soon as may be, the charge hitherto incurred on the same, and an Estimate of what further may be wanting to compleat the said Building."—Assem. Jour., II: 144. On April 15, the committee submitted an account, wherein it appeared they were "in advance" the sum of £375.05.—Ibid. See Oct. 23, 1747.

Samuel Johnson writes from Stratiford, Conn., to Cadwallader Colden in part as follows: "I am glad to hear from your letters that you are at length resolved to have a College in your Government. This is what, I doubt not, you have much at heart, & I heartily wish Success to it, & shall willingly correspond with you in any thing in my little power that may tend to promote it, & wish it may take Effect speedily that you may not suffer the Jersey College, [which will be a great Commodity] for the other Hitherto," from the original letter, preserved with the Colden Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. In 1754, Johnson became first president of Kings (now Columbia) College. See Oct. 23, 1752.

The Virginia company of newly rained levies, commanded by Capt. Beverly Randolph, the chairman of the council, for Alhanya, and sets sail.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 20, 1747.

"Order'd . . . A Committee to View the House on the Church's 21 farm in which their tenant now lives and also the Ground near the Bowling Green [see Pl. 27, 32, Vol. 1], which Washes away and Stays with the said Tenant for Repairing the said House and preventing the Ground Washing away . . .

April

21

—Trim. Min. (MS.).

Gov. Clinton addresses a lengthy message to the assembly, reviewing in detail its efforts to defend the frontiers, in the course of which he observes: “Your declining every Expense that seems necessary for the Safety of the British Possessions in North-America, and the well-being of this Province at this Time, and the disrespectful Behaviour to me (such as was never shown to any Governor in Chief, before me in this Place . . . that I am laid under a Necessity . . . to speak out some Things, which otherwise, I should have reason to consider . . .—Assem. Jour.,

An advertisement aiming to secure the capture of a runaway black lad, 18 years old, belonging to Capt. Abraham Kip, describes the clothes he wears, and mentions ‘an iron ring about his neck and one about his leg, with a chain from one to the other.’

—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1747.

May

The council accepts an agreement, signed by David Clarkson,

2

Paul Richard, Joseph Haynes, John McEvers, John Livingston, and Robert R. Livingston, to furnish the provincial government

$5,500 sterling ($6,075 New York currency). Difficulties arose on May 4 about this money, promised by the York merchant, and time for drawing the bills of exchange to be taken by them was extended to 90 days.—Cal. Coun. Min., 364.

In addition to the news, received May 2, of the refusal of Capt.

Tiebout’s company and others to march to Saratoga, the council is informed by letter from Col. Peter Schuyler that Jersey troops are mustered, in both cases for want of pay.—Cal. Coun. Min., 364.

Proceedings are begun to establish a public ferry between New York and Staten Island. Otto van Tyle (Tuyl) and others petition the provincial authorities against granting a patent to Jacob de

Hart for a ferry between their land and the river, as well as for the land between high and low-water mark (on Staten Island). On Sept. 10, 1748, Van Tyle issued a caveat against granting a ferry in front of his lands.—Cal. Land Papers, 252. On Nov. 24 (p.v.), Solomon Comes asked that his ferry between New York City and

Staten Island be declared a public ferry.—Ibid., 252. On Dec. 11, the petition of De Hart was tabled.—Cal. Coun. Min., 367.

On Jan. 12, 1748, the petition of Comes was again heard, as well as the objections of Staten Island inhabitants who claimed that they would be excluded from the benefit of ferrying from their own lands.—Ibid., 372; Cal. Land Papers, 372. Finally, on March 17, 1749, ferry rights were granted to Comes, and a table of fees was ordered prepared.—Cal. Coun. Min., 372. The success of this venture is due, for the corporation of the city of New York, nearly ten years later, found it necessary to establish a Staten Island ferry—see Jan. 16, 1755.

18

“‘We have Advice that the Ship Prince Charles of this Port, John Bryant, Master [see April 10, 1748, was lost in a Storm in the Harbor of Loughorn, the Day before she was to set sail for this Place; the Cargo, Sails and Rigging were saved.’”—N. Y. Post-Boy,

May 18, 1748.

Henry Moore advertises that he will open a school on June 8;

“In Dock Street, at the Corner of Broad-street, over against Mr.

Depuyter’s.” Besides “Reading, Writing, Arithmetic,” he proposes to teach surveying and “Navigation in its three kinds, viz.

Plato, Tennis, French Circle, Sailing, Astronomy and Diving.”

—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1748.

“In the House, at the back Part of Mr. Benson’s Brew House is proposed to be opened on Monday next, a School to teach young Ladies Reading and Writing, all sorts of Needle Work and making of artificial Flowers; for further Particulars enquire of the Printer here.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1748.

“To be Sold at the Corner House, opposite to the City Hall, in this City, several Sorts of Bibles and other good Books, hard

Wares, Chests of Drawers, Desks and Tables, several Sorts of Stockades, and other Dry Goods, at a reasonable Price for ready Money or Goods of the same Value.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 18, 1748.

The governor, in his message of April 24 (p.v.), having “charged the House, with neglecting to provide for the Safety of the Colony, with treating him with Disrespects; and insinuating a Suspicion, that there are Schemes concerted between the principal Traders and richest Men in Albany, and the Enemy, for obstructing any Enterprise against Canada,” the assembly, on that day, resolved “that an humble Representation be presented to his Excellency, in Answer thereto.”—Assem. Jour., II: 123. It is now agreed to, and entered in the Journal, on May 19. It denies any intention of giving offence by “our humble Address of the 16th of April,” and reviews in much detail the intentions and desires heretofore entertained by the house, particularly with reference to the defense of the frontiers. Aiming to prove that its appropriations have been liberal, the remonstrance states, among other things, that the assembly has “provided for rebuilding the Governor’s House, that had been destroyed by the fire, and a noble Edifice was erected according to a Plan approved by your Excellency, and is almost finished, at a very great Expense, in a Time when the Colony is not in a Condition well to afford it; but the great Desire the Assembly had to make your Excellency, and Family, easy, rendered all Objections against erecting that Building, of no Weight; and until that be fitted for your Excellency’s Reception, a good Habitation, with all suitable Conveniences for your Accommodation, has been provided at the Expense of the Colony: Thus much with Regard to your Excellency, whereby we rest assured it is manifest, that the Assembly have given repeated Proofs of their Respect towards you, and we are quite determined to pursue our Intentions; and not Words, are the infallible Language, and best betokened the Security of the Heart.”—Ibid., II: 151; and see Oct. 23. The extensive fortifications erected in New York City are also mentioned:

The considerable Sums granted by the Assembly, for erecting new Batteries and a Line of Stockades a-cros, from River to River, with Block-houses at convenient Distances, and for repairing the old Fortifications in and about this City, under the Inspection of Committees, of the Gentlemen of the Council and Assembly, with your Excellency’s Approbation, for putting this Place into a just Poise of Defence, and which beyond what it was before; for the purchasing Gun-powder (no inconceivable Article) and purchasing, making and repairing Carriages for the Cannon, and other Implements of War of lesser Note, which were found to be wanting and necessary; moreover the providing a Fund of, Forty Thousand Pounds, merely for carrying on the Expedition, which by the large Bounty granted and given, viz. Nine Pounds, a Man, to every one that would enlist upon that Service, and the victualing the sixteen Companies of the new Levies of 100 Men each, raised under that Encouragement, is now near exhausted; these, as we humbly conceive, are not only Demonstrations of our Duty and Loyalty to his Majesty, but also, so many irreparable Proofs of the Reality and sincerity of our Intentions of taking Care of our- selves; but your Excellency may be pleased to remember, that the Assembly granted a liberal Contribution to our Neighbours of the Massachusetts Government, towards carrying on the Expedition against Cape-Breton; and paid all the Charges of transporting from New-York, ten Pieces of battering Cannon, Carriages,

&c. to be employed by the New-England Forces, in the Siege of that Place; and we were extremely rejoiced to hear of the signal

Service they did, and the Success that attended them, and thought our Money well employed.

“‘We wish we could say, the large Sums which have been expended by this Colony, from Time to Time, in making Fortifications, had been properly employed likewise; but the Want of a skillful Engineer to make Draughts, and see the Work well performed, has, in our Opinion, occasioned a great deal of needless Expense.’”—Ibid., II: 151-52.

The death occurs of Capt. William Walton, “a very eminent Merchant in this City.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747. His son of the same name, built the well-known Walton house on Pearl St., one of the finest residences of the day.—Landmark Map Rel. Key,

Cornelius Vanhorne, [Esquire] for sale “three good riding 25

Chairs” (see May 28, 1744), “Just imported from Boston.”—

N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747. Such conveyances were not yet

Henry Moore advertises that, in "Duck-street, at the Corner of May Broadway, over against Mr. Depeyter's," he "intends, God willing, to open School on Monday the eighth of June next."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747. For a partial list of the early schoolmasters of New York, from 1659 to the Revolution, see Valentine, Hist. City of N. T., p. 598.

27 A copy of an act of the common council is appointed "to Order So Much of the Street Round the Bowling Green in the Broad Way and along the fence of the fort Garden to be paved as they Shall Think Convenient."—M. C. C., V: 193. See March 12, 1733.

On March 24, 1748, the work was paid for.—Ibid., V: 219.

The paying of this bill is appointed by the common council. "Keeper of the Poor House, Work House, and House of Correction of this City."—M. C. C., V: 193. See, further, March 21, 1750 (p. v).—June

The managers of the college lottery (see Jan. 5) meet, as the lottery act requires (see Dec. 6, 1746), at the city hall, with two clerks and two inspectors from the common council. A few drawings were made throughout the week of June 1, three being still a few tickets unsold. On June 15, the full schedule of drawings was published, the highest prize ($200) being drawn by Joseph Murray.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 1, and 8, 1747. The original record book (M.S.) is still owned by Columbia University.

33 The court meets at the house of Hugh Crawford.—M. C. C., V: 194. This is because "his Majesty's Council" is to meet at the same time in the common council chamber. The Crawford house was near the city hall.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 15, 1747.

For grant of the use of the common council chamber to the proprietors of the New-York Courant, Oct. 19, 1765.

4 A committee of the common council reports for approval the draft of a petition to the governor, asking for "Relief at this present Juncture of and from the Great and Extraordinary Burthens and Difficulties that the Inhabitants of this City now Groan and Labor Under Occasioned by the Continental Night and Day Watches in his Majesty's fort in this City." One evil result of this military watch is that "many Inhabitants of the City have three or four Sons And as Many Servants and Apprentices and all those with themselves Are Obliged to Watch in their Turns which falls out or happens About Once in Every four or five Weeks the plain Consequence Whereof is the Loss of forty Shiftlings and Sometimes More to Every Such Inhabitant." As a remedy, it is suggested that one of the independent companies now at Albany or one of the companies of the new levies be ordered down.—M. C. C., V: 196-97. See also June 7. On Oct. 1 (p. v), a company of fusiliers arrived from Albany for this purpose.

Cadwallader Colden writes from New York to his wife in part as follows: "The Gov't has receiv'd an address from the Corporation of New York with compliments to him on his administration an acknowledgement of it. I expect will be in the hands of the Assembly, & has a good deal of talk in this Town being so very different from what comes from the Assembly. What is remarkable in this address is that it comes from the Magistrates chosen by the People annually & the Mayor who is appointed by the Gov't went out of town & did not attend & they in the Opposition made the Deputy Mayor Drumk that he could not attend the common council at the time they had agreed to deliver their address" (of June 4, p. v).—From the original draft of the letter, among Colden Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. For the address and Clinton's answer, see N. Y. Post-Boy, June 8, 1747.

9 In a proclamation, Gov. Clinton explains the exceptional dangers at this time in a threatened epidemic of small-pox. At present there is but one case in town; but, he says, "during the time the said Distemper lately prevailed in the City, the Inhabitants thereof were greatly distressed, such of the People living in the adjacent Counties, and in the neighboring Provinces, who had not a good deal of talk in this Town being so very different from what comes from the Assembly. What is remarkable in this address is that it comes from the Magistrates chosen by the People annually & the Mayor who is appointed by the Gov't went out of town & did not attend & they in the Opposition made the Deputy Mayor Drumk that he could not attend the common council at the time they had agreed to deliver their address" (of June 4, p. v).—From the original draft of the letter, among Colden Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. For the address and Clinton's answer, see N. Y. Post-Boy, June 8, 1747.

Mean to spread that Distemper here again . . . ." He therefore forbids physicians, surgeons, and others to inoculate for the small-pox any person in the city and county of New York, on pain of prosecution.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 15, 1747; Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 583. See also March 25, 1731 and cf. Dec. 3, 1736.

The governor informs the council that he proposes to set out for Albany this evening in an endeavor to check the present disturbance among the new recruits. He recommends caring for the poor of the city during his absence. If anything extraordinary should happen, the members of the council are to consult together over the necessary and expedient steps, and to inform him of such by a post master to forward to Albany any dispatches directed to him and any correspondence which the council thinks proper to send.—From Horsmanden Papers, 1813, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Gov. Clinton, in a report to the lords of trade, describes the growing power of factions in the government of the province, and the design of Mr. DeLaney to gain control, so that "the Gov't shall be no more than the first Officer of the Council." He sees that the tendency will be "to lessen the Force of his Maj'r prerogative, and thereby the dependence on Great Britain." Clinton believes that the strength of the popular faction proceeds from his own imprudent act in making DeLaney chief-justice. He states that the distraction in government affairs in Cosby's administration arose from DeLaney's ambition to be chief-justice. Clinton now seeks the removal of DeLaney from the court and the creation of an more immediate authority.—N. Y. Col. Docis., VI: 532-57.

On Feb. 24, 1749 (p. v), DeLaney still held office. Lieut.-Gov. Colden, writing to the Earl of Halifax on Feb. 22, 1746, referred as follows to this error of Clinton's in appointing DeLaney chief-justice: "After Mr. DeLaney had by caudis Mr. Clinton received the Commission of Chief Justice during good behaviour, the Profession of the Law entered into an Association the effects of which I believe Your Lordship had formerly opportunity of observing some striking instances. They proposed nothing less to themselves than to obtain the direction of all the measures of Government, by making themselves absolutely necessary to every Governor in assisting him while he complied with their measures & by distressing him when he did otherwise. For this purpose every method was taken to aggravise the power of the Assembly, where the profession of the law must assuredly have great influence over the members, & to lessen the Authority & influence of the Governor . . . . Their power is greatly strengthened by enlarging the powers of the popular side of government & by deprecating the powers of the Crown . . . . All Associations are dangerous to good Government, whether in distant dominions, & Associations of lawyers the most dangerous of any next to Military."—N. Y. Col. Docis., VII: 705-708. See July 24.

The privater brig "Revenge" (Capt. Alexander Troup) is "completely fittet, and will sail in a few Days on a Cruise against his Majesty's Enemies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 23, 1747.

The privater brig "Castor" (Capt. Arnold) "is fallen down [towards Sandy Hook] in order to proceed on a Cruise."—Ibid.

Gov. Clinton desires to return to England, and seeks the 2-4 appointment of Cadwallader Colden as lieutenant-governor.—N. Y. Col. Docis., VI*: 577. For the reply of the home government, see Oct. 27.

The council receives a letter from Gov. Shirley about a meeting of commissioners at New York; and also decides upon the meeting of a general court for providing means to prosecute the expedition against Crown Point.—Col. Univ. Min., 365.

The council decides not that Distemper, being terrified from coming into the said City; and the Price of Provisions thereby considerably increased: Besides which, if the said Distemper should again become rife, it is probable at this Season of the Year it may be more Malignant and Mortal. And considering the State of an Invasion there would be a necessity for the Assistance of the Inhabitants of the several Counties within this Province, of whom great Numbers have hitherto escaped the said Distemper, who may thereby be deterred from coming into the said City to assist in the Defence thereof. And whereas I have reason to fear that some Provisions are late or have not been received at the said City, it is necessary for the Publick Good . . . ."—Col. Univ. Min.*, 365.

Among the claims for Trinity Church land, under the old Bogardus claim, was a family name Browers, who had "forcibly Enter'd" and "Detained" a certain portion of the Church Farm. The church declared "it is not to the interest of the present possession, giving the Browers liberty to take away the "House by them Erected if they think fit."—Trin. Min. (M.S)..

On Nov. 24, the committee appointed for this purpose reported that they had "possession delivered them of the Said House Built by the Brewes [Browers] and also of the Land" that had been lately in their possession, giving the committee also reported that they had sent to the Browers by the Sexton and also by Mr James Mills the Under-sheriff that they
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1664-1763

It most

The governor and council prepare a commission for the New York commissioners to the congress of delegates to be held in this city, granting to them the same powers as those given to the Massachusetts and Connecticut delegates by their respective governments (see Sept. 1 and 11). Horsmanden's name is left out.

Daniel Horsmanden, being suspended from the council, demands the reason.—Cal. Coun. Min., 366. Soon after, Stephen Bayard was also suspended.—Ibid., 367. These two dismissals were the outcome of the bitter political wrangle between Gov. Clinton and John Adams. (See Sept. 11, 11.)

The government suspends Horsmanden from the supreme court bench, and as city recorder.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 404.

Clinton writes to the lords of trade: "Popular faction and power are become so very prevalent not only in this, but in all the Northern Colonies, that unless some extraordinary assistance be given to his Majesty's Govts. to suppress it, I am humbly of opinion it will be in the power of Govts. to support his Majesty's Authority."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 379; see further, 395, 400, 411, 412, 413, 414.

Edward Holland is appointed mayor by Gov. Clinton.—M. C. C., 201. See Sept. 12. He was installed on Oct. 14.—Ibid., 204-5. He was continued in office until his death, on Nov. 10, 1746 (v. s.).—Ibid., VII, 232, 273, 309, 343, 346, 415, 464; VI: 33. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1864), 469.

Over the protest of the members, Gov. Clinton adjourns the assembly until Oct. 5, because he has not received reports from the commissioners of the several provinces regarding the agreement for prosecuting the war.

Sept. 6, the house passed a resolution to the effect that the delay in making arrangements for the defense of the frontiers was due to "the late frequent Adjournments and Prorogations of the House, by his Excellency."—Assemb. Jour., II: 168-69. On the same day the governor sent a message to the assembly, together with the agreement (see Oct. 1, Cal. Coun. Min., 367) entered into by the commissioners of New York, Massachusetts Bay, and Connecticut, concerning the number of men and the supplies needed on the northern frontiers. He urged also that presents he sent the Indians, especially the sachems, then in New York, to gain their fidelity. He claimed that he had, "at a very great Expense to the Crown, in preceding and preserving the alliances of the Six Nations, but could not and would not continue this charge to the crown. He proposed that the province take over into its pay the forces levied for the Canadian expedition, which are now so "lamented" and "abandoned" in New York. The house, having considered his message, returned an answer on Oct. 8. They agreed to all necessary provisions for the defence of the frontiers; they resolved to make a proper present to the eight sachems in New York; but they questioned the use the governor had made of the "large Draughts on the Crown" for Indian presents during the past summer, and were persuaded he had no order from the king to curtail such expenditure; however, they appropriated £800 for this purpose lest "his Excellency's Failure in that Respect, should cause a Defection" among the Indians. They asked also, what provision had been made for "Saraghtoga," concerning which the governor made no mention in his message. Clinton's reply was peremptory (see Oct. 9, 1747) he would consider nothing but what related to his message. Afterwards they would be "time enough to go about any other Matters."—Assemb. Jour., II: 171-73.

The "Lady of the Honourable Sir Peter Warren" embarks on board H. M. S. "Saraport," for Great Britain.—N. Y. Post-Bey, Oct. 5, 1747. This evidently was Lady Warren's final departure from America.—See Dec. 4, 1746, and July 29, 1752.

"Last Week one of the Independent Companies of Fuzileers [see June 4] arrived here from Albany, in order to take Care of appointing De Lancy as lieutenant-governor, to be given to Oct. 1747. This appointment is directly opposed to the governor's wishes.—See July 14. For his reply, see Feb. 13, 1748. The commission was not delivered to De Lancy until Oct. 19, 1753.—See events related under Oct. 6, 1753.

A published warning concerning counterfeit New Jersey fifteen Nov. shilling bills states that the genuine bills are printed from common types on a printing-press, while the counterfeit bills are from a copperplate.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 2, 1747.

Solomon Comes petitions the Provincial authorities that his ferry between Staten Island and New York may be declared a public ferry. This was renewed on Nov. 2 and Dec. 7, 1748.—Col. Land Papers, 257; Col. Count. Min., 372. See May 15.

A provincial act is passed for raising $2,800 by a tax on real and personal estates, "for defraying the Expenditure of Several Services necessary for the Defence of the Frontiers and Annoyance of the Enemy," also for emitting short term bills of credit for this amount.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 660. A tax of $5,000 was laid on July 15, 1747 (J.v.)

A provincial statute is enacted to prevent private lotteries. This action is taken because "Several Persons of late have Set on Foot and opened private Lotteries within this Colony, which being under no Restrictions by Law, are attended with pernicious Consequences to the publick by encouraging Numbers of Labouring People to Assemble together at Taverns where Such Lotteries are usually Set up." The assembly acts.

Gov. Clinton dissolves the assembly in a message which reads in part as follows: "Your continued grasping at Power, with an evident Tendence to the Weakening of the Dependency of this Province, on Great-Britain, accompanied with such notorius and publick Destructive Character of your Government, and Contempt of the King's Authority intrusted with him, cannot be longer hid from your Superiors."—Assem. J or., II: 202-5. For the assembly's reply, see Dec. 15, 1747.

The following extract from a letter written by a gentleman of one of the neighbouring colonies to a friend in New York, is published: "The violent party Spirit that appears in all the Votes, &c. of your Assembly, seems to me extremely unseasonable, as well as unjust; and to threaten Mischief, not only to yourselves, but to your Neighbours. It begins to be plain, that the French may reap great Advantages from your Divisions; God grant they may be as blind to their own Interest, and as negligent of it, as the English are of theirs."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 21, 1747.

Candidates for the general assembly, the recent members, Dec. 27, 1747. David Clarkson, Major Cornelius Van Horn, Capt. Paul Richard, and Henry Cruger—publish a notice, addressed: "To the Freeholders and Freemen of the Province of the City, County, &c. of New-York, &c. &c. Notice is hereby given for their votes at the next election.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1747. Doubtless this is an appeal for public confidence, in view of Clinton's published notice of Oct. 24 (J.v.). They were duly returned.—Ibid., Feb. 15, 1748.

CorneUus van den Berg, as Albany Post, designs to set out for the first Time this Winter, on Thursday next: All Letters to go by him, are desired to be sent to the Post Office, or to his House near the Spring Garden."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1747. The house of Adam van Denberg was near the old farm house formerly attached to the King's Farm, and stood on the site of the later Astor House. He was, apparently, still in occupation of these premises in 1790, when a petition was made to erect a liberty pole on the site of the old one, or "opposite Mr Van Denbergs near St. Paul's Church a small distance from where the two Roads meet."—Original MS. in file No. 4, city clerk's record-room. Van Denberg died before the grant of the Liberty Pole in Sept. 1776, but his house was still standing, and was not destroyed, according to the Diary of Ezra Stiles (II: 83-84), who says it stood "at the corner of Berkeley-street." Cornelius van Denberg, probably a son of Adam van Denberg, later became proprietor of the old Bulls Head Tavern. See also Oct. 11, 1741, and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988.

Under this date there is recorded "A Letter from some of the 15 Representatives in the late General Assembly of the Colony of New-York, to his Excellency Governor Clinton. In Principio in Anno 1745 to his Majesty in the Year 1745. 17th December last, and his Dissolution Speech." It is a defense of the assembly for the session now closed, and attacks the governor.—Assem. J or., II: 266-261.
The advertisement of a scrivener reads: "Writings relating to law and trade, &c., done by an elderly man who has practiced these branches many years in this city and other places . . ." He gives notice that "he attends at Mrs. Brood's, next door to Mr. Latouche's, on King street, to write for lawyers, merchants, executors of wills, &c., such writings as they have not time, or will not take the trouble, or have not ability to do."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 23, 1747.

Daniel Bloom, formerly proprietor of the Merchants Coffee House, on Wall and Water Sts, secures the lease of the ferry to Long Island and the ferry-houses for a period of five years from March 23, 1748.—M. G. C., V: 215, 219. He was unsuccessful in this venture, and in July, 1750, transferred his lease to Andrew Ramsey.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 16, 1750. After Bloom's death, which occurred between Nov. 5, 1750, and Apr. 26, 1751, the city corporation permitted the executors of his estate to settle for $50 the arrears still due on the rent of the ferry.—M. G. C., V: 34, 353, 359.

Notice is given that the mayor has the sole right to grant licenses to tavern-keepers and retailers of liquors within the city. No person has a right to retail liquors either within or without doors without such license.—M. G. C., V: 215.

Some time prior to this year, the Horse and Manger Tavern was erected.—Libro Deeds, XIX: 51 (Albany). This tavern stood at the south-east corner of Nassau and Spruce Sts. Edward Willett, its proprietor, advertised it as "near the slaughter house, where all Gentlemen (that put up) may depend upon due Attendance for themselves and Horses."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 15, 1749. On Nov. 12, 1750 (p. c.), it belonged to Edward Broomhead. By the year 1786, it was known as the Coach House (Libro Deeds, LV: 61, New York). Abraham B. Marling took it before 1796, keeping here also the "New Theatre."—The Minerva & Merc. Ext. Advertiser, June 3, 1796. It was long known as "Marling's," and in the "long room" met a society known as "Marling-Men"—a branch of the Republican (later Democratic) party, who were also known Colonials.—Wills, N. Y., II: 288. Marling sold the place in 1817.—Libro Deeds, CXXIX: 545 (New York); ibid., CXXIX: 297. The site is now covered by the building of the American Tract Society. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 979; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

A description of New York City in this year reads as follows: "As this Town stands upon an Eminence, and contains upwards of a thousand Houses well built with Brick and Stone, with a Wall and Forts, which serve as well for Ornament as Defence, there is scarce any Town in North America that makes a better, and but a very few so good an Appearance. It has also an excellent Harbour, and employs some hundreds of Ships and Vessels in its foreign Trade and Fisheries. The public Buildings are the several Churches belonging to those of the Church of England, to the Swedes of the Lutheran Persuasion, to the Dutch Calvinists, the French Refugees, and the English Separatists; but the church of England may well be looked upon as the established Religion, because the Constitution of the Government is the same as in England; the rest, however, are tolerated, and capable of Posts in the Government, and of sitting in the House of Representatives, as I apprehend. The other public Buildings are the Town House, and that where their general Assemblies and Courts of Justice are held. As to their Fortifications, they are not, I doubt, capable of defending them against an European Enemy, any more than those in the rest of the Plantations, for this unanswerable Reason; because they were some Years ago confessed to be so bad, that it was not fit to enquire into the State of them, lest Foreigners should be acquainted with our Weakness on that side."—From Navigantium atque Itinerantium Bibliotheca et, A Complete Collection of Voyages and Travels, etc., by John Harris (1744-5), II: 281.

Jacob Dyckman, Jr., and his brother-in-law, Adolph Bouson, built from George Dyckman to 15 acres on land adjoining the highway (Kingsbridge Road), to the rear of the Benson Point farm, which they divide into two tracts of ten acres each.—See Riker, Hist. of Harlem (ed. of 1881), 106n. The land occupied by Dyckman was in the neighborhood of the present 109th St., in Central Park, about on the line of Sixth (Lenox) Ave. On part of it he built a stone house, which for several years he conducted as the Black Horse Tavern. During the epidemic of small-pox in 1752, Dyckman's house was made the meeting-place of the assembly.—Amb. Jour., II: 329; N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 29, Oct. 23, 1752. In March, 1756, Dyckman offered his house for sale.—N. Y. Merc., March 8, 1756.

In 1756, he sold this house and some ground to Andrew McGown (not to Mrs. Daniel McGown, as has been stated by Riker in his History, but to her son).—From James Riker's memo. from a deed in the possession of the late Isaac Adriance; cf. a mortgage, McGown to Benson, May 3, 1757, recorded in Liber Mortgages, I: 52 (New York). Undoubtedly the widow McGown, whose husband, Captain Daniel, was lost at sea, and her son Andrew kept the tavern together. It was, says Riker (p. 490), "a favourite resort, before and during the war, of gentlemen coming from the city with their hounds to indulge in the sport of fox-hunting."

This possession by the McGown family gave to the slight valley between rolling heights at this point the name of McGown's Pass, which it still bears. The widow and her son kept tavern here for several years longer, but on Collis's Map of 1789 (Pl. 51, Vol. V), the inn is called Legge's.

The property remained in the possession of the McGown family until 1845, when one Odell purchased the land and building then upon it; he sold it April 1, 1847, to Elizabeth Doyle (Sister Elizabeth of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul). The place became known as Mount St. Vincent, and occupied at first the rather modest frame dwelling which had succeeded the old stone tavern. From time to time, however, several wings were added, and the property much improved and beautified. "Lastly, in 1855, a stately brick edifice, containing a beautiful chapel and large dining-rooms, completed the group of academic buildings."—16th Ann. Rep., Am. Scenic and Hist. Pers., 129 et seq. The Academy of Mt. St. Vincent was removed, in 1878, to an estate bought of Edwin Forrest, the actor, at Fort Hill, on the banks of the Hudson, where the institution now remains. The Sisters of Charity, however, during the Civil War, opened and maintained a military hospital in the old buildings in Central Park.

The coming of Central Park, its bounds having been extended beyond 106th Street by the year 1853, led to the acquisition for the city of the Academy grounds and buildings by the commissioners of estimate and assessment in 1866. After the Civil War, the commissioners (Oct. 19, 1866) leased this property to Alexander McC. Stetson, who thereafter maintained the place as a roadhouse or place of refreshment to those visiting the park. From 1873 until 1881, the place, often still called Stetson's, was run by Ralston & Ryan.

On Jan. 2, 1881, fire broke out in the frame building used as a hotel, and soon destroyed both this and the near-by brick building which had been maintained as an art gallery. The recent hotel in the park, known as McGown's Pass Tavern, was built in 1883.—See Dr. Edward Hagan's Works and Victory.

The Presbyterians are obliged to "enlarge the old Church," originally built in 1719 (p. c.). They now "erect and complete" a stone edifice, 80 feet long and about 60 feet wide, on ground on "the north-eastern side of Wall-Street," measuring in front and rear 88 feet, and about 120 feet in length, English measure.—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (410 ed.); III: 301; Case of the Scotch Presbyterians (N. Y., 1773), 16. The steeple, raised on the south-west end, was 145 feet high. On the front, between two long windows, on a strip of black slate six feet long, was cut in gold letters the following inscriptions, in Latin of somewhat questionable purity: AVE MCFRANTO HANC ADEDEM CULTUI DIVINO SACRAM IN PERPETUM CELEBRANDO, AD MDCCCLXXIX. PRIMO FUNDATAM; DENUO PENITUS REPARETAM ET AMPLIAGAM ET ORNATUREM ACER MDCCLXVIII CONSTRUCTAM, NEO-EBDOMANCES PRESBYTERIANI IN SUMP ET SUBERUM USUM CONDENTES, IN HOC VOTIVA TABULA ** **
The common council orders "that the Neighbourhood of the Meal Market in this City have Leave at their own Ex pense to make and Erect a Dock and Stairs for the Convenience of the fancy Boat which is to Land there in such manner as the same shall be directed by . . . (a committee of aldermen and assistants)."

This act is passed for raising $1,800 "by a Publick Lottery, for a further Provision towards Founding a College, for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony." The law is framed practically with the same provisions as the last one (see Dec. 6, 1765). The drawings are to begin Sept. 1. Col. Lewis, in his report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1759, Col. Lewis, in his report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1759, says, 692–94. This law is the outgrowth, probably, of charges of embezzlement made against Gov. Clinton. See Jan. 18.

An act is passed for raising $1,800 "by a Publick Lottery, for a further Provision towards Founding a College, for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony." The law is framed practically with the same provisions as the last one (see Dec. 6, 1765). The drawings are to begin Sept. 1. Col. Lewis, in his report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1759, says, 692–94. This law is the outgrowth, probably, of charges of embezzlement made against Gov. Clinton. See Jan. 18.

An act is passed for raising $1,800 "by a Publick Lottery, for a further Provision towards Founding a College, for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony." The law is framed practically with the same provisions as the last one (see Dec. 6, 1765). The drawings are to begin Sept. 1. Col. Lewis, in his report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1759, says, 692–94. This law is the outgrowth, probably, of charges of embezzlement made against Gov. Clinton. See Jan. 18.

An act is passed for raising $1,800 "by a Publick Lottery, for a further Provision towards Founding a College, for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony." The law is framed practically with the same provisions as the last one (see Dec. 6, 1765). The drawings are to begin Sept. 1. Col. Lewis, in his report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1759, says, 692–94. This law is the outgrowth, probably, of charges of embezzlement made against Gov. Clinton. See Jan. 18.

An act is passed for raising $1,800 "by a Publick Lottery, for a further Provision towards Founding a College, for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony." The law is framed practically with the same provisions as the last one (see Dec. 6, 1765). The drawings are to begin Sept. 1. Col. Lewis, in his report on the public accounts of the colony of New York from 1713 to Sept. 1, 1759, says, 692–94. This law is the outgrowth, probably, of charges of embezzlement made against Gov. Clinton. See Jan. 18.
MINUTES OF THE COMMON COUNCIL FOR MAY 14, 1749, SHOWING LIST OF BOOKS, PAPERS, ETC., RECEIVED BY THE CITY FROM THE EXECUTRIX OF WILLIAM SHARPA, CITY CLERK. SEE P. 563.
Inhabitants of the city living "near the White Hall in the South Ward" petition the common council not to allow David and Samuel Van Horne to build a still-house in their neighbourhood, as they are about to do. They state that it will endanger the health of the neighbourhood, by adding another source of contagious disease. They are apprehensive that the "violent fever" which "have carried off a Great Number of the Inhabitants" for several years, "during the Heat of Summer," may have arisen "from the Dirt and filth lying in the Streets and Slips of this City from Some Nausaceous and Offensive Trades being Carried on." —From the original petition in File No. 4, in city clerk's record-room. On June 23, the common council expressed the opinion "that the building of a Still House and keeping the Same Under proper Regulations can be no nuisance to this City." —M. C. C., VI: 224-25. See July 28.

Cornelia Rutgers, Leonard Lispenard, John and Jacob Roosevelt, and Christopher Bauckor, in a petition to the common council, state that they own a parcel of land adjoining the East River between the house and lot of James Desbrosses and the land of Harmanus Rutgers, and ask for the grant of the water lot fronting their property. —M. C. C., VI: 224. The inclination of the board to grant this petition led to the suspicion of official corruption. —See Feb. 1, 1773.

"Order'd That the Side of the Street fronting the Church and Church Yard be paved as Soon as Conveniently may be." —Trin. Min. (MS.).

The common council appoints a committee to take the advice of Alexander, Murray, and Chambers, counsellors at law, regarding the proper steps to be taken with Israel Horsfield, "who hath Lately Erected and set up a slaughter House at the Ferry between High and Low Water Mark." —M. C. C., VI: 226. This was evidently on the Long Island side. —See ibid., IV: 245.

Gov. Clinton embarks on board a sloop, "prepared here for that Purpose," and sails for Albany, "in order to meet the Chiefs of the Six Nations of Indians there, to renew the ancient League with them, and deliver the Presents sent by His Majesty to those People." —W. T. Post-Boy, July 11, 1748. See July 23.

A committee of Trinity vestry, which was appointed July 4 "to purchase Six Lots of Ground fronting Nassau Street and Fair Street from David Clarkson ... in order to Build a Chappell of Ease to Trinity Church thereon," reports that it has "Agreed with Mr. Clarkson for the said Lots for £500 to be paid in a Year." Several residents of the Montgomery Ward have suggested "that the Lots of Cloth Beekman fronting Beekman Street and Van Cliffs Street would be more Commodious for Building the said Chappell on, and proposed that if the Vestry would agree to the Building the Chappell there, the Inhabitants of Montgomery Ward would Raise Money among themselves Sufficient to Purchase the Ground, and that if Mr. Clarkson agreed on the performance of the Agreement with him for his Lots they would take a Conveyance for them and pay the purchase Money." This proposal was accepted by the vestry. —Trin. Min. (MS.). See Nov. 7.

Robert G. Livingston writes that he has moved from Broad Street to a house next door to Mr. Henry Cuyler, Jr., near the Meal Market (see Pl. 22-A, Vol. I), and has just imported, among other things, "Camblets of diverse sorts, strip'd and plain camblettes, plain and flower'd calaminces, ... strip'd dunjers, strip'd Turkey taffies, damasks of diverse sorts, yard wide Colled stuffs, fine scarlet stuff, florsets, pineloses, cheverters, shallows of all sorts, ... plain and barley cor'd everlasting, double and single allingles of diverse sorts, Baragon drugget, yard-wide dafyes, boy'd baragons ... and divers other sorts of goods." —W. T. Post-Boy, July 11, 1748.

A congress is held at Albany to cultivate friendship with the 25 Six Nations and their allies and induce them to join the expedition to Canada. Gov. Clinton, Cadwallader Colden, Philip Livingston, James de Lancy, and Archibald Keonedy, of the New York council, are present. —N. Y. Col. Docs., IV: 441. The governor, writing to the Duke of Bedford on July 26, inquired whether the chief justice, Mr. Horsmanden, and Mr. Murray to attend him as counsellors, but they all refused, giving different excuses. —Ibid., IV: 428. See also Winner, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 616.

David van Horne, who is about to erect a "Still House" near the "White Hall," obtains a permit from the common council to lay a drain from it. —M. C. C., VI: 227. See June 21.
James Lyne, whose name appears on the Bradford Map (PI. Aug. 27, Vol. I) as surveyor, is mentioned as one of four managers of a lottery in New Brunswick, N. J.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 8, 1748. Our knowledge of his late career is scant. His will, dated March 3, 1753, and recorded on Dec. 10, 1761, is entered in Liber H of Wills, in New Jersey. On Aug. 15, 1754, in a list of unclaimed letters at the N. Y. Post Office, appears the name of "James Lyne, New Brunswick."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 15, 1754.

The governor and provincial council receive a letter from the Duke of Bedford with a royal proclamation announcing the cessation of hostilities between Great Britain, France, and Holland.—Cal. Coun. Min., 371.

12. The freedom of the city is granted by the common council to William Shirley, commander-in-chief of the province of Massachusetts Bay, for his services in forming the plan for capturing Louisbourg, and, in conjunction with Gov. Clinton, in conciliating the Six Nations.—M. G. C., V: 229-30.

15. A committee of the town of the Dutch Church exhibits a plan which it has prepared for a school and dwelling-house. This is unanimously approved, and a resolution is passed "to proceed with the construction of the building, according to the said plan."—Ecoles. Rec., IV: 3024. This is explained by the consistory's resolution of Dec. 4, 1747, to build a church near the "Old Church" (Garden St.), the committee being appointed to prepare "a plan for the building of a school and dwelling-house."—Ibid., IV: 1255. See March 15, 1775. For an account of the various Dutch schools established prior to the eighteenth century, see "The Dutch Schools of New Netherland and Colonial New York," by Wm. H. Kilpatrick, in U. S. Bu. of Education Bulletin, 1912, No. 12.

21. "Just published, and to be Sold by Henry De Forest, The Whole Book of Forms, and the Liturgy of the Dutch Reformed Church, as it was established and mutually agreed to, in the General Synod of Dordrecht [Dordrecht], in the year 1618 and 1619. Carefully translated from the Original, and formerly Printed at Amsterdam .... Containing 216 pages, in 8vo. Price bound 45", stitches, and cover'd in marvlar Paper, 32.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 21, 1748. De Forest was the printer of The New-York Evening Post at this time.—See Early Newspapers, II: 423.

29. A public vendue is advertised to be held on Sept. 8 "at the Sign of the Leopard," near the long bridge.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 29, 1748. The site of this tavern was more definitely located latter in an advertisement of Simon Frank, who offered all sorts of perukes at his store "next Door to the Sign of the Leopard, at the North West Corner of the Great-Dock."—Ibid., Sept. 7, 1748. The tavern evidently stood near the corner of Water St. and Coenties Slip. The proprietor was Thomas Lepper, who moved in 1760 to the "Duke of Cumberland," opposite the Merchants Coffee House.—See Sept. 20.

39. Thomas Lepper is elected a constable from the South Ward.—M. G. C., V: 231. Later, he was appointed high constable by the mayor, and was sworn in on Oct. 14. Lepper was a tavern-keeper "near Water St. and South St.," having been "at the Sign of the Leopard near the long bridge."—See Aug. 29, 1748.

Oct. A letter having been received from the Duke of Bedford, announcing news from Spain and Genoa, and the preliminaries of the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the provincial council orders that a proclamation be issued announcing the cessation of hostilities with Spain.—Cal. Coun. Min., 371. The draft of it was ordered printed Oct. next day.—Ibid. For the terms of the treaty, see Oct. 7/18.

3. David Cox, proprietor of the Exchange Coffee House, advertises that he has for sale "A Choice Parcel of Winter Wigs of divers Colours; Also very good English Hair of several Colours, with which Gentlemen may be supplied with Blue, Silver, Bagg and Rose for Perukes, Trimmings, Oyl, &c."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 3, 1748. This coffee-house stood on the north-east corner of Broad and Water Sts., and is probably identical with the "New Coffee house" which was referred to as early as Sept. 2, 1709 (q. v.). It was owned by Philip van Cortlandt, 1710.

Before Dec. 18, 1749, Andrew Ramsey had succeeded Cox, and had removed the sign of the Exchange Coffee-House to a house next door in Broad St. formerly occupied by Robert Todd, who died a year or two previously. This latter house was owned by Nicholas Bayard. Richard Clark Cooke soon succeeded Ramsey, who, in the N. Y. Post-Boy of April 9, 1750, called in his accounts, and announced that he intended soon to sail for the West-Indies.

By March 6, 1751 (q. v.), George Buras had moved here from the Horse and Cart Tavern in William St., of which he had been proprietor, but, in June, the said Buras removed to the Trenton Ferry House, and a little later the Broad St. tavern, which Buras called the "King's Arms," was in the possession of a Mr. Hewlet.—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 15, 1755.

Mrs. Lighthorn appears to have been here in 1757 (N. Y. Merc., May 16, 1757) as schoolmarm at the "New School," in St. Peter's. She moved in 1765 to a house at Whitchell, taking the old sign with her.

On April 21, 1765, John Holt, proprietor of the N. Y. Gazette, announced that he had removed to the tavern formerly kept by Mrs. Steele near the Exchange. The printing-office was still maintained here in 1767, when Nicholas Bayard offered for sale the "House and Lot where the Printing-Office is now kept at the Exchange, being the same where the King's Arms Tavern was kept for many Years before."—Supp. to N. Y. Jour., Jan. 22, 1767.

In all probability, the old house was never reopened as a tavern. It would have been difficult for it to compete with the growing popularity of the Queen's Head next door, in the south-east corner of Broad and Pearl Sts., which had been opened by Sam Francis in 1762. The site of this King's Arms Tavern is definitely fixed in a description of property mortgaged, on June 13, 1762, by William Milliner to Philip von Cortlandt.—Liber Mortgages, I: 534-5.

The old coffee-house and lot stood on the corner of Broad and Water Sts., facing the river. Behind it, on Broad St., was a vacant lot, and next to that the house of Nicholas Bayard, at this time "in the possession of Thomas Steel."
session, and again the governor prorogued the assembly, declaring the public business could be conducted as matters stood.—Ibid.,

A law is passed by the common council "To Prevent the Firing of Leather Guns Pistols Pop Guns Squibs Crackers & all Sorts of Fire Works in the City of New York."—M. C. C., V: 239.

"It was a Circular Letter for Forbidding... Letting the stalls and standings of the several market's," Mayor Holland objects because he has "a Right to the profitt... as Clerk of the market.
"The common council orders that the stalls be leased at public venues, and appoints a committee to attend the auction and set the prices for the conditions of sale.—M. C. C., VI: 239-30. See ibid., VI: 80, 209, 210, 262.

Peter Kalm, "Professor of Oeconomy in the University of Abo in Sweden Finland, and Member of the Swedish Academy of Sciences," visits New York City, his sojourn lasting until Nov. 3.
The suggestion to send Prof. Kalm to North America comes from Dr. Linnmus, the great naturalist, who modified the original proposal of Baron Bleike, to the Royal Academy of Sciences at Stockholm, that an able man be sent to Siberia and Iceland for the purpose of making observations and collecting seeds and plants to improve the husbandry, arts, and sciences of Sweden.
Prof. Kalm, at the request of his government in Sweden, which was published in three volumes in Stockholm in 1755-756.—
See Sabin's Dict. of Books Relating to Am., IX: 38. An English translation of this, by John Reinhold Forster, F. A. S., was published in three volumes,—Vol. I. in 1770 at Warrington, Eng., and Vol. II. in 1780 at London. This work is entitled Travels into North America containing Its Natural History, and A circumstantial Account of its Plantations and Agriculture in general, with, the Civil, Ecclesiastical and Commercial State of the Country.
The manners of the inhabitants, and several curious and important remars on various Subjects. The following extracts from Vol. I.
of this work are selected to present his observations regarding the city of New York.

Coming toward New York from Philadelphia, where he had landed in the middle of September, Prof. Kalm crossed to Staten Island from Elizabeth town Pointly and then came by "yacht" to New York, a distance of "eight English miles," in three hours.
(See pp. 236-37.) Valentine describes the boats used in this service as "periaugurs" or "periyaug,"—"a boat without a keel, with two masts, and two large sails, the lack of keel being supplied

On Oct. 31, Prof. Kalm began his observations regarding New York and its vicinity: "About New York they find innumerable quantities of excellent oysters, and there are few places which have oysters of such an exquisite taste, and of so great a size that they are picked and sent to the West Indies and other places; which is done in the following manner:..." (p. 237.)

"On our journey to New York we saw high heaps of oyster shells near the farm-houses, upon the sea-shore; and about New York, we observed the people had carried them upon the fields which were sown with wheat. However they were entire, and not crushed." (pp. 239-40.)

"Lobsters are likewise plentifully caught hereabouts, pickled much in the same way as oysters, and sent to several places..." (p. 240.) He refers also to clams, which "are meet with in vast numbers on the sea shore of New York; Long island, and other places." He adds: "The shells contain a large animal, which is eaten both by the Indians and Europeans settled here." (p. 243.)

"Besides the different sects of christians, there are many Jews settled in New York, who possess great privileges. They have a synagogue and houses, and great country seats of their own property, and are allowed to keep shops in town. They have likewise several ships... In fine they enjoy all the privileges common to the other inhabitants of this town and province." He describes their domestic habits, and the customs of the synagogue. (pp.
245-46.) See also Hamilton's Itinerarium, June 15, 1744.

"The situation of it (the city of New York) is extremely advantageous for trade: for the town stands upon a point which is formed by the river Hudson, for the river is not far from the town; New York is therefore on three sides surrounded with water: the ground it is built on, is level in some parts, and hilly in others: the place is generally reckoned very wholesome." (p. 247.)

"... in size it comes nearest to Boston and Philadelphia. But with regard to its fine buildings, its opulence, and extensive commerce, it disputes the preference with them;..." (p. 247.)

"The streets do not run so straight as those of Philadelphia: they have sometimes considerable bendings: however they are very spacious and well-built, and most of them are paved, except in high places, where it has been found useless. In the chief streets there are trees planted, which in summer give them a fine appearance..." The street best at that time of being shady: I found it extremely pleasant to walk in the town, for it seemed quite like a garden: the trees which are planted for this purpose, are chiefly of two kinds. The Water beech, or Linnmus's Pterianthus occidentalis, are the most numerous, and give an agreeable shade in summers, by their great and numerous leaves. The Lowest tree, or Linnmus's Robinia Pudica fusc忙ra is likewise tu-quint its fine leaves, and the odoriferous scent which exhales from its flowers, make it very proper for being planted in the streets near the houses, and in gardens. There are likewise lime trees and elms, in these walks, but they are not by far so frequent as the others: one seldom met with trees of the same sort next to each other, they being in general planted alternately." (p. 248.)

"Besides numbers of birds of all kinds which make these trees their abode, there are likewise a kind of frogs which frequent them in great numbers in summer, they are Dr. Linnmus's Rana arora, and especially the variety of this animal. They are very clamorous in the evening and in the nights (especially when the days had been hot, and a rain was expected) and in a manner drown the singing of the birds. They frequently make such a noise, that it is difficult for a person to make himself heard." (p. 249.)

"The houses were built of bricks; their walls are generally strong and neat, and several stories high. Some had, according to old architecture, turned the gable-end towards the streets; but the new houses were altered in this respect. Many of the houses had a balcony on the roof, on which the people used to sit in the evenings in the summer season; and from thence they had a pleasant view of a great part of the town, and likewise part of the adjacent water and of the opposite shore. The roofs are commonly covered with tiles or shingles: the latter of which are made of the white firrte, or Pinus Sibrus... which grows higher up in the country. The inhabitants are of opinion that a roof made of these shingles is as durable as one made in Pennsylvania of the White Cedar, or Cupressus thyoides... The walls were white-ashed within, and I did not any where see hangings, with which the people in this country seem in general to be but little acquainted. The walls were quite covered with all sorts of drawings and pictures in small frames. On each side of the chimneys they had usually a sort of alcove; and the wall under the windows was wainscoted, and had benches placed near it. The alcoves, and all the wood work were painted with a bluish grey colour." (pp.
249-50.)

"There are several churches in the town, which deserve some attention. 1. The English Church, built in the year 1695 [error for 1696-8;—see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 934], at the west tend of the town, consisting of stone, and has a steeple with bell.
2. The new Dutch Church, which is likewise built of stone, is pretty large, and is provided with a steeple; it also has a clock, which is the only one in the town [the one in the city hall was now in disuse—see March 30, 1717]. This church stands almost due from north to south. No particular point of the compass has here been in general attended to in erecting sacred buildings. Some churches, stand as is usual from east to west, others from south to north, and others in different positions. In this Dutch church, there is neither altar, vestry, chancel, sconces nor paintings. Some trees are planted round it, which make it look as if it was built in a wood. 3. The old Dutch church, which is also built of stone.
It is not so large as the new one. It was painted in the inside, thoroughly without any images, and adorned with a small organ, of which governor Burnet made them a present. The men for the most part sit in the gallery, and the women below. 4. The Presbyterian Church, which is pretty large, and was built but lately. It is of stone, and has a steeple and bell in it. 5. The German Lutheran Church. 6. The German Reformed Church. 7. The French church, for the French and other Protestants. 8. The Hungarian church. 9. The Jewish Synagogue, which I mentioned before." (pp. 250-51.) For later references to the churches, see Oct. 12, 1750, and 1756.

"Towards the sea, on the extremity of the promontory is a pretty good fortress, called Fort George, which entirely commands
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1728 the port, and can defend the town, at least from a sudden attack on the sea side. Besides that, it is likewise secured on the shore, or coast, by a pallisade, which however (as for a considerable time the people have had nothing to fear from an enemy) is in many places in a very bad state of defence." (p. 251-52)

"There is no good water to be met with in the town itself, but at a little distance there is a large spring of good water, [known] as the "Town Pump," which stood on the present Park Row, east of Baxter St. — see Landmark Map, Ref. Key, III: 976", which the inhabitants take for their tea, and for the uses of the kitchen. Those however, who are less delicate in this point, make use of the water from the wells in town, though it be very bad. This water, however, lies heavy upon the horses of the strangers that come to this place; for they do not like to drink the water from the wells in the town." (p. 252)

"The port is a good one: ships of the greatestburthen can lie in it, quite close up to the bridge; but its water is very salt, as the sea continually comes in upon it; and therefore is never frozen, except in extraordinary cold weather. This is of great advantage to the city and its commerce; for many ships either come in or go out of the port at any time of the year, unless the winds be contrary; a convenience, which . . . is wanting at Philadelphia . . ." (p. 252-53)

"New York probably carries on a more extensive commerce, than any town in the English North American provinces; . . . it is said they send more ships from thence to London than they do from Philadelphia. They export to that capital all the various sorts of goods which they buy of the Indians, sugar, logwood, and other dying woods, rum, mahogany, and many other goods which are the produce of the West Indies; together with all the specie which they get in the course of trade. Every year they build several ships here, which are sent to London, and there sold; and of late years they have shipped a quantity of iron to England. In return for these, they import from London stuffs and every other article of English growth or manufacture, together with all sorts of foreign goods, . . ." (p. 253-54) The shipping to other points is described.

"The goods which are shipped to the West Indies, are sometimes paid for with ready money, and sometimes with West India goods, which are either first brought to New York, or immediately sent to England or Holland. If a ship does not choose to take in West India goods in its return to New York, or if no body will freight it, it often goes to Newcastle in England to take in coals for ballast, which when brought home sell for a pretty good price. In many parts of the town coals are made use of, both for kitchen fires, and in rooms, because they are reckoned cheaper than wood, which at present costs thirty shillings of New York currency per fathom; . . ." (p. 256)

"I have found by the Pennsylvania gazettes that from the first of December in 1729, to the fifth of December in the next year, 211 ships entered the port of New York, and 222 cleared it; and since that time there has been a great increase of trade here." (p. 258)

"The country people come to market in New York, twice a week much in the same manner, as they do at Philadelphia; with this difference, that the markets are here kept in several places." (p. 258)

Prof. Kalm then describes the government of the province of New York. He praises Gov. William Burnet, who was one of the sons of Dr. Thomas Burnet (so celebrated on account of his learning), "and seemed to have inherited the knowledge of his father." "But," he adds, "his great assiduity in promoting the welfare of this province, is what makes the principal merit of his character. The people of New York therefore still reckon him the best governor they ever had." (p. 258-59)

"There are two printers in the town, and every week some English gazettes are published, which contain news from all parts of the world." (p. 266)

"The water melons which are cultivated near the town grow very large; they are extremely delicious, and are better than in other parts of America. They have open fields and never in a hot-bed. I saw a water melon at Governor Clinton's in September 1750, which weighed forty seven English pounds . . . they were reckoned the biggest ever seen in this country." (p. 268)

"Though the province of New York has been inhabited by Europeans, much longer than Pennsylvania, yet it is not by far so populous as that colony." This he attributes partly to the troubles the Germans (Palatines) had as land-holders, after their settlement here. They then left their homes broken, and went to settle in Pennsylvania. He attributes it also to the high prices charged for land by the rich land-holders among the Dutch.

Prof. Kalm came again to New York on June 3, 1749, after passing the winter and spring at Philadelphia, Richmond, N. J., and other places, but recorded no observations about the city. He left on June 10 to "a yacht" bound for Albany. "All this afternoon we saw a whole fleet of little boats returning from New York, whither they had brought provisions and other goods for sale, which on account of the extensive commerce of this town, and the great number of its inhabitants, go off very well." (Vol. II: pp. 223, 227)

Benjamin Franklin, writing from London, March 5, 1773, to David Colden of New York, thus expressed his estimate of Kalm: "Kalm's Account of what he learnt in America is full of idle Stories, for he pick'd up among ignorant People, and either forgetting of whom he had them, or willing to give them some Authenticity, he has ascrib'd them to Persons of Reputation who never heard of them till they were found in his Book. — And where he really had Accounts from such Persons; he has varied the Circumstances there with such Skill, and so much Mixture of his own Invention, that I mention'd as from me. — It is dangerous Conversing with these strangers that keep Journals." — Golden Papers (MS.), in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

By Boston papers, it is learned that the magistrates of that city are resolved to "put a Stop to a riotous and tumultuous Assembly that annually parades thro' that Town, on the 4th of November." It is feared New York is going to begin the "Silly Practice," for on Saturday evening (Nov. 5) "a grand procession, being the first of the kind in these Parts, was carried thro' the principal Streets of this City." Some of the people broke by the Populace, of such who were not apprized of putting Lights into their Windows, or whose Estates perhaps could not afford it . . ." It is hoped that, as this is the first, so it may be the last of the kind "in a Part of the World too much already deviated from the Rules of true Christianity." — N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 7, 1748. The anniversary of the Gun Powder Plot (known in England as "Guy Farker's Day")— see Nov. 5, 1605) had been celebrated in New York before (see Nov. 5, 1773), but the character of its observance had evidently changed.

Corresponding with Secretary Bancroft, of the Society for Propagating the Gospel, the Rev. Henry Barclay, rector of Trinity Church, writes that, for the further encouragement of Joseph Haldreth, master of the charity school, a subscription of more than £500 has been made. To this sum the vestry will add an amount sufficient to build a handsome school and dwelling for the use of the society's schoolmaster. The foundation is already finished, being 50 feet in length and 21 in breadth, with a wing 18 feet square. — Trin. Min. (MS). See also a copy of this letter made in 1836 by Rev. F. L. Hawks, from the society's documents in London, filed with the Hawks MSS. in Church Mission House, N. Y. City. Regarding the completion of the charity school, see April 28, 1748. The building was on the south side of the present Rector St., between Broadway and Church St., opposite the church. The location is well shown on a survey by Brandt Schuyler, dated April 27, 1749, in Box B-F of the Bancroft Collection, N. Y. P. Public Library.

In accordance with the law of April 9 (p. 9), as extended by one of Oct. 28, the drawings in the "Government Lottery" for the benefit of the college begin. The prize-winning numbers were published two weeks later. — N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 21 and 28, 1748. See also Sept. 1. The proceeding is thus described by Peter Valliere and Peter van Bruggen in the "Publisk Lottery" for "raising funds for a college in New York," meet as prescribed at the city hall and proceed to the "Drawing of the Lottery . . . in the Presence of the honourable Edward Braddock, Esq., Mayor of the City and Simon Johnson Esq., Recorder of New York and the City of 84 City." Three plantations had been removed to the State. Sunday excepted. — From MS. volume of 151 pages preserved in Columbia Univ. Lib. The volume closes with the account of Another complaint regarding the high prices of food, etc. (see Feb., 1748) is published: "Firewood, Linen, etc. to 15s. a Cord; Butter 12d to 1½d per lb. and Flour so dear that it is a Shame to mention. This condition has grown out of the war, supplies having been diverted from or sent out of the colonies and shipped to the French islands. —N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 23, 1748."

At some time between this date and Dec. 12, Catherine Zenger (July 28, 1746) retired as printer of the N. Y. Jour., and her step-son, John Zenger, became the printer. He continued it until his death, which occurred some time prior to July 50, 1751 (q.v.). —Early Newspapers, II: 421; Brigham, "Biblio. of Am. Newspapers," in Am. Antiq. Soc. Proc. (1917), 504.

A committee of the common council having been appointed on Nov. 29 to prepare the draft of an address praying the governor to use his best endeavours to prevent and prohibit the exportation of flour, bread, corn, and butter, such an address has been prepared, and arrangements are made with Gov. Clinton to present it to him on Nov. 30. —Lott, "An Account," in Jan., 1749, printed in the New-York Magazine, entitled Some Serious Thoughts on the Design of erecting a College in the Province of New-York By Hippocrates Matricide. A copy of this excessively scarce Zenger imprint was sold by the Am. Art Assn., Feb. 17, 1920.

In this year, 232 vessels entered and 286 cleared at the port of New York. In these ships, 6,751 tons of provisions, chiefly flour, and a vast quantity of grain, were shipped.—Edmund Burke, Account of the European Settlements in America, II: 185 (Dublin, 1764).

Ferry service over the Governor's Island—now part of the Battery Park, continues. —From an old MS. in the copy of Liver, Statutes, Ordinances and Constitutions of the City of New York (1749), printed by James Parker, and now in the N. Y. Pub. Library. The records of deeds show that, in 1749, a house and two lots at the north-east corner of Frankfort St. and the "High Road to Boston" (see Pl. 34, Vol. I), where the Pulsifer ("Wardle") building now stands, sold for $900.—Man. Com. Cens. (1858), 598.

In this year, a committee of the common council having been appointed on Nov. 29 to prepare the draft of an address praying the governor to use his best endeavours to prevent and prohibit the exportation of flour, bread, corn, and butter, such an address has been prepared, and arrangements are made with Gov. Clinton to present it to him on Nov. 30. —Lott, "An Account," in Jan., 1749, printed in the New-York Magazine, entitled Some Serious Thoughts on the Design of erecting a College in the Province of New-York By Hippocrates Matricide. A copy of this excessively scarce Zenger imprint was sold by the Am. Art Assn., Feb. 17, 1920.

In this year, 232 vessels entered and 286 cleared at the port of New York. In these ships, 6,751 tons of provisions, chiefly flour, and a vast quantity of grain, were shipped.—Edmund Burke, Account of the European Settlements in America, II: 185 (Dublin, 1764).

Ferry service over the Governor's Island—now part of the Battery Park, continues. —From an old MS. in the copy of Liver, Statutes, Ordinances and Constitutions of the City of New York (1749), printed by James Parker, and now in the N. Y. Pub. Library. The records of deeds show that, in 1749, a house and two lots at the north-east corner of Frankfort St. and the "High Road to Boston" (see Pl. 34, Vol. I), where the Pulsifer ("Wardle") building now stands, sold for $900.—Man. Com. Cens. (1858), 598.
1749. paned the surveyor to the land, and that they saw "some Lines 1749. Jan. 47. belonging to the above persons as also the south Line from the Round meadow to Saw mill Creek," and were of the opinion that Dyckman and Benson "have between them encroached on the Commons the full quantity of forty acres, as may more fully appear by the Sworn Surveyors draft thereto annexed."—Cf. 1749, Feb. 25, writing Maerschalk's name of the Harlem Line, see Jan. 9, 1750.

28. A man is executed "at the Gallowea near the Powder-House, without the Walls of this City."—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 30, 1749. The "Walls" referred to were the palisades which at this time stretched in an irregular line from the gate of the 24, south to a post near the present City Hall.——"N. Y. Col. Docs., V. 474-51, for other evidences of this personal and party friction, see ibid., V. 471, 514, 516, 577, 751, 764-66. See also June 22, 1747.

We hear from Philadelphia, that the Map of these Provinces for Mr. Evans is now completed, and hope in a Week or two an account of the part of the above publication.——"N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 25, 1749. See further, March 6 and 13.

Pett officers and seamen of H. M. S. "Greyhound," which is at Turtle Bay, are notified to return duty, on or before March 25, on board that vessel.—"N. Y. Post-Boy, March 6, 1749. A similar order was given about a year later.—Ibid., April 2, 1750.

Proposals are published in New York for publishing by subcription "A Map of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, New-York, and the Three Lower Counties, on Delaware, by Lewis Evans." The advertisement describes the many unique features of the map, the terms of the subscription, etc. The Plate is referred to, and a few Copies have been printed of this map, to be seen, both coloured and plain, whereSubscriptions are taken in."—"N. Y. Post-Boy, March 6, 1749.

John Aysgough, sheriff of N. Y. County (Col. Comm. Min., 352), offers a reward to any one who can account for "two whitish Cloth Cloth Cushion Cushions, lac'd round the Seams with a worsted Lame," whose packets were stolen, "out of his Excellency's Coach last Wednesday Night [Mar. 1], between 12 and 1 o'clock (from the Broad Way near the Post Office)."—"N. Y. Post-Boy, March 6, 1749.

Nicholas Bayard, Jr. shows to the common council "a Draft of some lots of Ground on the west side of the broad way in the West Ward of this City between the Church yard and the Chief Justices lott," and proposes that, if the board will grant to him "a Slip of ground on the South side of his Lott adjoining to the Church yard of Trinity Church," he will "in Lies thereof Leave a Street on the North side of his Lotts twenty one foot and an half broad to lead from the broad way down to Comforts dock." It is ordered that a committee "view the Same" and report.—"M. C. C., V. 252. On March 31, this committee reported favourably.—Ibid., V. 256. On Jan. 9, 1750, the clerk of the common council produced "a Draft of a Release for Lands to be Granted to this Corporation By M. Nicholas Bayard and by this Corporation to Mr Bayard in Exchange," and it was ordered that "the Deputy Clerk have the same Engrossed and the City Seal affixed to one part thereof Ready to be Delivered to Mr Bayard on his Executing the other part thereof."—Ibid., V. 281. For location of Comforts dock, see Landmark Map Rel. Key, III: 398. The street was Thames St.—Ibid., III: 1010, the location should be to M. C. C., V. 252, 256. It was ordered, July 11, 1755, that Thames St. be dug, regulated, and paved.—M. C. C., VI: 15. The street was surveyed March 14, 1758.—M. C. C. (Ms.), 3: 79-80.

Lewis Evans (see Feb. 27 and March 6) writes from Phila- delphia to Cadwallader Colden: "My Map is finished at last, & now waits upon You for your Ameindment, which if you could favoue me with by the first Opportunity w ould oblige me much; for I wait now but for Mr Alexander's & your Revival, before I proceed to print them off, & get them ready for Publication. "I shd be glad you would mitigate some more Variations; how far the Settlements extend back, because I intend to colour so far; Addition of Towns, noted Houses, Roads & intermediate Distances of Plots to Mr. Ramsay's, at Sir Peter Warren's Head, and there raffled for on Friday next, between the Hours of Eleven and Twelve of the Clock . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 20, 1749. The site of this tavern is not definitely known, but it probably stood near Broad and Water Sts. in the corner of the City in 1748.——"ibid., V. 251, 271. For an advertisement in the Post-Boy, see Mar. 13, 1749. For a letter written by a critic of the map, and printed by the Publisher, it was stated that "the greater part" of Evans's information concerning New York Province was secured from Cadwallader Colden.—Ibid., May 1, 1749. For Evans's reply, see ibid., May 15, 1749. For description of various states of this imperforated 1749 Map of the Middle British Colonies in America. A Comparative

On March 51, Parker had paid £10 and an additional £4 for "his extraordinary trouble in printing by way of Appendix abstracts of Several acts of the General Assembly of this Colony to said by Laws and other things relating to this Corporation not Included in the Agreement" (see Feb. 17).—M. C. G., V: 356.

The "Law for Regulating of Carrs and Car-Men" contains the following provisions:

"XIV. And be it further Ordained by the Authority aforesaid, That no Hay be unloaded within this City, on the South Side of Fresh Water, but at the Places herein after mentioned, to wit: At Hudson's River, near the House late of Thomas Elden, and to the Northward thereof; at the South End of the Broad-Way, near White-Hall," etc.—Ibid., 18.

Mayor Holland produces to the common council a list of Apr. licenses granted to retailers of strong liquors within the city (probably since he became mayor, Oct. 1, 1747). The total liquor license tax amount is £1,754. He is ordered to pay this to the treasurer. He is also ordered to issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay the deputy clerk of the board £5110 for granting 126 liquor licenses at five shillings each and the treasurer is ordered to pay the mayor £554 for granting 126 licenses at four shillings each.—M. C. G., V: 258-59.

From April 20, 1749, to Feb. 2, 1750, 58 persons took out liquor licenses, paying in all £5612. Another list showed 196 persons who took out licenses from March 25 to Aug. 31, 1749, paying the mayor £5361.—Ibid., V: 301. On Sept. 12, he was ordered to pay the combined sum (£5917) to the treasurer, retaining four shillings and paying the clerk five shillings for every license.—Ibid., V: 305. Again, from March 25, 1751, to March 25, 1753, 534 persons took out licenses, paying £44575; and the mayor was ordered to make payment as before.—Ibid., V: 569.

From March 26, 1753, to March 25, 1754, 160 persons took out licenses, paying £5004, and the same order was given.—Ibid., V: 407. The following year (to March 25, 1755), 192 persons paid £68149.—Ibid., V: 458. When Mayor Holland died, Nov. 10, 1756, he was considerably in debt to the city for these fees, and the city brought action to recover.—See Oct. 26, 1759.

A fire, breaking out in a house on Duke Street, in a crowded 20 section, threatened to spread to other parts of the city, but is put out by the activity of the citizens. The fact that a number of the houses in the neighbourhood had old-fashioned tile roofs is believed to have prevented in large part the spread of the fire. A writer in the Post-Boy believes that the corporation should "hit upon some scheme to encourage shingle roofs, and encourage slate or pantile roofs."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 24, 1749. See also Sept. 11.

Not until Dec. 31, 1761 (q.v.), was a provincial law passed requiring new buildings south of the Fresh Water Pond, in N. Y. City, to be made of stone or brick and roofed with slate or tile.

James Parker advertised in his newspaper that he has for sale, besides other prints, "a Plan of the City of London—a View of the City of New York..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 24, 1749. The last-named may be the Burgess View, republished in 1746 by Bakewell.—See Pls. 25 and 33, Vol. I.

Brandt Schuyler surveyed and draws a plan of the ground at the 27 south-west corner of Broadway and Rector St., showing the location of the English school-house and the old Lutheran Church. The original is in the Bancker Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library. See also description of Pl. 46b-6, Vol. I; and April 28.

It is ordered by Trinity vestry "That Coll Robinson furnish 28 and pay such Monies as shall be necessary (over and above the Subscriptions) for carrying on and Completing the Building for the Publick School."—Ibid. Min. (MS.). For its location, see Nov. 7, 1748. This building was destroyed by fire on Feb. 25, 1750 (q.v.).

News reaches town that the snow "Irene" (Capt. Garrison) May has arrived at Sandy Hook from London, with over 100 passengers "of the Moravian Brethren" on board.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 1, 1749.

East River water lots, between Beekman's Slip and Peck's Slip, are surveyed by Francis Maerschalk.—See the original
This street was first shown on Pl. 34, Vol. I (1755), where it was July called Dyes Street. It was named, however, for the Dey family, through whose farm it ran.

It is believed that "Provisions must soon fall from the exorbitant price [see Nov. 24, 1748] which they have been held at here, for upwards of Twelve Months past; occasioned too probably by the unnatural as well as unlawful Practices, of feeding the Enemies of our King and Country...."—N.Y. Post-Boy, July 17, 1749.

Gov. Clinton, in an address to the assembly, declares that Aug. although the printer (Parker) receives a yearly salary from the government; yet he prints "injurious Reflections and Falshoods" against the government of the province, and "Lampoons and Sarcasms" against the home government.—Assemb. Jour., II: 271-74.

On Oct. 26, they tabled another from the minister and congregation.—Ibid., 374. See Kretzmann, The Oldest Lutheran Church in Am. (1914), 23-34.

The "Effiyes of the Royal Family of England" and others, to the number of fourteen wax figures, are advertised to be seen from seven a.m. to six p.m. at the price of £s. 6d. At the same time, and evidently at the same place, the site of which is not mentioned, Punch's company of comedians is advertised to give a performance of "Whittington and his Cat," to be concluded with a "Musical Clock."—N.Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 28, 1749. A similar advertisement appeared later, just before the "James Wyatt."—Ibid., Oct. 5, 1749.

On Oct. 9, the wax figures and a "Puppet Show" were advertised to be exhibited "On Monday next . . . at the Sign of the Brig, Dolphin, near the Work-House," for the benefit of poor debtors, tickets to be had from Mr. Lepper (whose tavern, "at the Sign of the Leopard," stood on the foot of Broad St.), as well as from Mr. Ramsey (proprietor of the Exchange Coffee House—see Oct. 3, 1749), and at the printer's.—Ibid., Oct. 9, 1749; see also Oct. 16. In 1754, the "Sign of the Dolphin" still hung out from the same house, "facing the Common."—Ibid., July 6, 1753. Stevens places this tavern near the site of the courthouse in City Hall Park.

The provincial council issues an order on the representation of Capt. Roddman, of the man-of-war "Greyhound," regarding the refusal of carpenters to come to Turtle Bay to repair his ship.—Cal. Coun. Min., 373.

July 19, 1749. An order of the common council orders that the Ferry house be 26 built at Brookland belonging to this Corporation [replacing the one destroyed by fire on March 18, 1748, p.1] be all built of Stone and that the same be built with two Smooth Stiles and two random Walls Ruff Case." It is ordered that the committee to charge have power to employ workmen, etc.—M. G. C, V: 276. Payment for roofing the new ferry-house was made on Nov. 5, 1750.—Ibid., V: 315. On March 19, 1751, the last payment was made by the city for building and finishing this structure.—Ibid., V: 357.

Two "Jemmakers," Everardus Brewer and Abraham de Lancey, are registered as freemen.—M. G. C, V: 271.

The attorney-general is ordered to protest Otto van Tuyll for disrespectful words spoken of the governor and council, in a conversation with Solomon Comes, of Richmond County, relative to their respective claims to the Staten Island ferry.—Cal. Hist. M.S., Eng., 595; Cal. Coun. Min., 374.

A German line engraving, controversial in the Lutheran Church, Oct., which splits the congregation.—See original Lutheran records, in possession of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of St. Matthew. See, further, March 22, and April 4, 1750.

A concert of vocal and instrumental music is advertised to be performed, for the benefit of Mr. Quin, "in the Court Room of the City Hall," on Oct. 16 (p.2).—Ibid., July 3, 1749.
Chronology: The English Period: 1664–1703

In this year, Archibald Kennedy, the receiver-general of the province, wrote a pamphlet on the encouragement of trade and industry in the colonies. It was entitled Observations on the Importance of the Northern Colonies under Proper Regulations. Although printed by Parker in 1750, Kennedy failed to issue it, inasmuch as the Right Hon. Henry Pelham (“Chancellor and Under-Treasurer, First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury and One of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy-Council”), to whom it was addressed, had died. In 1765, Holt advertised the pamphlet at one shilling, the notice stating that Parker had not been paid for printing it.—N. T. Post-Bay, March 21, 1765.

From recollections written in 1795, it seems that about 1750 the locality of the present St. Paul’s Church was a wheat field; also it was said that there was a “ferry house” in Broad Street, above Exchange Place (then Garden Street), where the Indians used to sit in the street, and make and sell baskets.—Watson, Annals of N. Y., 171–72. This tradition of a ferry-house in Broad St. appears to have no foundation in fact. The Dutch never ran any ferry up the gracht; and we do not find any record of such ferry being established in English days before the filling up of the ditch and the paving of Broad Street in 1676.

In this year, Thomas Clarke bought a house and tract of land (Liber Deeds, XV, 289), the title of which was determined, by the Receiver-General, to be that situated south of 236 St., 100 ft. west of Ninth Ave. It was destroyed by fire about 1776.—C. S. Moore, LL.D., in Man. Com. Coun. (1854), 576. Chelsea House was built on the same site subsequently to 1777 (q. v.).

The house-plan and furnishing of the home of Abraham Lodge, a successful lawyer, are described by Valentine to illustrate the style of living in New York at this period. The furniture of the front or spare bedroom may be considered typical of the best style of that day. It contained “A mahogany bedstead, with eagle claws; teater and curtains of red-stamped camlet; eight mahogany chairs, with red camlance seats; a large mahogany easy-chair, with eagle’s claws, a crimson-silk damask cover and cushion; a mahogany dressing-table, with drawers; a mahogany tea-table, with eagle claws; a large iron-bound chest, two large sconces, with gilt frames; three large gilt-framed pictures, three small glass pictures, two small black-framed pictures, a large blue and white china bowl, six burn-out china coffee-cups and saucers, a painted table-cover, and a small gilt leather trunk.” The other rooms were furnished in similar manner.—Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 521–22.

In this year, the making of mathematical instruments was conducted in New York by Anthony Lamb.—Bishop, Hist. of Am. Manufacturers, I: 518–39. (See also Lamb’s advertisement of an earlier date, under July 1, 1745). Soon after this, metal buttons were manufactured by Henry Witten, near the Fly Market.—Ibid.

At this time, Richard van Dyck, son of Peter van Dyck (see 1704), had a shop in Hanover Sq. Occasional advertisements in the New York papers from 1753 to 1756 show that he gradually drifted away from his early profession of silversmith, and became an importer of “pictures, European and Indian goods, looking glasses, sconces and Florence oyl.” A bowl made by him is described in Met Museum of Art Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N.Y. N.J., and the South (1911), 60. See also ibid., xxx.

A silver strainer, made by Elias Pelletreau who was admitted as a freeman of New York in this year, is also described in ibid., 41.

Richard Smith advertised that he will open a school on this Jan. 8 “at the House of Mr. Kildare, next door to the New English Church, in Beekman’s-Street.”—N. T. Post-Bay, Jan. 1, 1750.

Isaac de Peyster is appointed treasurer or chamberlain to succeed his father, Cornelius de Peyster, deceased.—M. G. C., V: 280–81, 286. The latter had served for almost 32 years, having been appointed on Sept. 20, 1718 (q. v.).

As the freeholders of Harlem have granted the corporation of the city of New York to leave their survey with a land committee of the common council is appointed to make this survey.—M. G. C., V: 280. This was a continuation of the Harlem Line controversy, see Jan. 1, 1747, July 12, 1750. In this connection, a map made by Franciscus Maerchalk, sometime this year, a carefully-drawn survey of that part of Manhattan Island lying between the present 34th and 155th Sts., to show the location of the "Division Line Between Harlem and New York Common." This map was preserved until recently in the office of Francis W. Ford.
26, 1750. On the same date, the paper contains an advertisement of a presentation, on March 5 (p. v.), of the tragedy of "King Richard III," "Wrote originally by Shakespeare, and alter'd by Colly Cibber, Esq." The play is "to begin precisely at Half an Hour after 6 o'clock, and no Person to be admitted behind the Scenes." On March 7, the "King's Players" were playing "The Beau in the Sudder," and, on the following Saturday, "a Tragic-Comedy," the "Spanish-Fryar; or, the Double-Discovey, written by Mr. Dryden," were to be presented.—Ibid., March 12, 1750.

The common council appoints a committee "to get a sufficient house built for one of the Large fire-Engines to be kept in some part of Hanover Square."—M. C., VI, 268. See Feb. 4. Regarding payment, see Aug. 16.

"The Committee Appointed the 29th of February last to Mar. Enquire who were Active and Serviceable in a particular Manner 1 at putting out the fire on the Spire of Trinity Church Reported that on their Enquiring they were Informed that Davis Hunt was the first Man in the Spire of the Steeple and he put out the two Lowermost fires being assisted by a fat Man whose Name he does not know and he soon went away. Andrew Gotier and Francis Davis put out the uppermost Flame in the Spire, and Gotier and David Robison [sic] is the third Flame in the Spire. Mr. Davison put out the flames on the Cornish [corner] with one Cornelius Mc Carty who was also very Active there. Mr Kippin the Blockmaker was all the time on the Roof of the Church and Mr Gotier was also there for some time with him. that this Information was caused by the given them by David Davison, Hunt and Mf Jandine" (£50 ordered distributed with the vestry's thanks).—Trin. Min. (MS.).

The theatre in Nassau St. opens with a performance of "Richard III" (see Feb. 26).—N. T. Post-Boy, Feb. 26, 1750. It was closed on July 23 and re-opened on Sunday 13, and closed again on July 8, 1751. Sonnecil, Early Opera in Am. 15.

William Bradford, Jr., Hanover Square, advertises his business as a dealer in various merchandise, including "Choice good Madeira Wine . . . by the Pipe, also choice Iron Chimney Backs, and Plates for Caboons." He also "gives ready Money for old Pewter and Brass."—N. T. Post-Boy, March 12, 1750. Cf. Aug. 13, 1744.

A reward of £30 is offered for the apprehension of "some low'liv'd People" who broke off and stole "the Brass Knockers of several Doors of Gentlemen's Houses" in the city, a practice which has been "frequently repeated" for some years past.—N. T. Post-Boy, March 12, 1750. See also ibid., March 25, 1751.

Robert Provost is appointed overseer of the poor and keeper of the poorhouse, in place of Frederick Sebring (see May 27, 1747), who is incapacitated by blindness.—M. C. C., VI, 289.

Robert Bensongregor the elder, a "Lord of ground in skinners St., Montgomery Ward," by an undecreed deed (now in the possession of the Title Guarantee & Trust Co.). On the back of this deed David Grim has endorsed the statement that it was upon this land that the German Lutheran Church was built in 1750 (see, however, April 4), and that the structure was demolished in 1767. It was in the year 1767 (see, May 1) that this congregation removed to Christ's Lutheran Church (the "Swamp") Church at the north-east corner of Frankfurt and William Sts.—Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 55-545 Goodrich, Picture of N. T., 266. See Landmark Map ref. Key, III: 929. Pl. 174, Vol. III; Pls. 44, 41, and 43, Vol. I.

The earliest American play—bill known to be in existence is for a performance of the tragedy called "The Orphan," given at the theatre in Nassau St. on this date. Acquired under the terms of the will of the late Evert Jansen Wendell, it is now owned by the Harvard College Library. It was reproduced in vol. IV, from the photogravure published by the Club of Odd Volumes on the occasion of a lecture by Robert Gould Shaw, on "Collecting Theatrical Books and Play-Bills," given at the club-house, Boston, Feb. 18, 1920. It was reproduced in a small edition by the Club of Odd Volumes. A copy is in the possession of the Harvard College Library. A copy is in the possession of Mr. Geo. Parker Winschip, and a copy of the original advertisement of the play in the N. T. Gazette, reprinted in the Weekly Post-Boy, for April 2, 1750.

According to an advertisement, "The Orphan" (see Mar. 26) is again to be presented, by "His Excellency's Permission: At the Theatre in Nassau-Street," for the benefit of the school, which was destroyed by fire on Feb. 23 (p. v.).—N. T. Post-Boy, Theatrical and Social Events of the Period

March 26, 1750. See also description of Pl. 50, II: 265, where the location of early theatres is discussed.

PETTY-OFFICERS AND SEAMEN" belonging to H. M. S. "Greyhound," who are absent with or without leave, are summoned by published notice to return to duty on board their ship "in Turtle Bay, New York," or before April as required, and as directed by the act of parliament. Those absent without leave, and returning, will be pardoned.—N. T. Post-Bay, April 2, 1750.

Certain "High Germans," who follow "the Faith and practice of Lutherans . . . after the method and manner of the High Dutch, and in their Language," being debarred from assembling in their present church with other Lutherans, who differ from them by their "use and practice of their Religion in the Low Dutch Way," petition Gov. Clinton, and obtain from him a license to collect voluntary contributions for building a meeting-house. Such a building stood, in 1754, at the north end of a Cliff Street.—Duc. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), III: 294-95; Eccles. Rec. IV: 3106; Pl. 34, Vol. I. See, further, May 1, 1767.

Andrew Ramsey, who, since late in 1749, has been proprietor of the Exchange Coffee-House in Broad St., which he leased of Nicholas Bayard (see Oct. 5, 1748), advertises that he "intends shortly for the Western Part," and the transportation of原文 (31 lines)

A committee of the common council appointed "to Run out a plan of a peer on the west side of Coenties Dock on a Range with the house now in the possession of Mr. David Abel" reports a plan and its execution is ordered.—M. C. C., V: 293. On May 5, another committee in the Pamphlets you mention, appointed to purchase materials and employ workmen.—Ibid., V: 294. The expense of this work was met by corporate bonds.—Ibid., IV: 314, 345, 1781; and see Nov. 5, 1750. On Aug. 23, 1751, the managers for building the pier were ordered "to take up the Two small Fiers at each side of Coenties Dock and Remove and take away the same," as they were "very Inconvenient and Dangerous to the Market house there, in Case any Vessells fastned to the said Fiers shd Slip or Brake their fast." The managers were also required to use the materials in building the new pier.—Ibid., V: 345. For an alteration in the building plans, see July 8, 1752. This became known as the Albany pier.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 488, where the date "prior to 1767" should read in 1750-1. It is first shown on the Maerschall Plan of 1755, Pl. 34, Vol. I.

The agitation of several years which preceded the important development of the docks at Hunter's Key ("Rum Rents") began at this time with a petition of Charles "Shandine" (Jandine) and others, asking "a Grant of the water Lots of this City opposite to their Lots."—M. C. C., V: 392. This was again read on Nov. 30, "praying Grants of the Water Lots fronting to Hunter's Key;" and there was also a read a "Remonstrance of John Waters and other Persons," which was "postponed and deferred."—Ibid., V: 317. The date for hearing the petition and remonstrance was postponed from time to time (ibid., V: 336, 379), until July 26, 1751, when the hearing took place. The letters patent of King George I to John Theobald and others were read; the subject was argued by counsel, and the petition was considered by the common council was again deferred.—Ibid., V: 342. This occurred again on Aug. 25, 1753, when the remonstrance of John McEvers and others came up in opposition.—Ibid., V: 343. No further action appears in the Minutes on this particular petition. Applications for water lots at Hunter's Key were renewed, however, on May 21, 1754 (q. v.), this time by William Walton and others; and on July 26, 1756 (q. v.) the subject was reopened and considered for seven years before grants were made. William St. Leger's tavern was the name Hunter's Key, see Feb. 9, 1715, at which time it was established. It lay along the East River front from Old Slip to Wall St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 990.

The vestry of Trinity Church resolves "That all lots to be let for the future be let for Twenty One Years and that at the Expiration of the Term the Buildings thereon be Valued and the Church have in their Choice to take the Building at the Appraised Value or that the Tenant have Liberty to take away the Building,"—Trin. Min. (M.E.).

Mordecai Lotts, merchant, one of the most prominent members of the early Jewish colony in New York, in his will of this date leaves to his sons Isaac and Jacob his "dwelling house and lot situate and lying in the Shot." He was buried, according to his wish, in the Jews' burying-ground, a part of which still remains on the site of the Chatham Sq., where his grave may still be seen. For early history of this burying-ground, see Aug. 23, 1758; Dec. 17, 1759; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927. The "Shot" mentioned in the Gomez will was a narrow street at the rear of the lots on Hanover Sq. The present Beaver St. is part of it.—Abstracts of Will, IV: 330. See also "Shot Lane," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 932.

Richard Clark Cooke advertises that the "Gentlemen's and Exchange Coffee House and Tavern" is now kept at the "Sign of the King's Arms, in the same House which was lately kept by Andrew Ramsey, near the Long-Bridge."—N. T. Post-Bay, May 7, 1750. See Oct. 3, 1756.

For stealing goods from a shop window, a man named David Smith is sentenced "to be whipp'd at the Carts Tail round the Town, and afterwards stand in the Pillory." The sentence was executed the next day.—N. T. Post-Bay, May 14, 1750.

John Bonin, who has obtained a shop in S. St., where he sells "Rum, Sugar, and most kinds of European Goods usually sold in Shops," advertises that his customers "shall be welcome to view his famous Optical Machine Gratis."—N. T. Post-Bay, May 14, 1750. See also Dec. 5, 1748; July 3, 1749.

"This is to acquaint the Publick, that there is lately arrived from London, the Wonder of the World, An honest Barber and Peruke-Maker, who might have worked for the King, if his Majesty would have employed him; It was not for the Want of Money that he came here, for he had enough of that at Home; nor for the want of Business that he advertises himself, But to acquaint the Gentlemen and Ladies that Such a Person is now in Town, living near Rosemary Lane, where Gentlemen and Ladies may be supplied with the Goods as follow, viz. Tyes, Fullbottoms, Majors, Spencers, Fox-Tails, Ramalias, Tucks, cuts and bob Perukes; Also Ladies Tattamotongues and Towers, after the Manner that is now worn at Court. By their humble and obedient Servant, John Stull."—N. T. Post-Bay, May 21, 1750. "Rosemary Lane" has not been found in other advertisements or title records of the period.

Owen Rice and Rudolph van Dyck, deputies of the United States Congress (Moravians), inform Gov. Clinton by letter that they intend to build a church in New York City.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 596.

Thomas Lepper, "from London," who has been keeping a tavern at the "Sign of the Leopaird," at the north-west corner of the great dock (see Aug. 23, 1748), from which he has recently moved to the "Sign of the Duke of Cumberland, opposite the Merchant's Coffee House," announces that he has opened a "Regular Ordinary."—N. T. Post-Bay, May 21 and 28, 1750. Prior to Lepper's occupancy of this house, it had been conducted by George Burns, who removed, in the spring of 1750, to the Hoboken and Carr Taverne in the town of New Jersey. For the appearance of this unpleasant affair, which was evidently the growth of the day. Before Nov. 19, Lepper had given up the tavern and taken the ferry-house on Staten Island.—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 19, 1750.

Cornelius Clopper, "living in Broad Street, near the Long-Bridge," advertises several lots for sale, "all lying together, adjoining to each other, and bounded easterly on Queen-street, northerly on the house of Mr. Robert Benson, and the New Lutheran Church, and southerly on Stage-Street."—N. T. Post-Boy, May 28, 1750. The same advertisement in ibid., Sept. 24, mentions "Hague-Street" instead of "Stage-Street."

The popularity of horse-racing and the general use of carriages at this time made the "road-gate in the great Horse Race," which was run on "Hamptons Plains (Long Island) on this day, "for a considerable Wager." It "engaged the attention of so many of this City, that upwards of 70 Chairs and Chaises were carried over the Ferry from hence the Day before; besides a far greater Number of Horses; and it was thought that the Number of Horses on the Plains at the Race, far exceeded a Thousand."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 4, 1750.

June

An early instance of the "hunger strike" is found in the following record: "There is now in the Work-House one Hugh Windsor who designs to starve himself to Death, he having been thirty odd Days already without any Victuals at all, except Small beer and Water, just to moisten his mouth, he is so low that he can scarcely speak (this is fact)."—N. T. Ext. Post, June 11, 1750.

"People in the city and country are notified that there are several children in the almshouses, from Ten Years and under, to be put out Apprentices." Applications for the children are to be made to Abraham Lefferts and Abraham van Wyck, church-wardens.—N. T. Post-Boy, June 11, 1750.

The gunner's mate, James Parks, of the English ship "Greyhound," having fired, on June 7, upon a boat belonging to Col. William Ricketts, of Elizabeth Town (the latter not understanding the signal to stop), and having killed a young woman in the boat, the coroner brings in a verdict of "Willful Murder."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 11, 1750. On Aug. 13, Parks, on being called to receive judgment, pleaded for pardon, and was discharged.—ibid., Aug. 13, 1750. The case is thus summarized by Gittman in his chapter on "George Clinton and his contest with the assembly," in Wilson's Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 255-76: "The boat carried a flag, which it did not strike on approaching the man-of-war Greyhound, commanded by Captain Koddam, Clinton's son-in-law. As it had failed to salute the man-of-war on previous occasions, the lieutenant in charge of her resolved to enforce the admiralty rule. . . . The assault had been committed between Governor's Island and the Battery, so that the coroner of the city claimed jurisdiction under the Montgomery charter, and held an inquest. Captain Koddam had not been on board and his ship, returned and instantly put his lieutenant under arrest and sent his gunner's mate to testify at the inquest. Chief Justice De Lancey, on Ricketts's complaint, arrested the gunner's mate for murder, even before he confessed his obedience to orders . . . " Gittman explains the bearing of the case upon the factional dispute between Clinton and De Lancey.

Trinity vestry orders "That the Committee Appointed for Building the Chappell of Ease [St. George's] have power to build Galleries therein and to agree (if they think proper) for the doing thereof and for the Inside work of the Chappell by the Great (i.e., by contract)."—Trin. Min. (M.S.). See Jan. 14, 1751.

The committee of Trinity vestry appointed "to Agree with proper Persons for Rebuilding the School-house" (see Feb. 23) reports that they have agreed with John Brown and James Napier for £575 certain, and £25 more when the building is completed if the destr. costs £25,000 (M.S.).

"To be Seen, next Door to the Play House, A most curious Piece of Rock and Shell-Work, superior to any Thing of the Kind in America; a lively Prospect of the memorable Battle of Culloden; with Views of several of the grandest Cities, Palaces, Hospitals, Warships, &c."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 25, 1750.

Herman Rutgers, brewer, by his will of this date, leaves to his soil's widow the dwelling-house, "with the ground thereto belonging, in fee simple of New York land between Maiden Lane and my brew house, along Rutgers street, as the same is now railed in and planted with trees." He also orders that "the land between the ground of Vandewater and my lot planted with trees, and as far as my land extends eastward, shall retain the name of Rutgers street, and remain open for the use of all my children."—Abstracts of Wills, IV: 445-6. An excellent undated survey of the brewery property of the Rutgers family, on the north side of Maiden Lane, between 29 Maiden Lane, is in the Bancroft Collection.

The common council appoints a committee "to meet the Trustees of the Town of Haaerem and to hear the proposals to be Offered by them relating to the accommodating and Setting the Con- troversie Depending between them and this Corporation for Lands Claimed as belonging to this Corporation,"—M. C. G., Vol. 298. On Aug. 23, 1751, Abraham Lodge, who had acted as attorney for the city in 1750 in a trespass and ejectment suit (ibid., V, 304), was appointed counsel for the city, together with Joseph Murray, in support of the city's title to the lands claimed by the town of Harlem.—ibid., V, 345. This action evidently has reference to the disputed partition line (see Jan. 27, 1749; Jan. 9, 1750 which had been surveyed in 1727 (see April 25, 1727). The dispute "with Respect to the Boundaries of this Corporation and the Township of Harlem" continued until March 13, 1753, when the common council appointed a committee to meet a committee of the "freeholders of Harlem" to settle the difference.—ibid., V, 397. It was not settled at that time, however, but ran on to March 20, 1771 (p.v.).

The Boston post now puts up at Mr. Jonathan Osgden's, "the Sign of the Black Horse," and the islander under the "Great Horse Race," near Mr. Robert Benson's.—N. T. Post-Boy, July 23, 1750. As in earlier years, the sign of the Black Horse hung from a tavern on William St. See Oct. 9, 1727. Osgden died some time before Feb. 16, 1753 (p.v.), and by Aug. 16 his tavern had been taken over by John Halland.—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 16, 1753.

Gov. Clinton writes to Gov. Benning Wentworth, agreeing to the proposal to submit the question of deciding the boundary between New York and New Hampshire to the king. On Sept. 2, Gov. Wentworth replied, consenting to the exchange of representations made by each province separately to the king. On Sept. 9, the attorney-general in New York wrote to Clinton, and gave his opinion on the differences between the two provinces—Doc. Hist., N. Y., IV: 537. See also a letter of March 23, 1754, from Gov. Wentworth to the lords of trade, relative to the boundary line, in ibid, IV: 548; and see Coll. Hist. M.S.S., Eng., 604. For further progress in the negotiations, see Dec. 16, 1756.

"George Burns, who lately kept Tavern opposite the Merchants Coffee House," removes to the "noted Sign of the Cart and Horse."—N. T. Post-Boy, July 30, 1750. The tavern opposite the Merchants Coffee House was known as the Duke of Cumberland (see May 28), but the House and Cart, which stood on William St., south of Fulton, was brief. On Jan. 28, 1751, the "well-accommodated Inn, known by the Name of the Sign of the Horse & Cart, . . . with all the Out-Houses and Stables," was offered to be let by Tomas Bohanna.—ibid., Jan. 28, 1751. George Edmunds became proprietor in the early part of 1751 (see June 3, 1751), but in less than a year he had been succeeded by Edward Willett. From the advertisements of both Edmunds and Willett, it is apparent that the house had lost much of its former popularity. Willett says he has "reviv'd" the "once noted Horse and Cart Inn."—ibid., March 23, 1752. From an advertisement of Thomas Grigg, in the Mercury of May 27, 1754, the house appears to have been turned into a furniture shop. Grigg announced that he had moved to the Horse and Cart, where he continued "to make house-chairs, couches, closeshot chairs," etc. He offers to let the stables of the Horse and Cart.

For a number of years, the Horse & Cart was mentioned as a landmark in records of property transfers; but no reference is found to its use as a tavern again until 1771, when the "Society of House Carpenters" fixed upon the house of Mr. David Phillips at which to hold its meetings, and where "drawing Plans, Elevations, and Extents of Ship Work," etc.—ibid., June 20, 1771. In later advertisements, David Phillips is mentioned as the proprietor of the "Horse and Cart."—Riverton's N. Y. Gazettier, March 31, 1774. Although Bayles and other writers state that the house was known during the Revolution as the "Golden Hind Inn," it has not been found to substantiate this statement. See Landmark Map Rep. Vol. III: 174, No. 11, Vol. III. The name of this tavern appears indiscriminately as "Horse and Cart" and "Cart and Horse."
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1750

The Lutheran Church is struck by lightning and set on fire, but is little damaged.—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 6, 1750.

14 Thomas Barnes surrenders his lease of the slaughter-house on the East River, and relinquishes his office of keeper.—See deed of surrender in Liber Deeds (City Grants), XXIV: 245. On Aug. 31, the common council approved the draft of this deed; and on the same day a committee was appointed "to View the Ground proposed by Mr Nicholas Bayard for the Building a Slaughter house."—M. C. C., V: 302. For further action of the board, see Sept. 3.

16 Capt. Thomas Clarke, a retired officer of the British army, buys an estate from Jacob and Teniss Sonomendyke, consisting of a farm of several hundred acres bordering on the Hudson and running east as far as the present Seventh Ave.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948. The house which was on this property was burned about the time of the Revolution, and its owner died soon thereafter. The house called "Chelsea" was built on this estate after 1777. It stood 200 feet west of the present Ninth Ave., between 22nd and 23rd Sts., the grounds extending to the river whose banks then lay somewhat west of Tenth Avenue. It was rebuilt by Clarke's widow, "Mistress Molly Clarke," who lived there until 1803. Her daughter, Charity Clarke, married the Rev. Benjamin Moore, D.D., Bishop of New York, in 1776. Clement C. Moore, LL.D., lived there until 1850. In that house, in 1822, the latter wrote the famous verses beginning "Twas the night before Christmas," which were first published in the Troy Sentinel, Dec. 23, 1821. The house was torn down in 1852-53.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948; Kelley, Hist. Guide to the City of N. Y., 1157. Man. Com. Coun. (1864), 376. For a survey of the Someren- dyke property, see Oct. 9, 1780.

The town council appoints a committee to direct the "Regulating Laying out and paving Beekmans Street and the Street Continuous thereto in Montgomey Ward."—M. C. C., V: 300. On Sept. 1, the committee reported its plan for regulating these streets, beginning at a point opposite the middle door of the new English church (St. George's).—Ibid., V: 306. On June 28, 1751, the order regarding Beekman Street was revoked and a new committee appointed to perform the same services.—Ibid., V: 340-41. For early references to this street, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 953. Beekman Street was first shown on the Bradford Map of 1750 (see Pl. 27, Vol. 1). See also April 25, 1803; March 11, 1816.

27 A horse-race is advertised to be run on Oct. 11, for "the New York Subscription Plate of Twenty Pounds Value," by "any Horse, Mare, or Gelding, that never won a Plate before on this Island, carrying Ten Stone Weights, Saddle and Bridle included, the heat in Three Heats, two Miles in each Heat." Horses that are intended to run are to be entered the day before the race "with Adam Van Denberg, living on the Church Farm, paying Two Dollars each, and at the Post the Day of Running, paying Four." The entrance money is to be run for the day after, "by any of the Horses, except the Winner, and those that were disqualified."—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 27, 1750. See Oct. 11.

2 Sept. Two horses, called "the two Moor Princes," attempting to show "their Dexterity or their Ignorance on Horseback," ran over and nearly kill a child; they are committed to jail.—N. T. Post-Boy, Sept. 2, 1750.

3 Parker prints a letter, addressed to him and signed "Tribunus Populi," which refers to the unanimous re-election, "in the Field," on Aug. 27, of the four "Representatives for the City and County of New York" (in the assembly), "by a much greater Number of Persons than ever appeared there on the like Occasion." The writer says he has read Van Wyck's Wit's Wit, and the People expressed the most ardent Affection for their former Representatives, by three of those popular and triumphant Huzzas, which are so extremely expressive of a People's Exultation at the Disappointment of the Covent, when engag'd against the Interest of the Country. From which we may fairly infer, that the Conduct of these Gentlemen is universally approved of by their Constituents, notwithstanding the false and magnant Aspersions of some of our late ministerial Scribblers.

4 Parker also publishes a letter of thanks "To the Freeholders and Freemen of the City and County of New York," signed by the four assemblmen, David Clarkson, Cornelius Vanbusho, Paul Richard, and Henry Burgers, in which they declare that, while none of the people as usual "insisted in our Declaration as your Representatives in General Assembly to serve you gratis," they nevertheless will so serve them.—N. T. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1750. Similar sentiments were expressed when they were re-elected in 1754 after a dissolution of the assembly.—Ibid., Feb. 24, 1754.

11 Francis Lewis, "next Door to the Treasurer's in the Fly," offers for sale "White Sarsnets; white, black, brown, lemon, blue, plum and pink colour'd ¼ Ell and 2 ½ wides Lutestring; green, blue and pink colour'd English Damask, black Alumode, water'd Tabby; blue, brown and black rich Padoysy; white and pink colour'd Ducases; black, white and Cloth colour'd Ballard Sewing Silk," besides window glass, wine, and "Boxes of Bristol Pipes."—N. T. Post-Boy, Sept. 3, 1750.

25 Gov. Clinton reminds the assembly that the government of the province has been, for two years, without any financial support, and urges payment not only for past service, but for future support of the government.—Assem. Jour., II: 276-77.

The provincial council swears in Edward Holland as a member in place of Philip van Cortlandt, deceased, on receiving a royal mandamus announcing him.—Gul. Coun. Min., 376.

30 A notice is printed of a meeting at the Merchants Coffee House on Sept. 11 to take measures against the importation of English copper half-pence. The most effective means of checking their importation, it is believed, would be to follow the example of Boston and Philadelphia merchants and refuse to accept half-pence except at so reduced a value that there would be no advantage in importing them. As matters stand, neighbouring colonies benefit by sending their half-pence to New York. By reducing the value of the half-pence to fourteen for a shilling their importation would undoubtedly be checked, and they would pass at par in Philadelphia and New York, with a somewhat higher rate at Boston. Thirty merchants have agreed to meet at the Coffee House Sept. 11 "at 12 o'clock" to sign such an agreement, to which meeting all other merchants and others interested are invited.—N. T. Post-Boy, Sept. 10, 1750. See Dec. 5, 1753 and Sept. 15.

Nicholas Bayard (see Aug. 14) is allowed by the common council to build a "publik Slaughter house pen and pinfold" (sic) on his own land in the Out Ward, adjoining the land of Mr. Minthorn. The exact location is defined as "on the south Side of the point of upland Near the fresh Water pond being about Eleven or Twelve Chains to the Westward of the high Road or Bowery Road, and three Chains to the Eastward of the fresh Water Pond." The lease is for 21 years from March 25 last, on the same terms "as the Late publik Slaughter houses of this City were leased to John Kelly" (see July 24, 1756).—M. C. C., VII: 393. The lease was ordered to be delivered to him Feb. 12, 1751.—Ibid., VII: 323.

An agreement between the corporation and Bayard on Sept. 24 recited that, as the situation of the slaughter-houses on East River had become inconvenient and was likely to become a great nuisance, and since Bayard proposed to build slaughter-houses at his own expense on his farm to the Bowery Division of the Out Ward,—he was required by this agreement to build "three or more Good Substantial and convenient, and one or more Good and Sufficient pen and pensilps." These were to be deemed the "publik Slaughter houses of the said City of New York." Bayard (or his executors, administrators, and assigns) was given the office of keeper; paying a yearly rent of one peepurricon on the feast-day of St Michael the Archangel. Their houses, with penfold and necessary tackle, were to be finished on or before the following Sept. 12, and thereafter kept by him in repair, scoured, and cleansed. He, or his successor, was not to receive more than one shilling for killing and dressing each head of cattle. Unless these accommodations become too small, no other slaughter-house is to be built in the Bowery Division during ten years thereafter. A number of persons may, however, slaughter elsewhere, on their own premises, for their own use.—From a copy, dated Oct. 1, 1765, of the grant to Bayard, on file in the city clerk's record-room. The original is entered in City Grants, XXIV: 443 et seq. See also Feb. 6, 1752; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 962.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1750

The common council passes an ordinance making it a "Standing Rule of this Board" that, "whenever a Committee shall be appointed for the future for any matter or thing to be done in any of the wards of this City," the "alderman of such ward shall be Chairman of such Committee."—M. G. C., Vol. 304.

1751

On receiving an address from the city council, the provincial council issues an order that the act for preventing the importation of copper money be repealed.—Cal. Coun. Min., 376. See Sept. 8.

The provincial council grants a petition from Jacob Corson for a patent for his ferry between his land on Staten Island and the shore of Bergen in East New Jersey.—Cal. Land Papers, 158; Cal. Coun. Min., 376.

Henry Witten, who has served an apprenticeship with Casper Wister, "Brass Button-Maker in Philadelphia," advertises that he has "set up the same Business in New-York," at a shop in Maiden Lane, between the Fly-Market and the New Dutch Church.—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1750.

Commenting on the presentation "at the Theatre," on the previous Thursday evening, of Addison's tragedy of "Cato," Parker observes: "As it was the fullest Assembly that has appear'd in that House, it may serve to prove, that the Taste of this Place is not so much vitiated, as is sometimes supposed, by the Nobility of Liberty, but that they can prefer a Representation of Virtue, to those of a horse Character.—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 24, 1750.

It is estimated that £314:10 are necessary to repair the Cosepy Battery.—Assemb. Jour., II: 283.

1751

To the inhabitants of New-York there is one collection or custom-house district, kept in the port of New York." For the twelfth months, to this date, there were 232 inbound vessels, and 286 outbound vessels (ships, snows, brigantines, sloops, and schooners).—Douglass, A Summary, Historical and Political (1760), II: 257.

1751

Franklin at Philadelphia, on March 3, 1752, said: "The effect which the discharge of your four guns had upon a fine wire, tied between two strips of glass, puts me in mind of a very similar one of lightning, that I observed at New-York, October 1750, a few days after I left Philadelphia. In company with a number of the gentlemen, I went to take a view of the city from the Dutch church steeple, in which is a clock about twenty or twenty-five feet below the bell. From the clock went a wire through two floors, to the clock-hammer near the bell, the holes in the floor for the wire being perhaps about a quarter of an inch diameter. We were told, that in the spring of 1750, the lightning struck the clock-hammer, and descended along the wire to the clock, melting in its way several spots of the wire, from three to nine inches long, through one-third of its substance, till coming within a few feet of the lower end, it melted the wire quite through, in several places, so that it fell down. The wires, which spurred out of its body, and it got to the end of the wire, flew off to the hinges of a door, shattered the door, and dissipated. In its passage through the holes of the floor it did not do the least damage, which evidences that wire is a good conductor of lightning (as it is of Electricity) promptly. In the summer of 1751, it is not enough, chills, and in this case, had it been continued to the earth, have conducted it without damaging the building."—Quoted in Experiments and Observations on Electricity, made at Philadelphia, by Benjamin Franklin (1769), 180-81. See also The Works of Benj. Franklin, ed. by Bigelow, II: 342.

Franklin added a footnote to "J. B.'s letter, stating that, in the summer of 1751 [June 15, g.m.], after the wire had been replaced by a brass chain, the church was again struck by lightning with the same result. The chain was destroyed, and the door shattered, but the floor was uninjured. He adds: "The steeple, when repair'd, was guarded by an iron conductor, or rod, extending from the foot of the vane-spike down the outside of the building, into the earth.—The newspapers have mentioned, that in 1755 [Aug. 9, g.m.], the lightning fell a third [error for fifth—see July 20, 1761] time on the same steeple, and was safely conducted by the rod; but the particulars are not come to hand."—Experiments and Observations, St. G. Man. Coun. Com. (1809) 419, 419.

For the first, see July 1, 1732.

It is stated in Macoy's How to see New York and its Environs (1756), 44, that, in 1752, "From the belfry of this church [Middle Dutch] Franklin flew his silken kite, and taught the lightning he was not afraid of it. Unfortunately, we have been unable to find any authority supporting this statement.

On order of the provincial council of Oct. 8 (Cal. Coun. Min., 377), a proclamation is issued requiring owners of mills or engines for siting or rolling iron, of every plating forge that works with a tilt hammer, and of every furnace for making steel, erected before June 24 last, to report the situation, with the names of the owners. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 395. This step was taken in conformity with the "Resolution respecting the improvement of the colonies."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 604-5; see also 1750. For the report concerning New York City, see Nov. 3.

The "New-York Subscription Plate" (see Aug. 27) is run for "at the Church Farm, by five Horses, and was by a Horse belonging to—L. Morris, jun."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 21, 1750. This plate was run again the next year.—Ibid, Sept. 9, 1751. See also April 16, 1753.

James Birket rides to New York from Kingsbridge, after a tour of the cities of New England. He records in his journal that he dined, at Kingsbridge, at the tavern of one Stephensons, a Quaker, who keeps one of the Best Eating houses he has visited. He says: "... we had a Bass fish taken out of the river by the door before our Eyes & some very Good oysters," adding: "This is one of the best built houses for a Tavern I have yet seen in America being all built of good Stone the Apartments large & lofty And all the Rooms are a good story high a great deal of room & airy The stair case is neat & commodious & the Rooms are warm & comfortable."—Birket's Journal, 1751, 112-13.

Arriving in town, he "put up at the Sign of the Horse & Cart in the upper part of the City and prow'd to be very bad lodgings, altho 'tis a house much used." He continues: "the wharf & places where there vessels ly are on the Eastside of the Town & for the Whole Length of it there is a good depth of water And all vessels Load & Discharge without the help of boats or lighters which is very convenient, "Neither their Streets nor houses are at all Regular Some being 4 or 5 Story high & Others not above two, Not any of the Modera houses are built w'h the Gable End to the Street as was formerly the fashion amongst all the old Dutch Settlers, but are many of 'em Spacious Gentel houses Some are built of hewn stone Others of English & Also of the Small white Hollands Bricks, which looks neat but not grand, their houses are Generally neat within and well Furnished. Notwithstanding there Still remains too many houses of the Ones we saw. A House that they call Advantage, The Streets (as above) are very Irregular & Crooked & many of 'em much too Narrow they are generally pretty well paved which adds much to the decency & Clean-ness of the place & the Advantage of Carriage, The Water in the Pumps & Springs here is a little of the Brackish kind They fetch the Water all without the Gate that they use for Tea &C & several people get their Living by carting of it into town where they Sell it by the pale &C [see also Oct. 30, 1758].

Their Public Buildings are: first the City Hall a large Strong Stone Building the lower part is Seemingly intended for a Change to meet in, as it Stands all upon Arches and is Open like a Market house; Above Stairs are Apartments for the Gov't Council & Assembly to meet in, and Make Laws for the good of the province, there Also is Other Rooms for the Courts of Justice to Sit in, and Order these Laws to be put in due force & Execution. The next is the Museum of this Building they Have converted the Garrets into a prison for D&D* & fellowes a Comfortable place Say, take it throughout; the Gov't's house is in fort George and makes a good appearance at a distance there was a Church of England Chapel within this fort but was burnt down in the time of their Negro plot. This fort is well Scautered, the Ships as they come up being very low, And chuse by it to the East ward is a fine battery which mounts a great Number of Guns almost Even with the water's edge; There is also five Market houses fixed at proper distances from the water Side & from One Another, Only three of them is much frequented, And I am of Opinion if they were all Fixed in one place it would be much the best; Here are two Episcopal Churches, which are Large & Strong Buildings of Hewn
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1750 Stone, and as it must be Allow’d to be the most fashionable religion, Oct. So it seems to me here as well as in most other parts of North America to Prevail here is also Four Dutch Churches Two of the Lutheran the Other of the Calvinistic Order, All which are Large, & formerly were very much crowded but many of the young People fall off. As do also the yearning to General from the French Church which now has but a Small Congregation, Here is also A Presbyterian Meeting house which is Large, and has great number of that Society which frequents the Same, and duly attend their prayers, Lectures &C 3 times every Sabbath day; One Swiss, and One meeting in French and one in Dutch. The Meeting house is of Brick which is neat, built about Two years ago, 1 Moravian & 1 Whitefield &C do both in private houses [see also Oct. 30, 1748 and 1756].

The People here are very gay in their dress but more particularly in the furniture of their houses &C They have of Late a very Extensive trade to the Bay of Honduras for Log wood which has been of great Service to the Place in making their European Re- mitances for dry goods &C which without this trade pant them a good deal when hills are Scarce.”

They also Build many vessels here of all sizes, And are well Supply’d with Timber from the woods on Long Island and also from Staten Island which I believe to be the Best in this part of the Country as it grows near the Sea and upon a Clay Soil.”

1750 On Jan. 25, 1749 the Houses in this City [Phila.] were Carefully Number’d And found to Amount to 2076 By which it Appears to be the Largest City in our America for in the year 1736 by an Exact Acco And that upon Oath, there was only 1760 Dwelling houses in Boston and in New York in the year 1751 there was 1000 houses” [see 1755].—Ibid., 66-67.

Daniel Obrist advises that he has a stage-boat for transport- ing both people and merchandise which, “if Wind and Weather permit, shall attend at the late Col. Moore’s Wharf in New-York, every Wednesday in every Weeks, (and at other Times if Occasion) and to proceed to the Ferry at Amboy on Thursday, where, on Friday, they will board a Stage Wagon, well-lined, shall be ready to receive them, and immediately proceed to Borden’s-Town, where there is another Stage Boat ready to receive them, and proceed directly to Philadelphia. All People may depend on the best Usage, and all Passengers and Merchandise shall be transported at the same Rates as are customary from New-Brunswick to Trenton: And as the Passages by Water are much shorter and easier perform’d than the Brunswick-Way, and the Roads generally drier, it is hoped this Way will be found the most deserving of Encouragement.”—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 25, 1750. Cf. March 25, 1751.

Gov. Clinton, in a brief message to the assembly, refers to the “Hound” which he has been ordered to send “to the Governor, and recommends their completion.—Assemb. Jour., II: 292. See Oct. 25, 1747 and Nov. 24, 1750.

An anonymous writer discusses trade conditions in New York. The “great Frauds carried on in the manufacturing Wheat into Flour, in the Article of Bread Beef, Pork, Bacon, are so notorious abroad,” he says, that he has often been ashamed to own that he is a native of this place. When such commodities are wanted, only enough are purchased to satisfy present wants “till some Vessel arrives from Philadelphia, for a Supply of better Commodities of the Sort.”—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 25, 1750. This complaint, in the shape of a remonstrance from the grand jury of the city of New York, was laid before the assembly on Oct. 24 (q.v.).

The Assembly receives from the grand jury for the city of New York a remonstrance, stating that for some years past many complaints have been made in the West Indies and other places regarding the poor quality of New York flour, “the staple Com- modity of this Province.” The grand jury seeks action by the legislature in this matter.—Assemb. Jour., II: 294-95. For an early complaint, see Dec. 19, 1715.

On Oct. 25, a number of merchants also addressed a petition to the legislature, complaining that “of late Years such great Abuses have been committed in the packing, marking, and selling, New-York Flour — that those Markets [French and Spanish West Indies] have absolutely refused to purchase the same.” These merchants also asked for action to overcome these evils.—Ibid., II: 295-96. In response, a law was passed, regulating the exportation of flour.—See Nov. 24.

One John Durgen, having been convicted of stealing, and being by Law entitled to his Clergy,” was last week “burnt in the Hand.”—N. T. Post-Boy, Oct. 29, 1750. The old English law of “Benefit of Clergy,” whereby an offender purges himself of a felony, was not wholly repealed until 1827.—Cen. Dict. (title “Clergy”) citing the 7 & 8 Geo. IV.

The king’s birthday is celebrated. A house at the corner of Pearl St. near Whitehall Slip takes fire, “it is supposed from some Squibs thrown by the Boys.”—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1750.

This fire induced one of the citizens to write to James Parker, for publication, some verses for the safety of the city, in which he says, in part: “It is well known, that the Fire in this Town was so late, as that in Duke Street, the School House [see Feb. 23], and This, happen’d to be situate within Reach of the Rivers; by which Means, the Engines could be supplied without great Difficulty.

But suppose a Fire should come to a Head — in the Heart of our City, how should we master it? The Wells and Cisterns in a Neighbourhood, we know are soon dry . . .”

“I propose, that a Drain, or Brick Channel, may be carried up at Low-Water Mark, from under the Long-Bridge, in Broad Street, that at three or four convenient Places opposite to Turbay Street, a large Pump or two be fixed in such Drain or Channel, to serve in Case of Fires in those Streets or Neighbourhood; that the Drain end in a large Well or Basin, near City-Hall, having three or four pumps to serve in all the Neighbourhood about that publick Building; and perhaps an Expeidient may be found to convey the Water from the Unsubstantious Foundations in that Place, or other, to other parts of the City remote from the Water Side. The same I would propose, to be put in Practice from under the Fly-Market, up to, or near the Widow Rutgers’s Brew-House, as also in any other convenient Part of the City; so that we were sure to find Water in any Part of the Town, although remote from the River Side; for as we are still striving to bring the River farther off, by wharfing out, we ought to be secure another Way. I think it would not be amiss, if the Magistrates should reserve in their Grants, certain Sinks, Slips or Drains, to let the River Water come to its old Stations, for such Use; . . .”—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1750. Cf. Jan. 11, 1751.

The assembly orders that the commissioners appointed under an act for repairing and completing the fortifications of the colony, and for building a new residence for the governor (see Oct. 19), shall submit to the house sworn statements of the disposition of all money entrusted to them.—From the original order in the J. Papers in folder lettered “Twenty-eight Documents,” N. Y. Hist. Soc. The assembly made addition provision for this work on Nov. 24 (q.v.).

Sheriff John Ayscough, of the city and county of New York, makes a return that there are no mills or engines for slitting or rolling iron, and similar works, as is in his “bailiwick.” The same return is made by the sheriffs of other counties. Joseph Sackett, Jr., reports that there are iron works at Murderskill, called finery works, supposed to be in Ulster Co., belonging to the estate of Nathaniel Hazard, deceased, and Samuel Braster.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 595. See Oct. 10. On Dec. 14, Clinton issued a certificate that there was a platting forge with a tilt hammer, but not in operation, belonging to Laurence Scrailley, blacksmith, at Wavaganda, Orange Co., and that there were no platting forges, mills, or engines for slitting or rolling iron, or any furnaces for making steel, within this government.—Ibid., 596. See Dec. 5.

For the second time, the city issues a municipal bond. The first occasion was on March 31, 1731 (q.v.). The present bond is issued to Christopher Basterck, merchant. It provides for a payment to him of £300 on Nov. 5, 1752, under penalty of £520; and is to cover the expense of building the pier at the west end of Coenties Dock, which has already cost £2241157.—M. G. C., V: 134; also see April 26, 1750. To pay this obligation (which it did on Jan. 15, 1754), the city was obliged to borrow from the excise revenue, under a special act of assembly passed for the purpose.—Ibid., V: 434. After this the issuing of corporate bonds became frequent. —Colonial Hist. (Index). VIII: 188, title “Bond.” See also Man. Com. Coun. (1869), 598.

The “Play-House is new floor’d, and made very warm.” — N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1750.

Parker advises a resident he has made “All the Twenty-four Songs of the famous English Archer, bold Robin Hood.”—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 5, 1750.
1730 The "House in the Commons, formerly called, the Horse & Nov. Manger (see 1749, belonging to Edward Broomhead, Coachman to the late Governor Burrist," is the subject of an advertisement of one George Dobkins, who desires to discharge any outstanding mortgages upon the property.—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1750.

"We hear Capt. Tingley, in the Ship Indian King, from Hol- land, has arrived at Sandy-Hook, with a Number of Passengers on the River board."—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1750. On Nov. 19, the report stated that "Capt. Tingley, mentioned in our last, is come up to town, and has brought in about 340 Palatines, all well."—Ibid., Nov. 19, 1750.

In this connection, Parker prints the following request: "An eminent Professor in the greatest University in Germany, has lately desired a Gentleman of Pennsylvania, to send him an Account of the first Settlement of Germans in North-America, and what Encouragement was then given them, with the Situation and Privileges they now enjoy in order to have it printed. Now as the first German Settlers were several Palatine Families, who came into New-York Province; and for their Encouragement had a Patent for Land near Newbury [Newburgh] in the High-Lands, with a Glebe of 500 Acres for a Lutheran Minister, &c. If any Person is acquainted with that Affair, and finds his Histo- rical History of it written, to send it to the Printer hereof, as it will greatly contribute to the Satisfaction of that Professor, and unde- ceive the poor Germans, so it will be thankfully received, and communicated to the Publick; and will, doubtless, much oblige all Lovers of Truth, Liberty, and Property."—Ibid., Nov. 17, 1750.

A provincial statute is passed "to restrain Tavern Keepers and Inholders from Selling Strong Liquors to Servants & Apprentices & from giving Large credit to others." No tavern-keeper is allowed to sell liquors to a servant or apprentice without the consent of his or her master. Nor is a tavern-keeper permitted to receive from a servant or apprentice any clothing or other goods in payment for liquors or in any way. See Dec. 3, 1657. A tavern-keeper is further prohibited from giving credit over six shillings to any person other than a traveller.—Col. Law N. Y., III: 756-59.

A provincial statute is enacted "to prevent the Exportation of Unmer- chantable Flower & the False Tacing of Bread & Flower Casks." This act is passed because the "Flower of this Colony (its Greatest Staple) has in a Great measure lost its Reputation abroad" (see Oct. 24). Every boltier of flour or baker of bread is ordered to pro- vide himself with a brand mark with which he is to designate every cask exported from the city of New York. All boltiers and bakers are also notified to enter their brand marks with the clerk of the court of general sessions.—Col. Law N. Y., III: 788-91. The brand marks were entered in the Minutes of the Court of General Sessions, March 21, 1750 (manuscript volume in custody of clerk, clerk's office, Centre St.).

A provincial law is passed which provides that the laws of the colony he revised, digested, and printed. For a consideration of $50, William Livingston and William Smith, Jr., agree "to revise digest & collect in one Volume exact Copies of all the Laws in Force in this Colony" from the revolution (1692) to and including the present session of the general assembly. At the rate of 20 shillings for every sheet of printed paper, James Parker undertakes to print the book "on the best Paper & large Folio's & with the usual Tapes for Such Work, and to deliver one Printed Book thereof compleatly bound in Calves Skin" to the governor, one to the counsel, and one to the general assembly. This act repeals the one of Nov. 27, 1741 (p. 2).—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 875.

Under the authority of this act, the edition of the statutes made by Livingston & Smith was published on Aug. 10, 1752 (p. 2). The same editors published the colonial laws enacted since 1751, down to and including May 22, 1766.—Ibid., in "Explanatory Notes," p. 2. See also Dec. 26, 1761. The work done by Livingston and Smith in 1750-2 was previously undertaken by Horsmanden in 1741.—See Nov. 13, 1741; July 4, 1745.

The provincial legislature passes an act for the "Relief of Insolvent Debtors with Respect to the Imprisonment of their Persons." If the debts of any person confined in jail for insol- vency do not exceed $50, he or she may appear before a court and submit an account of all assets and liabilities. Wearing apparel, bedding, tools and instruments of trade, not over $5 in value, are exempted from the operation of this statute. The debtor must promise not to swear that he is not a bankrupt, and not to promise the court that the property has been sold, leased, or otherwise disposed of for self-aggrandizement or to de- fraud creditors. Satisfied with the truth of such declarations, the court may order an assignment of the debtor's goods for the benefit of creditors, and the debtor shall be discharged from custody.—Col. Law N. Y., III: 822-28. Another act respecting debtors was passed Nov. 25 and passed the colony. See Dec. 3, 1750. The act provides that there is newly opened a Tavern, at the Sign of the Bunch of Grapes, near the Widow Rutger's Brew-house, going up towards the Cart and Horse."—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 3, 1750. In a later advertisement, the prop- rietor of the newly opened tavern is mentioned as George Ed- monds.—Ibid., Dec. 31, 1750. Within a few months, Edmonds had removed to the well-known Horse and Cart Tavern.—See June 3, 1751. The Widow Rutgers' brew-house, often mentioned as a landmark in property descriptions, stood at the present 47, 49, and 51 Maiden Lane, near William St. Of the "Bunch of Grapes" Tavern mentioned by John Adams on Aug. 20, 1774 (p. 2), and by Bayles, in Old Taverns of N. Y., 169.

The provincial council issues an order on receiving from the Duke of Bedford a letter enclosing the act of parliament relating to American iron. —Col. Coun. Min., 378. See Oct. 10, and Nov. 3. James Alexander, who has just been restored to his seat in the provincial council (Col. Coun. Min., 378), writes from New York to Cavelladler Colden in part as follows: "I have dined once with the Gov't [Clinton] at the flort & once at Rutgerfoords, my wife & I was with the Club on flordy night last at the flort, & the Club is to be floury night next. The Club is very cheerfull and in good health, you have been his toast every of those three times that I have been in Company with him, flordy night M'r Chlonton said fault with his toast of for that you were her Constant toast."—From the original letter, preserved with the Goldene Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Gay's famous opera (the first musical drama written in Eng- lish), "The Beggar's Opera," is presented at "the Theatre in Nassau-Street."—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 10, 1750. See also Jan. 7, 1751.

Clinton sends a circular letter to the president of the council of Connecticut, and to the governors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsyl- vania, and North Carolina; inviting each to send commissioners to a meeting with the Six Nations at Albany in June.—Col. Hist. Mss., Eng., 395. See 1751.

The report of a committee of the common council for "sur- veying the Water Lotts Contiguous to Pecks slip" is read (but not entered of record); whereupon, the board proposes to Benja- min Peck that, if he will "quit Claim to the Street Lying to the South east of his Lott," they will grant him a water lot 75 feet in breadth back of his lot, to extend to the River. He refuses to "comply" with this proposal.—M. G. C., V: 320. Again, on Feb. 12, 1751, the board proposed to him that, if he would release this street, they would grant the water lot to him, in fee simple, at a yearly rental of 16 pence per foot, and pay him £2. —Ibid., M. G. C., V: 322-24. He accepted this proposal on March 22, with the proviso that the yearly rental should commence
A. TITLE-PAGE OF FIRST EDITION OF SMITH'S HISTORY OF NEW YORK, 1757. SEE P. 687.

B. PAGE OF SMITH'S MS. "CONTINUATION," CONTAINING REFERENCE TO THE CONFLAGRATION OF MARCH 18, 1741. SEE PP. 565, 566, 687.
—March 25, 1752, and that the board would pay him £1210, and permit him "to put the Beams of his house into the Walls of the ferry house which may hereafter be built by this Corporation on their Water Lot Next Adjoining" to his lot. This the board agreed to—Ibid., V: 339–40. See March 6, 1752.

21 Restored for "upwards of 40 years past" of the French Protestant Reformed Church in New York, dies. On the following Saturday, it was interred in the French Church, "near the Pulpit he had so long occupied."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1750. This interesting evidence proves that there were burials in the French church, as in Trinity and the Dutch churches, in New New York City.

31 "Ann Stockton, lately arrived from England, has just opened an Ordinary, at the House lately possessed by Mr. Richard Cooke Clark, opposite to Mr. Frank's in Dock's Street."—.... Dinner's and suppers are "from One Shilling to Two Shillings Price, dress'd after the best Manner."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1750. This house "in Dock's Street" could not have been the Exchange Coffee House or King's Arms, as some writers have assumed, since at this time that tavern was on Broad St., just north of the corner of Water and Broad Sts. The house referred to must have been that from which Whitehall was changed when he became a man in the spring of 1750 (see May 7, 1750). At any rate, Ann Stockton appears to have abandoned the idea of tavern-keeping almost immediately, having been "advised to teach young Ladies to sew and embroider, and Millinery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1751.

1751

—In this year, George Washington, 19 years of age, was appointed adjutant-general for the Northern District of Virginia.—Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 268.

31 In this year, Maerschalck made a survey of the city from Park (Fulton) St. north to Reade St., and from Broadway to the North River. His drawing shows the old line of fortifications and gates along Chambers St.; also the "Boulding Green," between Warren and Chambers Sts., near the river. This manuscript plan was recently in the collection of old maps owned by Francis V. Whitehall (successor to Amerman & Ford). See description of Pl. 34, pp. 275–276, Vol. I.

In this year, Maerschalck also made a map of Kip's Bay, which, also, in 1910, was in the Ford collection.

—In this year, Archibald Kennedy wrote and published, from the press of James Parker, the Importance of Gaining and Preserving the Friendship of the Indians to the British Interest Considered. It is one of the timely and important tracts written by Kennedy, relating to the political and economic affairs of the province. A letter at the end was written by Benjamin Franklin.

—In this year, Archibald Kennedy, the receiver-general published (N. Y. Govt. Print), a plan advocating a plan of union for the colonies. He urged a yearly meeting of commissioners from the various colonies at New York or Albany, to arrange the quotas of troops, to apportion the expense, and to provide for joint payments for the importation of immigrants. There is a copy of this pamphlet in the John Carter Brown Library at Providence (see that library's catalogue, III: 955, 975).

—During the early part of this year, little else was done in New York than prepare for the great Indian congress at Albany. Gov. Clinton invited representatives of all the colonies from New Hampshire to South Carolina to meet the Six Nations for compacting a league.—See Dec. 18, 1750; Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 612. The journal of the commissioners is in the Mass. Archives, XXXVIII: 160. See also Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 279. See, further, April 12.

3 Jan. Alexander Colden is appointed surveyor-general with his father (see April 19, 1750)—Col. Gann. Min., 378. On Feb. 19, 1752 (g.v.), he assumed the total responsibility of the office.

7 An advertisement announcements the presentation, at the theatre in Nassau St. (see Feb. 26, 1750), on Jan. 14, of "The Beggar's Opera," with entertainments between the acts: at the end of the first act, "a song about a "Beau," after the act on stage, a Dance, and at the end of the play, "the Drunken Peasant," all "by a Gentleman lately from London." To all this will be added a farce entitled "Miss in her Teens," and an oratorio, sung by Mr. Keen, for whose benefit the performance is given.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 7, 1751.

8 The Staten Island ferry-boat was caught fast in the ice and driven by the tides back and forth before the city until "the next Evening," when the passengers, "without Sustenance," are put aboard "at the lower Ferry in the Narrows, on the Long Island Side."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 14, 1751.

14 "Or'der'd That the Committee Appointed for Leasing the Church Lands have Power to Agree with Dick Dye about Leaving a Street between the Church Lands and his upon such Terms as they shall think Convenient."—Ibid., II: 164. See March 9.

The committee of Trinity vestry, empowered on June 15, 1750 (g.v.), to employ workmen to build galleries, pews, and other inside work for "St. George's Chappel" (so called for the first time in the records), advertises that it will meet every Friday at 1 o'clock at the house of William Cook, near the city hall, to treat with carpenters and masons who will undertake to do this work.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 14 and 28, 1751. The committee reported to the vestry on Feb. 4 that workmen had been engaged.—Trin. Min. (MS).

A notice is published declaring that the "Keeping Accomplice, and giving Credit for Postage of Letters" is troublesome and inconvenient, and that hereafter no letters will be delivered at the post-office till the postage is paid.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1751.

James Parker, in answer to reports "that Mr. [Thomas] Keen [see Post-Boy, Jan. 7, for his Benefit Night on Monday last, had caused a greater Number of Tickets to be printed than the House would hold," certifies that "there were but 161 Pit Tickets, 10 Boxes, and 112 Gallery Tickets, printed in all; and it is well known that as large a Number have been in the House at one Time." He explains that, "Tho' it was then determined not to receive any Money at the Door, yet it was at a time found to be a Measure impracticable to be followed without Great Offence; and whose Business could not permit to come in Time, have since had their Money return'd."—Ibid., Jan. 21, 1751. The small capacity of the "Playhouse" or "Theatre" on Nassau St. appears to be thus definitely established. For its exact location and history, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 968.

A man "lately come to Towro," who "keeps at Scotch John- ney's, upon the Dock," advertises for pupils to form a Latin school.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1751. Some time prior to this date, John Thompson, generally known as "Scotch Johnny," opened a tavern on Whitehall Slip near the balloon battery, at the "Sign of the Crown and Thistle."—Ibid. His tavern was patronized by travellers passing back and forth on the ferry, and was also, very properly, the meeting-place of the St. Andrew's Society.

Thompson retired in 1758, and was succeeded by George Burns, who had been conducting a tavern on Wall St., "opposite the Presbyterian Meeting House," at the sign of Admiral Warren. Burns retained the old sign for a time, but, by Nov. 17, 1760 (g.v.), had replaced it by the Sign of King George's Head. On June 13, 1765 (g.v.), Burns having moved to the Province Arms, in Broadway, John Graham, as proprietor of the Duke of York's Head, also at Whitehall, announced that he had moved to the house lately kept by George Burns. His stay was brief. Perhaps by this time the old tavern had lost its popularity. By May 14, 1764, Graham had removed to the "Sign of the Marquis of Granby in Elizabeth Town."—N. Y. Gaz., May 14, 1764.

Notice is given that a committee of the vestry of Trinity Church will meet every Friday, at 2 o'clock in the Afternoon, at the House of William Cook, near the City-Hall...—N. Y. Gaz., Jan. 21, 1751.

"That well-acustomed Inn, known by the Name, of the Sign of the Horse & Carr," is advertised by Thomas Buenna to be let.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 28, 1751. See June 3.

Cdwallader Colden writes from "Coldengham" to Prof. Carolus Linneus, of Upsala, Sweden, in part as follows: "I never saw an Opossum nor heard of any in this Province I think Seals have been seen in the Bay before you come up to the City of New York on rocks near Staten Island."—From the original letter, with Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Compare Kalm's Travels, Oct. 30, 1748.

"A Large Stable and Chaise-House, that will hold two or three Chaises, behind White hall Slip, baking Cопи Battery, is advertised to be let by Obadiah Hunt, living near the same," who states "its ready for receiving Horses for and from the Ferry-Boats, and seldom wants Custom, if Attendance."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 4, 1751; see also ibid., Feb. 17, 1752.

A windstorm breaks, or bends down, the "Iron Work, Ball and Cock" on the spire of the Presbyterian church.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 18, 1751.
“The publick Whipper of the City of New-York being lately dead; if any Person loelines to accept that Office with Twenty Pounds may apply to the Mayor, and be enterred.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 11, 1754.

An advertisement, seeking the return of a run-away negro boy, states that he “Had a on a blue Watch-Coat.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 11, 1754. As we have seen, as early as Nov. 9, 1698 (q. q.), that blue was the colour adopted for the “Liverey” of the mayor's marshal. At some subsequent time, it appears to have been adopted for that also of the watch.

The common council appoints a committee to regulate Queen Street (part of the present Pearl St.), “from Alderman Benson’s Market to the Bowery.” — M. G. C., V: 337. Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1008.

The common council appoints a committee to run the lines between the lands of the corporation and those of Jacob Duyckman in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward. — M. G. C., V: 337. The order involves determining the line of the Common Lands. G. F. map of the Harlem line and surrounding territory, drawn by Francis Maerschalck in 1750 (see Jan. 1750).

This date is found on a manuscript survey of the Trinity Church property, drawn by Francis W. Maerschalck, city surveyor. It is reproduced and described in Vol. III, Addenda, Pt. 3-6. See also M. G. C., V: 337.

Frances Moore, widow of the late John Moore, a prominent merchant, advertises for sale “Four Lots of Ground, situate on the South Side of Crown-Street, being one half of the Ground commonly known by the Name of Barbecue’s Garden; each Lot containing Foot 25 Feet, and are about 100 Feet.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 18, 1751. On May 14, 1753, Mrs. Moore and John Barberie of Perth Amboy advertised various lots to be sold, including “A Lot of Ground situate at the West Side of Crown-Street, adjoining the New Dutch-Church Garden, being one half of the Ground, commonly known by the Name of Barberie’s Garden, containing about 100 Feet Square.” — Ibid., May 14, 1753.

Although Mayor Holland asserts his claims to the profits of the several markets, as “Clerk of the Same,” the common council leases the “Stalls and Standings” of the markets to Bartholomew Skaats (a goldsmith), for one year, from May 1, 1751, to May 1, 1752, for £106. At the same time, they lease to Skaats the “Docks of this City,” for the same period, at £250, he giving security and agreeing to take 60 scow loads of mud and dirt out of the dock. It is also ordered that he repair, at the city's expense, any damage to the dock, from time to time, as directed by the alderman and common council man of any ward. — M. G. C., V: 275-276. Skaats had been lessee of the dock and slips since April 26, 1740. — Ibid., IV: 488; see also Ibid., V: 19, 83, 112, 140, 148, 168, 188, 214, 218.

Mayor Holland renewed his contention the following year concerning the rents from the “Maps.” In 1753, he was succeeded in his office by John P. Moore, and the rents from the “Maps” (and ibid., Errata, VIII: 134). See also 1755 (ibid., V: 396) and 1754 (ibid., V: 441). After his death in 1756 (ibid., VI: 74), the common council appointed a committee, Jan. 25, 1757, to confer with his executors, in order to “settle the fees of the stalls and standings of the several markets” received by him. The committee was empowered to commence legal action, if necessary, against them. — Ibid., VI: 74.

On April 1, 1760, a new committee was appointed, with powers extended to treat also with the executors of the late mayor John Cruger (Sr.) and Stephen Bayard, and with the present mayor (John Cruger, Jr.) for the same purpose. — Ibid., VI: 209. This committee was allowed to retain “Mr Smith the Elder” as counsel. — Ibid., VI: 220. The executors of Mayor Holland having sued the city for the fees derived from liquor licenses (ibid., VI: 192), the committee was able to report, on Sept. 18, 1763, that the executors concurred that they were willing to pay to the city “All the Monies in their hands by them Respectively Received for Licences to Tavern Keepers deducting one half of the Amount of what the said Stalls and Standings Sold For During their Respective majorities.” The common council accepted the agreement, reserving the right to retain in future all the monies derived from stalls and standings; unless an explanatory clause could be added to the charter, appropriating a sum not over £600 per annum for the use of the mayor, and the remainder for the use of the city. The common council accepted the report, and a committee was appointed to prepare the amendment to the charter, and solicit its adoption. — Ibid., VI: 225.

A committee of the common council is chosen to inquire into the matter of rents due to brick-makers for brick kils. — M. G. C., V: 325.

The common council orders “that Every Merchant not born in this City who shall hereafter apply for the freedom thereof shall pay the Sum of five pounds.” — M. G. C., V: 326. The native-born merchant required to pay only £3.— Ibid., IV: 97. See also April 24, 1691.

The committee of Trinity vestry “Appointed [see Jan. 10] to Agree with Dirck Dey about the Street between the Church’s Land and the said Dirck Dye’s Land” reports that it has been agreed with him that he shall leave fifteen feet and the Church Twenty five feet for a Publick Street And that he pay to the Church Sixty pounds by the first of May next.” — Trin. Min. (MS.). The agreement, which is entered in these minutes, shows that a street 40 ft. wide is to run from Broadway to the North River. The original MS. of this agreement between the wards and vestrymen of Trinity Church and Dirck Dey is preserved in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc., with MSS. relating to churches. It is dated Feb. 16, 1750 (1751), and has reference to the opening of Partition St. (so named from its location), which is the present Fulton St. (named in 1832 by Mayor of Broadway. — See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000. For the cession of this street, with others, by Trinity Corporation to the city, see Sept. 18, 1761.

“The Committee Appointed to Petition the Corporation for the Watter Lots behind Trinity Church” reports, on Mar. 20, that the Trin. Min. have surveyed and sold a Draft made; and sent for Messrs Bayard Schuyler and Roosevelt who have Lots Bounding upon the Churches Land, and who they were informed Claimed some part of what was Conceived the Churches Land, That Mr Bayard Declared he was Satisfied with the Line as the Force now Stands, But Mr Schuyler and Mr Roosevelt insisting that by the said Draft they shall Lose three feet of Ground of Each Lott, and that they had a Right to the said three foot and the Committee having Conceived it would be very Difficult and Expensive for the Church to Appertain [ascertain] their Right to the said three foot of Ground, thought it Proper to Agree that they and the Owners of the Lots to the Northward should take in the said three foot and that a Pricket or Red line be made in the aforesaid Draft three feet to the Southward of the present Black line Beginning at Lombard Street and Running to Low Water Mark be the Division Line or North Bounds of the Churches Lands and the South Bounds of those that Claim Land to the Northward.” — Ibid., June 1752.

The prisoners in the city ball appeal for fuel, having not even “one Stick to burn,” and having been without fire for several days. Unless relief is forthcoming they must “unavoidably perish.” — Ibid., V: 138; see also Ibid., V: 171. The Reverend Mr. Artz, on Mar. 11, 1756, they addressed a letter of thanks, in verse, to all their benefactors. — Ibid., March 18, 1757.

Parliament passes “An act for regulating the commencement of the year; and for correcting the calendar now in use.” The act was introduced in the house of lords in an eloquent address by Lord Chesterfield on Feb. 25, 1751, and seconded by the learned Earl of Macclesfield. For the report of their speeches, see The Parliamentary Hist. of Eng. (1817), X: 97-92; also Chesterfield’s Letters to his son, III: letter No. 215. The act explains that, "...in England, 'the legal reputation of the year,' which heretofore began March 25 (the date of the Feast of the Anunciation), has been 'attended with divers inconveniences,' some of which are described. It states that the Julian Calendar, hereof in use, has been discovered to be erroneous. This error is explained, as well as the confusion which would arise if not removed. The people of this country have already adopted the new system, and a country, and tend to prevent mistakes and disputes in or concerning the dates of letters, and accounts, if the public correction be received and established in his Majesty's dominions."

It is therefore enacted that the old "supputation" shall not be made use of after the last day of Dec., 1751; "and that the first day of January next following ... shall be reckoned ... to be the first day of the year" 1752; and the first day of January
After Jan. 1, 1754, "the several days of each month shall go on, and be reckoned and numbered in the same order; and the feast of Easter, and other movable feasts thereon depending, shall be ascertained according to the same method, as they now are," until Sept. 17, 1752, inclusive. The "natural days immediately following" Sept. 17, 1754, shall be "called, reckoned and accounted" to be Sept. 14, "omitting for that time only the eleven intermediate nominal days of the common calendar," and the days that follow shall be in numerical order from Sept 14," according to the order and succession of days now used in the present calendar.

The act further provides that "all acts, deeds, writings, notes and other instruments of what nature or kind soever, whether ecclesiastical or civil, publick or private, which shall be made, executed or signed, upon or after the said first day of January . . . [1752], shall bear date according to the said new method of supputation. The two fixed terms of St. Hilary and St. Michael (Michaelmas), in England, and also all courts are to be held on the same nominal days. All "meetings and assemblies of any bodies politic or corporate, either for the election of any officers or members thereof, or for any such officers entering upon the execution of their office, resigning the same, or for any cause whatsoever, which . . . are to be holden and kept on any fixed or certain day of any month . . . shall . . . after the said second day of September, be holden and kept upon or according to the same respective nominal days and times . . . [as now], but which shall be computed according to the said new method of numbering and reckoning, the days of the said calendar year shall be six days sooner than the respective days whereon the same are now holden and kept . . . ."

For continuing and preserving the calendar, or method of reckoning, and computing the days of the year in the same regular course, as near as may be, for all time to come, it is further enacted that every hundredth year, beginning with 1800 (1800, 1900, 2000, 2100, 2200, 2300, etc.), except only every fourth hundredth year (of which the year 2000 shall be the first), "shall not be esteemed or taken to be bissextile or leap years, but shall be taken to be common years," of 365 days and no more. The years 2000, 2400, 2800, and every other fourth hundredth year, from the year 2000 inclusive, and also all leap years at present reckoned, shall for the future be esteemed leap years, consisting of 366 days, "in the same sort and manner as is now used with respect to every fourth year.

The act prescribes that Easter and the other movable feasts are to be observed according to the new calendar. Annexed to the act are tables and rules which shall be prefixed to future editions of the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England instead of the calendar, tables, and rules at present prefixed to it.

The printer was to be continued to be "employed to celebrate, or anticipate the time of payment of any rent, annuity, or sum of money, which shall become payable by virtue of any custom or agreement now subsisting, or which shall be made, signed, sealed, or entered into, before Sept. 14 or shall it operate the time of the delivery of goods, the commencement or expiration of any lease or demise of land, etc., or of any contract, or the time of attaining the age of 21 years, or the expiration of apprenticeship. The same respective natural days and times when these and other things are appointed to be performed shall prevail, until the full number of years or days shall expire as prescribed in such agreement, law, etc."

A house and lot on "Golden-Hill" are advertised for sale. The lot fronts on "Orange-street," and the rear is on "Rider-street."

In a petition to the common council, Trinity corporation seeks a grant of the water lots fronting the church land, described as the "Lands fronting their School house Church yard and Ground from the Rear of their Lott into the North River," 200 feet beyond low-water mark, to 60 feet wide. The application is made "for the publick." The city council, to which the suggestion is referred, has not decided upon the propriety of the grant as yet. The petition is granted, with a yearly rental of threepence per foot, and a committee is appointed to examine the premises and have them surveyed.—M. G. C.; V: 218. See Feb. 15, 1703, for an earlier grant.

On March 24, the committee reported that it had met a committee of Trinity and proposed that the city release a strip of land formerly owned by Nicholas Roosevelt, "in order to make the Slip at the End of Thomas Street most useful and Convenient for the Publick." This the Trinity committee agreed to, with the understanding that the city would make, at its own expense, "an Ell at the end of that Slip;" and this, the committee of the common council agreed, ought to be done "whenever the said Slip is Carried out."

The report recommended that one of the conditions of the grant be that Trinity "Leave a Street [later Greenwich St.] along high water mark," 40 feet wide; and also that, at a distance of 335 feet from that Street (which would be along the line of low-water mark), "another Street [later Washington St.] be Left;" 40 feet wide; perpendicular to the first mentioned street; and, thirdly, that, at a distance of 200 feet beyond low-water mark, "another Street [West St. . . .] be Left," 40 feet wide and parallel to the first two streets mentioned, to be taken out of the 200 feet, according to a Draft or plan made by Mr francis Marshack. This report was approved by the common council, who ordered that the draft of a deed be prepared accordingly.—Ibid., V: 310–311. On May 24, the draft was presented and approved, and ordered to be engrossed and executed.—Ibid., V: 337; City Grants, Liber C: 2135; Man. Com. Coun. (1798), 760. Maercahck's plan, 27, p. 9, Vol. III, dated Feb. 18, 1751, is probably the "Draft or plan" here referred to.

It is ordered by the common council "that no Top sell [top-sail] or Sea Vessells whatsoever Do Lay along the Peer of the Great Dock between the first of March and the first of December every or any year Unless such Vessell shall pay the Sum of Ten Shillings for every Day that it remains till the Calendar Year."—M. C. C., V: 547. Cf. dockage rates of March 24, 1683 (p. v.), at which time no extra dockage fee was required unless the ship "Lye Above one month."

Daniel Obrien advertises a "Stage-Boat," to carry passengers and goods between New York and Philadelphia, and will attend at the late Col. Moore's Wharf in New York. The route is "to Mrs. John Cluck's, near Amboy Ferry, . . . where there is a Wharf, Store-house, and good Entertainment," and whence a "Stage-Wagon" proceeds "to Borden's Town, where there is another Stage Boa . . . to proceed directly to Philadelphia. He gives times of departures, etc., and adds: "as Passages this Way are generally performed in 48 Hours less than they can be by Way of New Brunswick, it is hoped the Undertaking will meet with the Encouragement it deserves."—N. T. Post-Boy, March 25, 1751. Cf. Oct. 13, 1750. For earlier references to the Amboy route, see April 3, 1752. Charles Dutens, near the Long Bridge, sells "Diamond Rings, Mourning, Fancy, Enamelled, or Motto do. [dittto] Stone Buttons set in Gold, Ear-Rings, Solitaires, Stay-Hooks, Seamless or Lockets . . . He also sells Rubens, Saphires, Diamonds, Emeralds, or any other kind of Stones, after the newest Fashion. . . ."—N. T. Post-Boy, March 25, 1751.

A teacher's advertisement reads: "Reading and Writing, in Apr. Dutch, French, and Latin, with Arithmetic and Geography, are carefully taught, and due Attendance given, by Reinhold Jan Klockhoff, at the House of Mr. Bratt, wherein the Widow of Mr. J. P. Zenger [Aug. 4, 1753] now lives, upon Golden-Hill, in New York; also sewing and darning, or other Needle Work, carefully taught, by the Wife of the said Klockhoff."—N. T. Post-Boy, April 1, 1751. Such instruction was quite common (see Oct. 26, 1747; Aug. 6, 1759, Nov. 6, 1752; May 31, 1756, and Jan. 30, 1758. A house and lot on "Golden-Hill" are advertised for sale. The lot fronts on "Orange-street," and the rear is on "Rider-street."

Henry Valentine explains that Golden Hill was the name of a "place of public resort, in early times called Vandercliff's Orchard," which was "situated along the East River, in the vicinity of the present John Street and lay there for the use of_covered with Cliff street." He says that "This tavern was, for over fifty years, one of the most frequented suburban houses of entertainment; and also that "It gave the name to a part of the present John street, which for many years was called Golden Hill."—Man. Com. Coun. (1856), 467. See to last notice in the New-York Gazetteer, and the Country
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

12. The "Deputies of the United States" from Gov. Wentworth of New Hampshire, Gov. Ogle of Maryland, Gov. Hamilton of Pennsylvania, and Gov. Phips of Massachusetts, regarding a proposed meeting of commissioners and Indians at Albany in June.—Cal. Coun. Min., 299. On May 24, a letter from Gov. Hamilton stated that he declined to do anything with the meeting, but would send a present (ibid., 379) and this he did (ibid., 380). See 1751.

16. "Richard the Third," to which he added the farce "The Beau in the Sudds."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 24, 1751. A change of program was advertised on the 29th.—Ibid., April 29, 1751. Keen and Murray, we may conclude, were equal partners.

26. The common council orders "that all and every the Tanners of this City do fence Round the Several Tan Flits and flats [pp. 137-139], May 23, 1751 at the North Side of the fresh Water."—M. C. C., V: 355.

29. . . . this day, a great Cricket Match is to be play’d on our Commons, by a Company of Londoners against a Company of New-Yorkers.——N. Y. Post-Boy, April 29, 1751. The game was played for a wager, which being 11 players on each side, and according to the London Method; and those who got most Notches in two Harts, to be the Winners. The New Yorkers won by a total score of 167 to 80.—Ibid., May 6, 1751.

32. Benjamin Pain announces that he has removed from his tavern on Cruger’s wharf to the house where Capt. Roddam lived in Broadway, and has opened the "Gentleman’s Coffee House and Tavern."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1751. This tavern was also mentioned in the advertisement of one Thomas Gregg in the N. Y. Merc., May 27, 1754.

34. The next day, May 3, 1751, a notice appeared in the New-York Gazette that "William Anderson, a tailor, announces that he has removed from Broad St. to the sign of the "Hand & Shears," in Crown St., near the New Dutch Church, "in the House where the French Tavern was lately kept."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 13, 1751. This appears to have been an agent residing in the part of town adjacent to the French Quarter, where the French church and French Tavern were located.

36. The provincial council issues a warrant to Martice van Dyck for taking care of cannon, etc. at Red Hook.—Cal. Coun. Min., 379.

21. Oliver de Lancy’s encroachments on the Common Lands at Bloomendall having been appraised at $5 per acre, which he has agreed to pay, a deed is executed to him, after surveys.—M. C. C., May 21, 1755, 285, 256, 337, 354.

23. On receiving news of the death of the Prince of Wales, the provincial council was moved to change in the prayer for the royal family to be announced by proclamation.—Cal. Coun. Min., 379. See May 28, June 2.

28. It is ordered by Trinity vestry "That the Committee for building the Chappell of Ease [St. George’s] have the Stone work of the Steeple and proper Hearth."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See Oct. 3. It is further ordered on this date that "Colo Robinson have the Church put in Mourning," because "the Melancholy News of the Death of his Late Royall Highness [Frederick] the Prince of Wales."—Ibid. See June 2.

29. William Bull arrives by ship from South Carolina with six sachems of the Catawba Indians, in order to accompany the governor of New York to Albany to meet the Six Nations of Indians there, and conclude a league of friendship with them.—Cal. Coun. Min., 379; Upscall Coll. in N. Y. Hist. Soc., I: 211. See June 28.

32. A day of mourning is observed throughout the province, "for the Death of his Royal Highness Frederick Prince of Wales."—Cal. Coun. Min., June 5 and 16, 1751. See May 24 and 28.

35. "Whereas the noted Horse & Cart Inn, in New-York, having lately been very much balked to the great Disapprobation of Numbers of Persons from New-England that use frequent that House; This is to assure all Gentlemen and others that they may now find the best of Entertainment for themselves, and Horses; by their humble Servant, George Edmonds." Edmonds also advertises "Horses and Chairs to be Let."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 3, 1751. See July 7, 1750, March 21, 1751.

36. The corner-stone of the first Moravian Church in New York (see May 23) is laid by Rev. Owen Rice on the south side of Fair St., between William and Dutch Sts. (now 106-108 Fulton St.). This church, which was a small frame building occupying two lots of ground, was dedicated June 18, 1754, by Bishop Spangenberg. This remained for nearly 80 years the sole Moravian place of worship.—Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 277; Smith, The City of N. Y. in, 1785, 158. It was demolished in 1829.—See Aug. 15, 1829. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 930.

38. The conference with the Indians begins in Albany. On this day, I. G. Clinton, who is in attendance, orders that a proclamation be issued forbidding the sale or distribution of rum to the Indians.—Cal. Coun. Min., 380. For a digest of the proceedings there, which Clinton reported to the provincial council on July 15, see ibid., 380-81.

42. An advertisement of this date states: "Mr. John Zenger, Printer in this City [see Oct. 14, 1754 et seq.] being lately deceased and leaving no Person qualified to carry on his Business: This is to give Notice, that the Printing Press and Materials lately occupied by him, will be exposed to Sale at publick Vendue, on Tuesday the 30th of this Instant July [i.e., at the Dwelling-House of the Deceased:—The Press is estimated a good One & much of the large Letters in good Order."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 3, 1751.

43. Col. William Johnson gives reasons to the provincial council for refusing to act any longer as Indian agent. He is asked to continue for the present, and consents, but refuses to be sworn of the council. On the 9th, a royal mandate was received appointing him to the council, and he was sworn in.—Cal. Coun. Min., 381.

44. A subscription course in natural philosophy and mechanics, with experiments, by Lewis Evans, is advertised to be held, beginning Aug. 5, at the home of Rev. Ebenezer Pemberton in Broadway. Recent discoveries in electricity form part of the subject.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 29, 1751. Evans was the author of the important map of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, etc., engraved in Philadelphia, and published in 1749 (see Feb. 27, March 6, 1750).}

45. John Chambers is appointed second justice of the supreme court in place of Frederick Philips, deceased, and, next day, is sworn in.—Cal. Coun. Min., 381.

46. According to the published notice on July 1 (q. v.), the printing press and type of the N. Y. Jour., until recently published by
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

1751 John Zenger, (see Nov. 21, 1748), "lately deceased," are to be sold at auction on this date — N. Y. Gaz., July 1, 1751.

Aug. 6 Peter Zenger, while writing his last letters, executed the seal of the association, was drawn up for the governor at New York, in view of the "great disputes" that have arisen between the governor and the assembly, and on account of the encroachments that "have been made by the Assembly on His Majesty's Prerogative by wresting from the Governor several of the executive parts of Government, which were vested in him by His Majesty's Commission." — N. Y. Col. Dict., VI: 727. For these instructions, see June 3, 1752. Regarding the growth of the independent spirit in the colonies prior to the Revolution, see Becker's "History of Political Parties in the Province of N. Y.," 1750–1776, in Univ. of Wisconsin Bulletin (No. 286), History Series, Vol. II, No. 1.

12 A new transportation line is advertised by Frettwell Wright, John Predmore, and James Wilson to operate between Philadelphia and New York. A "Stage-Boat" will "attend every Tuesday . . . at the Crooked Billit Wharf in Philadelphia," will proceed to Burlington on that day, and "on Wednesday Morning a Stage-Waggon with a good Aowing . . . will proceed to Obadiah Ayr's, Inn keeper at Amboy Ferry . . . on Thursday a Stage Passage Boat . . . will be ready to receive the Passengers or goods, & proceed directly to New York." — N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 12, 1751. A similar method, by way of "Borden's Town," was advertised on June 4, 1753. (p. 9.)

Lawrence le Tellier is appointed city surveyor — M. C. C., V: 345.

"The common council appoints a committee to "View Regulate Lotts and pave all the Streets in the North ward" and "all and Every the Streets in Montegomery Ward." — M. C. C., V: 345:358. For further references to the regulation of streets in the North Ward, see ibid., V: 1911: VI: 17–18; VII: 280–81; and, in the Montegomery Ward, see Sept. 11, 1744; and March 20, 1747.

19 "Just imported, and to be sold on board the Snow New-York, Capt. Gifford, from Bristol, a parcel of lilydecde Servants, of both Sexes; the Men mostly Tradesmen: Masons, Mastes, Taylors, and Coopers, &c." — N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 19, 1751. See June 19, 1728. The importation of white servants and mechanics from England and Wales, as well as negro slaves from Africa, is a prominent feature of this year's news in New York. — See also ibid., June 24, and Dec. 23, 1751.

23 The common council orders "that Mr Oliver De Lancey have Leave to Lay out a Road all round Inclamen Bergh of Such Breadth as the Committee hereinafter mentioned shall agree to and Direct for the Convenience of Riding Round the same." — M. C. C., V: 346. See also "Inckenberg" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 966.

John Tremain advertises his business of cabinet-maker, "at the House of Mr. Norwood, near the Long Bridge." He makes "all Sorts of Goods made in China, as Chests of Drawers, Desks, Presses, Cases, Clock-Cases, Dining and Tea-Tables, plain or scollopted; Tea-Cheects, Tea-Boards, Dressing-Botes, Bedsteads, &c." — N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 16, 1751.

28 Richard Bradley, the attorney and advocate-general, dies — N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 2, 1751. He was succeeded on Nov. 2, 1752 (p. 6.) by William Kemp.

Sept. 7 We have Advice from Halifax in Nova Scotia, that there is such a number of New- Yorkers got to that Place, since the first Settlement of it, as will nearly fill one of the largest Streets in the Town, and that they are about to form themselves . . . into a Society or Company, by the Name of the Free New-York Fishery Company at Nova Scotia; and that all that shall hereafter come there from New York, provided they come as one of King David's Soldiers, (see 1 Sam. XXII Ch[jap. 2 Ver.) Shall be permitted to join them, and draw Shares according to the Stock they bring. — "In N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 9, 1751.

"Newcastle Coals," just imported, are advertised to be sold on board the ship that brought them. — N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 9, 1751.

James Alexander writes as follows from New York to Cadwallader Colden regarding mail received by a recently arrived ship from London, that the great business is the sending of the letters off at the Coffee house, for you & me, he came & told me that half the Letters were carried to the one Coffee house & half to the other, but none were read off where he was, wherefore he went to the other & heard one was read off for me, and that Some body had taken it, I sent him back to Search the Letters to See if that any for you remained—he found none but Learned that Senator Young's Snail instructions were to be got it—This way of Dividing the Letters Exposes them to be Lost much more than when together in one place—its what I Did not know of before, otherwise I Should have sent one to Each Coffee house." — From the original letter with Colden Papers, to N. Y. Hist. Soc.

October 30, 1751. "By several private Letters from London come in Capt.-Troup [ijp], we have Advice, that the Honourable Robert Hunter Morris, Esq; Chief Justice of the Province of New-Jersey, is appointed Lieutenant Governor of this Province." — N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 39, 1751.

"The Committee Appointed to take Care of the Building of the Oct. Charity School House Reported that the Contractors had Completed the Building Pursuant to their Contract." — Trin. Min. (M.S.). See Feb. 23, 1750, regarding the fire which destroyed the former structure. For its site, see "In the great fire of 1756, which destroyed the church, the schoolhouse was again consumed." — N. T. Merc., Sept. 30, 1766

"It is ordered by Trinity vestry that "the Society's School-master may keep his school in the school-room of the New Charity School House" still further on the Street. It is also ordered that the committee "for Carrying on the Building of the Chappell of Easbe at Liberty to Provide Materials and finish the Building of the said Chappell and Steeple Compleatly." — Ibid. See May 28. For the consecration of the church, see July 3, 1753 regarding the chapel bell, see Nov. 9, 1752.

A house and lot in "Vanderwater's Street, in Montgomery-Ward, near the new Lutheran Church" is offered for sale — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 7, 1751. The foregoing is interesting as showing that this street existed, at this early date, and was called by this name.

—Cf. Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1011. For the site of this church, erected in 1750, see ibid., III: 929; March 22, 1750.

The Rev. Gualterius Dubois, senior pastor of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in New York, died in this 81st year; his remains were interred in the Old Dutch Church (in Garden St.). — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 14, 1751.

The provincial council receives a copy of a royal order creating a new Naval Board.

The provincial council receives a copy of a royal order creating the Secretary of Board.

Peter de Joncourt conducts a tavern "next Door to the Merchant's Coffee-House." — N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 11, 1751. For the earlier history of this house, see July 18, 1737.

Robert Choolmondely receives a patent for the reversion of the office of surveyor and auditor-general of the provinces of North America. A certified copy of this is of record in this province under date of May 21, 1757 — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 690.

An act is passed "for Vesting in Trustees" the sum of f3,445:18s. for the way of Lottery for erecting a College within this Colony." It states that this sum has been raised but is considered insufficient "without further Additions to answer the Said end of Erecting compleat and Establishing a College," and that it is necessary to appoint trustees for "the Setting at Interest" the sum already raised, and "Receiving the Contributions and Donations of Such persons as shall be Charitably disposed to be benefactors and, Encouragers of So laudable an undertaking." The act names as trustees "the eldest Councillor residing in this Colony, the Speaker of the General Assembly, and the Judges of the Supreme Court the Mayor of the City of New York and the 1751. Treasurer of this Colony for the time being, together with James Nov. Livingston Esquire, Mr. Benjamin Nicol, and Mr. William Liv- ingston." Their duties are defined. They are enabled to receive proposals from any city or county in the colony which desires to have the college erected there; and they are required to render a sworn accounting to "the Governor Council and General Assem- bly" when by them or any of them thereunto required."—Col. Letts N. Y., III: 842. For a fuller exposition of the duties and plans of the trustees, see Jan. 20, 1752. See, further, March 5 and 23, 1753. The powers of the trustees were enlarged, and the funds at their disposal increased, by an act of July 4, 1752 (p. 175), which appropriated large sums to the purpose of purchasing land. The trustees were discharged by the act of Dec. 1, 1756 (p. v.), which transferred their obligations to the college government.

An act is passed "for mending and keeping in Repair the Public Road [Bloomingdale Road] or highway from the House of John How- ring the Bowry Division of the out Ward of the City of New York through Bloomingdale Division in the Said Ward to the House of Adrian Hoogelandt." Pursuant to a previous statute (see Oct. 23, 1751), a road four rods in breadth had been built in front of the dwelling of John How- ring the Bowry Division of the out Ward of the City of New York through Bloomingdale Division in the Said Ward to the House of Adrian Hoogelandt. The inhabitants of the "Bloomingdale District or Division, who are but a few in number, have been under great hardships not only by Keeping the Said Road in Repair, (which is double the breadth Necessary) but also by being obliged to Works on the Repairing the Post Road between New York and Kings Bridge." The justices of the peace for New York City are therefore ordered to appoint annually a resident of the Bloomingdale district as sur- veyor of the public road. His duties are to lay out the road two rods in breadth for all necessaries, and is authorized to summon any number of inhabitants of the Bloomingdale dis- trict with carts, spades, and pickaxes. A team, wagon, and driver shall be regarded as the equivalent of three days' work. Every inhabitant failing to appear shall be fined at the rate of six shillings per day. No person can be compelled to work more than three days at a time nor more than six days a year on the road; nor need any inhabitant of the Bloomingdale division work on the post-road from New York to Kingsbridge—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 842-47. See also June 19, 1753.

An act "to prevent frauds in Debtors" is directed against persons who have estates sufficient to discharge their debts but depart from the colony and order their effects to be sold, thereby securing the proceeds. The act is also aimed at debtors who conceal them- selves somewhere in the colony. To end these fraudulent practices, if an adjudging debtor owes more than £20 to one creditor, the sheriff is required to seize his effects and to attach the estate of such a debtor. A judge is then directed to have a notice inserted in all the newspapers of the colony that the prop- erty will be sold unless the adjudging person returns within three months. If he or she fails to appear, the judge is to appoint three trustees, who are to sell the property at auction, receive moneys due, and settle equitably with the creditors.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 85-42.

A statute is enacted "to prevent the breaking or otherwise Injuring Glass Lamps in the City of New York." Some of the inhabi- tants are "willing at their own Expense to hang out, or fix up in the Night time before their own Dwelling Houses large Glass Lamps to Illuminate the Streets of the Said City [see Nov. 23, 1697], but are discouraged therefrom for fear that Such Lamps may be broken, taken down, destroyed, or Carried away, or the lights therein put out." Such offences hereafter will be punished by a fine of £20.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 855-57. See Dec. 23.

Following the statute of Nov. 25 (p. v.) against breaking glass lamps in New York City, several persons have set up lamps in the streets before their houses. Many others intend to do so.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 23, 1751.

1752

In this year, Benjamin Franklin established the relation be- tween electricity and lightning, and introduced lighting conduc- tors for the protection of buildings. See Oct. 1750.

In this year, William Watson, the large mansion, one of the finest of the period, on a lot inherited from his father near the family's ship-yards on Water St. The date is determined, approximately, by a notice which appeared in the N. Y. Post- Boy, May 14, 1753, advertising a house for sale "in the upper end of Queen Street, next door but one to Captain Walton's new House, near Peck's Slip." For a detailed description of the house, see 1814, where, however, the date of erection, as erroneously stated by John Pinta, is given as 1752. A far error was committed by Dunlop, in his Hist. of the New Netherland (1839), II: 143, and by Wilson in the Mem. Hist., III: 305. Walton, in his Annals (1846), 330, gave the date as 1751 and Valentine, in the Man. Com. Coun. (1846), 524, as about 1760. The building stood for 133 years at 280 Park St. in the present Borough of Manhattan, now known as "The Walton House"; it was demolished in 1881 (see Nov. 12, 1871). See "Sketches Biographical and Historical," by John Austin Stevens, Jr., 60, in Colonial Records, Chamber of Commerce, 1768-1784 (pub'd, 1867), and Mag. Am. Hist., II: 40. Valentine indicates the style of furnishing of the house at a later period than that of its early magnificence, including an in- ventory of the family silver-plate.—Man. Com. Coun. (1859), 544. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 953. William Walton was a son of Capt. Williams Walton (see M. C. G., VIII: 459), an eminent merchant of New York, who died May 23, 1747 (N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1747).

Walter Rutherford, writing in 1800, recorded the fact that in 1752 there were 2,011 houses and 332 store-houses, stables, etc., in New York City, "as counted by a gentleman" he knew—Ruther- ford, Family Records and Events, 198.

In accordance with the act of parliament of Jan. 18, 1751 (p. v.), "for regulating the commencement of the year," the "New Style" goes into effect in Great Britain and her colonies. See also Chambers' Ency. (1888), II: 641.

Our River is full of ice. Several Vessels on sailing here have been detained for a considerable Time, till Saturday last, and, with the rest of our shipping, squire'd into Rotten Row for shelter. It was a happy Turn, the Corporation acted with that Prudence, in not consenting to the Views of a few self-interested People, to get the only Place for Shelter of our Shipping fill'd up.—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 6. "Rotten Row" (Hunter's Key) lay along the East River front from Old Slip to Wall St.—See Feb. 9, 1751 Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 990. For further reference to it, see May 24, 1754.

Gov. Clinton issues a proclamation offering a reward of £200 for the discovery of the author of a "letter signed W. P. dated the fourth Instant, directed to Mr. Robert Levison," which "was lately found fastened to the Door of the Dwelling-House of Robert Gilbert Livingston, Merchant, of this city, demanding him, if he had any Regard to his Life or Family, to include in a letter the sum of Fifty Pounds, to be left at the Exchange Coffee House, under direction there in the name of Mr. H., and if Mr. son to this House should be set on Fire, unless prevented by his Compliance there- with."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 13, 1752; Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 600.

The river and bay are frozen over, so that a double sledge is driven from Long Island and back, and a number of people walk across the river.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 13, 1752. See Jan. 6.

The following advertisement by the college trustees is the first published statement of their purpose and duties under the act of Nov. 25, 1751: "Whereas, by an Act past the last Sessions, the eldest Councillor residing in this Colony, the Speaker of the General Assembly, and the Judges of the Supreme Court, the Mayor of the City of New York, and the Treasurer of this Colony for the Time being, together with James Livingston, Esq; Mr. Benja- min Nicol, and Mr. William Livingston, are appointed Trustees for managing the Sum of £1,345-18s. raised for erecting a College within this Colony, and any other Sum or Sums of Money, Lands, Goods or Chattels, which may be contributed or given by any Person or Persons whatsoever, for the erecting, completing, and estabishing such College, for the Advancement of Learning. All which Monies the said Trustees, or the major Part of them, are impowered and directed to put out at Interest, yearly, and every Year, together with the Interest arising thereon, to be employed for the Use and Purpose aforesaid; and to let to farm any Lands, Tenements, or Heridiments that may be given towards founding the said College. And the said Trustees are, by the said Act, enabled to receive Proposals from any of the Cities or Counties within this Colony, of having the said College erected within their Cities or Countries, touching the placing or fixing the same therein, respectively of all which the Majority of the said Trustees, have consented to this publick Notice to be given; and, at the same Time, desire all such Person or Persons, who shall have Occasion to take up at Interest, any of the said Monies, (not less than Two Hundred Pounds) be ineligible to make any Proposals touching the placing or fixing of such Church, or otherwise, that they will apply to the Treasurer of this Colony, or any other of the said Trustees, and they shall be further informed."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 20, 1752.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

Jan

1752

25
A woman is sentenced to death for burglary. On the day set for the execution, Feb. 14, she was pardoned on condition that she leave the province before July 1d.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 27, Feb. 17, 1752.

27
Several of the glass lamps put up about the city are taken down and left whole in the Market. "It is thought to be done by some daring Rakes, in order to convince the Owners, how easy those Lamps might be demolished without Discovery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 9, 1752. See Nov. 25 and Dec. 13, 1751.

3
William Wood advertises: "The Albany Post sets out on Saturday next: Letters may be left at Mr. McEwen’s near the City Hall, or at the North River, at the House of the said Post."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 27, 1752. For his change of address, see Dec. 4.

3
The "long Bridge" (see July 30, 1750), advertises for the recovery of a runaway "Servant Man . . . off Irish Descent . . . of about 23 Years of Age," who "had on when he went away, a white, Bessin Skirt made Frock Fashion, with a scarlet Jacket green Velvet Lining and a blue and white Bossed Basket Breeches, brown or blue Worsted Stockings, a brown bob Wig, and a large brim’d Beaver Hat, round toe’d Shoes, with square Steel Buckles."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 3, 1752.

Christopher Blundell, "next door to the Post-Office," advertises imported vegetable and flower seeds for sale.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 17, 1752.

6
An ordinance is passed which provides that all neat cattle shall be killed at the public slaughter-house of Nicholas Bayard (see Aug. 14, 1750), instead of at the old public slaughter-house "by the Water-side."—M. C. C., V. 357. For later amendments to this ordinance, see ibid., VII: 25-26, 287-88.

3
"Messrs" Livingston and Jefferts Appearing at this Board alleging that they had been at a much greater Expense in Erecting their Stillhouse and Works behind Trinity Church than they expected to be at and prayed this Board to Consider the Same and Grant them Thirty Years Lease Instead of Twenty Five years which they agreed with the Committee of which request being Considered is Order’d that the Lease for the said Stillhouse and Ground be for Thirty Years upon the Rent of Thirty pounds £ Annually formerly Agreed upon."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See also May 26, 1752.

9
A Vestry orders "That an Advertisement be Inserted in Mr Parkers next News Paper for letting that part of the Churches Farm to the Northward of the Stockades Either Intire or in parcels."—Trin. Min. (MS.). The advertisement, which was published, recites: "That Part of the Church’s Farm, (commonly called the King’s Farm) which lies to the Northward of the Stockades is to be let, either entire or in Parcels," and those interested are directed to apply to Col. Joseph Robinson.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 17, 1752. See March 25.

14
Adam van Denberg, who has maintained a tavern and garden on the church farm, at the present Broadway and Vestry St., since 1755, and probably for many years, without the interference of Trinity Church to lease "the old Bowling Green" for 21 years from March 25, 1752, "the part of it already let to Elias De Gruchie [see May 25] to be Excepted."—Trin. Min. (MS.). Van Denberg’s mead-house, on Broadway, and the "Old Bowling Green" (later Vauxhall), which was on the Hudson River near the present Greenwich and Chambers Sts., are very clearly shown on the MS. Map of 1735 (Pl. 30, Vol. I). Elias de Grusda had a ropewalk which extended from Broadway to a point beyond Church St., between Warren and Chambers Sts. See Pls. 34, Vol. I; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, 9, 9, 17, 17, and April 1752.

24
Parker, the publisher of the Post-Boy, having antagonized a number of readers by articles printed in his paper, makes a defence. He "hears God; honours the King; loves his Country, and would serve all Mankind," but reminds his readers that "the Press is esteemed one of the grand Bulwarks of English Liberty," and he, himself, placed by Providence "to be the Instrument of using it."—Feb. 17, 1752.

25
Sidney Breeze, about to leave New York for England, advertises various goods for sale, including, "Lately imported from London, 72 Volumes, in Folio, all Manuscript, neatly bound, gilt, and letter’d, being the Minutes of the House of Commons, for above 50 years, from which many Presidents [sic] may be quoted, very useful to Representative Bodies of this or any other Nation. They were Part of the Duke of Chandos’s Library."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 24, 1752.

On petition from lawyers practicing in the mayor’s court for an ordinance on fees, the provincial council orders one prepared.—C. Coun. Min., 358.

14
Trinity vestry agrees "that a proposal be made to the Commissioners Appointed to Receive proposals for the Building a Colledge [see Nov. 25, 1751] that this Board is willing to give any Reasonable Quantity of the Churches Farm which is not let for the Erecting and use of a Colledge."—Trin. Min. (MS.). This proposal was presented to the trustees of the college on April 8 (q.v.). A similar resolution was adopted by the vestry, with a very material condition added, on May 14, 1754 (q.v.). See also Nov. 1, 1754.

The common council orders that three lamps be purchased, and 2 erected in front of the city hall and one in the rear, and that they be provided with oil and kept clean.—M. C. C., V: 358. For the initial step taken to light the city with lamps, see Nov. 23, 1761.

Benjamin Peck (see Dec. 21, 1750) releases to the city "a place designated by Wharf Bay that the North East side of his Lots in Montegomery Ward."—M. C. C., V: 358. Peck’s Wharf is shown on Pls. 26, 27, 278, Vol. I, and on later plans.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 990.

13
The "House of George Burns fronting the Long Bridge" is the place designated by the common council for leasing the stalls and standings of the markets, and the docks and slips, of the city.—M. C. C., V: 358. (For lines omitted from the printed record, see ibid., VIII: 154.) His house was again appointed on Dec. 14, for leasing the ferry between New York and Nassau Island.—Ibid, V: 389. This was the King’s Arms Tavern, just north of the corner of Broad and Water Sts. See Oct. 3, 1748.

The common council appoints a committee "to agree with fit persons to make a Vault Behind the Watch House of this City for the use of the said House," and also to "have a Box or Tourrette made over the said Work House to hang a Bell therein."—M. C. C., V: 359. On Nov. 5, payment was made "for making a Vault at the alms House."—Ibid, V: 386. In the printed Minutes of the Common Council subjects relating to the workhouse and almshouse are indexed under "Poorhouse."—See M. C. C., VIII: 380-St.

12
Joris Brinkerhoof and others, in a petition to the common council, state that "they have Lately taken into their possession a small parcel of Ground Containing a few slips, and a Battery on which they have been at a Considerable Expense in Erecting Some Small Buildings thereon Since which they have been Informed that the said Ground belongs to this Corporation and therefore pray this Corporation would be favourable pleased to Grant the Same to them under Such Rents Reservations and Restrictions as they Shall Seem meet."—M. C. C., V: 360, 442.

One of the city’s labourers who is an object of charity is permitted by the common council "to Set in any of the Public Markets of this City and there Expose to Sale by Retail and Others knives Els &c" for the period of three months.—M. C. C., V: 363.

On account of the small-pox in New York, Gov. Clinton issues a proclamation to prostrate to April 28 the meeting of the general assembly, which was to convene on March 31.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 16, 1752. See also Jour. Leg. Coun., 1094; and Oct. 16.

The trustees of the college fund (see Nov. 25, 1751) agree to meet every Thursday afternoon at 1 o’clock in the common council room in the city hall. "And all Persons having Occasion to take up at Interest, any of the said Money, upon Mortgage, are desired to apply to Mr. William Livingston, Attorney at Law, and lay their Title Deed before him: And those who shall be minded to have any upon good personal Security, may apply to him, or any other of the said Trustees, at any Time."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 23, 1752. See also Aug. 20.

"The once noted Horse and Cart Inn, in the City of New York is revived by Edward Willett."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 25, 1752. See June 3, 1751.
Trinity Church (see Feb. 15) leases to Adam van Denberg, for May 25, five years from this date, that part of the "Church Farm" to the West and Out Works north of the "Stockade," except what will be needed for building a college and four acres leased to a man named Burnham.—Bogardus vs. Trinity Church, Sandford's Chancery Rep. (1847), IV: 652-53. See Apr. 27. Also, 1847, the farm was retaken by the college, as "pastoral interests" of the church. On Nov. 29, 1756, the farm, "or any part of it," was advertised by the vestry of Trinity Church to be let from March 25, 1757.—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 29, 1756. By March 21, 1757, it had been laid out into lots.—Ibid., March 21, 1757.

Apt. 1572.

"At a meeting of Trinity vestry, an agreement signed by Adam van Denberg as lessee, for the Churches Farm to the Northward of the Stockade," is produced.—Trin. Min. (MS.). By this instrument the Church leases to Adam van Denberg, for a term of five years from March 25, 1752, all of the Church Farm north of the stockades (with exception for King's College, etc.).—Sandford's Chancery Rep., VI: 606. Van Denberg laid out the land as early as 1755.—See Pl. 50, Vol. 1. He was a tenant in 1756, and Cornelius van Denberg was there in 1756.—See depositions in Bogardus vs. Trinity Church, Sandford's Chancery Rep., IV: 690, 695-96.

The old farm-house, attached to the King's farm, stood upon the site of the present Astor House. The various tenants, so far as we have been able to discover them, were, successively, John Ryerson, Francis Ryerson [see July 20, 1721], Mr. [Robert] Harrison [see same date], Mr. Balm, Cornelius Cozine [see May 11, 1722], and Adam Vandenbergh. The house was long kept at the Drovers' Inn. In connection with the tavern business, were also a public garden and place of amusement. . . Van Denburg was still in the occupation of these premises at a period close on the time of the Revolution, as we find from a liberty pole being erected opposite to his house [see Jan. 30, 1776], where the two roads meet."—Man. Com. Coun. (1865), 547. As appears by the Maerschalck Plan (see 1755); Pl. 34, Vol. I, part of the Church Farm was at that time laid out into building lots. See "The Queen's Farm," Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 947. See also April 27, 1752.

The Rev. Henry Barclay, rector of Trinity Church, informs the trustees of the college that it has been unanimously agreed, at a meeting of "the Rector, Church Wardens, and Vestry Men, of Trinity Church," to make a proposal to the trustees that they are willing to give a reasonable amount of the Church Farm for the purpose of erecting a college; a copy of the vestry's resolution or agreement is annexed to the trustees in a letter from Mr. Elzey, 3 May, 1753, attested by Richard Nicoll, clerk, as "A True Copy." "Which being read, Mr. Chief Justice returned the Thanks to the Trustees of the Representatives of the Church, for said Offer." It is "Agreed, That the said Trustees go and view the Lands mentioned in the above Agreement and Proposal; which way shall be accordingly done."—Assembly Jour., II: 398. See also Nov. 1, 1754.

The king gives instructions to Gov. Clinton, ordering a revision of the public laws, statutes, and ordinances in force in New York Province, and requiring him in lieu thereof to frame and pass a complete and well digested body of new laws, and to transmit the same for his majesty's approbation or disallowance.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 600. These instructions require, among other things, that no law be passed "without a clause be inserted therein, suspending & deferring the execution thereof until our royal will & pleasure may be known thereupon."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 755-56. See also April 9, 1752.

John Hutchinson, merchant, who has just imported "a Parcel of likely Welsh and West Country Servants, Men, Women, and Boys, of most Trades," advertises that "Their Times, from 4 to 7 Years," will be disposed of by him, or by the shipmaster on board the vessel, "on the Royal Exchange Tavern."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 20, 1752. Cf. Sept. 11, 1752, Addenda.

A horse-race is advertised to take place "on Hampsted-Plains," on May 26, for a purse of silver of about £20.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 20, 1752.

The name "King's Farm" still clings to the extensive piece of pasture land formerly belonging to the crown, but which, since Nov. 23, 1756 (q.v.), has been the property of Trinity Church. Cornelius van Denberg, the lessee (see March 25), advertises Apr. 27, 1752; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 947. See also Feb. 17, and April 1.

Several lots are offered to be let near "Sir Peter Warren's New Wharf, at the East River."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 27, 1752. The Warren Wharf adjoined Meier's Slip.—M. C. G., VII: 185. This was at the foot of Cortlandt St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 990.

Parker prints, at the request of a subscriber, the so-called reply of an Indian to a Christian missionary. The sentiments are unorthodox and call forth a great deal of criticism. Parker was presented before the grand jury, and made a statement in his own defence on Aug. 3.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 27, May 4, and Aug. 3, 1752. See also Feb. 24 and May 14, 1752, and Sept. 7, 1753.

"This is to acquaint the Curious, That there is just arrived in this City, a famous Posture-master, who transfigures his body into various postures, in a surprising and wonderful manner; with many Curious Dancings and Tumblings, exceeding any Thing of the Kind ever seen here: He also performs The sight of Hand, with great Dexterity and Art; and to make the Entertainment agreeable, there will be the usual Drink served with the Musick of a Dulcimer. To be shewn every Evening this Week, at Mr. Beekman's, at the Spring Garden."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 27, 1752.

Gov. Clinton, who has sold his household furniture and sent his baggage on board ship to return to England, is required by the laws of trade to remain in America.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 761-62, 770. A committee of the common council is appointed to regulate May and pave Dock Street with the aid of a surveyor.—M. C. G., VI: 562, 567. The reference shows the retention of the name Dock Street at this time, although the street was one with Pearl Street as early as 1750.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 998, 1007.

Cornelius van Horn, member of assembly for the city and county of New York, dies.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 11, 1752. He bequeathed to three of his sons all his lands in New York, with the buildings which he bought from Joseph Latham "Lying near the Creugyl Bosch [Krippel-bush] and known as my Corse yard."—"Annals of Wells," IV: 390-91. See "The Swamp," "Beekman's Swamp," or "Cripple-bush," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 967.

The provincial council receives a royal mandamus appointing John Chambers to the council in place of Stephen Bayard; he is sworn in and takes his seat.—Col. Coun. Min., 384.

Benj. Franklin writes from Philadelphia to Cadwallader Colden: "Sir, I find Parker (see Parker—see April 27) has been indiscreet enough, to print in his newspaper, which the Post-Boy which has brought him into a great deal of Trouble. I cannot conceive how he was prevall'd on to do it, as I know him to be a thorough Believer himself, and averse to everything that is commonly called Free thinking. He is now much in his Penitentials, and requests me to intercede with you, to procure from the Governor a Nou. Pot, in his Favour, promising to be very circumcet and careful for the future, not to give Offence either in Religion or Politics, to you or any of your Friends, in which I believe he is very sincere. I have let him know, that I pretend to no Interest with you, and I fear he has behav'd to the Governor and to you in such a Manner not to deserve your Favour. Therefore I only beg Leave to recommend the poor Man's Case to your Consideration; and if you could without Inconvenience to your own Character, interest yourself a little in his Behalf, I shall, as I am much concern'd for him, esteem it a very great Obligation. As to the Case of Religion, I really think it will be best serv'd by stopping the Prosecution: For if there be any evil Tendency apprehended from the Publication of that Piece, the Trial and Punishment of the Printer will certainly make it 1000 times more publick, such is the Curiosity of mankind in these Cases. It is in this, as in an Old Thing, he has been printed before he is English, and by Andrew Bradford here; but no publick Notice being taken of it, it dy'd and was forgotten, as I believe it would now be, if treated with the same Indifference.—I am, with great Respect, your humble Servant."—B Franklin

From the original letter, with Golden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.
1752

"Notice is hereby given to the Curious. That at the House of Mr. James Trotter in the Broad-Way, there will be exhibited, to begin on Thursday next, and continue from Day to Day, (the weather being suitable) for two or three Weeks, a Course of Experiments on the newly-discovered Electrical Fire, containing, out of the thousand speciments of that kind which have been made in Europe, but a considerable number of New ones, lately made in Philadelphia; to be accompanied with methodical Lectures on the Nature and Properties of that wonderful Element."—N. Y. Merc., May 18, 1752.

JosephLedder, Jr., informs the public that he sells "at his House in Smith-Street, opposite to Mrs. Carpenter's, at the most reasonable Rates; all sorts of Pewter-ware, by wholesale or retail, and makes Worms for Stills of all Sizes, by a compleat Way at the lower Prices Likewise, makes HogHood, Barrell, or Bottle Cranes, either with or without Cocks, and makes the Infusion-Flots, so much approved of in Grols, and any uncommon Thing in Pewter, in any Shape or Form as shall be ordered; likewise does all sorts of Lead-work, either House or Ship-work.

He also engraves on Steel, Iron, Gold, Silver, Copper, Brass, Pewter, Ivory, or Turtle-Shell, in a neat Manner, and reasonably."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1752. See also Staluffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, I: 159.

William Bradford, the printer, dies.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 25, 1752. The newspaper account states that he was "in the 42d year of his Age," also that he came to America "upwards of 70 years ago," and lived at a Place where Philadelphia now stands, before that City was laid out or a House built there. This statement, as well as the one on his tombstone, which gives his age as 92 years, are in error; for himself is authority for the statement, printed in 1739 in Leed's Almanack, under date of May 20, that "The Printer [was] born the 26th 1666." This would fix his age for 89 years. See also description of Pl. 27, I: 259-60.

The lock, pall, and clock, are to be sold by the proprietors of the British colonies, their express directions not to depart from their instructions, which, of late years, "have been dispensed with and neglected, upon slight & unwarrantable pretences." These instructions are intended "for the support of His Majesty's Prerogative and the protection of his subjects in their just rights, for the establishing and preserving good government in his Colonies."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 760-61. Regarding the violation by the people of New York of the king's "prerogative," see Aug. 6, 1751. See also Andrews, The Colonial Period (1912), 182.

The lock, pall, and clock for the Dutch Church, in the Ward-House, is offered for sale. Enquirers are directed to John Livingston or Dick Lefferts.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 8, 1752.

Steps are taken to build a new exchange. Regarding the first one, see March 24, 1740. "Several Gentlemen in this City having Voluntary Subscription to wards Erecting an Exchange at the Lower End of Broad Street near the Long Bridge," John Watts appears before the common council with a "plan thereof" for their approbation. It is unanimously approved, and "for the Encouragement of so Laudable an Undertaking," it is voted that the mayor issue his warrant to the city treasurer to pay £100 to the managers of the building to be applied toward that object. A member of the board, John Livingston, is appointed to assist the building managers chosen by the subscribers.—M. C. G., V: 367-68.

The following proceedings are recorded in connection with the construction of this building:

On Aug. 27, 1752, to have a room built, 12 feet high, "over the Exchange," at the city's expense, and to borrow £200 to purchase materials; a committee being appointed to execute the order.—Ibid, V: 375. On Sept. 1, it was ordered that the west side of the foundation be taken up, "and that the same Be made four feet wide, and a large hell. On Jan. 17, 1753, it was ordered that "the whole or so much of the foundation on the East side of the Exchange . . . is Necessary Be taken up, and, that five Arches Be made on each side instead of Six, with two at Each End;" and that materials be procured for completing the building.—Ibid, V: 386.

On July 15, 1753, it was ordered that the second Store [storeys] of the Exchange . . . he Exceeding fifteen feet in height and not Less than fourteen, and that the Room he arch'd from the height of the Said fourteen feet and that a Cupola be Erected on said Exchange under the Direction of the Committee appointed for Compleating the said Exchange."—Ibid., V: 408.

From time to time, from Dec. 14, 1753, to Nov. 1, 1754, payments were made by the city for labour and materials, and to repay the money advanced to prosecute the work.—Ibid., V: 389, 395-406, 407-8, 409, 413, 415, 439, 432, 434, 437, 443, 441, 449, 451, 456, 457, 474. Among the materials and labor provided were sail-frames and glass (p. 495), one lot of 13,333 bricks costing $50 (p. 453); another lot of 1,000 bricks costing $113 (p. 456); painting (p. 454), and earring sand (p. 467). The building had progressed so far toward completion by Feb. 1, 1754, that it was ready for occupancy.—See Jan. 15, 1754. The "Exchange" was a "House belonging to the Corporation of the said City."—Ibid., VI: 342, 348. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 924.

The first Moravian church in the city is dedicated. For outline of its history, see June 16, 1751. See also description of "The Shoemakers' Land," Pl. 24-9, I: 237.

Nicholas Duplessis, a surgeon, recently arrived from London, advertises that he may be found "at his House in Crown-Street [Liberty St.], near Pot-Baker's Hill, opposite the House of Mr. Jonathan Fish."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 23, 1752. This "Pot-Baker's Hill" was not the one known as "Crolsia," described in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 967; and Man. Com. Ann. (1876), 469. A few later advertisements serve to show its exact location, and the period when the name was used: The Widow Sommer lived "next Door to Mr. Laffert's on Pot-Baker's Hill in Smith [William] Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 14, 1753. The address of Cornelius Kupper, a painter and glazier, was "on Pot-Baker's Hill, next Door to Mr. Dirk Lefferts."—Ibid., Nov. 10, 1753. Richard Curson sold wines "on Pot-Baker's Hill, near the New-Dutch Church" (cor. Nassau and Liberty Sts.).—Ibid., Jan. 17, 1757. James Watt, a book-binder, was "At the House of William Eastick, on Pot-Baker's Hill, near Joseph Haynes'".—Ibid., Nov. 10, 1753. Jarvis Roebeck, a corset-cutter, lived "at the foot of Pot-Baker's Hill, between the Fly Market [Maine Lane at Pearl St] and the New Dutch Church."—N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 4, 1761. Benj. Coates lived on "Pot-Baker's Hill in the house opposite the New Dutch Church."—Ibid., May 16, 1763. Sam'l Brown's address was "at the foot of Pot-Baker's Hill between the New Dutch Church and Fly Market."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 9, 1767. The "nailery" of Harry Ustick was "on Pot-Baker's Hill in Smith Street."—Rivington's Gazetteer, March 3, 1774. A house and lot offered for sale were "in Smith Street, on Pot-Baker's Hill, near the New-Dutch Church" (the North Dutch Church now stands there).—Ibid., Jan. 19, 1775. The New Dutch Church, it should be noted, was built in 1767 (p. v.), July 23, on lots inherited under Harpending's will in 1724 (see Jan. 15, 1767). Pot-Baker's Hill was therefore the declivity lying eastward from William St., north of Liberty St., and is indicated approximately as Block 68, on Landmark Map, Pl. 176, Vol. III.

The trustees of Georgia surrender their charter, and the colony becomes a royal province.—Windsor, Nar. & Crit. Hist of Am., I: 389.

St. George's Chapel (see Jan. 14, 1771) is consecrated. The dignitaries of Trinity Church, attended by 52 charity scholars, walk in procession from Trinity vestry-room in the charity schoolhouse to the city hall, where they are joined by the city officials. Then all proceed to the newly-finished chapel, where divine service is performed, "with the utmost Decency and Propriety."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 6 and 13, 1775.

St. George's Chapel was built in 1748-52 (p. v.), on the northwest corner of Beekman and Cliff St. The architect was Robert Crommelin, a member of the vestry. The building was 92 feet long, exclusive of chancel, and 72 feet wide. It was faced with hewn stone and had a tiled roof. The steeple, 172 feet high, was crowned a large bell. On Jan. 17, 1753, it was ordered that "the whole or so much of the foundation on the East side of the Exchange . . . is Necessary Be taken up, and, that five Arches Be made on each side instead of Six, with two at Each End;" and that materials be procured for completing the building.—Ibid, V: 386. On July 15, 1753, it was ordered that the second Store [storeys] of the Exchange . . . be not Exceeding 1764-1703
This was followed by a warrant from Gov. Clinton to William July Smith, the attorney-general; and a plan or survey, dated July 21, 1752, showing the lot between Bridge and Dock Sts., with land of Capt. Hilton on the west and of John Watts on the east. The survey of the land is signed by Franz. Maerchersalck, city surveyor, and within the footprints of the house plot is dated 16th July, 1752.—Land Papers, XIV: 171-72. This is the plot formerly occupied by the pack house of the West India Co., which was erected in 1649 (q.v.). See Castello Plan, II: 165-66; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 687; Pl. 174, Vol. III. See also June 4, 1755; March 13, 1755 and "Custom House to be erected near the Battery."—See Idem Map Ref. Key, III: 714.

Sir Peter Warren died in Dublin. His life and character were reviewed in the New York papers of October and November following. A monument, bearing an inscription extolling his virtues, was erected to his memory in Westminster Abbey. He is there referred to as "Knight of the Bath, Vice-Admiral of the Red Squadron of the British Fleet, and Member of Parliament for the City and Liberty of Westminster."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 25, 30, and Nov. 6, 1752; Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., II: 267.

On May 16, 1753, before a notary in London, Lady Warren, of Cavendish Square, "widow, reliek and acting executor," made Sir Henry Frankland, Charles Aphthorpe, and Thomas Hancock of Boston her attorneys to collect, settle and adjust with the debtors of the late Sir Peter Warren in Massachusetts, "subject to follow in all things the orders and directions from James De Laneey, Peter De Laneey, Oliver De Laneey, and John Watts of New York." On Dec. 20, 1753, now orderd by the said De Laneey, Frankland, Aphthorpe, and Hancock to settle with several debtors and remit to Lady Warren.—Registry of Deeds (Suffolk Co., Mass.), Liber 81, p. 156 (entry of Jan. 8, 1754).

Lady Warren herself made her will about the same time, it being dated Jan. 1, 1754, and filed in Somerset House, London (citied Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 79 Texaver). Letters of administration were issued on Feb. 14, 1772 on the estate of "Dame Susan Warren, late of the parish of St. George, Hanover Square in the county of Middlesex, widow deceased," to "the Honble and Fitz Roy (writhe is the Honble Charles Fitz Roy), Susanna Skinner (wife of William Skinner Esq.), and the Honeable Charlotte Countess of Abingdon (wife of the Honeble Wiliy Shough, Earl of Abingdon), the daughters of said deceased and residuary legatees."—Ibid.

The farm property owned by Sir Peter Warren in New York later became the residence of Abraham van Ness.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 9553 Man. Com. Coun. (1840), 728. See also A. Pl. 5-b Vol. III.

The common council directs that a common road be laid out for Elbert Hering (Haring), "for him to go to his Land, lying Northward of the Westward of James Dyckman's Line."—M. C. C., V: 372. The road, when laid out, was Amity Lane, running from Broadway to MacDougal Street.—See Pl. 41, Vol. I; and Pl. 175, Vol. III (reference nos. 535-41). See also Holmes's Map of the Haring Farm. Amity Lane is now obsolete; it should not be confused with Amity Street (now West Third Street).

Judging from the date and number of the earliest issue located (that of Aug. 31, 1752), the first issue of Hugh Gaine's weekly, The New-York Mercury, was published on this day, and bears this date. Writing 13 years later, Gaine stated, however, that Aug. 8, 1752, was "the Day this Mercury was first published here" (N. Y. Misc., Oct. 28, 1765).—Early Newspapers, III: 422. Ford, in his annotation of the Jour. of Hugh Gaine, 1: 4-9, gives an account of the printer's various offices, and says that the fifth number indicates that the paper was first printed "on Hunter's Kitchen next Door to a Druggist, to the west of the Custom House."—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, 1: 5.

The Laws of the Province of New-York, being now finished, are ready to be deliver'd to the Subscribers, . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 10, 1752. These were the compilation made by Livington and Smith (see Nov. 24, 1750). On June 1, 1753, the general assembly, in a communication to the governor, refers to this action as "not in every Part, that far Extent which was proposed from the Lords Justices;" but they are nevertheless perused "it will not be disapproved, when properly represented to our most gracious Sovereign."—Assembly Jour. 1: 386. This set of laws comprises three in force at this time, which have been enacted New York: (a) an act of May 18, 1751, inclusive.—Col. Laws N. Y., I: v ("Explanatory Note"). The same compilers published another collection in 1762 (q.v.).
“There is also a Subscription on Foot for erecting a little College in this Province; But I think the Multiplication of such small Seminaries, tho' it may a little increase Knowledge, will not advance Learning to any remarkable Pitch; as the Endowments must be small, and their Libraries ill-stocked, to what those of our great Colleges or University might be.”—Mackparron, Americana Dissertata (Dublin, 1752), 21. See Nov. 24, 1751; March 25, 1752.

27 The common council appoints a committee “to View the Long Bridge at the Lower End of Broad Street,” and estimate the cost of up-keep for five years.—M. C. G., V. 574.

“New Stile begins to take Place in all the English Dominions, when that Day, which would have been the 3d, must be reckoned the 14th of September, and from thence forward, our Reckonings of Time will be agreeable to that of most modern Nations.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 31, 1752. More correctly speaking, the New Style began on Jan. 1, 1752. This was in conformity with the act of the parliament passed for the purpose March 18, 1751 (q. e. o.).

The civil year (as distinguished from the solar year), according to the ancient Roman method, began with March 25; it was moved to January 1 by the Gregorian system (or New Style). When, therefore, this system was adopted, Jan. 1, 1752 became the beginning of the year 1752 in New York. For a clear and concise explanation of the Old Style (or Julian Calendar) and the New Style (or Gregorian Calendar), historically considered, see Lardner’s Cyclopaedia (1853); for a more technical explanation, see Encyc. Britannica, title “Calendar.”—See also 1752, Addenda.

29 When the Gregorian Calendar was put into effect by Great Britain and her colonies, 11 days were dropped without being reckoned in the calendar; the holders of bills, promissory notes, etc., were obliged to abide by this arrangement, and landlords were obliged to make the same allowance to their tenantry.—Diary, Feb. 16, 1757.

As the calendar is reckoned by the common council, this day is Tuesday. The last meeting, one week ago, was held on Tuesday, Sept. 1. The New Style is therefore now in operation, as, by the Old Style, the 19th would fall on a Saturday; it days have therefore been dropped.—M. C. G., V. 575, 576. At the next meeting, Friday, Sept. 29, the Minutes themselves state that next date is “Newstyle.”—Ibid., V. 378.

25 John Watson and Hannah Jones now keep the ferry-house on Staten Island, where Thomas Lepper lately resided. Watson has taken a lease of this ferry for a term of years.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 25, 1752.

A proclamation is issued proroguing the general assembly to Oct. 23, then to meet at the house of Jacob Dyckmann, near Harlem, in the Out Ward.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 601; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1019.

The same issue of the paper contains an advertisement of “A Parcel of healthy Palatine Servants, Men, Women and Children, among which are several Tradesmen,” to be disposed of on “board the Snow Johannes, Capt. Pickeman,” or by application to Richard Tol, near the Old Slip Market.

12 Another ship-load of 200 Palatines arrives; 50 died on the voyage.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 1752.

6 News reaches New York, by way of Philadelphia, of the death of Sir Peter Warren at Dublin, on July 12 (q. e. o.).—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 25, 1752.

There are said to be very few families in New York that have not been visited by the small-pox, so that it is believed the city will soon be clear of the epidemic.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 1752.

See also March 14, 1754, and May 30, 1755.

23 The anonymous author (later disclosed as William Smith—see March 2, 1757) of the “Pastoral” on the death of Sir Peter Warren published in the Post-Boy of this date announces in the same issue that to-morrow will be published and sold, at the “New Printing-Office in Beaver-Street,” at the price of one shilling, “Some Thoughts on Education, and Reasons for erecting a College in this Province, and founding the same at the City of New York. To which is added, a Scheme for employing Masters and Teachers in the mean time; and also for raising and endowing an Edifice in an easy Manner. The whole concluding with a Poem, being a serious Address to the House of Representatives.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 23, 1752. Evans makes no mention of this work.

The publication of this essay called forth an appreciative Oct. effusion in the next issue (Oct. 30) of the same paper, signed “Lover of Merit.” He says in part: “To set apart the Interest of the Money already raised, as a Salary for Masters or Teachers, and the raising the Edifice by an easy Lottery, is certainly the best Method; for to set about building, while our Youth are neglected in the mean Time, would be very preposterous; but by this Scheme both may be done at the same Time; and if two Masters are not found sufficient, there are many Gentlemen in New York who, I hear, would willingly subscribe to encourage one or two more, till a greater Sum shall be raised and added to the present Capital (345 L) for that End. In a Word, I am now in full Hope this Assembly will at last do something to the Pur- pose in such a needful Work, and give that Attention which is due to such a publick-spirited Essay as that is of which I now speak . . .”—Ibid., Oct. 30, 1752.

Other comments of the same nature, signed "Philo-patriam" (very probably written by William Smith himself, or possibly William Livingston; cf. March 15, 1756), appeared in ibid., Nov. 6 (Supp.), 1752. This writer suggests “. . . that it should first set out under the Presidency of a grave and learned Provost (if the office thereby became) or any other Name which the Charter may give to the Head of the College; and therefore it seems, as if the first Step must be, to obtain of his Excellency the Governor a proper Charter, well devised, to vest in proper Persons the several Powers and Authorities necessary to give Dignity to the College, and Privileges to the Members of it. Suppose the Corpora- tion thus stiled, The Governor of the Province of New York; the Provost for the Time being, always to be one . . . But at present it seems very certain, that no Place is so proper as the City, for beginning collegiate Instruction, (I mean after the Small-Pox is out.)”

1st, The City-Hall may furnish Room for some Years. 2d, The City may furnish a tolerable good Library, to serve until a better may be expected from charitable Donations; for which Application may be made with Prospect of good Success, after a Charter is obtained for a Corporation. 3d, If the Gentlemen of the Church think fit, the Provost of the College may serve as a Minister for their new Church, and their Contribution for that service, enable him to subsist honourably upon a less Salary from the College; which sort of Oeconomy will be very convenient, especially at first setting out; and perhaps Dr. Johnson, of Stratford [see April 15, 1747], may give Satisfaction to both, if he can be prevailed upon to accept it . . .” See, further, March 2, 1753. Johnson was in due time appointed.—See Nov. 24, 1753.

Gov. Clinton recommends William Smith to the lords of trade for appointment to the place in the council made vacant by the death of Sir Peter Warren. Smith had been serving as attorney-general by Clinton’s appointment after the death of the late attorney-general (cf. June 28, 1749), but that place had already been “pre-engaged” by William Kempe, who was appointed attorney-general in England on Nov. 21, 1751. Kempe arrived in New York with his family on Nov. 4, 1752.—N. Y. Col. Deists, VI: 766, citing Commission, 31, and N. Y. Gist.

“Whereas there hath been carried on for one whole Year past, by Boats and Waggons, from New-York to Philadelphia, by way of Amboy and Borden’s-Town, and by Experience, been found to answer the End it was designed for, as much as we could expect in so short a Time”

[These are to inform the Publick, that Daniel O’Brien, being provided with a Boat exceedingly well fitted, with a very handsome Cabin, . . . proposes to give his Attendance at the late Col. Moore’s Wharf, every Wednesday and Saturday, (and may be spoke with at the House of Scotch Johnson:) and next Day, Wind and Weather permitting, to proceed for Amboy Ferry, to John Chulk’s, where a Wagon kept by John Richards, will be ready to receive either Goods or Passengers, and proceed with them to Borden’s Town, where a Stage Boat will be ready to carry them to Philadelphia; and the same Method will be followed from the Crooked-Biller Wharf at Philadelphia, to Borden’s-Town, and shall proceed Load or No Load twice a Week, by which Means Passengers or Goods may never be detained on the Road. They expect to give better Satisfaction this Year, than last, by Reason they are more acquainted with the Nature of the Business, and have more convenient Boats, Waggons, and Stages, and will endea-vour to use People in the best Manner they are capable of,
1753

In this year or the next, the Bapists held meetings for a short time in the old "rigging-left" on Horse and Cart (William) St.—Benefit, Hist. of the Baptist Denom. in the U. S. (1820), 165. See also 1767.

Adam Dobbs advertises for sale a house on the west side of Whitehall Slip, "formerly the habitation of Mr. Leisler. The House is two story and a half high, has 3 rooms on floor and is about 25 feet front and 45 feet deep, has a good gang-way into the yard. The whole lot is 29 feet front and about 100 feet deep with a good Brick Kitchen, Stable and Grass plat."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 1 and 8, 1753. Jacob Leisler's house stood on the site of the present 36–38 Whitehall St. He bought the property from Nicholas Verlett, May 16, 1666 (Liber Deeds). The house was demolished the Verlett house, and built his residence mentioned in the advertisement. He lived there until 1689.—Liber Deeds, XXI: 34 (New York). See Pl. 17, Vol. I; Castello Plan, II: 278–79.

James Parker and William Weyman succeed Parker alone as printers of the Post-Boy, and with the issue of this date the title is changed to The New-York Gazette or, the Weekly Post-Boy. See Jan. 4, 1745. For the next change in name, see March 19, 1759.

A writer, who contributes "A Proposal of some further Regulations, for the Specilder and more effectual Extinguishing of Fires, that may happen in this City," mentions "an extraordinary Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires." He further says: "It hath more than once been observed that our Engines are incapable of throwing water to such a Height as is sometimes necessary. Of this we had a dreadful Instance when the Steeple of Trinity Church took Fire [see Feb. 25, 1759]. On that Occasion we observed, with universal Terror, that the Engines could scarce deliver the Water to the Top of the Roof. The Spire however, was far beyond its Reach; and had not Providence smiled upon the astonishing Dissenter and Reffering of Fires, which may happen in this City," mentions "a most Celelity, with which my Fellow-Citizens cluster together, at the ringing of the Fire-Bell," also "the Companies, lately formed for the preservation of Goods at fires.”
Trinity vestry orders “That Mr [William] Tuckey have the Use of the Charity School Room and also of the Assembly Room two Nights in the Week for the Teaching of his Singing Scholars, till further Orders.”—Trin. Min. (MS.).

William Livingston (see Nov. 25, 1753) publishes in his Indepen- dent Reflector Remarks on our intended College.” The subject is continued in the following Issues, March 1, April 5, 12, 19, and 26. He announces the principle that: “The true science of Education, is to qualify Men for the different Employments of Life, . . . to improve their Hearts and Understandings, to infuse a Public Spirit and Love of their Country; to inspire them with the Principles of Honour and Prowity; with a fervent zeal for Liberty, and a patriotic Benevolence; and a diffused enthusiasm, like a fire, to be spread in a Word, to make them the more extensively serviceable to the Common-Wealth. . . .” (pp. 67-68). He pleads for freedom of thought, a non-party college; although he would always, “for political Reasons, exclude Papists from the common and equal Benefits of Society” (p. 74). He opposes a college founded on a royal grant, on account of the danger of the Introduction of arbitrary power. He thinks “a Charter College will prove ineffectual to answer the true End of the Encouragement of Learning.” (pp. 73-76).

Instead, he says, “I would propose, that the College be founded and incorporated by Act of Assembly, and that not only because it ought to be under the Inspection of the civil Authority; but also, because such a Constitution will be more permanent, better endowed, less liable to Abuse, and more capable of answering its true End,” “that, in the present state of this Province, for advancing their private and public Happiness; of which the Legislature are the lawful Guardians” (pp. 79-80). He urges several arguments in favour of such incorporation (pp. 80-82); and points out eleven features which he deems necessary or desirable to embody in the incorporating Act. For example, “That all the Trustees be nominated, appointed, and incorporated by the Act;” and that vacancies be supplied “by Legislative Act;” that they hold office “only at the good Pleasure of the Governor, Council and General Assembly: And that no Person of any Protestant Denomination be, on Account of his religious Persuasion, disqualifed for sustaining any Office in the College.” Secondly, “That the President of the College be elected and deprived [discharged] by a Majority of the Trustees . . .” who, in turn, report to the assembly. By this means, “the President, who will have the supreme Supremacy and of the Education of our Youths, will be kept in a continual and ultimate Dependence upon the Public.” His fifth proposal for the articles of incorporation is “that no religious Profession in particular be established in the College; but that both Officers and Scholars be at perfect Liberty to attend any Protestant Church at their Pleasure.” Likewise, his seventh proposal is “That Divinity be no Part of the public Exercises of the College, that it be not an immediate Part of the Science: That the Corporation be inhibited from electing a Divinity Professor; and that the Degrees be conferred, he only in the Arts, Physic, and the Civil Law” (pp. 85-86). He develops further, in his last paper, the idea of making the college non-sectarian, but “founded on a free and catholic Bottom.” He asserts that “an equal Toleration of Conscience, is justly deem’d the Basis of the public Liberty of this Country” (p. 90). See also Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 5-6; and Feb. 29, 1754.

These doctrines were emboldened in an assembly bill, written by Livingston, the next year, after a charter had been granted, giving the college the use of the Episcopal ritual, etc.—See Nov. 14, and 6, 1754.

For “removing a Shift the Property of one of her Neigh- bours,” one Mary Wilson is “oblig’d to hugg the Post opposite the City-Hall, where she received the Discipline of Thirty One” (lashes).—N. Y. Post-Bay, March 26, 1753.

Inhabitants of the South Ward petition the common council for the establishment of a ferry “from this City to HarSinims” (Horsimus Island, of which Paulus Hook is a projection: see Pl. 50, Vol. 1), with a landing-place “at or near the West End of Fair-Hearth Island.” Consideration having been drawn, and no Enumeration to be made thereon.—M. C. C., VI: 395. See Feb. 23. The first ferry established across the North River—a private enterprise, is revealed by an advertisement in the Post-Bay, June 28, 1764 (p. 1.).

William Smith publishes a signed pamphlet (including a post- script dated April 10) presenting his ideals of an American college.
Courses by deceased; the Gaine or the 1752, capitulating Majesty’s “Pot-Baker’s was the Alderman of the House of Commons, of the city of New York, was sworn in and takes his seat.—Col. Cown. Min., 387.

The assembly is protracted to meet at the court-house in Jamaica.—Col. Cown. Min., 387.

The Mercury contains this paragraph: “The Printer hereof [Gaine] takes this opportunity to give Notice of his Removal from the House of Mr. Roger Magrah, on Hunter’s Key [see Aug, 3, 1754], to that wherein Mr. Joseph Crane, lately lived, opposite the Old Slip.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 7–8 (editorial note). Gaine’s next change of address was made May 6, 1754 (q.v.).

Augustus van Cortlandt delivers to the common council his appointment, signed and sealed by Gov. Clinton, to the several offices of “Common Clerk, Clerk of the Court of Record and Clerk of the records of the Sessions of the peace for the City and County of New York;” also the king’s commission under the great seal of the province for these offices during good behaviour. He succeeds John Chambers, resigned. He is sworn in, and Lambert Moore is sworn in as his deputy. The common council orders that Chambers deliver to Van Cortlandt the charters, city seal, the public records, seal of the mayor’s court, and all papers belonging to the corporation, to be kept by him.—M. G. C., V: 402–3. Van Cortlandt had been deputy to Chambers.—Ibid., V: 331. He held office until the Revolution.—Man. Com. Coun. (1866), 609.

Noel advertises a variety of goods for sale in “the House where Mr. Dirck Brinkerhoff, lately lived, and into which Noel has moved,” opposite Mr. Jacob Frankis, Merchant, in Dock-Street, near Counties Market.—N. T. Post-Boy, May 14, 1753. This appears to be a reference to the remaining portion of the property covered by the first city hall, after the demolition of the building, or part of it, in 1700.—See 1700, and March 14, 1700. The Widow of Balthasar Sommer, late from Amsterdam, now lives next Door to Mr. Laffert’s, on Pot-Baker’s Hill in Smith-Street, New-York; Grinds all sorts of Optic Glasses to the greatest perfection, such as Microscope Glasses, Spying Glasses of all lengths, Spectacles, Reading-Glasses, for near-sighted People or others: Also Spying-Glasses of Three feet long, which are to be set on a common Walking-Cant, and yet [can] be carried in a Pocket-Book.—N. T. Post-Boy, May 14, 1753. For this “Pot-Baker’s Hill,” see June 24, 1752.

A letter from the Earl of Halifax (see May 28, 1754), written to Cadwaller Colson from “Groovener Square” (London), and sent by way of Halifax, reads in part as follows: “I am very sensible of your Abilities, and the part you have acted in support of His Majesty’s Views, which it has been a point to maintain and preserve them; but as the Affairs of the Government of New-York have long been in a state of disorder and distraction before I was in a Situation to apply any remedy to them, I must be excused entering unnecessarily into so disagreeable a Detail, and recollection the many Oaths and Vows by which it has been committed to the Course of such unhappy Divisions.

"This However it might now become my indispenisible duty May 10, do to, but that his Majesty has render’d it needless by having named Sir Danvers Osborn as a Successor to Mr. Clinton in his Government, and I hope he will be in readiness to set sail for New-York in about six or seven weeks time at latest; so that Mr. Clinton may return home before the Winter." The Secretary of Health, both he and his Friends apprehend may prove of dangerous consequence to him.

"The same Zeal and Loyalty which you have hitherto shown in the support of His Majesty’s Rights, I flatter myself you will continue to exert; and I hope that all such as have a true regard to the interests of the Province will unite in their Endeavours to support it’s Constitution, which may as effectually be destroyed by unjust attacks on the Prerogative of the Crown on the one Hand, as on the Rights and Liberties of the People on the other. My Earnest wish is that even the Remembrance of former Animosities may no longer remain, and that the only Contention for the future may be who shall most effectually promote the Welfare, Peace, and Tranquility of the Province."—From the original letter, with Golden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Andrew Ramsey, "late of Long Island Ferry" (the unexpired lease of which he had purchased), as David Bloom in July, 1759, has "revived" the Trenton Ferry, where "all Travellers [between New York and Philadelphia, who are pleased to put up at his House, may depend on having good Entertainment for themselves and Horses." He is "providing a Stage Wagon to go from Jersey-town to Trenton, and a Stage Boat from New York to Trenton." Dates of departure, etc. are given.—N. T. Post-Boy, May 28, 1753.

The assembly meets at the house of Benjamin Hinckman in Jamaica, L. I. (the court-house of the town being "an inconvenient Place to sit in"). It responds to a summons to meet the governor and council in joint session "in the Council-Chamber, at the House of the Widow Stillwell," where the governor delivers a message. The location, he explains, is "free from the Infection of the Small-Pox;" whereas the city of New York, while almost free of it, might cause uneasiness.—Jour. Coun. Min., II: 337. Clinton recommends that they pass the complete and well digested body of new laws ordered by the king on April 16, 1753 (q.v.).

He also calls attention to the ruinous condition of frontier forts; the intrusion of others upon the lands of this province, etc. He says further: "The Resolution you made at the Close of the last Session [see Nov, 25, 1751], for establishing a Seminary for the Education of Youth within this Colony, is laudable and worthy your diligent Prosecution, and most serious Attention."—Jour. Coun. Min., II: 110.

Although business was transacted by the governor at the fort Jour. Coun. Min., II: 309, (ibid., II: 347), and at Philadelphia, (ibid., II: 347), no parties of the assembly continued at Jamaica until prorogued on July 4...Ibid., II: 320–51. See also March, 1752.

The "Small-Pox is entirely ceased, except in one Family." June 4 of this information is published by Parker, "to inform our Country Readers."—N. T. Post-Boy, June 4, 1753.

Richard Haddion, who "intends to quit the business of tavern Keeping," offers his house "on the New Dock." for rent.—N. T. Merc., June 4, 1753.

... Abraham Webb being provided with a Boat exceeding well fitted, with a very handsome Cabin, and all necessary Accommodations; proposes to give his Attendance, at the White Hall Slip, every Monday and Thursday; and the same Day, Wind and Weather permitting, to proceed for Ambay Ferry, to John Chuck’s, where a Waggon, Kept by John Richards, will be ready to receive either Goods or Passengers, and to proceed with them to Borden’s Town, where a Stage Boat will be ready to carry them to Philadelphia; and the same method will be followed from the Crockett-Billet Wharf at Philadelphia, up to Borden’s Town, and shall proceed, Load or no Load, twice a Week, by which Means, Passengers or Goods may never be detained on the Road. 4 The notice is signed by Abraham Webb, Joseph Richards, and Joseph Borden, Jr.—N. T. Post-Boy, June 4, Oct. 8, 1753. Cf. Aug. 12, 1753; Oct. 30, 1752.

Gov. Clinton holds a conference at Fort George with a deputation of 17 Mohawk Indians, representing one of the Six Nations, the object of which is to renew the "Covenant Chain," and to bear complaints of the encroachment of white men on Indian lands.—N. Y., Col. Doc., VI: 784–88. The Indians present a
The Indians left the conference hastily, "expressing great resentment and declaring they considered the alliance and friendship between them and the Province of New York to be dissolved." —Ibid., 605. On June 22, in an address to the assembly, Clinton recommended that a conference be held at Albany with the Six Nations.—Jour. Leg. Conv., II: 1145. See July 5. Regarding the location of the three Mohawk "castles" (forts), see Hist. Mag., 3rd ser., II: 15.

David Grim, writing from memory in 1813 (at the age of 75), describes the following facts connected with the visit of the Indians, which he erroneously ascribes to the year 1746. He remembers having heard his ancestors, the Grim family, tell how they came from Albany in their canoes, with their squaws and pappooses, (their wives and children,) a few hundreds, in order to hold a talk with the British Governor, George Clinton. They were encamped at the North river, in front of (now) St. John's Church. Those Indians, in a solemn train, marched from their encampment, and went directly to Fort George, in which the Governor lived; in their parade they exhibited and displayed a number of human scalps, suspended on poles, by way of streamers, which scalps they had taken from the French and Indians, their enemies; after which the Governor, with the principal officers of the colony, and a large number of citizens went in a procession, from the Fort to the Indian encampment, and presented to them the customary presents on those occasions. This was the last time the Indians came to New York to hold a conference; after which the Governor met them at Albany.—From statement on back of Grim's General Plan of N. Y. City, in N. Y. Hist. Soc., printed in its Man. Com. Coun. (1853), 582–386, also description of Pl. 123–2, Vol. I, p. 271.

There is advertised to be sold "at publick Vendue" on June 20, "at the House late of old Mr. De Lancey, near the English Church," household plate, fine china, furniture, etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 18, 1753. This mansion was built about 1700 (q.v.), at the present 115 Broadway between Thames (Stone) and Cedar Sts., by Etienne (Stephen) de Lancy, the founder of the American family of this name. Just below it, on the south side of Stone St., stood the Van Cortlandt mansion, in the rear of which was the Van Cortlandt churchyard, a part of Trinity churchyard which, in Nov., 1769 (q.v.), was destroyed by fire. The U. S. Realty building now occupies the site of the De Lancey mansion; and the Trinity building that of the Van Cortlandt mansion. The De Lancey mansion was of grey stone, two storeys high, with grounds in the rear sloping to the Hudson. A cupola adorned the roof.—See March 4, 1755. On April 15, 1754 (q.v.), Edward Willet opened the house as the Province Arms Tavern. For outline of its early history and later occupancy, see "City Tavern" in Landmark Map Rel. Key, III: 977.

The public is informed that "The Ferry-House from Long Island to Staten Island, commonly known by the Name of the Upper-Ferry [see July 8, 1754] otherwise Stillwell's Ferry, is now kept by Nicholas Stilwell, who formerly occupied the same: He has two good Boats well accommodated for the safe Conveyance of Man or Horse, across the Narrows. He also purposes to carry, if required, Travellers either to Staten Island, Elizabeth-Town Point, Amboy or New-York, and that at the most reasonable Terms."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 18, 1753. Andrew Ramsey had but recently kept the Long Island ferry-house.—See May 28.

John Lane now "keeps the ferry at Yellow Hook, 6 miles below New-York by Sea and Long Island, and advertises that he is ready to go at any time (wind and weather permitting) to "Smith's ferry on Staten-Island," even with a single passenger.—N. Y. Merc., June 18, 1753.

Sunday the 24th ult. being the Anniversary of the Festival of St. John the Baptist, the Ancient and Right Worshipful Society of Free and Accepted Masons, of this City, assembled at Spring Garden the next Day, and being properly clothed, made a regular Procession in due Form, to the King's Arms Tavern in Broad Street, near the Long Bridge, where an elegant Entertainment was provided:—"-N. Y. Merc., July 2, 1753. The Post-Boy's account refers to this tavern as "the house of George Burns near the Church." This account is erroneous. —Robert Wallace, Joiner. Living in Beaver Street, at the Corner of New-Street, makes all Sorts of Cabinets, Scrutories, Desks and Book Cases, Drawers, Tables, either square, round, oval, or quadrile, and Chairs of any Fashion."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 25, 1753.

An account of William Hallam's recent coming to New York with his players is thus given in the Mercury, as an introduction or appeal to the public:

"The Case of the London Company of Comedians, lately arrived from Virginia, humbly submitted to the Consideration of the Public; whose Servants they are, and whose Protection they intreat.

"As our Expedition to New York seems likely to be attended with a very fatal Consequence, and our selves hourly censur'd for undertaking it, without Assurance of Success; we beg leave, humbly to lay a true State of our Case before the worthy Inhabitants of this City; if possible, endeavour to remove those great Obstacles which at present lie before us, and give very sufficient Reasons for our appearance in this part of the World, where we all had the most sanguine Hopes of meeting a very different Reception; little imagining, that in a City, to all Appearance the most unpropitious to the Stage, the Muses would be banished the Venerable of the immortal Shakespeare, and others of the greatest Geniuses England ever produc'd, deny'd Admittance among them, and the instructive and elegant Entertainment of the Stage utterly protested against: When, without Boasting, we may venture to affirm, That we are capable of supporting its Dignity with proper Decorum and Regularity.

"In the Infancy of this Scheme, it was proposed to Mr. William Hallam, now of London, to collect a Company of Comedians, and send them to New York, and the other Colonies of America. Accordingly he assented, and was at a very short Notice prepared, to produce Scenes, Cloaths, People, &c. &c. And in October 1750, sent over to this Place, Mr. Robert Upton, in order to obtain Permission to perform, erect a Building, and settle every Thing against our Arrival; for which Service, Mr. Hallam advanc'd no inconsiderable Sum. But Mr. Upton on his Arrival found here that Sett of Pretenders, with whom he joined, and unhappily for us, quite neglected the Business he was sent about from England; for we never heard from him after.

"Being thus deceived by him the Company was at a Stand, till April 1752, when by the Persuasion of several gentlemen in London, and Virginia Captains, we set sail on Board of Mr. William Lee [sic], and arrived after a very expensive and tiresome Voyage, at York River [Va.], on the 28th of June following: Where we obtained Leave of his Excellency the Governor, and performed with universal Applause, and met with the greatest Encouragement; for which we are bound by the strongest Obligations, to acknowledge the many and repeated Instances of their Spirit and Generosity. We were there eleven Months before we thought of removing; and then asking advice, we were again persuaded to come to New York, by several Gentlemen, &c. whose Names we can mention, but do not think proper to publish. They told us, that we should not fail of a grateful and favourable Reception; that the Inhabitants were generous and polite, naturally fond of Diversions rational, particularly those of the Theatre; Nay, they even told us, there was a very fine Play-house Building, and that we were really expected. This was Encouragement sufficient for us, as we thought, and we came firmly assured of Success; but how far our Expectations are answered, we shall leave to the Candid to determine, and only beg leave to add, That as we are People of no Estates, it cannot be supposed that we have a Fund sufficient to bear up against such unexpected Repulses. A Journey from London to New York, Five Hundred Miles, is not undertaken without Money. Therefore, if the worthy Magistrates would consider this in our Favour, that it must rather turn out a publick Advantage and Pleasure, than a private Injury; They would, we make no Doubt, grant Permission, and give us an Opportunity to convince them, we were not cast in the same Mould with our Theatrical Predecessors; or that in private Life or publish 1753 Occupation, we have the Affinity to them."—N. Y. Merc, July 2,

2 July 1753. For the first performance in New York by the Hallam and their company, see Sept. 17.

"William Hallam, the originator of this company, had been the manager of the theatre in Goodman's Fields, London... The company was formed on the sharing plan, and consisted of twelve adult individuals and the three children of Lewis Hallam. The shares were eight—each adult performer being entitled to one, and the manager one in addition for his services in that capacity, and one for his three children, and each share-holder being entitled to a benefit night. Four shares were assigned to the property, from which the profits of the speculation were to be realized by the originator and his brother, who were made equal partners in the scheme. The business is supposed to have resulted very favorably, for, in 1754, William Hallam arrived from England, where he soon returned with his proportion of the profits and the value of his two shares, which he sold to his brother Lewis for a handsome premium."—Irish, Rec. of the N. Y. Stage, I: 16-17.

"By a Person lately arrived in this Town, Painting upon Glass, (commonly call'd burning upon Glass) is performed in a neat and curious Manner so as to never change its Colour; Perspective Views neatly colour'd for the Camera Obscura. N. B. Young gentlemen and Ladies are instructed in either of the above... By the same Person, Land survey'd, Designs for Buildings, Plans and Maps neatly drawn. Enquire at Mr. John Ditcher, in Cedar Street, and Soap-Boiler in the Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 9, 1753.

"Charles Love, Musician, from London, at his lodgings... in the first lane from the Bowling-Green, that leads to the North-River, proposes teaching gentlemen music on the following instruments, viz. Violin, Flautoy, German and Common Flutes, Bassoon, French Horn, Tenor, and Bass Violin, if desired."—N. Y. Merc, July 2, 1753.

On account of the rupture in the allegiance of the Mohawks (see June 11), the council and assembly, in a representation to Clinton, recommend that Col. Johnson be instructed to impress Oonadaga, to remove their uneasiness, to bury the hatchet, and to preserve the friendship of these nations.—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1122.

The general assembly finds it necessary to deny a rumour that, "in Case the Money raised by Lottery, for erecting a College within this Colony, should prove insufficient for that Purpose, the General Assembly intend to supply the Deficiency by a Tax on the People;" and a rumour that the people are to be taxed for the maintenance of the college, and that £500 is to be appropriated out of the excise fund for establishing the college. All these reports are declared to be "groundless, false and malicious."—Assem. Jour., II: 330. See July 4.

The province authorizes the following appropriation: £375 for "repairing Copsey battery [see earlier appropriation, Nov. 7, 1753; see also April 9, 1754] and Several other Repairs Necessary for the New York and from Governors House in the said Fort."—Col. Laws N. Y. T., III: 916-24.

An act is passed for raising £1,125 by public lottery "for a further provision towards founding a College for the advancement of Learning within this Colony;" Peter van Brugh Livingston and Jacobus Roosevelt are appointed managers, their duties are defined, and the details of the operation of the lottery are prescribed. The terms are similar to those enacted for the earlier college lotteries (see Dec. 6, 1756; April 9, 1748)—Col. Laws N. Y. T., III: 899. See July 23.

An act is passed "further to continue the Duty of Excise and the Currency of the Bills of Credit emitted thereon for the purposes in the former Act and herein Mentioned." The title does not reveal the chief purpose of the act, which is to appropriate provincial funds for the benefit of the college. The act recites the passage of an act "for laying an Excise on all Strong Liquors..." for the term of 20 years ending Nov. 1, 1773, which by several subsequent acts was prolonged to the year 1757. Then it states that "it has been the Intention of the Legislature for Several Years Past to establish a Seminary within this Colony for the Education of Youth in the Liberal Arts and Sciences And as manager of the institution shall term of 20 years ending Nov. 1, 1753, for the term of 30 years ending Nov. 1, 1773, which by several subsequent acts was prolonged to the year 1757. Then it states that "it has been the Intention of the Legislature for Several Years Past to establish a Seminary within this Colony for the Education of Youth in the Liberal Arts and Sciences And as manager of the institution..."

The draft of a commission is approved by the king in council for Sir Danvers Osborn to be governour of New York, and it is ordered that a warrant issue to pass it under the great seal.—N. Y. Col. Decs., VI: 791-92. It was ordered, Aug. 10, that his instructions be prepared.—Ibid., VI: 793-94.

The new lottery to raise money for the college (see July 4) is advertised. It is to be sold at 30 shillings each, 1,094 of them "to be fortunate." There are 3,096 blanks. The capital prize is £500; 15 per cent. is to be deducted from the prizes to cover expenses. Receipts from sales will amount to Advertisement.

By a Law passed the last Session, a Publick Lottery is directed, for a further Provision towards Founding a College for the Advancement of Learning within this Colony, to consist of 8000 Tickets, at 30 s. each, 1304 of which to be fortunate, viz.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Number of Prizes</th>
<th>Value of each</th>
<th>Total Value</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 500</td>
<td>£ 500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 200</td>
<td>£ 200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 100</td>
<td>£ 100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 50</td>
<td>£ 50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>£ 25</td>
<td>£ 50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 15</td>
<td>£ 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 10</td>
<td>£ 10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>£ 5</td>
<td>£ 5</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1304 Tickets 8000 Tickets at 30 s. each makes £ 12,000.

15 per Cent. to be deducted from the Prizes. As such a laudable Design will greatly tend to the Welfare and Reputation of this Colony; it is expected the Inhabitants will readily be excited to become Adventurers. Publick Notice will be given of the precise Time for putting the Tickets into the Boxes that such Adventurers as shall be minded to take the same down, may be present at the doing thereof. The Drawing to commence on or before the first Day of September next, at the City-Hall of New-York, under the Inspection of the Corporation, who are empowered to appoint two or more of their Body to select all the Tickets of every Transaction of the said Lottery, and two Judges of the Peace, or other reputable Freeholders or Inhabitants of every County in this Colony, if they be able to dispute the same at their next or any subsequent general Session of the Peace. Notice will be given in the New-York Gazette fourteen Days before the Drawing. The Managers are sworn faithfully to execute the Trust reposed in them, and have given Security for the faithful Discharge of the same. As the late Lotteries have given general Satisfaction, the same Care will be taken, and the same Regulations observed in this, with respect to the Tickets, the Drawing, keeping the Books, and every Particular, as near as possible. Such as forge or counterfeit any Ticket, or alter the Number, and are thereof convicted, by the said Act are to suffer Death as in Cases of Felony. The Prizes will be published in the New-York Gazette, and the Money will be paid to the Possessors of the Benefit Tickets as soon as the Drawing is finished.

Tickets are to be had at the Dwelling-Houses of "Mr. Peter Van Brugh Livingstoue, who are appointed Managers."
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

July 23. “The Managers would acquaint the Publick, that upwards of One Thousand Tickets are already engaged to the Hand in Hand and American Fire Companies in this City, to whom the Tickets are already sold.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 25. The results of the drawings were published in ibid., Nov. 19. Another lottery for the same object was soon on foot.—See Dec. 12.

25. The attorney and solicitor-general of England report, in answer to queries, that the commission of James De Lanseyc, as chief-justice of the province of New York, cannot be revoked except by Congress.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 792, 951. After being lieutenant-governor he returned to the office of chief-justice (Jan. 21, 1756).—Ibid., VII: 32.

28. A third member of the supreme court is added by the appointment of Daniel Horsmanden to that office by the governor, with the advice and consent of the council.—Col. Coun. Min., 389; N. Y. Merc., Aug. 6, 1753.

30. “The Post Office, will be removed on Thursday next [Aug. 2] to the House of Mr. Alexander Colden, opposite to the Bowling Greens, in the Broad-Way, where the Rev’d Mr. Pemberton lately liv’d; where Letters will be receiv’d and deliver’d out every Day, (Saturday Afternoon till the Arrival of the Posts, and Sundays excepted) from Eight in the Morning till Twelve at Noon, and from Two in the Afternoon till Four, except on Post Nights, when Attendance will be given till Ten of the Clock at Night. And all Letters receiv’d in Town that remain uncalled for on Post Nights, will, on Monday Morning, be sent out by a Penny Post provided for that Purpose.”

“The N. B. No Credit for the future will be given for Postage of Letters.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 30, 1753; see also N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 799.

Aug. 5. A gentleman in London writes to a friend in New York: “Sir John Danvers Osborne, who is appointed your Governor, sets out, in a day or two, for Portsmouth, to embark on board his Majesty’s Ship the Arundel, etc.”—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 1, 1753. See Aug. 15.

13. “Margaret St. Maurice, Capmaker, from London, at the printing office oppose the Old-Slip-Market, makes and sells all sorts of men’s and women’s velvet riding caps, men’s morning caps, Bath bonnets, and hats for ladies, bags and roses for gentleman’s wigs, pillpores and hoods, hats and caps for children, all in the nearest manner and newest fashions. She grazes stockings in the nearest manner, and has an assortment of leather caps ready made.”—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 6, 1753.

The dwelling-house at the corner of the Old Slip belonging to the estate of Elizabeth Klock, in which Dr. Samuel and William Brown, London, and in possession of Martin Cregier, tavern-keeper, is offered for sale at public vendue.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 5, 1753. As early as Aug. 16, 1753, Martin Cregier had a tavern “on the Dock,” probably in this same house.—N. Y. Gaz., July 25—Aug. 2, 1753. John Cregier, later proprietor of the “Cross Keys” on the Kingsbridge Road, was occupying the “corner-house at the Old Slip” in 1745.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 12, 1753.

Still earlier in the city’s history, Martin Cregier, perhaps the father of John and Martin, kept tavern at the present No. 3 Broadway. See 1659. For a view of the Klock house at the Old Slip as it appeared in 1718–9, see Pl. 25, Vol. I, and description, p. 247. For John Cregier’s tavern, see 1756.

Archibald Kennedy, collector of customs, seizes the colony’s gunpowder store in the magazine of the city, on the pretence that it was unlawfully imported.—Assem. Jour., II: 363–64. For the action of the colony in this matter, see Dec. 4.

The instructions to Sir Danvers Osborne, of this date, refer to the “Disputes and Animosities” in the province of New York, as a result of which the course of justice has been obstructed, and the royal prerogative “invaded in a most unwarrantable and illegal Manner.” The new governor is instructed to inform both the council and the assembly of the king’s displeasure over “their Neglect of, and the Contempt they have shewn to, our royal Commission, by passing Laws of so extraordinary a Nature, and by such their unwarrantable Proceedings; and that we do strictly charge and enjoin them for the future, to pay to our said Commission and Instructions, due Obedience.” The governor is forbidden to receive any gift or present from the assembly. His salary is fixed at £4,000, but the assembly may settle an annual sum upon him, in addition, provided the same be done “by the first Assembly, and within a Year” after his arrival in the province. This additional allowance is permitted because it has been represented to the king that £4,000 per annum is not sufficient “for the Support of our Governor, and the Dignity of our Government.” N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 947–90, 960. In a message to Lieut.-Gov. P. Laurencie, the assembly denied its position.—See Nov. 6.

“The is to inform the Publick, That there is just arrived in this City, and to be seen at a new House built for that Purpose, in Mr. Adam Van Denberg’s Garden, This Evening being Monday, the 13th Instant, The Surprising Performances of the celebrated Apollo Joseph Duge . . . On a Slack Wire scarcely perceptible, with and without a Horse’s Assistance. Persons admitted by Five Shillings.—See performance follow.—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 13, 1753. Van Denberg’s old garden and tavern were on Trinity Church property at Broadway and Vesey St. Van Denberg had also acquired the pleasure resort on the North River called the Old Bowling Green (see Feb. 15, 1752), but the performance now advertised was undoubtedly held in a new building on Broadway where, on Dec. 20, 1755 (p. 90), Richard Breckell, a clockmaker, advertised a puppet show.

A shipload of 500 Palatines has recently arrived.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 20, 1753.

An advertisement of a house to let describes it as on William St., opposite the Sign of the Three Pigeons (probably a tavern).—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 15, 1753. The “Sign of the Three Pigeons” is more definitely located in an advertisement of Nov. 19, 1759, in which Richard Curose, “Near the Widow Rutges’s Browsihouse, and opposite the Three Pigeons,” offers madder, tansy, and other liquors.—Ibid., Nov. 19, 1759. This locality was known as Golden Hill.

James Parker introduces a new weekly paper called The Occasional Reverberator. In his other paper, The New-York Gazette: or, the Weekly Post-Boy, for Sept. 17, published the following item regarding it:

“The Enemies of Liberty, and a freedom of Reflection, having by the most iniquitous Arts, engrossed the New York Mercury, and utterly excluded their Antagonists from a fair Hearing in that Paper; and the Printers of the Gazette declining the Insertion of any Thing that favours of Political or religious Controversy, another paper, entitled, The Occasional Reverberator, has been set up, to be published every Friday, as often as occasion shall require: the First Number was printed on the 7th Instant, and the Second on Friday last. Any person inclining to take them, or buy them, may have them at the Rate of 25. 6d. per Quarter, reckoning thirteen Papers to a Quarter, or at 3s. a Piece single, at the New Printing Office in Beaver Street.” Only four numbers of the paper were issued.—See Early Newspapers, II: 426; Brigham, “Bibliography of Am. Newspapers,” in Am. Antiquarian Soc. Proceedings (1917), 472. The four issues of this paper are bound up with the Independent Press of the way it followed) in the volume of the letter in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

“Just imported in the Ship Fame, Capt. Seymour, from Hamburg, and to be Sold on board the said Vessel, by Joseph Haynes, or said Master; A parcel of very likely healthy Palatines, of all Trades. As also Women and Children, &c.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 19, 1753.

The Company of Comedians, who arrived here the past Summer [see July 4, having obtained Permission from proper Authority, to act, have built a very fine, large and commodious new Theatre in the Place where the old One stood; and having got it in good Order, design to begin this Evening: As they propose to carry here but a short Time, we hear they design to perform three Times a Week.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 17, 1753.

According to this announcement, the “new Theatre” was erected between July 2 and this date. As it stood “in the Place where the old One stood,” it was on the site of Van Dam’s building in Nassau St.—See Feb. 26, and March 5, 1750. See also description of Pl. 50, I: 265 (the year 1753 mentioned in I: 265, being an error for 1753).

For later history of the site, see “Nassau St. Theatre,” and “First German Reformed Church (first site),” in Landmark Map Ref. B, III: 985, 995.

The advertisement of the opening performance at this theatre is also published in the above-mentioned issue of the Post-Boy. The play announced is “The Conscious Lovers,” with the names of the characters, and also of the players, including Mrs. Hallam, Miss Hallam, and Master J. For more details see “The Prices” are: “Box, 8s. Pit, 6s., Gallery, 3s. . . Gentlemen and
The iconography of Manhattan Island.
Excellency was pleased to declare, any other.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 15, 1753. He immediately issued a proclamation that the government had devolved upon himself.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 5, 1753. The instructions of Sir Danvers were also read in council, appointing Cadwallader Colden, James Alexander, Archibald Kennedy, James de Lancey, George Clarke, Jr., Joseph Murray, John Rutherford, Edward Holland, William Johnson, John Chambers, and William Smith, of the council.—Cal. Coun. Min., 390.

A committee of inquest on Sir Danvers' death was appointed, consisting of Mr. Alexander, the eldest councillor present; Mr. Chambers, the second justice of the supreme court, and Mayor Holland, all members of the council.—Ibid., 390; N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 804. The following depositions were made regarding the case: 1, by John Milligan, surgeon, as to having ineffectually endeavoured to resuscitate Sir Danvers; 2, by Thomas Pownall, his secretary, giving an account of his excellency's previous health; 3, by Lieut. James Cunningham, of Col. Warburton's regiment (Nova Scotia), giving an account of the low spirited and depressed condition of Sir Danvers during the voyage from England, and after his arrival at New York; 4, by William Keen, Sir Danvers' valet, describing the distress in which the governor appeared to be on the night of Oct. 11, stating that about 12 or 1 o'clock he was engaged in burning the Lord Mayor's house, having been found drunk the night before; and the next morning was found hanging on the fence at the foot of Mr. Murray's garden; 5, by Joseph Murray, member of the council, that Sir Danvers stayed at his house after his arrival at New York, and until his residence in the fort could be prepared; 6, by Col. Philip Livingstone, that Sir Danvers was in great pain and that he had not slept all night; and the next morning Phillips Cooey informed him that Sir Danvers had hanged himself.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 609-10. Despite disturbing rumours, it was generally accepted that the governor died at his own hands. A committee was appointed to take an inventory of his estate and arrange for his funeral.—Cal. Coun. Min., 390.

On the 13th, his body was temporarily placed (until May 27, 1754, p. v.) in a vault in the chancel of Trinity Church.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 15, 1753; Smith, Continuation of the Hist. of the Prov. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1890).

Philip Livingston, writing to John Winthrop concerning the governor's suicide, under date of Oct. 15, said, "You Cannot Imagine, Sir, what an Excessive Damp this Affair Stuck upon people's Spirits, for a Gentleman of an Independent fortune, at the head of a Government where he was rec'd with the utmost demonstrations of Joy, by all ranks of people. & Every thing was great & good Was expected from his Administration as his Character was that of an honest Virtuous & Truly religious man as well as a man of Sense & Learning I say for a man of such a Truly good and Amiable a Character, to be left all of a sudden to Exposures from himself so horrid a calamity & Indeed I Can truly say That I never saw a number of people so affected & Truly sorrowful as the people of this City, upon this Occasion. The Coroner Inquest found him by their Inquisition, Lunatick so that his Corps had an honourable &d private burial in the great Church & his Estate is Saved To his Children. . . . Mr. De Lancey Our Chief Justice now Comands this province. Last week we had three Governments In less in [than] 48 hours."—Winthrop Papers, XIV: 153, in Mass. Hist. Soc.

With the affidavits (which were presumably made at the inquest) was an inventory of Sir Danvers' personal effects. The affidavits showed that on the evening of Oct. 11 the governor had been engaged in burning his papers and documents.—See list of affidavits in O'Callaghan's Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 609-10. On Oct. 29, Oliver de Lancey, Thomas Pownall, and Charles Williams were appointed administrators of Sir Danvers' estate.—Cal. Coun. Min., 391. At the governor's death, a letter, published in a London paper on Dec. 14, 1753.—Uppington Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., I: 239. It is there stated that "the Hon. George Clinton, Esq; who for many Years has been Governor of that Province, and was to have embark'd the Day that Sir Danvers Osborn died, put off his Departure till Directions are received from the new Gov. & how to act." This is followed by a brief account of Sir Danvers Osborn's life.

The body of Sir Danvers Osborn was taken "home" to England on, or immediately after, May 27, 1754 (p. v.).

All Persons indebted by Bond, to the Trustees of the College of New York, are hereby desired to pay the Interest due on their respective Bonds, without further Delay, or they may depa on being prosecuted without further notice.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8, 1753. See Nov. 1, 1754.

Two New York oaths are begun on this day, consisting of two rolls of parchment, each measuring 30 in. long by 12 in. wide, stitched together at the top. One is the abjuration oath; the other the designation against transubstantiation, both with signatures. An additional strip of five inches is added to the upper edge of the former oath, increasing its length to 35 in. The latter oath is endorsed "Rolls begun the day of 1753," with spaces for day and month left blank. The date on which the rolls were begun is determined by an examination of the names, in comparison with the entries of the arrivals of the first triennial of Gov. Osborn, as published in the N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 8 and 15, 1753. This is fully explained in a study of the "New York Oath Rolls of 1753-57," in N. Y. Pub. Library Bulletin, 1: 44-50. The rolls are preserved in the MSS. Div. of the N. Y. Pub. Library.

The earliest known reference to the famous Blue Bell Tavern, which stood on the old King's Bridge Road, at about the present 8181 St., is found in a letter attributed by Benson J. Lossing to Cadwallader Colden, and published in an article on old taverns in Appleton's Jour., Dec. 17, 1857. Colden writes: "I have in full a very pleasant note from Philips to Van Cortlandt's, where I lodged, passing easily through the mountains. I baited my horses at Denyes's, a tenant of Hercules Lent, near Peekskill, and arrived at the manor-house at dusk. Young Pierre and his charming wife keep up the hospitality of the house equal to his latter days. The road was dry and generally pretty smooth, and the woods were gay with autumn colors."

"I started early yesterday morning, and dined with Phillipes, at Yonkers. Mary has become a pretty young lady. I expected to reach New York early in the evening; but when I approached the King's Bridge, it began to rain suddenly. It was sunset; and, as the moon would not rise before nine o'clock, I knew it would be a very dark evening. So I concluded to stop for the night at the Blue Bell, where I found our nephew, James Delancy, who had halted because of the storm and darkness. This tavern is very well kept by a Dutchman named Vanderveen, and our food and lodgings were very comfortable. At a very early hour we started for the city, where I saw a terrible sight. It was the body of Sir Danvers Osborn, lately arrived, hanging by the neck to his gardengate! . . ." (see Oct. 6).

This letter is not to be found in the Colden papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. One written on Oct. 14 by Colden to his wife, however, refers to the same incident. This circumstance suggests that another hand than Colden's penned the letter above quoted, and that Lossing, therefore, was mistaken in attributing it to him. Colden's letter of Oct. 14 states: "I got in good health to this place the next day after I left you better & more comfortable. The voyage past Greenevitch Mr Nicholls called to me to come a shoire. When I was informed of the most surprising end of S' Danvers Osborn that morning . . ." The Blue Bell was mentioned on several occasions during the Revolutions. When the British frigates moved up the North River in July, 1776, one account states "that the most damage they received was in passing the batteries at Powle's Hook and the Blue Bell."—Connecticut Courant (Hartford), Aug. 9, 1776. On Oct. 4, 1776, a court-marital was held "at Mount Washington, at the Blue Bell."—Am. Archivs, 5th Ser., II: 385. Again, it is said that the American army, on its triumphal entry into New York in 1783, was reviewed by Washington in front of the Blue Bell. The proprietor of the tavern in 1776 was probably Jacob Moore, who paid excise in this year, his house being described as "within 3 miles of King's Bridge." Col. SamuelTimestamp: 2023-11-12T17:42:19.830Z
The origin of Manhattan Island, as described by Charles Willson, and as presented in his Map of New York, 1753. This, like the earlier play-bill, is in the Harvard Univ. Library. See Dec. 20, 1753.

1753.

The further. such as—Mag. Am. Hist. (1881), VIII: 399-400, 375.

The present address to James de Lancey, the lieutenant-governor, on his taking up the duties of chief executive of the province.—M. C. C. V: 426-28.

This being the last day of the October term of the supreme court, the justices of this court, the attorney-general, and the attorneys attending the court, presented his excellency with his address to the city hall to the house of the lieutenant-governor, to present an address to him. "After which his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, attended by the whole Body of the Laws went in Procession to the House of Mr. Edward Willett, where an elegant, Entertainment was provided, where his Majesty's and all the other local Healths were drank, as usual on the Like Occasions."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 29, 1753.

Lient-Gov. de Lancey, in an address to the assembly, thus refers to the death of Sir Danvers Osborn: "As he was a Gentleman of Birth, of Sleral Education, and distinguished Character, we had well grounded Expectations of being a happy People under his Administration, and that the province would be brought to a happy state,"—Assem. Jour., II: 375-77. The house replied on Dec. 6.

Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia sends George Washington as bearer of letters to the French to protest against their occupation of lands on the Ohio River "known to be the property of the Crown of Great Britain," and making certain proposals.—Doc. Hist. N. Y., X: 258. The French rejected the proposals of the English, and both sides armed for the struggle.—Treaties, France in America, 1758-61. See also May 4, 1754. A clash occurred on May 28, 1754 (q.v.), marking the beginning of the French and Indian War.

De Lancey informs the legislature that "the Provision lately made for repairing His Majesty's Fort and Copsey Battery [see July 4] will, from the great Damage done to the latter by the late Storm, fall very short of answering those Purposes. I must therefore, recommend to you, to make further Provision for this End."—Assem. Jour., II: 351; Jour. Leg. Couns., 1117.

The house, in adopting an address to Lient.-Gov. de Lancey, compliments him on his administration of the government. Replying to the statements contained in the instructions of Sir Danvers Osborn (see Aug. 13), the members of the house declare that they have been "maliciously misrepresented." Former Gov. Clinton is charged with commissioning judges "of known ill Character and extream Ignorance." They add that the existing method of raising money has been pursued for the past 15 years.—Assem. Jour., II: 333-4. On Nov. 9, De Lancey, on receiving the address "at his House in the Broadway," replied that he had "never observed any disaffection on the part of the people towards his Majesty."—Ibid.

A letter from Lord Holdensisse to Sir Danvers Osborn, regarding the emboycroths by foreign powers and the mutual assistance of the colonies, is referred by the council to the assembly.—Cal. Couns. Min., 390.

The American express arrived here from Virginia, by whom we have a Confirmation of the Advice lately received from England, of Benjamin Franklin, Esq; of Philadelphia, and William Hunter, Esq; of Williamsburg, Va; being appointed Post-Masters General of America.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 12, 1753.

The American playbill of that of March 26, 1750 (q.v.), is one for "King Richard III" and "The Devil to Pay," which were presented on this date at the Nassau St. Theatre.

Nov.

Hugh Gaine is ordered before the house for printing in his paper, The New-York Mercury, part of the proceedings of the house, including several articles of his majesty's instructions to Sir Danvers Osborn.—Oct. 9, 1753. On Nov. 12 he reprinted, and admitted after paying costs.—Ibid., II: 359.

An essay on the "natural Advantages" of New York province contains the following: "Our Harbour, or rather Road, is as safe as others generally are, most of them being subject to important Obstructions, and of its precious natural Improvements of Art. The mooring Ground is free, good from Bars, and not incommoded by Rocks, the Water of an equal and convenient Depth, and the Shore bold to the very Edges; and but for floating Cakes of Ice in the Winter, our Shipping would be entirely exempted from Danger. Nor is it difficult perfectly to secure them from that Inconvenience. The Place called Rotten-Row, has hitherto been their only Assylum, tho' unhappily of late, it annually becomes less and less fit for that Purpose. . . . "The City of New-York consists of about Two Thousand Five Hundred Building Acres, which is its Figure, its Center of Businesses, and the Situation of its Buildings, that the Cartage in Town from one Part to another, does not at a Medium, exceed one Quarter of a Mile: The prodigious Advantage of which, to a trading City, is more easily conceived than expressed. It facilitates and expedites the lading and unlading of Ships and Boats, and, besides, Land and Labour, is attended with unnumerable Conveniences to its Inhabitants. . . . "This we abound in no one Kind of Fish sufficient for a Staple, yet such is our Happiness in this Article, that not one of the Colonies affects, a Fish-Market of such Proportions; before mentioned, and Boston has none but Sea Fish, and of these Philadelphia is entirely destitute, being only furnished with the Fish of a fresh Water River. New-York is sufficiently supplied with both Sorts. Nor ought our vast plenty of Oysters to pass without particular Observation; in their Quality they are exceeded by those of no Country whatsoever. . . . They continue good Eight Months in the Year, and are, for two Months longer, the daily Food of our Poor. Their Beds are within View of the Town, and I am informed, that an Oysterman industriously employed, may clear Eight or Ten Shillings a Day."—Independent Reflector, Nov. 22, 1753.

The trustees of the funds of the proposed college (see Nov. 25, 1751), nine in number, of whom six are Episcopalians (see July 5, 1754), agree "that a Letter be written to Doctor [Samuel] Johnson, of Stratford, Conn., proposing to him [see the proposal of his name, Oct. 25, 1753] for the President, for the Seminary of New-York, and, that he offer the Sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Pounds per Annum, for his Salary, to commence from the first Day of May next; and that another Letter be written to Mr. Chauncey Whittlesey, of New-Haven, offering him the Sum of Two Hundred Pounds, per Annum, as second Master of the said Seminary, to commence as aforesaid; and that Mr. William Livingston, prepare the Draughts of the said Letters. "As the Trustees are sensible that the salary proposed for Doctor Johnson, (though as much as they are enabled to offer) is inadequate to his Merit, and that the Vestry of Trinity Church will readily agree to make a sufficient Addition;" it is "Agreed, That the Gentlemen of the Vestry, who are Trustees, do recommend it to the Vestry to make such additional Proposals, as may induce him to accept the above Proposal. "On the 7th of January following [1754], the several Draughts of the Letters to Mr. Johnson, and Mr. Whittlesey, were read at a meeting of the trustees, and approved of, and ordered to be copied, sent, and signed by William Livingston, in behalf of the Trustees; which were accordingly copied, signed, and sent the Day after, each inclosing a Copy of the Act of Governor, Council, and General Assembly of the fourth of July then last past [1753]; and containing the several Proposals before mentioned, and as a further Inducement to Doctor Johnson to accept the said Proposals made to him, the Trustees in the said Letter, acquainted him, that as they were informed since the Draught of that Letter, by some of the Trustees, who were of the Vestry, that the Corporation of that Church had agreed to call him as an Assistant Preacher, they made no doubt but that the addition of any particular which they would allot him for that Service, might be a further Indemnuation to him to accept the above Offer, in Case he should think (as they themselves could not help imagining) that what was in their Power was insufficient."—Assem. Jour., II: 398.

The Rev. Dr. Johnson was a minister of the Church of England. Franklin had written Dr. Johnson, in 1790, expressing the wish that "this letter might come to the notice of the Lords of Trade, when that should become a college (see letters of Aug. 9 and Sept. 13, 1790, among Johnson Papers, MS., in Columbia Univ. Lib.). Mr. Whittlessey was "a Presbyterian Gentleman, late a Tutor of Reputation, in the College there" (New Haven).—Benjamin NELSON, Ed., Proceedings of the President of the College of New York, 1759-1774, Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 14, citing Chancellor's Life of Johnson. For Dr. Johnson's reply, see Jan. 17, 1754; and for Mr. Whittlessey's, see Feb. 21, 1754.

[The text is not fully legible, but it appears to continue discussing various historical and legal matters, including financial transactions, legal proceedings, and the influence of certain individuals and institutions such as Dr. Johnson and the College of New York.]

---

To continue reading the document, the text appears to discuss various financial transactions, legal proceedings, and the influence of certain individuals and institutions such as Dr. Johnson and the College of New York. The text mentions Dr. Johnson's letter to the Lords of Trade and his role in the College of New York, as well as other financial matters and legal proceedings involving the college.

[The text continues with various legal and financial details related to the college's operations and the influence of certain individuals and institutions.]

---

To fully understand the context and details of the text, a comprehensive knowledge of the historical and legal context of the time is necessary. The text mentions various legal proceedings, financial transactions, and the influence of individuals such as Dr. Johnson and the College of New York. The text appears to discuss the financial and legal matters related to the college's operations and its influence on society.
1753 much Happiness with each other." In the same letter the rector acknowledges the receipt of a copy of a "Colledge Liturgy," and adds: "I should like [it] much were I not in hopes that the Morning and Evening Prayers according to the Common Prayer Book would be Established, and therefore I shall not yet offer It to any ones Perusal."

It is apparent that Dr. Johnson had expressed himself to Dr. Barclay as averse to Whitleyey's appointment as sub-master, because the letter continues: "As to W—y we Shall do what we can to prevent his having any Offer made him & yet how to come of a thing not having been resolved, but If he Should be called and Accept, I hope such a Subscription will be Thrown in his way as his present principles if he has any conscience will not permit him to swallow."—From original letter among Johnson Papers (MS.).

The Festival of St. John the Evangelist is celebrated with elaborate ceremonies by the Masons. — N. Y. Merc., Dec. 31, 1753.

1754

"To be Shot for, on Tuesday the 22d of January next, a good Mahogany Chest of Drawers, with Eagle's Claw Feet, a Shell on each Knee, and fluted Corners, with good Brass Work and Locks: The chest may be seen at George Peters, next to Peter Mac- schald's, in Broad St., corner "Flatten-Barragh." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 31, 1753.

In this year, Archibald Kennedy issued a pamphlet at New York: ("Printed for the Author"), regarding the attitude of the English toward the French, and other political considerations of the time. It is entitled Serious Considerations on the Present State of the Affairs of the Northern Colonies.

In this year, Hendrick Rutgers (son of Hermans—see Jan. 9, 1728) began the erection of his mansion, which was completed the following year,—See "The Rutgers Family," by E. H. Crosby, in N. T. Geneal. and Bog. Rev., April, 1886. It stood in the middle of the block bounded by Clinton, Jefferson, Cherry, and Monroe Sts. (Monroe St. was earlier known as Rutgers Pl.) It was a noted landmark of the old Seventh Ward for a great many years. During the Revolution, it was occupied by the British as a hospital. — Ibid. The house was demolished in 1875.—Liber Deeds, MCCCXIX: 80 (New York); Grootres, Old New York, I: 104. For views of the house in 1839-5, see Pls. 109-a and b, and description, pp. 612-15, Vol. III. See also description of Pl. 76-a, I: 2771; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 9521 Pl. 175, Vol. III.

In this year, Livingston's sugar-house, on the site of the present 28-6 Liberty St., was erected.—Liber Deeds, XLII: 14. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 9653; Abstracts of Wills, VI: 145. It was five storys high, each story being very low, and divided into rooms by small windows.—Min. Col. Coun. (1832), 414; Thorburn, Reminiscences (1845), 166-78. It was used as a prison during the Revolution (see 1777), and stood until the week of June 3, 1840 (p. 6). An undated survey or sketch showing the sugar-house is in the Banker Coll., in N. Y. Pub. Library.

"I saw in the Dutch Calvinist Chh. at New York a small Organ, which was the first there & had been there I doubt not many years."—The Literary Diary of Extra Stiles, I: 58.

Jan.

William Livingston, in behalf of the trustees of the "intended Seminary," officially informs Dr. Johnson of his unanimous election as the head of the institution, at $250 per year (see Nov. 21, 1753); "your Salary to commence from the first day of May next or as soon as you shall remove for that Service Mr Whittlesey of New Haven was at the same time pitched upon as second Master and with the same Salary." "We are not insensible Sir that the above Stipend allotted You, is far inferior to your Merit, and heartily wish it were in our power to increase it suitable to your Accomplishments. But as you will observe us restricted to a certain Sum, We doubt not Your generous desire of diffusing amongst us that useful knowledge. Literature in the Propogation of which you have been so signally instrumental in Connecticut will render our offer less acceptable to you in the light of a Reward,—than as furnishing you with an Opportunity of doing such Extensive Service to Mankind."—Johnson Papers (MS.). For Dr. Johnson's reply, a rough draft of which he penned at the end of the letter above-mentioned, see Jan. 17.

Lieu-Gov. De Lancy issues the following proclamation:

"Whereas great Numbers of disorderly and evil-minded Persons, Jan. appeared this Morning in several Parts of this City, assembled together in a riotous and tumultuous Manner, and others have since appeared in the Streets, armed with Clubs and Staves, having a Drum beating before them, in open Breach and Violation of the Peace, and to the great Terror of his Majesty's good Subjects within this City: In order therefore to preserve and maintain the publick Peace, I have thought fit, by and with the Advice of his Majesty's Council of this Province, to issue this Proclamation, hereby in his Majesty's Name, strictly charging and commanding all and every Person or Persons assemblies or meeting together in any Place or Public Place, to disperse and separate, on Pain of being prosecuted with the utmost Rigour of the Law ..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 14, 1754; Cal. Coun. Min., 391; Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 612. The grand jury investigated the disorder, and reported that it was caused by "some deluded People, most of them Strangers," who thought they were defending the cause of the poor.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 21, 1754. See Sept. 8, 1750, and March 19, 1754. Hardship among the poor had been caused by the increase in the value of the half-penny.—See Dec. 3 and 18.

The common council agrees to lease the "Exchange Room" to Oliver de Lancy, at $50 for one year, payable quarterly, beginning Feb. 1.—M. C. G., VI: 453. This was the room built at the city's expense as the second story of the "Exchange."—See June 16, 1755.

Payment is made by the common council "to Defray the Expense of Sinking a well Opposite to Spring Garden in the West Ward."—M. C. G., VI: 455. This pump is probably the one shown on Pl. 68-b, Vol. I.

Col. Washington brings to Gov. Dinwiddie at Williamsburg a letter from the French commander refusing to vacate the territory held by the French west of the Alleghenies. For one result of this situation, see Feb. 19.

In reply to the letter of William Livingston informing him of his election as head of the "intended Seminary" (King's College), Dr. Johnson writes that his age and the fear "lest he disappoint anticipation" made him hesitate to accept. He is also concerned regarding the expense of living in New York and the possibility that he might "take small pay."—Johnson Papers (MS.). See Feb. 11.

Lord Holderness writes to Lieut-Gov. De Lancy ordering the immediate equipment of the independent companies, and that two complete companies march to Virginia and put themselves under the command of Gov. Dinwiddie.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 612.

"A Handsome Electrical Apparatus" is offered for sale by the proprietor of the Post-Boy.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 4, 1754.

The trustees of the college read a letter from Rev. Dr. Johnson, dated "Jan. 7" (error for Jan. 17, p. 9), in answer to the letter from the trustees (see Nov. 23, 1753). It contains "neither a positive Acceptance nor Refusal of the said Offer and Proposal, but his Request of further Time to consider of the Matter."—Asst. Jour., II: 398. See April.

Keen and Lightfoot announce the opening on this day of the New Exchange as a "Coffee Room."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 4, 1754. The "New Exchange," on Broad and Water Sts, had just been completed by the city of New York to replace the old "Exchange" on the same site. The upper room of the "Exchange" was used as the "coffee room," and seems to have acquired immediate popularity. On April 30, subscribers to the "Publick-Library," to be established in New York, met at the Exchange Coffee Room.—Ibid., April 29, 1754. The room was used for concerts and balls during succeeding years. On Feb. 26, 1756, Keen and Lightfoot dissolved partnership, Lightfoot continuing in the business.—N. Y. Merc., March 8, 1756. The "Exchange" itself was often referred to as the "Royal Exchange." The house was let by the year and seems to have had several different tenants. In 1766, it was run by a Mr. E. son. —N. Y. Merc., Feb. 24, 1766. In 1769, this upper chamber became the meeting-place of the Chamber of Commerce. See Feb. 15, 1769. See, further, Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 941.

Andrew Gautier is paid $1.8 for a table for the use of the Council chamber.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 668.

A letter from Mr. Whittlesey, dated Feb. 11, in answer to the letter of the college trustees (see Nov. 22, 1753), is read at a trustees' meeting. It explains, "in substance, that as the Constitution of the College, or the particular Service expected from him, could be but partially collected from the Legate who had received, for the Act of Assembly inclosed, he had proposed a Visit to Doctor Johnson, in hopes to obtain a more full understanding of these Matters, but had hitherto been prevented by Indispouzon; from which being in Part recovered he purposed, as soon as able, to pay the Doctor a Visit, and perhaps (if his health permitted) to do himself the Honour to wait on them in New-York, and learn (unless otherwise informed) what would be expected from him in the Trust assigned him.

It is agreed by the trustees that William Livingston shall prepare drafts of answers to Dr. Johnson (see Feb. 11) and Mr. Whittlesey, respectively. Such letters were written on March 13, stating: "... we [the trustees] should be glad to have a Conference with you in this City on the Subject of the College, and the Particulars contained in your Letter, as early in the Month of April next, as your Affairs will permit you, to do us that Favour." See also April 20, May 9.

At the trustee's meeting to-day, it is also required of Mr. Livingston "That a Copy of the List of the Monies raised by the second and third Lottery, paid into the Treasury, for erecting a College within this Colony, drawn up by the Treasurer, be made for each of the Trustees."—Assem. Jour., II: 398-99.

An "Advertisement," preceding the title-page and preface in the bound volume of the Independent Reflector, bears this date, although the first number of the paper is dated Nov. 30, 1752 (q. v.). It reads: "Just Published, And to be sold by Robert Mr. Alpine, Bookbinder, in Hanover-Square, in New-York, Price Two Shillings; A Preface to the Independent Reflector, containing Observations on the Conduct of the Author's [William Livingston's] Adversaries, and the secret Springs of their Opposition—The flagitious and arbitrary Measures for the Suppression of his Writings—A.Vindication of his Sentiments against the Clergy.—A full Reply to every Thing of Consequence that hath appeared against him.—Important Remarks on the intended College, with a Display of the various Devices to pervert that noble Design, to the contemptible Purposes of a Faction.—A Refutation of the vile Calumnies thrown on several Members of the General Assembly, the Trustees of the New-Jersey College, and the Presbyterians in New-York—A Detection of the infamous Stratagems of some Episcopal Bigots, to dispense and ruin the Dutch Congregations; with a List of the Subjects he intended to handle, had he not been more fortunate in his Fate.—A Summary of all his Writings in Thirty-two Pages in Folio." A bound volume of the Independent Reflector, complete with the Preface, is in N. Y. Pub. Library.

The provincial council receives a letter from Gov. Duniwade stating that the Virginia assembly has granted $50,000 for operations against the French on the Ohio; also proclamations. A general plan of campaigns, to be concerted, is decided upon, and the Virginia proclamation is sent to Connecticut.—Cal. Coun. Min., Mar. 12. See April 15 and 17.

William Walton and others (the same coterie, probably, who received from the city the grant of water lots in 1752—see M. C. C., V: 354-55), now petition the provincial government (see Cal. Coun. Min., Mar. 12) for letters patent for making their wharf a free wharf for the shipping and unloading of goods, wares, and merchandize. It is situated in Montgomery Ward, fronting the East River, from Robert Livingston's lot to the east end of James Desbrosses' lot (east of Beekman St.). On April 29, the council granted the petition.—Cal. Coun. Min., Mar. 15. On May 17, a warrant was issued for the attorney-general to prepare the patent.—Cal. Coun. Min., Mar. 21. See Pl. 64, Vol. I; and Feb. 19, 1756.

Tickets for the new theatre in New-York were offered when "The Beggar's Opera," and "The Devil to Pay" were to be performed, are on sale at Mr. Parker's and Mr. Gaine's printings, the office-house, the "Royal Exchange," the "Kings-Arms," and "Scottish Johns."—N. Y. Merc., March 18, 1754.

A large quantity of counterfeit British half-pence (see Dec. 3, 1753) is seized by G. Harrison, the surveyor and searcher of customs, and lodged with the mayor. A hundred pounds reward is offered for information regarding the importer or anyone handling counterfeit coins which will lead to conviction.—N. T. Post-Boy, March 25, 1754; Cal. Coun. Min., 392. On April 2, Harrison made another seizure in a store of about 150 pounds of counterfeit pewter, accused of being of German origin.—Ibid, April 8, 1754. During the week between April 29 and May 6, 30 pounds more of counterfeit half-pence were seized.—Ibid, May 6, 1754. See April 25, 1754.

In this month, Dr. Samuel Johnson, of Stratford, Conn., Apr. assumed, on trial only, the duties as president of the proposed college, for which a charter had not yet been granted. He would not positively accept until after the passage of the charter, which would determine the conditions under which the college should proceed.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 16. See, further, June 3. For the charter, see May 30, and Oct. 31.

Dr. Johnson came to New York on receipt of the trustees' letter of March 13 (see Feb. 21), and "began the Education of Youth, according to a Plan agreed upon by the Trustees, being further encouraged to that Undertaking, by the Offer of £1,50, by the Vestry of Trinity Church, to him, in Addition to what was proposed, by the Board;—also, a Visit from the Vestry, or some other provision equal to it, it could hardly be expected he would have been induced to have engaged in so arduous an Undertaking."—A Brief Vindication of the Proceedings of the Trustees... By an Impartial Hand [Benjamin Nicol], 1754.

"Not a Pure work," says the Preface to this, "Nor will it be permitted Day of April next, behind Mr. Kyuick, in New York, by any Horse, Mare, or Gelding bred in America, every Horse, Mare or Gelding getting two Heats in three, and saving their Distance the Third Heat, is intituled to the Purse; etc."—N. T. Post-Boy, March 11, 1754. This race-track was on the Church Farm, and Mr. Kyuick (Kuyckx, Kinsick) was a tavern-keeper at what are now Nos. 253-254 Broadway, south of Warren St., the later Montague's tavern.

Kuyick was still keeping tavern in 1755, but by June 2, 1760 (q. v.), Benjamin Keats had evidently rented the house and hung up the "Sign of the King of Prussia," formerly used by John Dowers on his tavern at Fulton St. and Broadway (see Feb. 6, 1758). Kuyick appears to have removed to a house on upper Queen, or Pearl St., where he entered into the business of a "vintner" and grocer. Keats was still in occupation of the tavern on Broadway in December, 1762, when Kuyick offered the house for sale (see Dec. 27, 1762), but had removed before May, 1763, when Richard Howard took over the house (see May 16, 1763). Howard was in turn succeeded before March 12, 1764 (q. v.), by "Edward Bairdren," or Barden, who now hung out the sign of the King's Arms. This tavern is evidently the one referred to in the Preface mentioned above, as a tavern-keeper in New York, and evidently was a successful one, for he remained here five years. In the spring of 1769, the house was again advertised to let, and by April 20 Abraham de la Montagne had become proprietor of the tavern.

"Americans," writing in the N. T. Mercury of June 14, 1770, explains, more or less truthfully, that De la Montagne, having relied upon the assured support of Isaac Sears to secure for him the office of inspector of pot and pearl ashes, had "declined entering into any particular business," but was "ceiled disappointed and deceived" to learn that Sears had pocketed the office for himself; "luckily for D. L. M. and e, a few days after he had been received undoubted intelligence that S — had deceived him, and procured the office for himself; Mr P — R — k, who had some time before taken Barden's house in the Fields, was obliged (for reasons needless to here mention) to quit the house, and by this accident D. L. M. — got it." Montagne later received this coveted appointment. His tavern was at once popular. Like Hamden Hall, just north of it, it was a favourite headquarters of the Sons of Liberty, and, like Hamden Hall, it was attacked by British soldiers on several occasions preceding the Revolución. See Jan. 13 and Jan. 17, 1776.

Montagne died in his new tavern before Dec. 1774 and Jan. 17, 1776, when his widow, Mary Montague, was paid in full of her account by the common council.—M. C. C., VIII: 145.

John Amory, a manufacturer of horse-whips, became the next proprietor.—See Sept. 19, 1778; Nov. 3, 1779. On March 16, 1780, Amory inserted a notice in Kirttington's Royal Gaz., that the "Gentlemen who supped at the late Widow de la Montagnie's on the 17th of September, 1776, (after taking down the Liberty Pole) are informed in this public manner that their bid for the upper and liquor still remains unpaid..." Amory offered the house for rent in 1781 (see Sept. 17, 1781), and was succeeded in October of this year by John Kirk, who had been keeping the Mitre Tavern. N. Y. Merc., Apr. 17, 1781. Kirk returned the proprietorship of the house during the Revolution, and was succeeded in 1785 by Henry Kennedy. Kirk gave the name of "Prince Wm. Henry" to the house, but it was always referred to as "Montagnie." Kennedy hung out the "sign of the two friendly brethren," which had sprung of himself with an abundance of mead and cakes, which "cannot fail to prove inviting to the Fair Sex; who, as a further inducement, will again be pleased to paint out to themselves the very eligible and romantic situation of the Gardens." —N. Y. Packet, June 9, 1785.

For the later history of this interesting old house and garden, see Feb. 23, 1786.

"A subscription is now on foot, and carried on with great Spirit, in order to raise Money for erecting and maintaining a Public Library [see March 11, 1791 in this City [New York]; and we hear that not less than a Gentleman has already subscribed £500. Pray use the City-Hall, and Ten Shilling per Annum, for that Purpose. We make no doubt but a Scheme of this Nature, so well calculated for promoting Literature, will meet with due Encouragement from all who wish the Happiness of the Rising Generation." —N. Y. Merc., Apr. 8, 1754. This was the beginning of the New York Society Library. Further, April 29, and Oct. 21, 1754; and Keep's Hist. of the N. Y. Soc'y Libr., 155-56.

Nearly £500 were thus raised "towards promoting a spirit of inquiry among the people by a loan of the books to non-subscribers." The project was started "at an evening convention of a few private friends: Messrs. Philip Livingston, William Alexander (afterwards known by the title of the Earl of Stirling), Robert R. Livingston, William Livingston, John Morin Scott, and one other person." The remote object of the projectors was an incorporation by royal charter, and the erection of an edifice, at some future day, for a "Museum and Observatory, as well as a Library." —From Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1850), V: 171.

Lieu.-Gov. De Lancey informs the legislature that Copsay battery is in "a ruinous Condition," and he urges appropriations for its repair.—Assem. Jour., II: 574. The assembly, on April 17, allowed £144 for the repair of Copsay and Flat Rock batteries.—Ibid., II: 378.

The provincial council receives a letter from the lords of trade, approving resolutions to assist other colonies when invaded; it is read aloud.—Cal. Colon. Min., 355.

Edward Willett, who had been proprietor of the "Horse & Cart" on William St., announces that he has removed into the house of the honourable James de Lancey, Esq., in the Broadway near Oswego Market, and has opened a tavern "at the sign of the Province Arms." —N. Y. Merc., Apr. 15, 1754. The De Lancey mansion was erected about 1700 (p. 2), and stood on the west side of Broadway in the block between the present Thames and Cedar Sts.—See June 18, 1753. The house was an unusually handsome one, and under the able management of Willett immediately sprang into great popularity, being patronised by the elite of New York society. It was referred to in the various newspaper references to happenings there as the "Province Arms," "York Arms," "New York Arms," and "City Arms." In the spring of 1762, John Crawley succeeded Willett (see Apr. 29, 1762), and a year later George Burns removed here from the King's Head Tavern at 374 Broad St. N. Y. Gen. (Hayman), May 16, 1765. The house, under various innholders, continued until 1793, when it was demolished, and the N. Y. Tontine Hotel, or City Hotel, was erected on its site. For a list of its innkeepers, its various names, and references to views, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, Vol. III: 977.

The riverfronts of the Ohio River, on the site of the present city of Pittsburgh, later erecting a stronger fortress which they named Fort Duquesne.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 142-43.

John and Samuel Burling, merchants of New York City, presented to the assembly a petition stating they propose to erect near New York City one or more wind-mills of the most convenient and elegant form, to be "by them to be built, will be more perfect in their kind than any heretofore built within this Colony, they will consequently be more expensive...; that as there are no Wind-mills within, or near this City," the petitioners seek the monopoly of "grinding Corn and Grain, with such Wind-Mills as the Council shall propose to the honorable House shall seem meet."—Assem. Jour., II: 576. Neither the Assem. Jour. nor the M. C. C., nor any other known records, show a mill belonging to Burling.

The confusion occasioned by counterfeit half-pence (see March 19) increases, people refusing good and bad alike. "At the lowering of Half-pence it was a popular Cry, that the Merchants did it, with a Design to ship them away," a writer feels that the citizens of New York, by refusing all half-pence, are obliging merchants to do this very thing.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 22, 1754.

James Wells gives notice that he will run a stage-boat from the Whitehall Slip to Amboy-Perry every Monday and Thursday; thence by wagon to Borden's Town, and from Borden's Town by stage boat to Philadelphia; "and the same Method will be followed from the Crooked-Billet Wharf at Philadelphia" etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 22, 1754. For earlier Amboy ferries, see April 5, 1753; See 1754.

Having a boat for hire, Wells announces that he "is to be spoke... at Capt. Lewis's at the Sign of the Devonshire Man of War opposite Benjamin Nicholls Esq." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 22, 1754. Benjamin Nicholls' house was on Whitehall and Bridge St. It later became the King's Arms Tavern. See May 1, 1766.

A "Number of Gentlemen" stake considerable money on a 25 horse-race against time, the horse to start "from one of the Gates of the City," and cover the distance of 14 miles to Kingsbridge and back inside of two hours. The horse and rider performed this feat in one hour and 46 minutes.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1754.

The "Gates of the City" were those in the palisades, erected across the city above the present Chambers St. (cf. Stevens, "The Physical Evolution of New York City...", 1807-1907; in Am. Hist. Mag., 1907, II: 30, for the location of which see July 6, 1745, and "Palisades of 1746" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945."

"The Gentlemen, who are Subscribers to the Public-Library, which is to be erected in this City [see April 8], are hereby Notified, that To-morrow, being the last Tuesday in April, is the Day appointed by the Subscription Articles for their Meeting; in order to elect Twelve Trustees, who are to have the immediate Care and Management of the said Library, for the Year ensuing. They are therefore desired to convene for that Purpose, To-morrow morning... at the Exchange Coffee-Room in Broad-Street. As it will be the first public Transaction of the Society, the Governor and Lady, of this excellent and useful Design, it is hoped, that Gentlemen will not fail to give a very general Attendance." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1754.

Hugh Gaine announces in his paper that he "is now moved next door to Mr. Robert G. Livingston, in Queen [Pearl] Street, between the Fly and Meat Markets" (between Maiden Lane and Wall St.)—N. Y. Merc., April 29, 1754.

Alexander Colton announces: "The Post Office will be re-mov'd Tomorrow, to the House wherein William Walton, Esq. lately lived, near the New-Exchange; where due Attendance will be given, and all Letters received and delivered out as usual." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 29, 1754.

At a meeting of the subscribers, the following are chosen 30 trustees of the public library (see April 8): James de Lancey, James Alexander, Joseph Murray, John Chambers, John Watts, William Walton, James Berkeley, Benjamin Nicolls, Robert R. Livingston, William Livingston, William P. Smith and William Alexander.—N. Y. Merc., May 6, 1754. See May 12, 1755.

On the refusal of the general assembly to meet the council in May conference on the bill entitled "An Act to apply several sums of 1 for the use and stockade of the new City of Colony," the council makes a representation to Lieut.-Gov. de Lancey that this is not a money bill, as no money is given by its provisions to the king, but only money applied which has already been granted. They add "And were it even a Money Bill, we can produce many instances of Congresses desired by the House of Lords, on Money Bills before them, and those conferences agreed to by the House of Commons and 1754 remember not of any instance before this, in this Province of a refusal to confer on a Money Bill [see, however, Feb. 21, 1749].

1 "As we declined amending this Bill, so for the like Reason we decline entering into any Contest with the Assembly at this extraordinary Juncture, on this their refusal to confer. And 'twere we cannot pass the Bill as it stands, so directly repugnant to his Maj. the Governor Commission and Instructions of the Publick Sir Daniel Osborn, yet we think it improper to reject it, least it should be from thence suggested that we did not think the services therein proposed to be provided for, to be necessary, which we of opinion are highly so . . . . They suggest that the assembly be prerogued. De Lancey replies that, on the council's rejecting the bill, he will prorogue the assembly, and at its next meeting will "recommend to them again to provide for those services in a manner not liable to the same objections."—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1155-54.

An act passed to extend, from June 1 to the first Tuesday in October, the time for drawing the lottery provided for by the act of Dec. 12, 1753 (p. 90), to raise £1,125 for the benefit of the college.—Col. Laws N. T., III: 993. The full extension of time was found unnecessary, as all the tickets were sold by July 25; and the drawings therefore began thence.—See Jour. 3.

2 The council appoints to meet the Lieutenant-Governor on this day at the house of Edward Willett.—Assem. Jour., III: 382. This was the old De Lancey mansion at the present 115 Broadway (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977), which Willett had opened as a tavern on April 15 (p. 90).

3 The council appoints a committee to confer with Henry Cruger about widening his pier in the Dock Ward about four feet, at his own expense, "so as to Range the same with Pains Peer, in order to make the said Peer more Commodious for the passing and Repassing of Carts &c on said Pier."—M. C. C., V: 449. On May 21, a proposal from him was accepted,—that he make the pier four feet wider, "providing he has in mind of one Sea Vessel Lying within the Peer to be Exempted from paying Any wharfage or Dockage to the Corporation."—Ibid., V: 455-455, 456. Cruger's Wharf is shown on Pls. 34, 41, 42, 64, Vol. I. Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, in a message to the house, expresses his disadvantage at their failure to provide for the transporting and victualling of two companies for service in Virginia. The assembly, in reply, shifts the responsibility upon the council. De Lancey answers that he will represent the whole matter to the king "that it may be judged who are truly chargeable with the Delay." He dismisses the assembly.—Assem. Jour., III: 384-85. For De Lancey's later address on this subject, see Aug. 20.

A provincial statute is enacted enabling the City of New York to prevent and remove particular nuisances south of the Fresh Water. This action was taken because certain unclosed lots, which remained, had been chiefly in the habit of throwing upon them all kinds of Filth and Dirt as also for want of Paving the Streets fronting the same. In such cases, the city is empowered to "Surround with good and Sufficient Board Fence and to Remove all Such Filth and Dirt wherewith Such Lot or Lots of Ground are Covered or Incumbered," and, further, to pave the streets fronting the same "with good and Sufficient Pebble Stones."—Col. Laws N. T., III: 996-98. For application of this act to Little Queen St. in 1755, see M. C. C., VI: 15.

The committee appointed April 5 (M. C. C., V: 445) to Regulate the Streets from the City hall to the New Exchange, and from Mr. Purmanes Corner to Mr. Carpenters Corner the Former of which Street is Called Broad Street and the Latter is part of Smith and Queen Street in the Dock ward," makes its report. This modifies the plan for the grade in Broad St. which was submitted by the surveyors. The modification is approved. It calls for a regular descent for 420 feet from the city hall, and from there one regular descent "to the Common Shore [near] Near the New Exchange."—Ibid., V: 450.

Hugh Gaine announces: "The Printer heretofore is now removed from the House he formerly lived in, at the Old Slip [see May, 1753], to that lately possessed by Mr. Anderson, Taylor, next Door to Robert G. Livingston's, in Queen Street, between the Fly and Meal-Markets."—N. Y. Misc., May 6, 1754. See Oct. 6, 1755.

Dr. Johnson writes to his son: "As to the College we have been very diligent in private Conversations in preparing such a Charter as I would have, & the Gentlemen have no doubt of it's passing; but we have had no meeting yet of the Trustees in a Body by reason of the public Affairs, for the Assembly did not break up as was expected the week before but sat all last week, they having some pretty warm Disputes between the Council & Assembly which I conclude you'll see in the papers . . . It seems a plain Case that either I must stay here or the College must come to nothing, & all the Gentlemen with whom I have conversed, who are the chief Magistrates, do protest against adding my Life as comfortable as possible."—Letter of Dr. Johnson to his son, Johnson Papers (MS.).

The provincial council appoints commissioners to settle the boundaries with Massachusetts.—Col. Coun. Min., 395.

The trustees of the college write again to Mr. Whitleysey (see Nov. 22, 1753; Feb. 21, 1754), informing him that the Trustees hope "specdly to open the College," and "be glad to know his Resolution in Relation to their Proposals."—Assem. Jour., II: 399. The proper condition of Mr. Whitleysey's health is disclosed in correspondence now preserved with the Johnson Papers (MS.), for the year 1754.

A crude wood-cut of a snake, broken into eight parts, each part representing one of the American colonies, with the legend "Join, or Die," appears in the N. T. Merc. and the N. T. Post-boy, beneath a message from Major Washington. Both device and paragraph are taken from the Penn. Gaz. of May 9, and were probably inspired by Benjamin Franklin, one of the publishers of thePenn. Gazette.

Washington's message, which arrived by "Express" on May 6, was to the effect that a part of the English forces on the Monongahela under Capt. Trent had been compelled to abandon their positions to the French, and had joined Washington, who had advanced with three companies of Virginia forces as far as the "New Store near the Allegheny Mountains." English traders on the Ohio had been seized, and English settlers were terrified. The writer of the paragraph says that the confidence of the French "seems well-grounded on the present disunited State of the British Colonies, and the extreme Difficulty of bringing so many different Governments and Assemblies to agree in any speedy and effectual Measures for our common Defence and Security; while our Enemies have the very great Advantage of being under one Direction, with one Council, and one Purse . . . ."

The Boston Gazette and the Boston News-Letter reprinted the paragraph and the device in their issues of May 21 and May 23, and the paragraph was copied, in whole or part, in most American papers.

The device of the broken snake was employed later in times of great peril, when a union of the colonies seemed most imperative. In 1765, it appeared as the head-piece of a curious paper, The Conspirators of Nov. 1764, and, its title, which seemed only to be a jingle, was used by John Holt as the head-piece of the N. T. Jour. (June 23, 1774), the legend beneath reading "Unite or Die" (cf. Ibid., Dec. 15, 1774). See Albert Matthews, The Snake Devices, 1754-1776, reprinted from the publications of the Cal. Soc. of Mass., Vol. XI.

It is unanimously agreed by Trinity vestry "that this Board will give for the use of the College Intended to be Erected A Certain Parcel of Land belonging to this Corporation to Erect & Build the said College upon and for the use of the Same That is to Say a Street of Ninety feet from the Broadway to Church Street and from Church Street all the Lands between Barclays Street and Murrays Street to the Water Side upon this Condition that the President of the said College for Ever for the time being be a Member of and in Connection with the Church of England And that the Morning and Evening Service in said College be the Liturgy of the said Church or Such a Collection of Prayers out of the said Liturgy as shall be agree upon by the President and Trustees or Governors of the Said College."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See March 5, 1753; July 5 and 10, and Nov. 1, 1754; May 12, 1755.

At a meeting of the trustees of the college, "a Draft of a Charter for constituting the College, and erecting the Building on Lands, belonging to Trinity Church in this City, is read, and after a cordial vote in between Mr. Parsons (against) and with Mr. Britton (for) to twenty Reasons" (see May 20), and requesting that the protest may "be entered on the minutes of the Proceedings of the Trustees," which is refused. He then asks that it may be recorded that he has offered such protest, but the entry of this also is refused, "he was also opposed by the Rest of the Members, who at last agreed that the Entry be, that he offered such Protest, and that the Members agreed to take the said Protest into further Consideration before the same be entered on the Minutes. The Rest of the Members agreed to the Draught of the said Charter." See, further, May 16.

At this meeting, also, Mr. Chambers, the mayor, and Mr. Nicola informed the trustees "that the Vestry of Trinity Church offered the Vestry Room in the New School House, to begin Tution, for so long Time as they shall think proper;" this the trustees thankfully accepted; and it was agreed "that Dr. Johnson’s Salary, should commence from the Time he left his Habitation on the Service of the Seminary, according to the former Proposal made to the Trustees" (see Nov. 22, 1753; Feb. 11, and April, 1754). It was also agreed "that the Scholars that shall be entered into the Seminary, shall pay for Tution, Five Shillings, a Quarter."—"Assemb. Jour. III: 399.

For the steps leading to the trustees' decision to apply for a charter, see Benjamin Nicoll's A Brief Hitch of the Proceed- ings of the Trustees (1754), 6, passim.

The following notice appears: "Whereas we have great Reason to believe, from a Variety of Circumstances, that there will very soon be a Rupture with the French, and very probably, we shall be attacked among the first. And whereas our greatest Security seems to depend, upon the Difficulty of the Navigation from the Hock upwards; all Masters of Vessels, or such as are thoroughly acquainted with that Navigation, are requested to concert among themselves, by what Means this Difficulty may be improved, by thinking of Vessels or otherwise; what Points of Land may be most proper for Batteries, to take up any Ships as they pass."—N. Y. Post-Bay, May 20, 1755. See Jan. 27, 1755.

At a meeting of the college trustees, Mr. Chambers and the mayor state that Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey has "given them Leave to present a Petition, in the Name of the Trustees, for a Charter for the College," and, the petition having been prepared, it is read. It recites the following provisions:

"That divers Sums of Money having been raised by several Acts of the Governor, Council and General Assembly of this Province . . . for the establishing a College . . . your Petitioners by Acts afterwards made [see Nov. 25, 1751], were appointed Trustees, for putting the said Monies at Interest, and to receive Proposals, accept Donations, and procure Masters and Tutors, in order to make a Beginning of the said Seminary, . . .

"Your Petitioners, further shew . . . that in Pursuance of the said Trust, they have endeavoured to get a proper Master, and Tutor, for the said intended Seminary, but find that as your Petitioners are enabled to give Salaries for seven Years only, that they are under great Difficulty to procure a fit and proper Person, to undertake the said College, or the said Seminary; but, . . . that the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York, in Communion of the Church of England, . . . have offered unto your Petitioners a very valuable Parcel of Ground, on the West Side of the Broad-Way, in the West Ward of the City of New-York, . . . of the said intended Seminary or College, and are ready and desirous to convey the said Lands for the said Use, on Condition that the Head or Master of the Seminary or College, be a Member of, and in Communion with the Church of England as by Law established, and that the Liturgy of the said Church or a Collection of Prayers out of the said Liturgy be the constant Morning and Evening Service, used in the said College for ever. Which said Parcel of Land so offered by the said Rector and Inhabitants, your Petitioners considering as the most proper Place for erecting the said Seminary or College upon. And that their obtaining his Majesty’s Charter, to them or such others, as your Humble Petitioners may appoint, for the said Trust, will the better enable your Petitioners, in Conjunction with those your Honour shall appoint by his Majesty’s Charter, to provide a proper Master or Head of the said Seminary, and Tutors for the Education of Youth, and thereby greatly tend to promote and further the Interest and Design of establishing a Seminary or College . . . .

"Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray, that in order to pro- mote so good a Design and the more effectual obtaining a Grant of the said Parcel of Land, for the Use and Benefit of the said Seminary or College; that your Honour would be pleased to grant your Approbation of such Terms, as will make the said Petitioners think proper, his Majesty’s Charter of Incorporation, with such privileges as to your Honour shall deem meet, . . . ."

Although signed "William Livingston. In behalf of the Trus- tees," it is approved by all the trustees except Livingston him- self, and it is agreed to present it to the lieutenant-governor by Mr. Chambers and the mayor.—"Assemb. Jour. III: 399-400.

This petition was presented on the same day to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey in council.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 617; Col. Coun. Min., 391. For the result, see May 30.

At the trustees’ meeting of May 20, it is also agreed "that the Protest offered at the last Meeting [see May 16] by William Livingston, be entered on the Minutes, and the said Livingston, did then protest against presenting the said Petition; for the Reasons con- tained in his Protest aforesaid, from the entry of which said Pro- test, Mr. Mayor disented, and prayed Time for assigning his Reasons in writing." The protest consists of twenty reasons offered to the trustees against applying the college funds as pre- scribed in the proposed charter. He contends:

I. That the Church of England is not established in this province, where all subjects are under a perfect equality; and the proposed establishment will be partial to that denomination, and an encroachment on the rights and privileges of the other.

II. That, even admitting [what is hereby absolutely denied] that the Church of England by Law established in South Britain, is also established in this Province; yet the Establishment of the Liturgy of that Church, in the said College by Charters, and without the Consent of the Representatives of the People, will be unjust, and any such Establishment contrary, in the opinion of many, to the Rights and Liberties, seeing that if the Money raised by the said two Acts of Assembly, shall be applied to the Support of the said Charter College, all the Inhabitants of the Province will be obliged to con- tribute to its Support, and a vast Majority of the Province are Protestants, discarding the Church of England.

III. He asserts that Trinity’s offer, made to the trustees on April 8, this year, was the unconditional grant adopted by the vestry on March 5, 1752 (q.v.), not that of May 14, 1754, which contains the condition that the president of the college shall be a minister of the Church of England, and that the liturgy of the church shall be used in the college; therefore, he contends that the acceptance should not include these conditions.

The deductions contained in the remaining "Reasons" include the assertion that a recent act (see July 4, 1753) enabled the treasurer of the province to pay the college trustees certain moneys to be by them applied "as Salaries for the chief Master or Head of the Seminary, and for such and so many other Masters and Officers, Uses and Purposes, concerning the Establishment of the said Seminary, as the said Trustees shall from Time to Time, in their Directions, think needful, being intended for the Masters and Officers of a College, or the said Seminary," if, however, Livingston contends, the trustees take the oath pre- scribed by the proposed charter, they will "aid and abet the said Trinity Church, in defrauding the Province out of the Monies so, as, aforesaid, to be paid to the Trustees, for the Use of the College of New-York, and by thereby doing wrong to the Use of the College of Trinity Church, as established by the said Charter." Such charter, therefore, he holds, is dangerous to liberty. It will "reduce Parents to the Necessity either of educating their Children at the said College of Trinity Church, contrary to their own Sentiments and Consciences, or of leaving them without an Academical Education in this Province." This will be the means of carrying large sums of money out of the province into neigh- bouring colonies for the education of our youth. It will obstruct charitable contributions by "those to whom the College of Trinity Church will be disagreeable, who are a vast Majority of the Prov- ince, and who will most probably refuse their undoubted Rights and Pro- leges, and the Advancement of Literature." It will tend "to raise publick Disorder and Animosity, at a Time when his Majesty’s Interest, by Reason of the Encroachments of the French, requires the greatest Concord and Unanimity."

If the proposed College of Trinity Church, as proposed, would create a feel- ing of authority in the control of funds by the appointment of persons not mentioned in the act of Nov. 25, 1753 (q.v.), he conceives that, because "the College of Trinity Church" will con- sist of other trustees, and be otherwise incorporated, and enjoy other powers that the said College of New-York have, there will be two distinct colleges, and "that the said Trinity Church College, is set up in Opposition to the College of New-York," etc.
CHRONOLOGY : THE ENGLISH PERIOD : 1664–1703

May 20

He believes "that the several Branches of the Legislature of this Province, reserve solely to themselves the Establishment of the Plan of Government to be exercised in the New-York College, as they have the Disposition of its Situation, and the Monies raised for it by the several Lottery Acts."—Assemb. Jour., II: 480.

The protest of William Livingston formed part of his individual report to the assembly on Nov. 1 (p.4), the day after the granting of the charter by the lieutenant-governor. Benjamin Nicoll published an anonymous answer to it near the end of the year, entitled A Brief Vindication of the Proceedings of the Trustees, pp. 6–12 (see No. 4).

William Walton and others, proprietors "of Sundry Houses and Lots of Ground on Hunter's Key" (see Feb. 9, 1751), which lay along the East River front from Old Slip to Wall St. (see landmarks map ref. key, III: 900), petition the common council for a grant of 300 feet into East River, "or as many feet as will make the Same on a straight or direct Line With the Keys on both sides." The petition is referred to a committee, which is to meet the petitioners and receive proposals.—M. C. C., V: 453.

This application was opposed by several contributors to the newspapers. One writer urged that "Rotten Row, where ships have been detained by the corporation "still such Time as another Harbour can be made for the Safety of our Shipping."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 3, 1754.

Another communication, in the Gazette of June 10, 1754, reviewed at length the subject of grants of water lots in this locality, stating that "the Corporation have not in their Power to make or pass a grant or grants to either the present or late Petitioners" (see April 26, 1750). The writer explained that the corporation had formerly granted to the petitioners or their ancestors "from High to Low-Water Mark," on condition that they should make a "good and sufficient Wharf and Street, of Thirty Foot in Breadth," and keep them in repair as a "common and public Wharf, Street and High-Way for ever," and that, as the water became shallower later, the proprietors petitioned for an additional grant of 25 ft. into the river from the wharves, and this was approved upon the same conditions as the first. This latter grant took place several years before the Corporation procured their last, or new charter, whereby they have the Grant of the Soil, from a Place upon the North-River, called Bestaver's Killirje, to the Fort, comprehending 400 Feet below Low-Water Mark; as also the Soil of the East-River, from Cortlarst's Hook to the White-Hall, also comprehending 400 Feet from Low-Water Mark; with an express Provision, not to wharf out before those who have prior Grants of Keys or Wharfs below Low-Water Mark, without the actual Agreement or Consent of the Owners of such Keys or Wharfs." From this the writer argued that, as "in strict Propriety the Owners and Proprietors of this Lot and Lot, are the Inhabitants of this City; and... all and every Stranger that now is in, or shall hereafter come into the same," no grant could be made without everybody's consent. He added also that the present petitioners had forfeited any right they might have, because they had not fulfilled the conditions, and that, if it were necessary to fill up the place, the lots should be sold at "publick Vendue to the highest Bidder.

A third communication appeared in the Gazette of July 29, declaring that the committee of the common council appointed "to pitch on Methods to prevent its being a publick nuisance, ... soon found the Petitioners and; it was worth petitions for, being 377 Feet in Length, and 200 in Depth, that is, as far out as the New, or Cruger's Dock. At £500, each lot, which I am sure it would sell, for 25 Feet to a Lot, amounts to £4500;—well worth asking for." No further action on the petition of William Walton and others was recorded at this time in the Minutes. It was resumed in 1761 (Aug. 1, May 22) by William Brownjohn and others, but the water lots in this locality were not granted until seven years later.

Announcement was made on May 6 of a public vendue to begin on the 14th at the fort, of "sundry goods & Effects belonging to the Estate of the late Sir Danvers Osborn, Bart."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 6, 1754.

Dr. Johnson writes to his son that the trustees of the college have "waited on the Govt. with a petition for a Charter & he promised to call the Council as soon as he could, but was engaged in writing Letters to England by a man of war now going, (by whom poor St Danvers's Body goes home,)" & said he was ready to grant the Charter they desired. The Council would not sit, as it is not doubted they will... All that is wanted of the Assembly is to vest the Lottery Money in the Corporation to be made by Charter... they do not doubt it will pass, but this they say is not at all necessary for my Security with regard to the Salary which is already vested in the Trustees by Assembly for 7 years."

He says, further, that it is "extremely probable" that he will remain in New York, where he is "universally treated with great Kindness & Respect," and where he "may do a great Deal, more Good" than anywhere else.—Johnson Papers (M.S.).

"To be sold," The Corner House and Lot of Ground on the Great-Dock, wherein John Downes now lives, near the Queen's Head, opposite to the House of the late Col. Moore, and near the New-Exchange; said Lot is 29 Feet 6 Inches both Front and Rear, and 16 Feet 4 Inches Deep, with the Liberty of Wharving out a considerable Way; the House thereon is two Story high. Whoever inclines to purchase the above Premises, may apply to said John Downes, who will agree on reasonable Terms, and give an indispensible Title to the same."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 27, 1754. The "New Exchange" was at the foot of Broad St. The "Queen's Head" was an ever popular tavern sign in colonial New York. In 1733 the tavern on William St. bore this sign. In 1766, Samuel Francis opened, at the south-east corner of Broad and Pearl Sts., his well-known house with the Sign of Queen Charlotte, later shortened to the "Queen's Head." To 1778, Smith had a tavern on Cherry St. which bore the sign of the Queen's Head; and in 1779 James Hearn conducted an inn on Brownjohn's Wharf, which was known as the Queen's Head Tavern and Indian Chop House.

"This is to inform all gentlemen & ladies, who have honoured Mr. David Cox, with their custom, that the same business is now carried on at the same Spot, next door to the King's Arms tavern, and opposite the Royal Exchange, by Timothy Powell, hair-cutter and peruke-maker from London..."—N. Y. Merc., May 27, 1754. David Cox had combined the business of tavern-keeper and hair-dresser during his brief proprietorship of the King's Arms Tavern. See Oct. 3, 1758.

Washington, with a force of Virginians, defeats the French at Great Meadows in the Ohio Valley.—Tswana, France in America, 161–62. This engagement marks the outbreak of the so-called "French and Indian War," the last of the intercolonial conflicts between England and France in North America. Washington's force on July 3 was captured at Fort Necessity.—Channing, Hist. of the U. S., III: 562.

Caldwallader Colden, writing from "Coldingham," apparently to Peter Collinson of London, says in part: "The Bad Opinion which it seems is entertained of M' Clinton's administration may in some measure affect the inhabitants here, but you may be assured by my advice. What are cried out against as arbitrary acts are strongly exaggerated. It is not proper to enter on particulars Many things were done without my knowledge & others contrary to my advice but I have a full justification of my conduct in a Letter which the Earl of Haliford did me the honour to write me dated the 17th of May last year. He had before him all that was said on both sides & was well informed from the minutes of the Council of the part which I acted I have no interest with him either by personal knowledge or by any friend. He therefore formed his judgement freed from any prejudice of that kind. I wrote to him a few days since by a steep of War which carries St Danvers Osborn's corps" (see May 27).—From the original draft of the letter, with Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

William Smith writes to Meurs. Miller and Cornwall, representatives to the assembly from Suffolk and Queens counties, respectively, of "the Design of the Council towards an Noble undertaking of the Legislature of this Province for founding a College, to the little mean End, of Topping the Church of England, above all the other protestant Denominations in the Province." He calls their attention to the fact that "by several Lottery Acts in a Very Considerable sum of money, has been raised for a College—That Trustees have been nominated to farm the money so raised, & that £500 per Annum is payable to them, out of the Excise to begin a Seminary. What is meant by the word Seminary has been, and still is matter of considerable Dispute—some insist that the Legislature intended by the Act, only to enable the Trustees to set up a good Grammar School, to prepare youth for their
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

June 31754 Entrance into the future College, & one of the members of the House told me, he understood the Term Seminary, as synonymous with Grammar School, & that the great & Important Affair of the founding of the College, was to be with Solemnity & Caution plan'd and established by a future Law. If this was the General Sense, it is very certain that the Act was such, as truly drawn. Smith further, says he suspects there may have been some "Artifice in the Drawn of the Act," traceable to churchmen on the board of trustees, who are resolved "to found the College according to their Wishes by Charter and not by Act of Assembly." Such a charter has been drawn "in such a manner, as throughout to the Balanced power on the side of the Church of England," and "the Dissenters here whether English or Dutch, are extremely jealous of the Designs of a few Bigots, & esteem a Charter an un- secure method of Establishing so important and Costly an Undertak- ing."—From original draft among Wm. Smith MSS., in N. Y. Pub. Library, vol. 189. See Sept. 20. Regarding the Smith Diary and MSS., see Aug. 16, 1758, and Bibliography.

The first "publick vendue" advertised to take place at the new "Exchange" was to occur on this day—N. Y. Merc., March 4, 1754.

A committee of the provincial council reports on the petition for college charter (on May 20); this report is approved, and the council orders that a warrant be issued to the attorney-general to prepare the charter. From this report, James Alexander and William Smith dissent.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 617; Cal. Coun. Min., 393. See May 29; Oct. 31, Nov. 1, and Dec., 1754.

In H. & R. Cadwallader's rooms, men, Joseph Murray, William Smith, Benjamin Nicolli, and William Livingston, New York's commissioners, who are to meet those of Massachusetts to settle the boundary line.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 647.

Rev. Samuel Johnson, president-elect of the college (see Nov. 22, 1753; and April, 1754), with the beginning its work, makes the first public announcement of the requirements for admission, the general scheme of education, and other feature of the teaching plan. In an "Advertisement," dated May 31, addressed "To such Parents as have now (or expect to have) Children prepared to be educated in the College of New-York," he states: "I . . . that it is proposed to begin Tuition upon the first Day of July next, at the Vestry Room in the new School-House, adjoining to Trinity Church in New York, which the Gentlemen of the Vestry are so good as to favour them with the Use of the Interin, till a convenient Place may be built.

"III. The lower Qualifications they have judged requisite, in order to Admission into the said College, are, as follows, viz. That they be able to read well, and write a good legible Hand; and that they be well versed in the five first rules in Arithmetic, i. e. as far as Division and Reduction; and as to Latin and Greek, That they have a good knowledge in the Elements, and be able to make grammatical Latin, and both in construing and parsing, to give a good Account of two or three of the first select Orations of Tully, and of the first Books of Virgil's Aeneid, and some of the first Chapters of the Gospel of St. John, in Greek. In these Books therefore it is expected they shall be examined; but higher Qualifica- tions must hereafter be expected; and if there be any of the higher Classes in any College, or under private Instruction, that incline to come hither, they may expect Admission to proportionably higher Classes here.

"IV. And that People may be the better satisfied in sending their Children for Education to this College, it is to be understood, that as to Religion, there is no Intention to impose on the Schollars, the peculiar Tenets of any particular Sect of Christians; but to inculcate upon their tender Minds, the great Principles of Chris- tianity and Morality, in which true Christians of each Denomina- tion are generally agreed. And it is the Design to make the Daily Worship in the College Morning and Evening [see observations of William Living- ston in the Independent Reflector, 84-85], it is proposed that it should, ordinarily, consist of such a Collection of Lessons, Prayers and Praises of the Liturgy of the Church, as are, for the most Part, taken out of the Holy Scriptures, and such Hymns, as may, in the opinion of the Committee, be the best adapted for the Church; and, to be in the best Manner expressive of our common Christianity; and, as to any peculiar Tenets, every one is left to judge freely for himself, and to be required only to attend con- stantly at such Places of Worship, on the Lord's Day, as their Parents shall think fit for them to attend.

V. The chief Thing that is aimed at in this College is, to teach and engage the Children to know God in Jesus Christ, and to love and serve him, in all Sobriety, Godliness and Righteous- ness of Life, with a perfect Heart, and a willing Mind; and to train them up in all virtuous Habits, and all such useful Knowledge as may render them creditable to their Families and Friends, Ornaments to their Country, and useful to the public Weal in their Governments. To this end we must do. It is earnestly desired, that their Parents, Guardians and Masters, would train them up from their Cradles, under strict Government, and in all Serious- ness, Virtue and Industry, that they may be qualified to make orderly and tractable Members of this Society; . . . and above all, that in order hereunto, they be very careful themselves, to set them good Examples of true Piety and Virtue in their own Con- duct. For as Examples have a very powerful Influence over young Minds, and especially those of their Parents, in vain are they solicitous for a good Education for their Children, if they them- selves set before them Examples of Impiety and Prophaneness, or of any sort of Vice whatsoever.

"And, lastly, a serious, virtuous, and industrious Course of Life, being first provided for, it is further the Design of this College, to instruct and perfect the Youth in the learned Languages, and in the Arts of reasoning exactly, of writing correctly, and speaking eloquently; and in the Arts of measuring and measuring; of Surveying and Navigation, of Geography and History, of Husbandry, Commerce and Government, and in the Knowledge of all Nature in the Heavens above us, and in the Air, Water and Earth around us, and the various kinds of Meteor, Stones, Mines and Minerals, Plants and Animals, and of Every Thing useful for the Comfort, the Convenience and Elegance of Life, in the chief Manufactures relating to any of these Things: And, finally, to lead them from the Study of Nature to the Knowledge of them- selves, and of the God of Nature, and their Duty to him, them- selves, and one another, and every Thing that can contribute to their true Happiness, both here and hereafter.

"Thus much, Gentlemen, it was thought proper to advertise you of, concerning the Nature and Design of this College: And I pray God, it may be attended with all the Success you can wish, for the best Good of the rising Generation; to which, (while I con- tinue here) I shall willingly contribute my Endeavours to the Usum of their Powers,

"Who am, Gentlemen,

Your real Friend,

And most humble Servant,

Samuel Johnson.

"N. B. The Charge of the Tuition is established by the Trus- tees to be only 25£. for each Quarter" (see May 16).—N. Y. Post- Boy, June 3, 1754.

For the president's next announcement, see July 11 for the first meeting of the college, and July 17. For sarcastic reflections on the foregoing "Advertisement," made by William Livingston, see Aug. 22. See also Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 16.

The Honourable John Penu, Esq; Richard Peters, Isaac Norris, and Benjamin Franklin, Esq's, commissioners from Pennsylvania to the colonial congress (to be held in Albany from June 19 to July 17), arrive in New York. On the next day, Benjamin Tasker and Major Abraham Barnes from Maryland arrived. They left on the following Sunday for Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 10, 1754. See June 19.

"The Members of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in New York, are desired to meet at the House of Mr. Edward Willet in the Broad-Way, on Monday the 19th of June Inst. on special Business. By Order of the Grand Master. H. Gaine, Sec."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 10, 1754. This was the Province Arms Tavern.—See April 15.

President Johnson of King's College publishes the following notice: "This is to acquaint all whom it may concern, that I shall attend at the school-house, near the English-Church, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, every Week, between the hours of nine and twelve, to examine such as offer themselves to be admitted into the college. The Arts of the College are agreed upon by the Arts of the Members of the College."—N. Y. Merc., June 13, 1754; Post-Boy, July 1, 1754.

The common council appoints a committee to receive proposals from the inhabitants of the neighbourhood of the Fly Market for lengthening the market-house; the committee may permit the inhabitants to erect new walls, &c. for the purpose. See Cal. Year, M. C. C., V: 455; See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 98; Pl. 174.

"The Old Slip-Market, at the Foot of Smith-Street, which
For a long time has remained in a very ruinous Condition, is, by Order of the Mayor and Corporation, now repairing, having a good Foundation already place'd, and a strong boarded Floor preparing for the same; and will in a very little Time, from the close Application of the Workmen, be in an extraordinary good Condition: the necessary Produce; We call the front Part (if not the whole) of the Market to be re-shingled. — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 17, 1754. On Sept. 20, the common council ordered payment of £100 to Peter Clapp for advances made by him for repairing the Old Slip Market.—M. C. G., V: 459.

The repairs were evidently finished by Nov. 1, when the common council appointed the tree of the Dock and East Ward "for the Letting of the Sellers under the Slip market." —M. C. G., V: 475.

Thomas Brookman's account for furniture, etc., for the council room and public offices, bears this date.—Col. Gaun. Min. 668.

A colonial congress convenes at Albany, the primary object of which is to re-establish the "Covenant Chain" (see June 12, 1753) with the Six Nations. It evokes, however, the larger plan of a union of the colonies of Massachusetts Bay, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and Franklin's mutual defence and security, and for extending the British settlements in North America.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VI: 835-97; 901-6; 916-20; 930-33; Proceedings of the Commission on Indian Affairs (extra-illustrated), in Emmet collection, N. Y. Pub. Library.

"The most important ... of the several congresses convened at Albany" (see 1684; Aug. 15, 1694; 1722; July 23, 1748), based on the principle of colonial representation. Among the commissioners from the several colonies were Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Hutchinson, William Johnson, and James de Lancey. The congress lasted until July 11. For brief digest of the transactions, see Col. Gaun. Min., 194-95. New York City's interest in this congress appears in the following statement made by Franklin in his autobiography: "In our way thither, I projected and drew a plan for the union of all the colonies under one government, so far as might be necessary for defence, and for important general purposes. As we pass'd thro' New York, I had there shown my project to Mr. James Alexander and Mr. Kennedy, two gentlemen of great knowledge in public affairs and, being fortified by their approbation I ventured to lay it before the Congress. It then appeared that several of the commissioners had form'd plans of the same kind. A previous question was put whether a union should be established, which passed in the affirmative unanimously. A committee was then appointed, one member from each colony, to consider the several plans and report. Mine happen'd to be prefer'd, and, with a few amendments, was accordingly reported."—Works of Benj. Franklin (col. ed., 1791), 1: 259-60.

A communication, dated Oct. 28, 1788, printed by Matthew Carey in The Am. Museum (1789), V: 190-96, 257-58, 362-68, contains the first publication of the text of Franklin's plan for a union, presented under the following heads: I. Reasons and motives on which the plan of union for the colonies was formed;—II. Reasons against partial unions;—III. The plan drawn by Dr. Franklin, and unanimously agreed to by the commissioners . . . . "This is copiously annotated, either by Carey or Franklin, and at the end (p. 368), apparently part of the text (but not printed in either the Sparks or Bigelow editions of Franklin's writings) there appears the following pertinent conclusion: "On reflection it now [April, 1789] seems probable that if the foregoing plan, or something like it, had been adopted and carried into execution, the subsequent separation of the colonies from the mother country might not so soon have happened. . . ." The plan was simply shelved on both sides, perhaps, during another century. For the colonies, if so united, would have really been, as they then thought themselves, sufficient for their own defence; and, being trusted with it, as by the plan, an army from Britain, for that purpose, would have been unnecessary. The pretences for favouring the province in this manner, were such as were often successively urged on both sides; neither were they ever abandoned. The plan has been thought to have been a very wise one, and one which might have prevented the war and the separation of the colonies from Britain. . . ."—Athenæum, Vol. 103, 10th ser., Dec. 16, 1850.

July 8, 1754. The English Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons is requested to meet on this day "at the House of Mr. Edward Williet in the Broad-way." —N. Y. Post-Boy, June 10, 1754.

During the July term of the supreme court, which ended on July 8, 1754, a man named Patrick Cramer was tried for killing a Mr. Cregier, and found guilty of manslaughter; he "was burnt in the Hand accordingly." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 5, 1754.

Subscribing himself "Your quondam Pupil," William Smith writes to Rev. Silas Leonard, of Glasgow, that it is now "become apparent that the Church of England aims at monopolizing the great Power of the most important publick part of the College* (see May 29). The steps that have been taken "relating to the Establishment of the College* he portrays to him thus: "Our Assembly has since the year 1748 at several times raised large sums of money by public Lotteries for a College to be Established here [see Dec. 6, 1748; April 9, 1748; July 4, Dec. 12, 1753]—so good a Design met with Universal Encouragement. The Church soon began to work privately in Order to engross the Government of it—The first Thing was the appointing Trustees to put that money out at Interest for the College whenever it should be constituted [see Nov. 25, 1753]. Alto' th' 9th of the Province are Dissenters yet they got among these Trustees who were Nioe in Number six Episcopals—Last year £5000 per Annum out of the Excise Fund [see July 4, 1753] which brings in about £5000 a year was enacted to be paid for seven years successively to these Trustees to begin a Seminary by which some of the Assembymen understood was meant a Latin or Grammar School to prepare Lads for the future College but so artfully is it drawn that by the Equivocation of the Term Seminary they are determined to open a College—The Trustees in next place called DT Johnson of Stratford to be President of the College [see Nov. 22, 1753] for now its plans they so construe the Word Seminary [see Nov. 25, 1753]—but how to get the Possession of the public Monies raised is the Question for it cannot be at all accomplished but by putting the Trustees having a power to receive Gifts and proposals relating to the plans to be offered for erecting the College the Church in New York offered them a part of their Lands [see April 8, 1753].—Then the Trustees drew up a Petition to the Governor for a Charter [see May 14] . . . the Gov't has not granted the Charter but will it is supposed wait till he can be sure of the approbation of the Assembly [see Oct. 31]. Endeavours will undoubtedly be pushed all manner of Ways by some to gain the Monies raised, from the Hands of the Assembly into the Possession of the Trustees—And here lies all the Security which the Friends of Liberty have All our Dependance is on the House—The utmost Care therefore must be taken to impress the Members with Right sentiments of the Importance of the Affair."—From an original draft among Wm. Smith MSS., folio 189. See Aug. 20.

Chatham van Wyck and Abraham Buyten managers of the lottery for the benefit of the college (called "the New-York Lottery," because confined to this province—see Dec. 12, 1753), publish a notice fixing July 25, at 9 a.m., at the city hall, as the time and place "to put the Lottery Tickets into the Boxes," and July 25, at the same hour and place, for the commencement of "Drawing." A fine then bestial and at the same time, which had hitherto been the managers at their homes.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 8, 1754. The drawing began on the 15th, "when Number 485 drew the highest prize of 1000 L. and we are informed is the Property of a young Lady in this City . . . The drawing continued until July 30, and the other winning numbers were published Aug. 5.
Correspondence of Samuel Johnson, 194-95. This college or "seminary" was soon given by charter the name of King's College (see Oct. 31), and eventually became Columbia University.

Minutes of the proceedings at Albany (see June 19) are laid before the provincial council at the fort in New York.—Cal. Coun. Min., 395. See Aug. 9.

Fov. George Whitefield arrives in New York from South Carolina. He preached every day to very large audiences, and started for Philadelphia on July 30.—N.Y. Post-Boy, July 29, 1754. See Sept. 1.

Trinity vestry orders "That Messrs. Livingston & Lefferts have liberty to take in sixteen feet of the Churches Ground at the Rear of their lot on which the little House Erected On Condition that they build a Stone Wall six feet high at least at the Extent of the said sixteen feet the whole Breadth of the four Lots they have Leased from this Corporation being one hundred feet. That they enjoy the Same during the Continuance of their Lease of the said four Lots and that they leave the said Stone Wall for the use of this Corporation at the End of the Said Term."—Trin. Min. (MS.). For location of the still-house, see description of A. Pl. 3-b, III: 865. The nature of this still-house is possibly revealed in an advertisement of the following year for the sale of tunncollective therefrom. (See Denison, p. 175.)

Peter Collinson, writing from London to Cadwallader Colden, says he determined to wait on Lord Halifax and "hear from his own mouth" about Colden's status: "He received Mee in a Very Affable Manner & after He had heard Mee revive your request [for the place of lieut. gov. of N. Y.] and salary as was of the General of the Province] to his Memorious and必需 Mee very friendly & told Me he had received ye Letter was no Stranger to you or your Merits & that He had a high Esteem & Value for you. Indeed like a Polite Courier He said so many Handsome things of you I will not discompose you by reciting them. "He said it was a little to be regretted that you Embarked with the Late Governor—but Said He, it might be well for the Governor else he had gone greater Lengths."—From the original letter, with Colden Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The plan for a union of the colonies, which was proposed at Aug. the Albany conference (see June 19), is referred by the provincial council to a committee for consideration.—Cal. Coun. Min., 395.

On the back of a letter of this date which Dr. Johnson received from his son, the brat president of King's College made a rough sketch of what he had in mind for the college seal. In this are seen suggestions for the seal finally adopted (see June 3, 1755) the Latin Motto VOTERUM LUXEM IN LUMINE TUO appears, also the Greek and Hebrew characters. The central female figure is standing rather than sitting, and the sun is a full luminary instead of a partial orb. The Biblical verses suggested by the inscription which now appears at the base of the central tablet. The words "the Lord Pres. Johnson's mind at that time"—Johnson Papers (MS.). For reproduction, see Addenda. Cf. "The Device of the College Seal" in Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 19-20, also cuts of seals in ibid., 444.

Richard Gaine begins the publication of a political weekly, entitled The Plebeian, edited under the pseudonym of " Noah Meanwell." The date of the first issue is known from Gaine's announcement of it in the N. T. Merc., Aug. 12, 1754. Although both Hildebrand and Ford were unable to locate a copy, the N. Y. Society Lib. owns No. 5, which is dated Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1754.—Early Newspapers, III: 437.

Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey addresses the council and general assembly in the council chamber in the city hall, urging a union of the colonies for defense. He desires particularly that this province aid the Virginians against the French and Indians, who have "illegally attacked and defeated the British Troops under the Command of Col. Washington, on this Side of the Ohio" (see May 31). He says that "we cannot with any Decency, should this Province be attacked, call upon the other Governments on the Continent, or with Reason expect Assistance from them, unless we now clearfully throw in our Contests for the Seals. We cannot repel the French, and drive them out of the Limits of his Majesty's Dominions ..." He calls attention to the defenceless state of the province: "View the Fortifications of this City, and let your own Eyes inform you what Repairs are necessary, and what other Works wanting to strengthen and defend it." Albany also is exposed and defended. Among the schoolhouse belonging to the corporation of Trinity Church.—Beardsley, Life and of those exempted by law who are able to bear arms and to provide arms, etc., to be kept in New York and Albany ready for emergencies.—Assemb. Jour., II: 335. The assembly answered the address on Aug. 22 (q.v.). See, further, Nov. 28.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1703

"In a long and detailed account of the attempts made by the Episcopalians to secure a charter for the college, Smith writes: "The Charter, written to his taste and to his specifications for the Charter expected the Grant. The Govt. had put them off till the sitting of the Assembly and then all Acts were to be used by him & them to prevail upon the House to recommend or approve the Charter and Invest the Trustees with the Cash raised for a College—On the 20 August the Assembly were convened—but their Expectations were most surprisingly disappointed.—Such had been our unwearied Endeavours in the several Counties by Letters and Agents where the Episcopalians have but a slender Influence that no sooner were the County Members come in to the Design of the Church respecting the College were universally exploded and condemned.—A party College was the most unpopular Thing in the World—All the Towns was alive with that subject."—From an original (without date) among the Wm. Smith MSS., in N. Y. Pub. Library, folio 189. See Aug. 21.

The general assembly presents an engrossed address to Lieut.-Gov. and Genl. of the Army to his specific and special wishes, 20 (q.v.). It begins: "We are of Opinion with your Honour, that nothing is more natural and salutary than a Union of the Colonies for their own Defence, and that it is a reciprocal Duty to be aiding and assisting to each other in Case of an Invasion, but these Principles your Honour will not extend to an Unriendly people. But they point out that the province of New York is now itself most in need of protection. Nevertheless, they assert their readiness to "make such a Provision for the Assistance of our fellow Subjects of Virginia and Pennsylvania, as the Circumstances of the Colony will admit of."—Assemb. Jour., II: 387-88. See March 26, 1755.

William Livingston writes to Chauncey Whittlesey of New Haven concerning the college. He says: "It was opened last June [see June 3, and July 17 in the vestry-room of the school-house be- ing Trinity Church. It consists of seven students, the majority of whom were admitted, though utterly unqualified, in order to make a flourish. They meet for morning prayers in the church, and are like to make a great progress in the literary as in the sciences. The doctor's [Samuel Johnson, president of the college] advertisement [see June 3] promises stupendous matters. He is even to teach the knowledge of all nature in the heavens above us. Whether he intends to descend as low as he soars on high, and conduct his disciples to the bottom of Tartarus, he does not inform the public"—Life of William Livingston, by Theodore Sedgwick, Jr. (N. Y., 1853), 91.

"In a letter to the Rev. Dr. Barke, in his will of this date, bequeaths to his wife several buildings, including a house and lot fronting on "Huddle-stone Street." Referring to this property, Pelletreau notes that in 1695 William Huddleston, schoolmaster, and William Greene, bought "two lots on the north side of Nassaue Street,... . with the condition that each was to give a certain number of feet for a new street; this new street is now Gold Street, north of Fulton Street. 'Nassaue Street' was afterwards called 'Fair Street,' and now Fulton."—Abstract of Wills, VII: 54, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections.

A number of Episcopalians, finding that there is great hostility in the assembly to their petition for a college charter, call on Lieut.-Gov. De Lancy, and urge him "to pass the Charter without Delay." Smith writes of this: "But he [the governor] thought it best to defer the Matter till the Heat of the people was a little abated, They then pressed that it might pass the Seals, with so much impatience that he refused it with some Warmth saying, What will you force it upon me!—The News of this Interview affected People very differently. The Bulk of the People were well pleased—pleased beyond Expectation for the Hopes of the Episcopalians were strong & very few Persons knew the pains we had taken to make it popular and the success we had reason to promise ourselves. The City of New York had a hand raised, and turned on their Fury upon the Governor—they charged him with Trimming and Insincerity—and said openly that he had at first projected the Design but to preserve his popularity now disappointed them—There was by this Means a strong party ag' him and I believe he met now with a great Blow and made more Enemies than he had at any time since Cosby's Administration—The prime Conductor of the Party were prodigiously Chagrined & as is common their Under Agents expressed the Sentiments of their Leaders—They declared in the open Streets they would never ask the Govt again for a Charter but would go to the King his Master and acquaint the Bishops also of his Conduct especially his Grace of Canterbury who was their Eno-tors only Patron in England.—After a few Days the House adjourned till the 3rd Tuesday in Oct.—"—From an original manuscript (without date), entitled "Di Acco of the College," among the Wm. Smith MSS., folio 180. See Sept. 11.

The provincial council is informed by a letter from Gov. Dinwiddie that Col. Washington has been defeated.—Col. Coun. Min., 395. See July 4.

Spring Garden, lying south of Ann St., between Broadway and Nassau St., is partitioned by deed, to which is annexed a plan of the lots. A copy of this plan, made May 12, 1800, is in the Bancroft Collection (box B-G, folder 71), in N. Y. Pub. Library. See also Jan., 1758. For an historical and topographical account of Spring Garden, see Nov. 1, 1712.

The legislature passes an act for paying £5,000 toward Assisting the Colony's of Virginia and Pennsylvania to discharge the French and Indians who have retired to a street called 'his Majesty's Lands on the River Ohio and parts adjacent thereto."—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 998. The contribution was toward the Braddock expedition.—Man. Com. Coun. (1859), 510.

During each succeeding year, for a dozen years, the province was heavily taxed to contribute towards the expense involved in the conquest of Canada. The British government reimbursed a portion of the moneys contributed by the colonies; but, however glorious the result, the people of America felt that the great burden fell upon their shoulders. These causes contributed materially in producing the rebellion which resulted in the independence of the United States. For a brief summary of such taxation in this province, see ibid. (1859), 510. For a contemporaneous and con-ected history of the period, see Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1839), Vol. V.

The reverend Mr. Whitefield, having returned from Philadelphia Sept. on Aug. 31, preaches in the "Presbyterian Meeting" at 5 o'clock before an audience of "near 2000 Persons." He is "extremely pathetick with regard, to the Disturbances, not only on the Fronttiers of this Province, but likewise on those of our Neighbours." Other clergymen in the city speak on the same subject.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 2, 1754. On Sept. 8, Whitefield preached a farewell sermon in New York, intending to start the next day for Boston (ibid., Sept. 9), but on account of bad weather proceeded to Philadelphia instead, "preaching in divers Places as he pass'd along, to large Assemblies."—Ibid., Sept. 16, 1754.

In a letter to the Rev. Dr. Graeme, at Fish Kill, Dutchess Co., William Smith repeats his account of the efforts of the Episcopalians to get control of the college (see July 5). He adds: "The Eyes of the Dutch begin to be opened and could they be brought Acquainted with the History of that Lust of Domintion for which the Church of England has long been remarkable and their Abuse of the Dissenters in England we might hope they would exert themselves in Conjuction with the English Presbyterians to oppose the most distant appearances of an Episcopal Establishment which is aimed at and will in a few years be the Consequence of their Monopoly of the Grand source of Edua-cation."—From original draft among Wm. Smith MSS., folio 189.

Hon. Robert Hunter Morris, lieutenant-governor of Pennsyl-vanlia, arriving from England, comes on shore "near the Flat-Rock Battery." He is conducted to the house of James Alexander in Broad Street. Gov. Morris's nephew, captain of the Independent Company (which was formerly Guards of this Garrison), arrives with him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 16, 1754.

Writing to Mr. Miller, member of the provincial assembly from Suffolk, William Smith expresses confidence that the bill creating a free college in New York will pass the legislature because of the popularity of the idea "both in City and Country." He conforms that the council are on his side. He says his father has purposed the draft of incorporation, which he is now sending to the assemblyman for his examination.—From original draft among Wm. Smith MSS., folio 189.

The provincial council issues a warrant to pay Henry Brasier for going express to Virginia.—Col. Coun. Min., 396.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

A petition of the "Ministers, Elders and Deacons of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in the City of New-York" is presented to the assembly, setting forth: "That as the establishing a College within this Colony for the Instruction of Youth in the liberal Arts and Sciences, and for various other purposes, and is of the utmost Importance to their civil, but more especially to their religious Liberties, they conceive it highly necessary, that they as Guardians of the Ecclesiastical Interest of the Dutch Congregations of this City in particular, and the other Dutch Churches in this Province in general, should by all proper means endeavour to add to the Privileges and Liberties they have heretofore enjoyed under the auspicious Smiles of the British Government; that a College for the Instruction of Youth, in sound Literature, will be very advantageous in general, but unless Provision be made for a Professor of Divinity for the Benefit of the Dutch Churches in this Country, they will lose a main Advantage thereby (and which they prefer to every other Benefit expected from a public Seminary of Learning) as the Youth intended for the Ministry, will, without that Privilege, at a vast Expense to the Parents, be obliged to reside several Years in Holland or other foreign Protestant Countries, that the Institution of such a Professor would make the Intended College more numerous and flourishing, as their Youths would thereby be encouraged to the Study of Divinity; that as the Dutch are the greatest Number of any single Denomination of Christians in this Province, it may reasonably be expected, that in proportion as their Ministers would be the greatest Benefactors of the Intended College; and therefore humbly praying, that the honourable House will be favourably pleased, whenever the Matter of the said College comes under Consideration, they may by the Act for incorporating and establishing the same, be entitled to a Divinity Professor with a reasonable Salary, to be nominated by the Ministers, Elders and Deacons of the Dutch Reformed Protestant Church in this City, and that the said Professor may freely and without control, teach the Doctrines of Faith maintained by their Churches, as established and approved of by the national Synod of Dort, in the Years 1618 and 1637."

"Ordered, That the said Petition be taken into Consideration, when the House proceeds on the Consideration of establishing a College for the Education of Youth within this Colony."

The provincial council, William Smith dissenting, approves the draft of a charter to the governors of the college of the province of New York (King's College).—Col. Coun. Min., 396.

The "Charter of the College of New-York" (King's College) bears this date. For reproduction of the original, engrossed on vellum, and which is still preserved in the archives of Columbia University, see "Alumni Records," Vol. IV. The following extract is from the first printed issue, 1754 (see Nov. 14). It is granted in the name of the king, beginning: "George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith," etc. To All to whom these Presents shall come, greeting.

The preamble refers to "divers Sums" which have been raised by lotteries under the provisions of several provincial acts [see Dec. 6, 1746; April 9, 1748; July 4, and Dec. 12, 1753], and appropriated for "the founding, erecting and establishing a College in Our said Government." It recites that Trinity corporation has "set a-part a Parcel of Ground for that Purpose, of upwards of Three Thousand Pounds Value, belonging to the said Corporation, on the West Side of the Broad-Way, in the West-Ward of Our City of New-Yorks; fronting Easterly to Church-Street, between Barclay-Street and Murray-Street, Four Hundred and Forty Foot; and from thence, running Wasterly, between and along the said Barclay-Street and Murray-Street, to the North River: And also a Street from the Middle of the said Land, Easterly, to the Broad-Way, of Ninety Foot, to be called Robinson-Street;" and that that corporation has declared it is "ready and desirous, to convey the said parcel of Ground, and right of Way, to the Corporation, in their Library Room [see June 27, 1729] in the City Hall; And that the Same will be open twice a week."—

"N. Y. Merc., Oct. 21, 1754.

25 A resolution of the assembly orders that the trustees of the college at that time, are put in possession of what has been done by them, in pursuance of the Powers and Authorities given them by the said Act" (of Nov. 25, 1751, q. v.).—

The cosmopolitan character of the board of governors is Oct. 31 notable; also the fact that it includes the ministers of the different churches. "It is perhaps the only board of this kind, almost alone of all the pre-Revolutionary Colleges in the United States, has never had a theological Faculty connected with it."

_Hist. of Columbia Univ._ (1904), 17.

The governors of the college, as "a Body Politick and Corporate," are made capable in law "to sue and be sued," etc. They and their successors are given power "to purchase, take, hold, receive, enjoy, and have," any messuages, houses, lands, tenants, and hereditaments, and real estate, whatsoever, in Fee-simple, or for Term of Life or Lives, or Years, or in any other manner howsoever, for the Use of the said College: Provided always, the clear yearly Value thereof, do not exceed the Sum of Two Thousand Pounds Sterling: And also, Goods, Chattels, Books, Monies, Annuities, and all other Things of what Nature and Kind soever."

They and their successors have power and authority "to erect and build any House or Houses, or other Buildings, as they shall think necessary or convenient;" and also to dispose of, in any manner, any land, chattel or anything else "as to them shall seem fit, either in the State or Commonwealth, or in Columbia, contrary to the true Meaning hereof, other than by such Leases as are hereafter mentioned;" no Grant or Lease of the said Land, or any Part thereof, shall be made by the said Governors . . . which shall exceed the Number of Twenty-one Years; and that either in possession, or not above three Years, before the End and Expiration or Determination of the Estate in Possession."

On receipt of the letters patent, and before proceeding to any business concerning the college, the governors ("except always the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury for the Time being, and Our first Lord Commissioner of Trade and Plantations") shall, at their first meeting, take the oaths appointed by the act of parliament of Geo. I, Chap. 15 (the text of which is found in Pickering, _Statutes at Large_, XIII: 187; see also Aug. 20, 1715); shall subscribe to the declaration required by the Act 24 Geo. II, Chap. 23 (Pickering, _p. cit.,_ VIII: 389; see also March 20, 1673); and also to an oath to execute their trust faithfully. The justices of the supreme court are authorized to administer these oaths to those who become members of the college corporation.

The governors shall meet yearly, on the second Tuesday of May, in New York City. Fifteen or more, being met, shall constitute a quorum. A major part of them shall have power to adjourn "from Day to Day, as the Business of the said College may require." The Archbishop of Canterbury and the "First Lord Commissioner for Trade and Plantations for the Time being" may appoint proxies. If five members of the college corporation shall deem any other meeting or meetings necessary at any other time, they are empowered to direct in writing the clerk of the corporation to give notice of such meeting by an advertisement in one or more newspapers at least seven days before the meeting. The governor or his proxies, and the chief justice, after a hearing, shall have power to decide the existence of a vacancy among the members of the college corporation, and to decide whether a vacancy has occurred, and the person, if any, to fill it; also to elect one or more Fellows or Fellows, Professor or Professors, Tutor or Tutors, to assist the President," to hold office "at the Will and Pleasure of the Governors of the said Corporation, or during his or their good Behaviour." These shall take the oaths and subscribe to the declaration before mentioned.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1754
Oct. 31

If, in case of death, removal, or refusal to qualify, or for any other reason, the place of a governor (not holding the office by reason of some other station or office) becomes vacant, the govern- nors are to elect another in his stead. In case of misdeemour in the office of president, fellow, professor, or tutor, the governors are given power and authority to suspend the said culprit, upon complaint in writing, examination, and due proof.

The major part of any of the governors may and shall appoint, from time to time, a treasurer, clerk, and steward for the college, and determine "their respective Business and Trusts."

They shall "direct and appoint what Books shall be publicly read, and taught in the said College, by the President, Fellows, Professors and Tutors."

They shall, "under their Common Seal," make laws for the government of the "College and Students, and Ministers thereof;" but these shall not be repugnant to the laws of England or this province, and shall "not extend to exclude any Person of any religious Denomination whatever, from equal Liberty and Ad- vantage of Education, or from any the Degrees, Liberties, Privi- leges, Benefits, or Immunities of the said College, on Account of his particular Tenets In Matters of Religion." (This section of the charter was published in the Pict-I. and Nov. 4.) Such and like Ordnances and Orders are, "by these Presents, for Us, Our Heirs and Successors," ratified, confirmed and allowed "as good and effectual, to bind and oblige, all and every the Students and Officers, and Ministers of the said College."

The governors, or the major part of any fifteen or more of them, at any of their meetings, shall put forth such laws, etc., as inflict upon the students the "greater Punishments of Expulsion, Suspension, Degradation and publick Confession;" while the president, fellows, and professors, or any of them, shall put forth such laws, as inflict "the lesser Punishments."

The charter next orders: That there shall be forever hereafter, publick Morning and Evening Service, constantly performed in the said College, Morning and Evening, for ever, by the President, Fellows, Professors or Tutors of the said College, or one of them, according to the Laws and Ordinances of the Church of England as the same are established; or such a Collection of Prayers out of the said Liturgy, with a Collect peculiar for the said College, as shall be approved of, from Time to Time, by the Governors of the said College, or the major Part of any Fifteen or more of them, convened as afore- said.

The governors are given power and authority to visit, punish, place, or displace officers or students, and "to order, reform and redress, All, and any the Disorders, Misdemeanors and Abuses in the Persons aforesaid, or any of them," as directed and declared in the charter.

We are, "for the Encouragement of the Students of the said College, to Diligence and Industry in their Studies," the governors are empowered, "by the President of the said College, or any other Person or Persons by them authorized and appointed," to give "any such Degree and Degrees, to any the Students of the said College, or any other Person or Persons by them thought worthy thereof, as are usually granted by any or either of Our Universities or Colleges, in that Part of Our Kingdom of Great Britain, called England." The president, or other person appointed for the purpose, is authorized to "sign and seal Diplomas or Certificates of such Degree or Degrees, to be kept by the Graduates, as a Testamentary thereof."

The college corporation is given a common seal by the charter, under which the governors "shall and may pass, all Grants, Diplomas, etc., and which shall be engraven "in such Form, and with such Devices and Inscription, as shall be agreed upon by the said Governors . . .;" and it is made lawful for them, "as they shall see Cause, to break, change, alter and new make the same . . . ." (Miss. 15, 74, 818.)

The governors shall appoint "all other Inferior Officers or Ministers, which they shall think convenient and necessary for the Use of the College, the Particulars of and in which they shall be employed to be directed to be paid out to the Trustees for erecting a College . . . ."

Lastly, the charter, on being entered of record or enrolled, shall be effectual in law, "notwithstanding the not Receiving or Making Nothing or Mutinying of the aforesaid Officers, Franchises, Privileges, Immunities," etc; and "notwithstanding a Writ ad quod Damnum, hath not issued forth, to enquire of or concerning the Premises, or any of them, before the Escheating Oct. hereof: Any Statute, Act, Ordinance or Provision, or any other Matter or Thing to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

In Testimony whereof, we have caused these Our Letters to be made Patents, and the Great Seal of Our Province of New-York, to be hereunto affixed, and the same to be entered of Record, in Our Secretary's Office, of Our said Province, in one of the Books of Patents there remaining. Witness Our Trusty and Well-beloved James De Lancy, Esq; Our Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief, in and over Our Province of New-York, and the Terri- tories depending thereon in America; in, by and with the Advice and Consent of Our Council of our said Province, this Thirty-first Day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-Four, and of Our Reign the Twenty Eighth. "Clarke, junior."

See also Wixoos, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., V: 250.

Because "the clausum was so great," the charter was not delivered to the governors of the college until May 7, 1755 (n.r.).—See Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), to, citing Chandler's Life of Johnson.

The conveyance of Trinity's lands to the college was made on May 13, 1755 (n.r.).

In a letter to the governors of King's College, Dr. Johnson accepts the appointment to the presidency, on condition that he shall "be at liberty to retire to some place of safety in the country whenever the small-pox should render it necessary for him to reside in the city."—Chandler, Life of Samuel Johnson (1805), 92. No copy of the original letter is found with the Johnson Papers at Columbia Univ. The conditional character of Johnson's acceptance of the appointment appears, further, from Barclay's letter to him of Nov. 4 (n.r.).

Estimates and drafts of the fortifications proposed for New York City and adjacent places, are brought from the govern- ors to the assembly.—Assem. Jour., II: 403.

In response to the order of Oct. 21 (n.r.), William Livingston, one of the trustees of the college fund, delivers his report (signed by him alone) to the assembly. Soon after, Benjamin Nicoll and James Livingston, two of the other trustees under the same act of appointment (see Nov. 25, 1751), present a report signed by John Chambers, Daniel Horsmanden, Edward Holland, James Livings- ton, Benjamin Nicoll, and Abraham de Peyser,—all the other trustees. It is ordered that the two reports be entered at large "on the Journal of this House."

The latter report, which is entered first, shows that they adver- tised "that the said Monies [£5,443:18] were to be let to Interest, and have accordingly put out the same, and also the Monies raised by the third Lottery," as shown by a schedule annexed. "They further shew, that an Offer or Proposal, hath been made to them by the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York, in Com- munication with the Church of England, as by Law established, to give any reasonable Quantity of the Church Farm (which was not let out) for erecting and Use of a College [see May 14]. And the said Trustees further shew, that no Proposal hath been made to them by any other Person, nor any Donation given, to their Knowledge. They further shew, that they have agreed, and ordered, that an Advertisement be published again [see Oct. 8, 1753] in the News Papers, to notify all Persons in arrears for Interest on their Securities, to them, to discharge the same without Delay, or they may expect to have their Bonds put in Suit. And that the Trustees have more Money to let, on the Terms in their former Advertisement mentioned, being great Part of the Money raised by the last Lottery, very lately paid in by the Man- ages of said Lottery. They have further agreed, and ordered, that particular Letters be wrote to those Persons whose Securities appear in the least dubious, to discharge the same, or give better Security, or that they must expect Suits for the Recovery of what is due from them respectively." The schedule annexed, it is stated, shows the "the Amount and several Lotteries hereinafter mentioned directed to be paid out to the Trustees for erecting a College . . . ."

It shows, first, a list of bonds, and one mortgage (and bond), 11 securities in all, ranging in value from £1,413:18 to £5,500, and totaling £1,244,318, to which are added two bonds and one mortgage (and bond), making the arrears of interest £4,720.

This is followed by a statement of returns from the several lotteries, thus:
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

1754
"1747 By the Total of the second, Nov. 1 By ditto of the third, £ 1930 18 0
£ 1531 0 0

1754. By ditto of the fourth, £ 3443 18 0
1755. By do. of the fifth in Part, £ 923 1 0
1756. £ 920 16 6

November 22, By Interest,
£ 35 0 0

April 10, By do. £ 14, May 27, By do. £ 14
July 14, By ditto,
£ 14 0 0
December 1, By ditto,
£ 21 0 0
December 3, By ditto,
£ 14 0 0
December 6, By ditto,
£ 21 0 0
L 5497 14 6

William Livingston's report covers about six folio pages of the printed Assembly Journal. He announces that, at a trustees' meeting on Oct. 30, he protested against the incompleteness of the majority report, because it did not contain "the whole of the proceedings of the said Trustees, in pursuance of the Act . . ." and particularly a certain Petition [see May 20, 1754] preferred by the said Trustees to his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, for a Charter of the said College, and the said William Livingston's Protest against the said Charter and Petition." He prefaced his report by a logical explication of his reasons for making it. The report itself is a review of the transactions of the trustees. He mentions the advertisement offered by the trustees on Jan. 12 and published in the Post-Boy of Jan. 20, 1752 (p. v.). For the financial results of their efforts, he refers to the schedule attached to the Nov. 1 report of the other trustees (vide supra). He then refers to the offer of land made by Rev. Henry Barclay for the vestry of Trinity Church to the trustees on April 8, 1752 (p. v.). He next makes reference to the letters written to Rev. Dr. Johnson and Mr. Whitlessey, and their replies [see Nov. 22, 1753; Feb. 11 and 21 and May 20, 1754] inviting them to come as "President," and "second Master," respectively. Finally, he reviews the proceedings of the trustees of May 16 and 20, 1754 (p. v.), concerning the presenting to the lieutenant-governor, for his approval, the draft of a charter; and he concludes his report with his extended protest of "twenty Reasons," dated May 16, and considered by the trustees in meeting of May 20, 1754 (p. v.).—Assembly Jour., II: 396–402.

The assembly ordered that the two reports be taken into consideration on Nov. 6.—Ibid., II: 402. On that day, it was "Resolved, Nemine Contradicto, That this House will not consent to any Charter the Master shall raise by Way of Lottery, for erecting and establishing a College within this College for the Education of Youth or any Part thereof, in any other Manner whatsoever, than by Act or Acts of the Legislature of this Colony, hereafter to be passed for that Purpose."

At the same session of the assembly (Nov. 6), Capt. Robert Livingston, a member of the assembly from Livingston Manor, moved "for Leave to bring in a Bill, further to establish and to incorporate within this Colony this College [see De Lancey's charter grant of Oct. 31], for the Education and Instruction of Youth in the liberal Arts and Sciences." It was ordered "That Leave be given accordingly."—Ibid., II: 404. See Nov. 6, for Livingston's bill.

For the Rev. Henry Barclay's and Mr. Benjamin Nicoll's views of the proceedings of Nov. 1, see Nov. 4.

David Provoost and others petition the common council for a contribution toward buying a house and lot adjoining the passage from Bayard (now Stone) St. to Mill St., as they desire to widen this passage into a street. They explain "That at present the only passage thro' Mill Street Commonly Called the Jews Alley is a Narrow Alley of about four feet wide from the upper end of the Said Street to Duke Street and that for want of a more convenient Passage and [sic] to the Said Mill Street of a sufficient Bredth to admit the passing of Carts and other Carriages the Inhabitants of 8th Street Labour under many and Great Inconveniences Nor would The Petitioners only reap the Convenience of a Passage Through the said Street but also as they Conceive be of General Utility more especially to the Carmen by furnishing them with a much Shorter and better way for Carrying many Goods which they are [sic] present obliged to carry round either thence Dark Street or Princes Street." The petition further recites "That the Inhabitants and proprietors of the Houses and Lots in the Said Mill Street have now an Opportunity of purchasing at a very reasonable price a House and Lot of Ground adjoining to the Said Small Alley which they conceive to be the most Proper for opening a good Passage into the Said Street as it adjoins to the Head thereof. They add "that the removal of the Said House would be a great and Singular Advantage in Case of a Fire at the upper end of the Said Mill Street of which this City has had a recent Proof in the Danger and Extremity to which the Neighbourhood was reduced for want of a free Passage through the Like melancholly Occasion." The petitioners, only six in number, have contributed £205 for the purpose and need £77.11 to supply the deficieny. This they ask the common council to grant. It is ordered that £50 be "allowed and paid to the said petitioners this Day three years hence" provided they will Convey to this Corporation . . . the Ground mentioned in the Said petition to be and Remain a free and publick Street to and for the Inhabitants of the Said City for Ever."—M. G. C. V: 475–76.

On April 9, 1755, the mayor "produced in this Board the Releasers of David Provoost, Concerning the said Carmen, and Elas DeJilliborses and others of the House Joining the alley Leading from Bayards Street to Mill Street, for the use of a Publick way or Street for Ever, for the Consideration of fifty Pounds to be paid to them, the first of November 1755," and it was ordered that the releasers be recorded in the books of City Records, and that the mayor execute a bond for the payment of the £50.—Ibid., VI: 8–9. On June 20, 1759, the city paid the amount to the bondsmen.—Ibid., VI: 176. The passage, widened according to these provisions, is now Mill Lane.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 306.

The common council repeals the fifth clause of the "Law for paving & Cleansing the Streets Lanes and Alleys . . . and for preventing Nuisances." This clause relates to encumbrances. Instead, it is now provided that "if any person or persons what Soever Shall Encumber any of the Streets Ways or parts of this City with boards, planks, staves, Dung, pitch, Tar, Turpentine, Grin Stones, anchors, or any kind of Lumber or Timber," for more than eight days, he will be fined 40 shillings for each offence.—M. G. C. V: 476–77. For summary of earlier provisions relating to encumbrances, etc., see Dec. 31, 1675.

An amendment is passed by the common council to the first clause of the "Law to prevent Strangers from being a Charge to this Corporation" (see April 22, 1731), the new provision requiring that the master of a vessel shall, within two hours after arrival, report to the mayor, recorder, or the alderman of the ward where the vessel enters, the names of all passengers and strangers whom he brings into port.—M. G. C. V: 476. For an early ordinance of this character, see Jan. 20, 1676.

Rev. Henry Barclay writes to Rev. Dr. Samuel Johnson, the president of the college, reviewing the assembly transactions of Nov. 1 (p. v.), including William Livingston's submission of a separate report, "containing his famous Protest, etc." He continues: "This occasioned a great ferment in the House, and issued for that day in a resolve that Livingston's Report should be printed at large, and the affair postponed to farther consideration on Wednesday next [Nov. 6, p. v.], they had a majority of fourteen to eight, but three of our friends were absent, and it was with much difficulty that they were prevented from censuring the conduct of the Trustees and returning thanks to Livingston. We were all afraid that this would have retarded the Sealing of the Charter, and some well wishes to the thing would have condescended to the retaining of it, had not the Governor been true, and other two, the Directors. We are, however, puzzled what to advise you as to resigning your mission [at Stratford, presumably]. I have been with Mr. Chambers this morning, and though it be the opinion of most of the gentlemen that you ought to resign and trust to Providence for the issue of things at another time. Yet, we would rather choose, if possible, that you should put off the resignation. for a fortnight or three weeks, and come down immediately, because some are not so clear with regard to the £500 support [see July 4, 1753], though others think we cannot be deprived of it. But this conversation with Mr. Chambers we have had some glimmering light. I went from Mr. Chambers' to Mr. Watts' house, which was to be sold on my coming out of his house, which, as he told me, came to make proposals for an accommodation, and all they desired was a Dutch Professor of Divinity, which, if granted, they would all join us, and give the money. This I doubt not will be done unless the Governor should oppose it, who is more willing to watch for particle than head, but I make no doubt but he may be pacified . . . The whole number [of governors] is forty-one: seventeen ex officio and twenty-four private gentlemen, in which number there are at present but eight of the Dutch Church, the French, Lutheran, Presbyterian Ministers, and Will. Livingston—so that we have a majority of twenty-nine to twelve, and in these twelve are included Mr. Richards, John Cruger, Leonard Lispersand, and the Treasurer, all our good friends.—Hist. of Columbia Univ., 7–8, citing Beardsey's Life of Johnson.

Another explanation of the proceedings which determined what the charter provisions should be is contained in an anonymous pamphlet, the title-page of which reads: A Brief Vindication of the Proceedings of the Trustees relating to the College. Containing A Sufficient Answer to the Late Famous Protest, with its Twenty Unanswerable Points, by an Importer. New-York: Printed and Sold by H. Gaine, at the Printing-Office in Queen-Street, between the Fly and Meat-Markets, 1754. The author was Benjamin Nicoll, a lawyer of distinction in New York, one of the trustees named in the act of Nov. 25, 1753 (p. v.), and one of the governors named in the charter (Oct. 31); he was a clergyman of Trinity Church and stepson of the Rev. Dr. Johnson.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 12.

Referring to William Livingston's papers in the Independent Reflector (see March 22, 1753), he says: "... The Drift and End of those Papers, I clearly perceived by this Time, was, to set the different Sects of Christians, at Variance with the Church of England, and to embarrass and obstruct the Affairs of the College, as much as was possible; that in the Interim, the favourite College of New-Jersey, founded on a Scheme, agreeable to his own Sentiments, and vigorously prosecuted at Home and Abroad, might take such Root, as not easily to be hurt by any Thing that could afterwards be done in this Government, even though we all should join in erecting a College here. . . . The Members of the Vestry of Trinity-Church, (who, as several of them assured me, at first, thought of no such Thing) finding with what Warmth and unbecoming Zeal, they were attacked, and that this Writer was not only instigated, but emboldened by the College Trustees to such Abuses, and was also endeavouring entirely to banish Religion from the College, as much as in him lay: They then thought it their Duty, as Christians, and in Justice to their Constituents, to take at least some Care, that they did not part with the Lands they were intitled to, by the Interest of Religion. I think, I wish wisely, came to this Resolution, viz. that they [Trinity corporation] would not part with their Lands, but upon the Conditions since mentioned in the Charter. The Vestry of that Church (as one of the Trustees, if it should be the case) acquainted the Trustees with this Resolution. Thus I have stated the Fact, as to this Transaction of the Members of the Vestry of Trinity-Church, as the same truly happened; and are the only Steps that I have heard, or is pretended, have been taken by them, in order to obtain a Charter; and thus much I thought necessary to relate, that it might clearly appear, there is none to blame, nay, there was Any reason to sound the Trumpet against the Church, whatever there may be against a few particular Members of it. [p. 5]..."

*... I must beg Leave to observe, the extremity of the distresses of his Lordship, [in his Governor's Proceedings, in wisely setting up a Man of Straw, a meer Chimera and Imagination of his own overheated Brain, which he has pleased to call, Trinity-Church-College [see May 20], which Thing, or Being, is, I am certain, no where to be found, on the Face of the Earth: A Notion which, I think, it is imprudent at this time to attempt to refute, for we cannot raise a Clamour and Noise against the Members of that Church, as though they were ingrossing, and had actually taken into their Hands, the sole Government of a College, that then did not, nor ever will, I believe, exist; whether this was acting the Part of a Man of Candour and Honour, I shall leave others to judge." (p. 8) Nicoll then answers Livingston's twenty "unanswerable Reasons" (see May 20) (pp. 9–12). Presumably, his Vindication made its appearance about the same date as Mr. Livingston's* (Capt. Robert Livingston of the Manor of Livingston) introduces a bill in the assembly, as permitted on Nov. 1 (q.v.), entitled "An Act, further to establish and to incorporate a College within this Colony, for the Education and Instruction of Youth in the liberal Arts and Sciences." It had its second reading the next day, and was laid on the Table of the House.—Assem. Jour., III. 404. On Nov. 26, when the bill was "to be the Subject of this Day's Deliberations," further consideration of it was postponed to the next meeting, on motion of Capt. Walton, who said the bill was "of the utmost Consequence to the People we have the Honour to represent, with Respect both to their religious and civil Liberties, and the Season of the Year being so far advanced, as not to admit of so much Time, as will be necessary to consider all the Parts of it, with that Attention its vast Importance requires." The house ordered that, in the mean time, it be printed by the public printer, James Parker.—Hist. III, 419. It is printed in the Journal of the assembly of the same date.

This bill, of which William Livingston was the author, is an extended amplification and modification of the terms of the college charter (see Oct. 31), and embodies the points raised by Livingston in his Independent Reflector the year before (see March 22, 1753). Nothing further appears to have been done with the bill; it being evidently supplied by further measures to raise money for the college by lottery (see Dec. 7, 1754), and by The Additional Charter of 1755 (see May 10, 1755) to Trinity Church, Dec. 1754.

It is worthy of note, also, in this connection, that the names of the dignitaries, officials, and gentlemen, appointed by the charter as governors (see Oct. 31) were placed on record in a document of this date, endorsed "Names for Gov't of Kings College," which is now preserved in the State Library, Albany (Col. MSS., LXXIX: 96).

The provincial council at New York considers letters relating to the campaign against the French on the Ohio and the Kennebeck, and refers them to the assembly; also one from the lords of trade relating to a general union of the colonies (see June 19 and Aug. 9), which is likewise referred.—Cal. Coun. Min., 596–97.

The provincial council orders that the charter for King's College be printed—Cal. Coun. Min., 397. Four days later, its publication was announced by the following advertisement:

"Just published and to be sold at the New-Printing-Office in Beaver Street, Printer to the General Assembly, and against the Door, there is a three Pence piece covered with Marble-paper; and one Shilling in blue Paper.

"Also, to be sold at the same Place, Price Nine Copperns.

"The three Sheets of the Votes of the General Assembly, wherein is contained the Reports of the Trustees appointed to receive the Monies raised for the College in this Colony."—N. Y. Post-Bry., Nov. 18, 1754.

The provincial council grants a patent to Rodman and Woolley for a ferry between New Rochelle and Sands Point, L.—Cal. Coun. Min., 597.

De Lancy, in a written message to the assembly, states that he has lately received a letter from the lords commissioners for trade and plantations, "In which," he says, "after observing the Unreasonableness of the Assembly's meddling in the executive Part of Government, and thus introducing Public Money to be drawn out of the Treasury by Warrant of the Governor and Council only, agreeable to his Majesty's Instructions; their Lordsships take Notice, that as it is a Point insisted on by you, that the Revenue, even for Services of a permanent Nature, should be granted only from introduced Private Money, he has the Honour of granting the Revenue only annually, may, from Time to Time, revive the Pretentions of the Assembly to a Share in the executive Part of the Government, since such annual Grants may be annually employed to the Purposes of wresting from the Crown the Nomination of all Officers, whose Salaries depend upon the annual Appointment of the House of Commons. ... We have thought fit for the Justification of our Committee to Declare that the Necessity we are under to Desist not to the major Voat of this house in rejecting this Bill for the reasons following to wit
"Because it appears to us.

1724

Nov. 21

Dr. Johnson writes to his son that the assembly has not yet appropriated the money for the college, but that hopes are entertained that a bill "which gives us the money & at the same time provides for a Dutch professor" will secure enough votes of the Dutch members to ensure passage. If not, they will raise money by subscription to "answer the End for the present." It is said by the mayor, Johnson states: "that I am to have $125 paid me this week—I believe I must send my final Resolution next post to resign.—But the Reflectors [see Mar. 22, 1753] you see have got Gaine to print for them & are got to scribbling again." He expresses a desire to have his "Desk & Book Case & Books in it" and a few other things sent to him.—Johnson Papers (MS.).

Hugh Gaine begins publishing, in The New-York Mercury, a numbered series of weekly political essays entitled "The Watch-Tower." These continued through Nov. 17, 1753 (No. 52). The N. Y. Hist. Soc. has Nos. 1 to 6. Hildreth says that the series was issued also separately, but Ford found none in separate form, excepting No. 53 (Jan. 16, 1756), which appeared as a broadside.—
Early Newspapers, II: 419. Reference is made to "The Watch-Tower" in the first issue of John Englishman (see April 9, 1755).

In a message to the assembly, Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, answering the slices of the provincial Council with respect to the veto of the Fortifications, the Necessity of repairing them, and of erecting others. He also states: "The Paper Money in this Province hath fallen very little in its Value, and held its Reputation, so that Twenty Shillings, passes now equal to Eight or Nine Pounds, of the Bills of some other Provinces, owing to a good Measure to the solid Funds upon which the Bills of this Colony were emitted." He therefore recommends passing a bill with a suspending Clause," for emitting $400,000, "to be sunk by a Tax of Five Thousand Pounds a Year, on Estates real and personal, to commence in the Year 1757, when the present Taxes will cease.
The Bills to be declared not legal Tender for Debts contracted in Great-Britain. As this Fund would sink the Bills in eight Years, which is no long Period, I am persuaded they would keep up their Credit, and be readily received in all Payments."—Assemb. Jour., II: 28.

The Mail being frequently delay'd in passing the New-York-Bay, notice is given that only two trips a week will be made hereafter.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 28, 1754.

A manuscript without date among the Wm. Smith papers has the indorsement: "Df of Protest intended to have been made by Mr. Smith [see things May 29] and Smith [see things April 10] in Dec. 1754 came up from the House and was rejected by the Council." It reads:
"Being Deeply sensible of the Importance of the Trust reposed in us by His Majesty for the maintenance of the Just Rights and prerogatives of his Crown—the Rights and Liberties of his Subjects both civil and religious and the General Good and prosperity of this Province We have thought fit for the Justification of our Committee to Declare that the Necessity we are under to Desist not to the major Voat of this house in rejecting this Bill for the reasons following to wit
"Because it appears to us.

1724

Dec.
Some time prior to this year, the Friends’ meeting-house was erected on Liberty St., 40 ft. west of Liberty Pl.; the congregation coming to this site from its first location, on Liberty St. W. of 92d St., in 1749. This building was demolished in or about 1755. —Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 116-117; cf. Liber Deeds, LXXVII: 431 (New York). See 1802; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 928; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

Some time prior to this year, the sugar-house of John van Goenslandt, and George Peterson was erected, at the north-west corner of Trinity churchyard, on the line of the present Church St., south of Thames St.—See Pl. 34, Vol. I. The partnership was dissolved on or about Jan. 17, 1757.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 17, 1757 (in archives of the Hist. Soc. of Penn., Phila.). The building was gutted by fire Nov. 3, 1766 (p. 92). An advertisement of 1802 showed it to be opposite No. 40 Thames St.—N. Y. Gaz., Feb. 19, 1802. It is said to have been demolished in 1852.—Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., III: 301. The same authority states that it was used as a prison during the Revolution but it has not been possible to substantiate this statement. The only sugar-house used as a prison seems to have been Livingston’s, on Liberty St.—See 1769; 1771; Oct. 11 and 12, 1777.

Some time prior to this date, Nicholas Bayard erected a windmill on his land, the present location of which would be on the west side of the Bowery, about a half mile north of Canal St. It appears first on the Maeschel Map of 1755 (Pl. 34, Vol. I). It was still standing in July, 1776.—N. Y. Gaz., July 29, 1776; cf. Liber Mortgages, III: 97 (New York). See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 961. Before this year, Rodman’s or Burling’s Slip was again called Lyons Slip. See Pl. 34, Vol. I; see also Aug. 9, 1622; 1700; May 5, 1756; Aug. 13, 1761; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

In this year, New York Province was described as “the principal frontier against Canada,” and said to be “provided with so very strong fort in the capital, and wants some to secure the entrance of its king of this object” (see Dec. 6, 1746; April 9, 1748; July 4, and Dec. 12, 1753). These provide that, if all the 5,000 tickets are not sold by the first Tuesday in June, 1755, the money received for the tickets sold shall be returned, and the lottery shall be void.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1027. See June 30, and Aug. 14, 1755.

The legislature appoints Francis Maerschelck and Cornelius Clopper, Jr., commissioners for collecting the excise duty from retailers of liquor in New York City.—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1000-8. This act amended a previous statute appointing the mayor, recorder, and aldermen as commissioners of the excise. —See Dec. 12, 1754.

The Militia Act of Feb. 27, 1746 (g. e.), is continued by an act of the legislature, which makes this slight alteration: The former act required “that the Dress of the Troopers of the City of New York when they appear in Arms shall be Red,” but it is now enacted that their dress when under arms “shall be Blue.”—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 1016. The next complete act for regulating the militia was passed Feb. 19, 1755 (g. e.).

Gov. Shirley, having laid before Benjamin Franklin a new plan of colonial union (cf. June 19), which provided for a colonial congress and British taxation, Franklin sends letters to Shirley, on Dec. 17, 18, and 22, giving his reasons for disapproving of the plan.—Works of Benj. Franklin (Sparkes ed.), III: 56-68.

Joseph Murray, chairman of the committee of the council, appointed by Lears-Gov. De Lancey on Jan. 31 to consider the controverted boundary line between New York and New Jersey, makes an extended report to him. This was printed and sold by Parker, by order of the lieutenant-governor, 1754.—See copy in N.Y. Pub. Library.

Orders are issued by the governor and council that the ship “Neptune,” recently arrived from Rotterdam with Palatines, be removed from Rotten Row to Turtle Bay for quarantine.—Col. Coun. Min., 397.

The provincial council also orders that French subjects are to leave the city.—Ibid.

Fire breaks out in the city hall, but is without doing any damage whatever.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 13, 1754.

The council orders that cannon be lent to Gov. Shirley on his demand.—Col. Coun. Min., 397.
north-east section of New York drawn during the period 1755—7, showing the Rutgers house, the Bayonet, and De Landy estate, and many interesting topographical and other features. This drawing is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 36-a. Plate 36-b reproduces an original survey of approximately the same territory, dated Sept. 17, 1755, belonging to the N. Y. State Library.

The negroes' burial-ground, east, north of the present Chambers St., and extending to an indefinite eastern limit near the Fresh Water Pond, is first shown and named on the Maersschak Map of 1755 (Vol. I, Pl. 34). Undoubtedly, however, negroes executed near Fresh Water, in connection with the Negro Plot of 1741 (q.v.), were buried here. Later, this burial-place became a general potter's field. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927. The negroes' quarters in 1639 were on the East River opposite Blackwell's Island.—See the Manatus Map, Pl. 42 (F), and II: 207.

About this year, a block-house was erected at the southern extremity of the island, within the present limits of Battery Park, as shown on Pl. 34, Vol. I.

On the laying out of Bancker Street (now Madison Street) in 1755, the rear of the Jews' burial-ground was extended to it. When, after the Revolution, Fayette Street (now Oliver Street) was opened, that part of the burial-ground which extended across this street was taken. When, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, Chatham Square was regulated and paved, a part of the front of the burial-ground was taken. There is no absolute proof that this was the original burial-ground which was first granted to the Jews in 1656 (c.o.), but there is a likelihood that this was the site of their burial-ground in this location. There is positive proof of a purchase here in 1865 (c.o.). The burial-place was enlarged in 1729 (see Dec. 17, 1729), and thus gradually was altered in size and shape. It remained, with few material alterations, until 1823, when the congregation Shearith Israel, the Mill Street Synagogue, applied to Lord Kent for liberty to sell the part fronting on Chatham Square, 45 feet to the depth of 88 feet,—which, being granted, it was accordingly sold to the Tradesmen's Bank for $15,000. Mr. Daly says: "How or in what way this congregation obtained or could convey any title to, it does not appear."—Daly, Settlement of the Jews in N. Am. (1893), 431 see; however, on this point, Mr. Oppenheim's letters, under Dec. 17, 1739. Referring to its later history, Daly says: "Finally, a few years ago, the Bowery was extended through what remained of it, and all that is now left is the small enclosure fronting the New Bowery, before referred to." See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 927.

In this year, according to Edmund Burges, the export of flaxseed from New York Province to Ireland amounted to 13,518 bushels. He wrote that the inhabitants numbered between 80,000 and 100,000. The condition of the lower class was easy; the better class was rich and hospitable. The entrance of foreigners was resisted by a general denial of all religious persuasions.—An Account of the State of the Southern Settlements, 1760: 185.

A report states that there have been no census returns for the province of New York since 1718, but according to the best accounts the white population numbers 55,000, of whom 12,000 are capable of bearing arms. The total white population of the British Colonies in America is 165,000.—N. Y. Col. Hist., VII: 933. This statement is erroneous, as census figures exist for 1766 and 1769.—See June 4, 1766; May 10, 1749.

Walter Rutherford, in 1800, recorded that in 1775 the number of houses in New York was 2,200.—Rutherford, Family Records and Events, 198. See also the Rutherford A. B. in N. Y. Pub. Library.

In this year, Hugh Gaine printed A Catalogue of Books in History, Divinity, Law, Arts and Sciences: ... To be Sold by Garratt Noel. It was an 8vo pamphlet of 14 pages. So far as discovered by Evans (see No. 7519), it was the earliest known bookseller's cata gue printed in New York. Several earlier ones are known to have been printed in Boston and Philadelphia, the first being one of 1693 (4o. in Addenda).

When the second class in King's College was admitted, in this year, an assignat to its president, Dr. Johnston, was appointed as a fellow or tutor. This was his son, William Johnson, M. A. ( Yale). To consult the interests of the other college (Hunt of Columbia Univ. (1904), 18. The results of their labours passed under the observation of the trustees.—See Sept. 1.

The provincial council issues a proclamation calling an assembly to make provisions for driving the French from the Ohio.—

An order on Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, to John Waldron, for $472, for putting canoe and stones on board Capt. Barnes' sloop, for Boston, bears this date.—Col. H. M. S. R., Enq, 669.

The common council orders "that one Thousand Musquets fixed with a Bayonet, one Cartridge Box and a Belt for each Cartridge Box be immediately Sent for, each musket with its accoutrements not to exceed Twenty-five shillings." Alderman Oliver De Lancey's offer to lend the money for the purchase is referred to, April 1749.—M. C. C., VI: 2. 3-1. See also Aug. 7, regarding a lottery to discharge the debt.

A new Staten Island ferry was established this year. In 1748, Simon Comes had been granted the right of making his ferry a public one, with an established scale of fees. If business thus far, by his ferry did not succeed, or the city desired to secure similar advantages for itself; for, now, on Jan. 16, 1755, the common council appoints a committee to "Enquire into the proper Method for the Erecting and Establishing a ferry to and from this City to Staten Island or to any other Place."—M. C. C., VII: 4. On March 7, they reported their opinion that "the best and properest method to Let and Establish said ferry" was "to treat with those persons Living on Staten Island, who have a Grant from the Crown to Ferry from S9 Island to this City, or any other persons who Incline to treat with us, and agree to the same on reasonable terms." This committee was ordered to treat with such persons as they might think proper "for the Letting of the ferry to be Erected & Established to and from this City to Staten Island, or to any other place for a Term of Years Not Exceeding five."—Ibid., VII: 7.

An entry on Sept. 22 (c.o.), the following notice was published: "This is to give Notice, to all Gentlemen Travellers, and others, that may have occasion of having themselves, Horses, Chaises, or any other Goods, transported to or from New York, to Staten Island, that the Ferry is now continued to be kept by Orso Vain Tyle, at Staten Island, and Abraham Bockee, at the Whitehall Ship, in New York, in Company, they having three Boats, well fitted for the Purpose, for the Dispatch of Business: Any Gentleman in the City of New-York, having Occasion, may (by giving Notice to Abraham Bockee) have Boats at the Times appointed to attend."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 22, 1755. See also March 11, 1756; and "Staten Island Ferry" (from foot of Whitehall St.), in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 943. A ferry between New York and Staten Island was first established in 1715 (c.o.).

The common council orders that the new "Exchange" be let to Keen & Lightfoot, at £30 for one year, commencing Feb. 11—M. C. C., VII: 3. This firm advertised to open it on that day as a "coffee-room."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 4, 1755. This was the room over the "Exchange" proper.—See June 10, 1754; Jan. 15, 1754.

The lease was renewed to Alexander Lightfoot, on Jan. 29, 1756, at £40 a year, commencing Feb. 11.—M. C. C., VII: 47. On Jan. 25, 1757, it was renewed to Sarah Lightfoot, at the same rate, from Feb. 11 to May 1, 1757; and to Mrs. Lightfoot, from May 1, 1757, Ibid., VII: 78. For the next occupancy, see Feb. 18, 1758.

Sir Peter Warren having petitioned the common council for water lots opposite his property on the North River (M. C. C., VII: 209), it is ordered: "that the water Lots fronting the Up Lots belonging to the Heirs of St Peter Warren Deceased in the west ward of this City Lying in the North River be granted to them pursuant to ye agreement formerly made with this Corporation by Mr Richard Nicolls for and in Behalf of ye Mr Warren."—M. C. C., VII: 2. The heirs paid the city "four pence 4 ft. foot."—Ibid. VII: 15.

Parker and Weyman publish an editorial reviewing the reasons for the needed defence against the French (see May 20, 1754), and the ways and means for accomplishing it. They begin with the hypothesis: "If Prudence, watchful Prudence, be our Guide, Then every other Policy is vile and base," While they refer in general to the state of the entire province, they make the following specific reference to New York City: "If we view the Inhabitants of this City, shall we find them fully instructed in the Art of War, and able to defend unto the utmost what they have purchased with infinite Labour and expence?" Here also, whatever may be our Captivity, we shall doubtless fall short of that Perfection which the Rules of Good Discipline strictly requires. And yet unprepared as we are, against the dreadfull Day, we are loitering away our Time, regardless of those Means that are necessary to put us in a Posture of Defence. Perhaps we confide in our Numbers. Vain Confidence indeed!
An unerring Omen of impending Destruction! . . . Would our Fortifications cover us from the Fire of our Enemies? No: . . . and tho' by a continual Supply of fresh Forces, we might be able to prevent the Enemy from landing, what would secure us against the employment of fire, with which, in swift Destruction, would reduce our Houses to Ashes? . . . "A well-grounded Prospect that our Assembly will speciously compleat our Fortifications gives us Hopes . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 27, 1755.

29

The king's council in order, sir Charles Hardy is named governor of New York.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 93a-93b; Cal. Hist.
MSS., Eng., 626. For his instructions, see N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 947-96-96.

Feb.

Since the 4th of February, 1754, to the 3d of February, 1755, 488 sail of Sea Vessels, arrived at Forts New York, and during the said Time, 390 sailed from hence.—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 3, 1755.

Postmaster Alexander Coleen makes the following announcement: "It being found very inconvenient, to persons concerned in trade, that the Post from New-York to New-England, has heretofore set out but once a fortnight, during the winter season; the stages are now altered, . . . and the New-England Post is henceforth, to go once a week the year round; whereby correspondence may be carried on, and answers obtained to letters between New-York and Boston, in two weeks, which used in the winter, to require several weeks, and between Boston and New-York, three weeks, which used to require six weeks. But to obtain this good end, it is necessary, on account of the badness of the ways and weather, in winter, to dispatch the Post some hours sooner from New-York. Notice is therefore hereby given, that he begins his weekly stage on Monday next, being the 10th instant, and will be dispatched punctually at 9 o'clock in the morning, on that day, and every Monday following."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 3, 1755.

De Lancy reminds the legislature that the fortifications of New York City are in need "to be repaired, altered, or other works made." He has already applied to Gen. Braddock for an engineer. He adds that "every thing relating to the Provision of the Trade, and of Course on the Safety of this City,"—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1182. See, further, Feb. 7.

As the negroes are becoming insolent, the council orders the issuance of a proclamation for enforcing the laws against them. The militia is ordered to do guard duty in the city.—Cal. Coun. Min., 398. The proclamation prohibits the "unlawful meeting of negro slaves."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 626.

The provincial council resolves to apply to New Jersey for the erection of a beacon near Sandy Hook.—Cal. Coun. Min., 398.

The assembly resolves itself into a committee of the whole house to consider the lieutenant-governor's message of Feb. 4 on the subject of defence, in which he said, among other things: "In the First place then, the Fortifications of this City ought to be repaired, or altered, and other Works made, where the Commander in Chief, and the Council, are of the Opinion that the Assistance of the best Engineers that can be had, shall think more than the present provision, a common Safety; with this View, and in full Dependence that you will not neglect your own Security, I have already applied to General Braddock, to send an able Engineer to this Place, if one can be spared. Nothing can be more evident to a considering Man, than that the Value every Estate in the Province, depends on the Trade, and of Course on the Safety of this City, so that there is the highest Reason it should be effectually secured." The house passes a resolution expressing the opinion "that for putting the Colony into a proper Posture of Defence, and furthering his Majesty's D高新 in New-York, and one in London, to be allowed the Sum of Forty Five Thousand Pounds," for which a tax be laid on all estates, real and personal, within the colony for five years; and that bills of credit be emitted on the credit of the tax to that amount. Such a bill is therefore presented for its first reading.—I. 433-35. For description of Pl. 46A, see I. 360. The bill was passed on Feb. 19 (s. v.).

The first issue of the Mitchell Map of the "British and French Dominions in North America" bears this date. It is an official map, prepared under instructions from the lords of trade and plantations from France in 1750 (cf. Davies, Geographical Names, containing, according to Winsor, Narr. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VII: 180-81, "numerous important changes," was issued in 1754. A comparison of the two issues in the N. Y. Pub. Library reveals only one variation in the engraving: the words "British and French Dominions" are changed in later issue to "British Colonies." However, from reproductions in Cavendish's Debates in House of Fev. Commons, 1774, cited by Winsor, it is evident that an earlier 13 edition with many faults existed. The map was reissued in Paris in 1756 by Le Rouge. Accordingly, the Mitchell map was used by the peace commissioners of 1783-84 in determining the boundaries. An official copy of this map, showing the boundaries as established by the Treaty of Utrecht, and also the Description as described by Mr. Oswald, is preserved in the British Museum (Crown Collection). See litho-graphic reproduction in N. Y. Pub. Library (Div. of Maps). See also Pl. 37A, Vol. IV.

Col. Joseph Robinson of New York is ordered to place on duty at Fort George the militia under his command.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 627. The order was again issued on April 5.—Ibid., 649.

An article signed "Oppressed Common-wealth," suggesting numerous reforms in the city, is printed by Gaine. It declares: "In the last Session of General Assembly, there was an Act passed into a Law, to enable Justices of the Peace, to try Causes for Five Pounds, or under, throughout the Colony, except the Cities of New-York and Albany, and Borough of Westchester; Now I humbly conceive, that if that Law was, and will be, of Utility to the Rest of the Government, that it was, and is more wanted, and would be of greater Service to those Places which are excluded, especially to New-York, than to any other Part of the People there; I require only more Ac-ctions for such Sums than in all the Colony besides . . .

"Another Act passed at the same Time, relating to the Excise, provides, That all Retailers of strong Liquors, excepting those who sell only to be carried from their Houses, shall take Licence for that Purpose; for which they shall pay . . . only New-York and Albany, who are to pay according to Custom; which is affirmed to be 30s. by them who have Authority to grant it in New-York; and they accordingly take that Sum for each Licence, for retailing Liquors; which commonly falls on the poorer Sort of People; so that I am persuaded, that many of them do thereby pay at least one Quarter, at all they sell.

"As the above Acts are manifestly abridging the Inhabitants of New-York, Albany, and Borough of Westchester, from the Privileges enjoyed by the other Parts of the Colony; I seem to flatter myself, that the Legislature will, for the Future, take it into their Consideration, and put the excluded Places on a Fair with their fellow Subjects in the Counties . . .

"Another Custom I have observed in New-York . . . is, that those Persons who have either heretofore farmed the Excise in New-York, and they appointed for that Purpose, by the present Act, have, when they have agreed with any Farmers for the Excise, and taken his Bond for Payment, obliged him to pay 6s. for the Bond; whether that is not an unreasonable Charge, I must refer to better Judges; tho' its notorious, any Person who is capable, will write them for 18d. a Piece; . . . and as the present Farmers do not pay 5s. for their Trouble, by the Act, whether it hath not an Appositive Effect, for them to take any Thing, especially such an exorbitant Sum.

"Another Thing which is a Custom in New-York, and also a Law (a By-One of the Corporation) I've often thought of no great Benefit to the Publick, which is this; That if a Person dies, being never so poor, leaving never so necessitous and distressed a Family, he cannot be buried, without their being at the Ex pense of 18s. to some Person authorised by the Mayor, to invite People to the Funeral; nor can any Friend do it gratis, without subjecting himself to be fined 40s. if any one complains against him.

"Another, that the City Wards, there be no allowance of the Sum of Forty Five Thousand Pounds, for which a tax be levied on all estates, real and personal, within the colony for five years; and that bills of credit be emitted on the credit of the tax to that amount. Such a bill is therefore presented for its first reading.—I. 433-35. For description of Pl. 46A, see I. 360. The bill was passed on Feb. 19 (s. v.).

"The City Wards, there be no allowance of the Sum of Forty Five Thousand Pounds, for which a tax be levied on all estates, real and personal, within the colony for five years; and that bills of credit be emitted on the credit of the tax to that amount. Such a bill is therefore presented for its first reading.—I. 433-35. For description of Pl. 46A, see I. 360. The bill was passed on Feb. 19 (s. v.).

"As it is now ordered, that the Militia may keep Guard on the Fort, . . . I may judge whether it is reasonable or not, that poor Men who have nothing but their Hands to get their Living with, or a Man who is a Mechanick, and hath three or four Apprentices listed in the Trainbands, shall be obliged to attend on that Service, each of them, perhaps once a Month, or oftener, for 12 Hours, or pay his Fine for himself, and each of his Apprentices, whilst any and every Person, who have had a Commission are exempted from it: And as it’s notorious, that its common persons of Fortune on whom they are bestowed, the Consequence is, that the Good are freed from the Burthen of it. I am of Opinion, that this Method is oppressing the Poor; and must be of the Mind, that if it is necessary that the Fort should have Guard kept in it, that it will be a more equitable Method to have Persons hired for that Purpose, to be paid by a Tax, laid on the Inhabitants; as likewise for the City Watch: .

The keeping the Highway in repair, hath long been carried on by a Method something singular [see Nov. 25, 1751]: People are sent to, and warned to work on it, as often as the Overseer thinks proper. If you do not attend, you must pay $3. for some Body that will say, he was in your Room, and did it for you . . .
This is likewise compelling the poorest Housekeeper in this City, to pay as much as the richest Man in it; which, how equitable, needs no Illustration; but conceive, some Person to be hired for a certain Sum, and paid by a Tax according to Peoples Estates, must, at least, be as much so.—N. T. Merc., Feb. 17, 1755.

1755

17

Feb.

17

19

The master or mistress of every slave over 14 years of age is required, within two months after publication of this act, to deliver to the captain of the company, in the respective districts where they reside, a list of their slaves, both male and female. The captain shall list all of these slaves, indicating by name the sex and the number belonging to each owner, and shall transmit the list to the governor. In case of invasion, each captain shall appoint a detachment of his company to guard against an insurrection of the negroes. If one or more slaves, over 14 years of age, at the time of alarm or invasion, “be found at the distance of one mile or more from the Habitation or Plantation of their respective owners, without a Certificate from their respective Owners signifying the Errand or Business they are sent upon, it shall be adjudged a Felony without Benefit of Clergy in such Slave or Slaves, and it shall and may be lawful for the person or Persons finding such Slave or Slaves, at or beyond the said distance or Limits, to shoot or kill them, or to preserve or Molest, without being impeached censured or prosecuted for the same.”

In case of an alarm or invasion, “every Person, able to bear Arms, that shall leave the City or County invaded, or apparently in danger of being Invaded, without the order of the Commanding officer . . . or shall refuse to obey the just and legal Orders of his proper officer shall suffer the pains of death, by being shot at the head of the Company to which he belongs; and if he be an officer he shall be shot at the head of the Regiment, being first duly convicted by a Court Martial.”

Regulations are provided at some length for keeping “Military Watch and Ward” in certain emergencies.

This act is the first of the militia acts of the province to contain provisions relating to Quakers, “who from Religious or conscientious scruples are averse to the use of Arms.” They are not liable to greater fine than 20s for not enlisting, or for refusing or neglecting to do duty in the militia. Refusing to serve on military watch, or to send a substitute, subjects the Quaker to a fine of 30s. Provisions are enacted also to apply to the memers of the church or congregation known as “Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren,” for whose encouragement an act was passed by the parliament of Great Britain, whereby they are exempted from bearing arms or doing military service in any of the colonies, but shall make money payments in lieu of such service. This act provides the same amount of levy and penalty for them as for Quakers. Like the Quakers, also, who refuse to bear arms, they shall, in the time of alarm or invasion, “severally appear provided with one good spade, Iron shod shovel, and pick ax, and six Empty Bags, each Bag sufficient to contain two Bushels,” and shall serve as Pioneers or Laborers, or any other than Military service in such manner as shall be directed by the Governor or Commander-in Chief . . . .” The rates, penalties, fines, and forfeitures collected from the Quakers and United Brethren shall be applied toward purchasing arms and ammunition for the use of the respective cities and counties of the province. The act is to be in force for one year.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 17-28.

The enrollment of the Quakers of N. Y. City was made on May additional act, Feb. 19, 1756, was required to effect the collecting of sums levied upon the Quakers and United Brethren. The same act provided for the employment of “Outscouts or Rangers” by the military organization of Albany County.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 16-18. The enrollment of the Moravians took place on May

There was another amendment on Feb. 26, 1757, requiring (as “more safe”) that the Great Gun should be “Constantly Watched by persons particularly Appointed for that purpose,” instead of by detachments from the militia of the several counties where the beacons are. This amendment also extended the provision for the enforcement of payments by the Quakers and United Brethren. It provided that a court-martial should consist of 13 of the eldest of those who should attend to form the court-martial.—Ibid.,
IV: 178-80. For the passage of the next Militia Act, see Oct. 20, 1764.

The levying of a direct tax of £25,000 is ordered by the provincial legislature, for defences, cancellation of bills of credit, and other purposes. The sum of £50,000 is allowed to Christopher Bancker (see Jan. 14, 1774) to erect a Beacon on the Island of Fire, or upon the appearance of six or a greater Number of large Ships, which from proper Glasses they may judge to be ships of War, set fire to a like number of such pitch Barrels; and at every of the said places where Beacons are appointed to be erected, there shall be a watch kept, and the Governor or Commander-in-Chief of Gun powder, and immediately after the said Beacons shall be so set on fire, such Gun shall be discharged from each Beacon, once for every large Ship that appears in sight.” A guard or watch shall be kept at each beacon when the governor or commander-in-chief shall so order, in which case the colonels of regiments in the counties where the beacons are shall see that the order is executed by detachments of men from their regiments. These beacons are intended to spread the alarm to New Jersey and Connecticut as well as New York. In case of alarm, every soldier, on notice thereof, is “immediately to Repair Armed to his Colours or parade,” or to do duty as a Troop of Horse. The Governor, or Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty’s forces in New York City and erecting such other works as the lieuten-gant-governor or commander-in-chief shall direct (see March 10).
—Col. Laws N. Y., III: 108-50. See Feb. 4 and 21. See also Commissioners, appointed to purchase materials for fortifications, and the repair of Copsey battery, are given instructions by

Gen. Braddock arrives at Williamsburg, Va., from Ireland, 23 and takes command of the British forces.—N. T. Pest-Boy, March 17, 1755.

An order of council requires that entries in the records shall be separately kept for government affairs and those concerning private persons.—Col. Coun. Min., 399. It will be observed that, beginning on this date, this has been done.—Gf. ibid., 414.

G. Duyckinckk advertises for sale “The Plan of the City of New-York, shewing the several Ward, Streets, Squares, Lanes, and Allies, Churches, Meeting Houses, Markets, Sugar and Distilling Houses, Water Lots, with the additional New Lots . . . to this present Year. Done from an actual Survey.”—N. T. Pest-Boy, March 17, 1755. This plan is reproduced as Pl. 34, Vol. I. See also Winsor,
N. E. Hist. of Am., 4: 151-52.

The ferry at the Narrows, “commonly called Stillwell’s Ferry
[see April 5, 1740; June 18, 1755], together with the Dwelling House, Barn, Out Houses, Orchard, and Land thereunto belonging,” is to be let for five years, application to be made to Denye Denye (Van Tyle) at the Lower Ferry.—N. T. Pest-Boy, March 5, 1755.

Regarding Van Tyle’s interest and influence in water front property on Staten Island, see May 17, 1747.
The Council of Manhattan Island

1755
Parker and Weyman advertised on March 10: "Last Thursday Mar. [March 6] was published in this City, A Small new Paper, entitled, 6 The Instructor, to be continued Weekly if suitable Encourage- ment, at the reasonable Price of Two Coppers each; and with the Privilege to be printed and distributed to the End of the Year, and then return them to the Printers, they shall have One Copper a-piece back again . . ." The Design of that Paper is to communicate to the Publick Select Pieces on the Social Duties, and such Historical or Speculative Remarks as may be suitable for the Improvement of a Younger Age; which if read either in a Morning at Tea, or after Dinner, by the younger Sort, cannot fail of leaving a good Effect upon the Mind, as well as improving them in their Reading and Morals. If any Gentlemen [sic] of Taste will please to recommend any particular Pieces, all due Regard shall be paid to them in their Turn. They are printed in such a Manner, as that they may be bound up in One or more Volumes, and if kept together, may be worth preserving, especially to those who cannot readily come at the Origi- nals. . . . Occasional News will sometimes be added likewise. N. B. No Controversy of any Kind will have Admittance. Printed and sold by the Printers or [sic] of this Paper."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 10, 1755. The advertisement is repeated in ibid, March 24, showing it as "now publishing," and with the added statement: "Any Gentlemen who chance to take this Paper yearly, on sending in their Names, shall be waited on with them at their Houses." No copy of the first paper has been found.—Early Newspapers, II: 421; Brigham, "Biblio. of Am. Newspapers," in Am. Antiq. Soc. Proc. (1917), 444.

The city buys 4,000 shingles for £1.—M. C. C., VI: 5.

The messenger and door-keeper of the common council receives a quarter year's salary of £2. The public whisper's quarterly salary is £2.—M. C. C., VI: 7.

Payment is made by order of the common council for "Building a fire Engine House on a vacant Lort Commonly Called Rutgers Walk in the East ward."—M. C. C., VI: 6. Rutgers' ropewalk extended along the present Division St. from Chatham St. east to Eldridge St.—See Pls. 36-a and 42, Vol. I.

A blacksmith and a carpenter are appointed city "Engineers."—M. C. C., VI: 8. Their duties are not defined. They probably were employed in connection with the fire-engines.

Christopher Bancroft and John Dies, having been appointed managers for purchasing materials for fortifications (see Feb. 19), are to procure for the Army, timber, planks, iron, for carriages, and cannon ball. They will pay ready money, but will purchase only the best material and at the cheapest rates. Applications are to be made Tuesday and Thursday mornings at the King's Arms Tavern near the New Exchange.—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 10, 1755.

Thomas Pownall, commissioner from Massachusetts, confers with the Right Honorable at New York regarding defensive measures. It is ordered that the assembly be called to meet him in joint committee session. Announcement had been received on March 3 from Gov. Shirley regarding this proposed meeting.—Cal. Coun. Min., 414. At this meeting, which was held at the house of Edward Willet, innkeeper, on the evening of March 26, the council was represented by John Chambers, Edward Holland, and William Smith, and the assembly by Mr. Verplank, Capt. Livingston, Mr. Nicoll, Mr. Cruger, Capt. Walton, and Mr. Thoma. Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey's message to the assembly, on the morning of the 26th, is pointed out for the need of considering the subject of raising, equipping, and quartering troops, etc., "until such Time as a Plan of general Union of his Majesty's Northern Colonies for their common Defence, can be perfected, according to his Majesty's Pleasure signified to me by a Letter of the 26th of October last, from the Right Honorable Sir Isaac Carver, already laid before you." The results of the committee conference are shown in the records the next day, when they were adopted. These en- dorse a scheme of defence proposed by Gov. Shirley, and contain a resolution "That this Colony join therein if the General appointed by the Kings Majesty to command the Forces in North-America, approves of the said Scheme."—Assemb. Jour., 415.

Thomas Pownall's rise in official life in America is reviewed in Wilson's Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 294 (with portrait, 293); see also Oct. 29, 1753; Jan. 5, 1758.

Scarrowyd, a Delaware sachem or half-king of the Indians on the Ohio, while in attendance at the provincial council in New York City, reports on his visit to the Six Nations, and Gov. De Lancey makes reply. On May 13, the council issued a warrant to pay Adam vacoll, a carpenter, for work done, and for the money which and his companion at his tavern.—Cal. Coun. Min., 415, 416.

A proclamation is issued offering a reward for the discovery of the persons who plundered the house of James Alexander, in New York.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 628. The published proclama- tion reveals a burglary of a value far greater than £200 of gold, silver, and paper money. It offers "his Majesty's most gracious Pardon" to any accomplice who shall "discover" the person or persons guilty. In a newspaper notice, Alexander offers a reward of £50 on convic- tion, "out of the Money recovered."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 14, 1755.

Trinity vestry agrees "with Christian Stouyer That he have a Lease of the Ground formerly Leased to Arthur Wilkinson being to the Northward of Elias De Gruches Rope Walk [see May 25, 1755] & between that & the Stockades and to contain Fifty feet in Breadth & Six hundred feet in Length along the Said Rope Walk for the Term of Twenty one Years from the 25th Instant by paying Twelve pounds £12 Annum with a Covenant that if this Board within the Term Shall think fit to Open Church Street through the Said Land that then for that time he shall only hold the Land from the Broadway to Church Street & pay only Eight pounds £8 Annum for the same Annum."—Cal. Coun. Min., 415. Trinity vestry appoints "a Committee to have Lamps put up before the Church in such Manner as they shall think proper not Exceeding the Number of three."—Trin. Min. (MS.).

"To be Lett, For a term of years, in lots of 25 feet each, with half the depth of the land behind each front, from street to street, for yard room, and a garden. The person who builds, to build an house pursuant to the articles allowed by Trinity-Church, to the tenants on said church farm. Any person inclining to hire any lot or lots on the premises, commonly called the Vineyard, adja- cent to Spring Garden, may apply to Col. Thomas Dongan, on Staten-Island; or Mr. John Charleton, at Dr. Farquhar's, in New-York."—N. Y. Merc., March 24, 1755. Regarding the location of, and title to, the Vineyard, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 346.

The assembly adopts a resolution "that the Barracks in Fort- George, at the foot of the hill, be repaired, and such others erected, as may be necessary for accommodating such of his Majesty's Troops as may be posted in this Colony," also that an address be presented to the lieutenant-governor, "that he will be pleased to give Directions" for this purpose, the expenses to be paid out of the £5,000 "lending in the Treasury for such Serv- ices . . ."—Assemb. Jour., II: 439. The law of Sept. 21, 1744 (g.v.), provided for the rebuilding of the barracks in the north- west part of the fort. Maerschalck's Map (1755) shows no other barracks than those in the fort (see Pl. 34, Vol. I), and Smith, in his Hist. Province of N. Y., refers only to barracks in the fort. In 1757, however, new ones were erected on the Commons.—See Oct. 19 and 31, 1757.

Dr. Johnson writes to Venet, in his 1759 letter to "the students of the College" are "had enough," through the "good-for-nothing man- agers! of our chairman [the reading at this point is doubtful, who is every day so overwhelmed with work & c. &c. as to be hardly capable of other Business, much less of ye Coll. so that nothing has been done yet, more than was said; He has indeed been infinitely to blame, & has made himself thoroughly ashamed of ye College, & work done while it might with ease, notwithstanding the Opposition. But as things have been of late, & are, & like to continue, on Acc' of our Danger & the Affairs in view, we cannot blame him as to Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, 1: 95-96, and authorities cited.

The news of Sir Charles Hardy's appointment as governor reaches New York by letter from London.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 14, 1755. The official notification from John Pownall, secretary of the board of trade, apparently, did not reach the governor and council, until May 29.—Cal. Coun. Min., 416.

The council issues a warrant to John Dower, for lumber for the barracks, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng, 669.

"Two Dwelling Houses, a Kitchen and a Stable, on the Church Farm, adjoining Mr. Kuyckick's," are offered for sale, on a lease from Trinity Church of which 18 years still remain.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 21, 1755. From other advertisements, it seems that Kuyckick's house was on Broadway south of Warren St. (see Apr. 5, 1755), and the two houses advertised were probably on Broadway and Robinson St. In 1762, these same houses, which had been acquired by John Dower, were again advertised for sale. One of them was at this time a tavern, having the Sign of King George III.—See Jan. 25, 1762.

Gov. De Lancey returns from Annapolis (see April 6).—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 14, 1755. The council of war, composed of colonial governors, which was held at Alexandria, Va., having met, repeated, that the garrison at Oswego be re-enforced, an order to that effect is given by the provincial council of New York—Cal. Coun. Min., 415. See also April 29. A warrant was issued on July 10 to reimburse De Lancey for his expenses on his journey to Virginia.—Ibid., 418.

In this council, three expeditions were planned against the French: against Fort Duquesne; against Fort Niagara; and against the fort at Crown Point.

An account of John Dows' for materials for beacons, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng, 668.

A French dancing-master from the lieutenant-governor of Halifax, Col. Lawrence, on April 6, accused of being a spy, is arrested and jailed in New York.—Cal. Coun. Min., 415.

To provide for military preparations, the provincial council advises the governor to assent to a further emission of bills of credit.—Ibid.

Gov. William Shirley of Massachusetts Bay, and Lieut.-Gov. Robert Hunter Morris, of Pennsylvania, arrive soon after noon from the "Westward" (Annapolis, Alexandria, and Philadelphia, April 3).—See April 13. "They landed at Whitehall . . . , under the Discharge of the Cannon in Fort-George; and were welcomed ashore by his Honour Governoer De Lancey, the Members of his Majesty's Council, and other of the principal Gentlemen of this City. The City Militia was ordered to muster . . . , and the Streets were lin'd with the Men on their Rest, while his Excellency and the Gentlemen pass'd on into the Fort, where his Majesty's, and all the loyal Healths, with Success to the English American Enterprizes, being first drank, they proceeded, through the Line still formed by the Militia, to the New-York Arms in the Broadway, where an handsome Entertainment was provided . . . , and where the aforesaid Healths were repeated, and went round with great Cheerfulness and Alacrity. The Militia was discharaged between two and Three in the Afternoon . . . ; the Doors, Windows, Balconies, and the Tops of the Houses, being particu- larly decorated with Red-Clacks, &c. added no small Beauty to the same, and Diversion of the Time." Gov. Shirley left for Boston on May 3.—N. T. Post-Boy, May 5, 1755. The "New-York Arms" was the Province Arms, at the present No. 115 Broadway, kept by Edward Willett.—Landmark Map Ref. Rey, III. 377.

A horse-race is advertised to be held on this May day "round the Beaver Pond in Jamaica, on Long-Island," the horses to be entered the day before with John Comis.—N. T. Post-Boy, March 24, 1755.

The provincial council issues a warrant to John Dower as part payment for expenses in building bateaux.—Cal. Coun. Min., 415. A similar warrant was issued on Dec. 6.—Ibid., 424.
A provincial statute is passed "for impressing Ship Carpenters
May House Carpenters Joiners Sawyers and their Servants and all 3 other Artificers and Labourers for the Building of Battoes." (For similar action during King George's War, see June 13, 1746.) But such persons, living in the city and county of New York are not liable to impressment for service outside the county.—Cal.
Lews N. Y. Ill: 1901-96.

The initial steps are taken to establish a quarantine at Bedloe's Island. It is enacted by the general assembly that "all Vessels having the small Pox Yellow fever or other Contagious Distemper on board and all Persons Goods and Merchandizes Whosoever coming or imported in Such Vessels and all Vessels coming from any place infected with such Distempers Shall not come into any the Ports or Harbours of this City or Nearer the Same City than the Island Commonly called Bedloe's Island [see June 8, 1758], And shall be obliged to make their Quarantine there."—Cal. Lews N. Y. Ill: 1071-73. This act was to remain in force for one year only. For its revival, see March 24, 1758, when the administration of the quarantine was transferred from city to province. See also June 28, 1758.

On May 6 a proclamation was issued ordering that quarantine regulations be observed.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Essay 633. On May 25, John Baird, a surgeon of New York, was appointed to examine all vessels suspected of having any contagious diseases on board.—Ibid., 634. An explanatory act was passed on Sept. 11 (q.v.). Bedloe's Island was later purchased as a site for a pest-house.—See Oct. 19, 1756.

The news is published in New York that the Hon. William Johnson (one of the council of this province), who left New York for Albany on May 4, has been appointed by Gov. William Shirley, of Massachusetts, to be "Major General and Commander in Chief of the American Forces to be employed in an Expedition to the Northward: As also of such Indians as shall assiss his Majesty in the said business."—Ibid., May 5, 1755.

J. Belcher, A. M., "Vice of Barton, in the County of Cambridge, and Chaplain of His Majesty's Ship the Norwich," proposes the publication, by subscription, of a work to be printed in a quarto volume, "upon a Demi-royal Paper, and new Letter" dealing with the provinces of New York, the Jerseys, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia. The price of the book is to be one pound, and delivery is to be made in the spring of 1756.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 5, 1755. No copy of this work is known to bibliographers.

The governor and council order that bastions "be built between cosy and Flat Rock batteries." John Dies is directed to inspect the maintenance with fortifications of any bastion made. A proclamation is issued to enforce quarantine measures.—Cal. Coun. Min. 416. See May 29. For earlier references to Copyee battery, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 946.

The first meeting of the governess of King's College is held, "at the Glazier's Arms" (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977), the deputy-secretary of the province being present, with "his Majesty's Royal Charter of Incorporation," Lient.-Gov. De Lancey orders that it be read; and "after having addressed himself to the Governors, in a very affectionate, geueld and suitable Manner upon the Occasion," delivers the charter to them. They are then "qualified to execute the important Trust reposed in them, by taking the Oaths to the Government, and that of Office, and subscribing the Declaration as prescribed by the Charter, before the honourable Daniel Hennamond, Esq; one of his Majesty's Justices of the peace; and Doctor Strickland, a Justice of the Supreme Court of Judicature. . . . The governors "returned his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, their most grateful Acknowledgments for the Honour he had been pleased to confer on them in their Appointment, and hoped their Conduct as Governors of that Corporation, would always merit the Continuance of his Honour's Patronage, Favour and Consideration; and convince the World, they had nothing more at Heart than to promote the Glory of God, the true Protestant Religion, and the generous Education of our Youth in the Liberal Arts, and Sciences; and that they doubted not but it would please God to bless and prosper their Undertakings therein."—Ibid., May 12, 1755.

At this meeting of the governesses, there is unanimously adopted a proposal of the Rev. Joannes Ritzema, senior minister of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, and one of the governors named in the college charter, asking for an additional May charter.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 1, See, further, May 19 and 30, June 3.

Gen. Braddock having advanced through Virginia arrives at West Creek (Fort Cumberland). Here he assembled his force of 2,200 men, and refused the aid of Indian scouts and frontiersmen, believing he had experienced troops on whom he could rely for all purposes. On June 10, he set out from Fort Cumberland to attack the French at Fort Duquesne.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 106-104, and authorities there cited. For the disastrous result, see July 9.

The draft of a grant of the land (part of the Queen's Farm) from Trinity corporation to the governors of King's College (see March 5, 1754; May 14, 1754) is produced at the vestry meeting; also "the Engraowed Deed." The vestry orders that the seal be affixed, and that the rector and churchwardens deliver the grant to the governors of the college at their next meetings.—Trin. Min. (M.S.). This they did the next day (q.v.). See also Aug. 19, 1762.

A contributor to the Mercury writes: "About fourteen Months ago [see April 6, 1754], a Number of Gentlemen in this City, sensible that the good People of the Province, thro' an inveterate Habit, of suffering others to think for them, had often been duped by the perfidious Arts of designing Politicians, set on foot a Subscription for a public Library: Well judging that an Acquaintance with Books, would tend to this end, they undertook to execute Subjects. A Design so disinterested, one would think could never have umbrage, to the most flaming Parissians unless to one, whose partial Prospects terminate, in the total Extinction of human Knowledge. Such however, was the Case. No sooner were the Subscriptions compleat, and a Day appointed for the Election of Trustees, than a dirty Scheme was concerted, for excluding as many English Presbyterians as possible, from the Trusteeship: concerted, not by Trinity Church in this City; but by some of her unworthy Members . . . This Scheme a certain Gentleman in this Province, undertook to execute; and by his Emassaries dispersed among the Subscribers, a Number of Copies of such a List of Trustees, as best suited his known Humour and Inclination, and advised many of them, carefully to avoid electing any Presbyterians to the Trusteeship. Strongly propossessed in favour of his own judicious Choice, the good Man, doubtless expected it would be submitted to, by many of the Subscribers, with a most obsequious Deference. How well his Expectations were answered, the Event of that Election, will best determine. Thus much however is certain, that in spite of his utmost Efforts, the Subscribers were so obstinately impartial, as to chuse Persons who, from their private Views, they inferred, would conform to the Principles of that of the Church of England, as near their Liberty, and in forming a proper Collection of Books."—N. Y. Merc, May 12, 1755.

This being the second Tuesday in May, the day appointed in the charter of King's College for the annual meeting of its governors, they meet again at "the New-York Arms" (see May 7). It was proposed, by the Board of Trustees, that such as were nominated, were not qualified at the last meeting (see May 7), might be qualified if they were pleased to attend on this day.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 12, 1755.

At this meeting, the corporation of Trinity Church (see May 12) convokes to the college governors, in fee, "for & in consideration of the sum of tea shillings, . . . all that certain piece or parcel of ground situate, lying & being on the West side of the Broadway in the West ward of the City of New York fronting easterly to the West Street between the ten and twenty-fourth line of survey and twenty-fourth line of enumeration running from the beginning forty and forty foot and from thence running westerly between and along the said Barclay street and Murray street four hundred and forty foot and from thence running westerly between and along the said Barclay street and Murray street to the North River." These streets were only projected at this time; they were laid out several years later.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, Vol. III, under "Streets." The value of the land is placed at $20,000. Rewards of Gymn.—Assem. Jour., III: 447. The "express condition" of the grant is that "the President of the said College forever for the time being shall be Member of and in communion with the Church of England as by law established & that the Morning and Evening Service in the said College be the Liturgy ordain'd in the said Church, or such other as shall be agreed upon & approved of by the President and Governors of the said College."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 11; cf. May 14, also the charter of Oct. 51, 1754.
CHRONOLOGY : THE ENGLISH PERIOD : 1664-1763

May 30

At this meeting, a committee is appointed to prepare devices and inscriptions for the college seal, also to make "Laws and other regulations for the College."—See letter of May 14 from Dr. Johnson to his son in Johnson Papers (MS), and Rec. of Trustees (MS), Vol. I. Both the seal and the laws were adopted by the governors on June 4 (p. v.). For the design of the seal as adopted, see Dr. Johnson, see Aug. 9, 1754 — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 667. See the Militia Act of Feb. 19.

17 The provincial council receives the act of parliament which provides punishment for mutiny and desertion; also a royal order to increase the regiments of Sir Peter Halket, Col. Dunbar, and the Nova Scotia regiments to 1,000 men each, to assemble to provide the means. Gov. Fitch agrees that New York may raise 500 men in Connecticut.—Cal. Coun. Min., 416.

19 The council issues a favourable order on a petition from the governors of King's College for an additional charter, enabling them to appoint a Dutch professor of divinity.—Cal. Coun. Min., 399. See May 30.

Sir William Pepperrell, colonel of the 51st Regiment, quartered in New York, arrives here.—N. Y. Post-Bay, May 26, 1755. On June 7 (p. v.), Sir William, "who commanded the Forces at the Reduction of Louisbourg" (see June 17, 1755), received a commission as major-general.

M. Jean Sylvestre and his wife, French deserters who have fled from Canada, are examined before the governor's council. They give an account of an expedition sent by the French to Detroit and other places on the Ohio, and much information relative to the military strength of the French in Canada and elsewhere.—William Henkels' (Phila.) catalogue of Oct. 22, 1749, offering for sale (item No. 401) a copy of the record of examination, signed by "Geo. Banyon" (error for Goldsborough Banyer), clerk. See also Cal. Coun. Min., 416.

Directions are given by the provincial council to construct the mizzen of the batteries in New York of white ceder wood; and to finish the north line, and also "the line from Hunt's within the Half Moon battery."—Cal. Coun. Min., 417.

An account of Nicholas Stullwell, for erecting beacon-poles at Gravesend, L. I.; also one of Goelet & Curriculum, for hardware for the same purpose.—Cal. Coun. Min., 417, 418. See May 30.

The draft of an additional charter for King's College, enabling its governors to appoint a Dutch professor of divinity, is submitted to the provincial council (probably by the attorney-general), and approved.—Cal. Coun. Min., 399. As appears by the printed copy of this charter (see June 5), it bears this date, at which time it was signed and sealed.

It is given, as was the first charter (see Oct. 31, 1754), in the name of the king. It's preamble outlines the petition to Lieut-Gov. De Lancy from the governors (see May 7 and 19), which sets forth "that although by Our Letters Patent of Incorporation, bearing Date the Thirty First Day of October last past [p. 204], the sole Power of electing Professors in said College, is vested in the said Governors: Yet the said Petitioners humbly conceived, that it would tend to the Prosperity of the College, and the Increase of the Number of Students, if Provision could be made for establishing a Professorship in Divinity in the same, for the Instruction of such Youth as may intend to devote themselves to the sacred Ministry, in those Churches in this Province that are in Congregational Union, and conform to the Doctrine, Discipline and Worship established in the United Provinces, by the National Synod of Dort in the Year 1618," etc. See the added statement that "in a list of the 'Benefactors to King's College' it is stated that 'Mr. George Harison presented us with the Engraving of the Seal which cost 10 Guineas.'" See further, July 26.

At this meeting, the governors adopt a device, prepared by President Johnson (see May 13), for the college seal. The same device, with only a necessary alteration in the name, continues to this day that of Columbia University. For detailed description and explanation of this device, see ibid., 19-20, where it is found. It is said that such Youth as may intend to devote themselves to the sacred Ministry, in those Churches in this Province that are in Congregational Union, and conform to the Doctrine, Discipline and Worship established in the United Provinces, by the National Synod of Dort in the Year 1618," etc. See the added statement that "in a list of the 'Benefactors to King's College' it is stated that 'Mr. George Harison presented us with the Engraving of the Seal which cost 10 Guineas.'" See further, July 26.

At this meeting, the "Laws and Orders of the College of New York" are adopted. They relate to admission, instruction, public worship, moral behaviour, behaviour towards authority and superiors, college exercises, and due attendance. These are printed in full in ibid., Appendix B. They were superseded by a "Plan of Education," adopted by the board of governors on March 6, 1765, which is also printed in ibid., Appendix B.

The provincial council records its opinion concerning an application from the engineer of the Crown Point expedition, Capt. William Eyre, for more artillery.—Cal. Coun. Min., 417.

William Wamsley is paid £25,810 for repairing the barracks and magazine in Fort George; and Benjamin Haldreth is paid £31,419 for fuel for Sir Wm. Pepperrell's regiment, encamped on May 30.
Nutter (Governor's Island).—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng, 667, 668.

Later accounts for straw for this regiment, bear dates of Aug. 23 and 28.—Ibid.

The provincial council orders that the additional charter for King's College (see May 30) be printed.—Cal. Coun. Min. 399, 417,—and consists of only two pages. A title-page, doubtless it was promptly produced. It's title-page reads: The Additional Charter Granted to the Governors of the College of New-York, in America. Published by Order of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, in Council. New-York: Printed and Sold by J. Park, and W. Weyman, at the New Printing-office in Beaver-Street, MDCCCLV. For its contents, see May 30.

Cannon are returned from Boston.—Cal. Coun. Min. 417.

The provincial council refers to the proper authorities an account of charges for repairing the barracks in Fort George; and, on June 12, an account for erecting beacons.—Cal. Coun. Min. 417.

Sir William Pepperrell, Baronet, who commanded the Forces at the Reduction of Louisbourg, "receives a Commission as Major General in His Majesty's Army." The news report adds: "and we doubt not will again distinguish himself in the intended Attack upon the French Encroachments on our Frontiers; his Regiment being about 700 strong, all pickt Men, great Part of them already on Duty."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1755.

Benjamin Watson is paid for carrying ten empty tar barrels (for beacons) to Col. Stillwell at Gravesend.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng, 616.

In a petition to the assembly, "sundry of the Governors" of King's College ask that a bill be passed "in order to vest in the Petitioners for the Uses aforesaid [as stated in the college charters], the several Sums of Money, so as aforesaid paid, by publick Lottery and the Duty on Excise, with the Increase or Profit arisen thereby, and also grant unto them, such further and other Assistance and Encouragement, the better to enable them to carry on the useful Work aforesaid, as to the honourable House shall seem reasonable and consistent with the publick Good." Consideration of the petition is postponed until after September first.—Assem. Jour. III, 446-47. The subject awakened opposition, and was not presented again in the assembly until Dec. 18 (q.v.). See also comments under June 28, July 5 and 16.

Philip Schuyler and John de Peyster are appointed commissary and paymaster of the New York troops, in place of Philip Verplanck, who died, to serve.—Cal. Coun. Min. 417.

The provincial council receives an address from the Moravians, relative to their exemption from military service, and charging that this has not been observed by the local authorities; it is referred to the latter.—Cal. Coun. Min. 417.

Plans are to be erected at Albany, Schenectady, and Kinderhook, together with Philip Verplanck's account for making these plans, are referred to the assembly by the council (sitting at New York).—Cal. Coun. Min. 417-18. Verplanck had received orders on March 3 to view the grounds and make the plans.—Ibid., 416. A warrant was issued on July 10 to pay him for his services.—Ibid., 418.

Two hundred of the soldiers belonging to Major-Gen. Pepperrell's regiment, who were encamped on Governor's Island, embark on a sloop for Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 26, 1755.

Several transports, having Boston, Rhode-Island, and other forces on board, have arrived at New York during the last week, and sailed for Albany.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 23, 1755. On this day, 20 transports arrive from Providence. On June 24, 100 others arrived, having on board Gov. Shirley's regiment, and the Rhode Island forces, and all "weigh'd Anchor for Albany."—Ibid., June 25, 1755. See also July 1.

Writing to the Rev. Chauncey Graham at Fish Kill, William Smith, concerning his account of the maps and books relative to the college. He says that "on the 12th Instant [q.v.] the Governors appointed by the late Charter, presented a Petition to the Assembly, to pass a Bill for confirming their Establishment, and vesting them, with the public Monies that have been raised for a free College—The Dissenting Interest was now in eminent Danger, for (1) There was but a thin House, and several of the Members who were absent, would have been with us (2) Some of the Members had been appointed Governors by the Charter, and (3) as the Church Party knew that the strength of the House, and of the Opposition, consisted in the Dissatisfaction of the Dutch, it was given out that a New Charter, had been passed for Granting a Divinity Professor, in order to pull them asleep. Under these melancholy prospects, we resolved, that the next Expedition we could undertake would be to postpone the Consideration of the Church Petition, imagining that some of the Members, who would have been against us upon a Decisive Vote, out of fear of their Constituents, would be glad of an Opportunity, to put off the Matter... Cornel carried a Motion for postponing the consideration of the Church Petition, till after Sep' next... Universal Joy possessed every Breast upon this occasion, for the Dutch, after having with great Difficulty got a sight of the Charter, found it an idle Business, that gave with One Hand, & took away with the other... But what most conduced to the satisfaction of the People, upon this disappointment of the Church Project, arose from their Prospects (1) That Gov'r Hardy will probably arrive in a few Days, and according to Custon, Dissolve the Assembly, and give thereby the People a new Election, which it is hoped, they will carefully improve by a proper Choice of Representatives, for their perpetual security against any future Abuses in the Government. (2) If there should not be a Dissolution, every County, 'tis hoped, will petition the Assembly, and thereby intimidate them from ever granting the Prayer of the Petition."—From an original draft among the Hm. Smith MSS., folio 189. On July 26, Smith sent the same information to "Delt Van Bright at Tappan."—Ibid.

"Whereas the late Lottery Act [see Dec. 7, 1754], for raising 30 a certain sum towards founding a College, being expired by its own Limitation of Time, and no further Provision made for continuing the same: This is to give Notice to all Persons that have purchased Tickets of the Managers, Abraham Van Wyck and Abraham Loyalson, that on the Return of said Tickets, they shall be repaid the Monies by them paid for the same."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 30, 1755. The act of Dec. 7 was, however, revived by another act on Aug. 14 (q.v.), which, while cancelling and repaying the old tickets, diverted to a new and different object the money then to be raised.

Choice Newbern tar is offered for sale by Thomas Vatar "at the still-House behind the Old English Church, or at his Dwelling House near Alderman Cortlandts."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 30, 1755. The ground on which this still-house stood appears on A.P. 516, Vols., General Assembly, That he will use his Endeavors for the obtaining the Charter for establishing the College, with the Exclusion of all Professions (but those of the Church of England) from being President; These may serve to shew, that we have had great Opportunities to know his Sentiments in this Affair, and never have observed or discovered, in any one Instance, his Application or Interest, in the two other Sections in the Form and Manner it now is, touching the Limitation aforesaid; but, on the Contrary, have often seen him shew his dislike thereto, and heard him declare his Opinion against it.

Gen. Shirley returns from Boston, in "the Province Sloop of the Massachusetts-Bay." See also April 29. He embarked for Albany on this sloop on July 3, "being conducted to the Water Side, by his Honour Governor Delancy, most of the Members of his Majesty's Council, and Abraham Van Wyck and Abraham Loyalson, that on the Return of said Tickets, they shall be repaid the Monies by them paid for the same."—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 30, 1755. The ground on which this still-house stood appears on A.P. 516, Vols., General Assembly, That he will use his Endeavors for the obtaining the Charter for establishing the College, with the Exclusion of all Professions (but those of the Church of England) from being President; These may serve to shew, that we have had great Opportunities to know his Sentiments in this Affair, and never have observed or discovered, in any one Instance, his Application or Interest, in the two other Sections in the Form and Manner it now is, touching the Limitation aforesaid; but, on the Contrary, have often seen him shew his dislike thereto, and heard him declare his Opinion against it.

The feeling of opposition and resentment over the passage of the King's College charter is reflected in the following published declaration:

"Whereas it has been reported to the Reproach and Prejudice of David Jones, Esq; Speaker of the General Assembly, That he used his Endeavors for the obtaining the Charter for establishing the College, with the Exclusion of all Professions (but those of the Church of England) from being President; These may serve to shew, that we have had great Opportunities to know his Sentiments in this Affair, and never have observed or discovered, in any one Instance, his Application or Interest, in the two other Sections in the Form and Manner it now is, touching the Limitation aforesaid; but, on the Contrary, have often seen him shew his dislike thereto, and heard him declare his Opinion against it.

"the Hon. Walton.

"the Hon. Jones.

"the Hon. Lott.

"the Hon. Nickoll.

"the Hon. Colby.

"the Hon. Williams.

"the Hon. Smith.

"the Hon. Peter.

"the Hon. Jacobus.
One Richard Aldridge, sentenced for horse stealing, is pardoned on condition of his enlisting as a soldier.—Cal. Coun. Min., 418.

The provincial council prohibits the exportation of provisions. The next day an exception was made in the case of vessels laden with provisions and bound for Halifax, Annapolis, or Chignecto, in Nova Scotia.—Cal. Coun. Min., 418, 419. See also May 24, 1755.

Writing to “Dom. Van Bryant” of Tappan, William Smith says, in part: “The Charter [of the college] I suppose you have seen, its Partiality and the Designs of it doubtless you detest. . . . As the Dutch Church of New York petitioned the General Assembly for a Professor the Advocate for a party College fearing the powerful Opposition of the Dutch might render their Scheme Abortive it was thought proper a Month or two ago to pass a New Additional Charter to grant a Professor . . .” He says that a copy of this additional charter could not be obtained “at the public office” until June 12 (q.v.), when the college governors “petitioned the Assembly to confirm the Charters by a Law to deliver over into their Hands the Monies which had been raised for a free College. A copy of the second Charter was then procured, and the Reason for Concealing it [is] now evident to all for (1) it appointed No Salary for the Dutch Professor. (2) It subjected him to attend upon the service of the Lieutenancy of the Church of England (3) He was subordinate to the Governors of the College A vast Majority of whom were and always would be Episcopalians and (4) They had the absolute Power of expelling him at their Pleasure . . .” From the original draft with Smith MSS., folio 159.

The provincial council receives a letter from Robert Orme, Gen. Braddock’s aide, announcing the general’s death in the action on the banks of the Monongahela on July 9.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419. An account of this disaster to British arms was published in the N. Y. Post-Buy of Aug. 4, 1755.

Sir Thomas Robinson informs the provincial council that Admiral Boscawen or Commodore Keppel may be called upon if necessary for naval assistance. Admiral Boscawen writes about the movements of his fleet.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

The council issues a warrant to pay James Parker for printing bills of credit.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

A letter, received by the provincial council from Gen. William Johnson, expresses fears of the bad effect upon the Indians due to Braddock’s defeat.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

The provincial council orders that the wall from the east line of the battery along the Great west side of Whitehill Slab be continued.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

A proclamation is issued for a day of fasting, on account of Gen. Braddock’s defeat.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 641; N. Y. Post-Buy, Aug. 11, 1755.

A proclamation is issued offering a reward of £25 for the discovery of the person or persons who broke open the consistory room of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, and stole “about Sixty Pounds in Silver, Paper, and Copper Money.”—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 641; N. Y. Post-Buy, Aug. 6, 1755.

A petition to the general assembly is drafted by order of the common council, reckoning that the corporation is very much in debt, but, “being apprehensive of a Warr with France,” they have sent to England (see Jan. 16) for a thousand stand of arms, “in order to furnish Those who have not Arms of their Own in case of an Attack from the Enemy;” and that these arms will cost the city more than £2,000, a sum which “the Corporation cannot Raine without the utmost Difficulty and Indangering the Interest of the Corporation.” They therefore ask that, “as the Late Act for a Lottery [for a further provision towards founding a college] is now Expired by its own Limitations,” the assembly will pass a bill in favour of the said “Lottery on the Same Terms and According to the provisions in the said Late Act,” for raising a sum to pay for the arms recently ordered.—M. C. C., VI: 19-20, 21.

This was done on Aug. 14 (q.v.).

On Aug. 18, bonds were executed by the mayor to Oliver de Lancey and John Watts for £700, each payable on the 4th of June following, with interest at 7% from the 4th of last June.
On the same day the common council appointed a committee to "receive forty Cents Two Cases and three Casks of sundry Arms &c. Imported in the Ship Irene Nicholas Garrison Commander from England, being the thousand Stand Arms sent for, by Mens? Watts & De Lancessy for this Corporation, and that the said Corps of the said Arms be carefully put up in the Common Council Chamber and such other parts of the City Hall as the said Committee shall think proper."—Ibid., VII, 21: 21, 22, 54. On Sept. 29, Capt. Garrison was paid $55 for the freight on these Arms.—Ibid., VII, 50. See, further, Jan. 15, 1757.

The snow "Irene," from London, with small-pox on board, is quarantined at Beddes Island.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419. On Sept. 15, it was allowed to come up to the city and unload.—Ibid., 421.

An act is passed "to revive" the lottery act of Dec. 1754 (p. 59), which expired of its own limitation on the first Tuesday in June (see June 30), and which was intended to raise £4,155 "for a further provision towards founding a College ..." This reviving act, however, contains the following important alteration: "Whereas the Mayor Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York by their humble Petition have Prayed that they may have leave to raise by a publick Lottery a Sum of Money to be Appropriated and Applied towards Payment of the Debts due and owing by them Occasioned by their Sending for one Thousand Stand Arms in order to furnish their Poor Inhabitants with in case of Invasion Insurrection or other Extirpation, the old act is continued, to remain in full force until the last Tuesday in November, and the 15 per cent. to be deducted "upon the whole Number of Fortunate Tickets" is ordered paid by the lottery managers to the mayor, etc., of the city, instead of to the trustees of the college, to be applied by the mayor, etc., towards paying "The Debt by them Contracted for the raising stated sums to pay the necessary expenses of the lottery.—Cal. Laws N. T., III: 1127. The details of this lottery are more fully explained in an advertisement in N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 18, 1755; see also editorial reference to it in ibid., Nov. 23, 1755, and the results of the drawing in ibid., Dec. 15, 1755.

The Rhode Island committee of war applies to the New York council for permission to export flour from New York, which had been prohibited on July 29.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419. Such permission was given on Aug. 28 and Oct. 10, on application by Gov. Houblon, but a simultaneous motion of Nicholas of that colony, on Aug. 29, was refused.—Ibid., 420, 422.

Massachusetts, the council is informed, will raise 800 men for the Crown Point expedition.—Cal. Coun. Min., 419.

Lewis Evans advertiseth: "Just published, A General Map of the Middle British Colonies, in America, New-Jersey, New-York, Connecticut, and Rhode-Island, the Country of the Confederacy Indians, &c." He states that "This map includes all the Country depending on the English and French Passages to Ohio, Niagara, Oswego, and Crown-Point. With the colour'd ones will be given a Pamphlet of four large Sheets and a Hall, containing, An Analysis of the Map, and Description of the Face of the Country, ... The Price of the plain Maps, on Printing Paper, is One Piece of Eight. And the colour'd ones, on superfine Writing Paper, and Pamphlet, Two Pieces of Eight. To be sold in Philadelphia by the Author in Arch Street, and in New York at the Post-Office, and by Gov. Howland, in Wall Street, near Broadway.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 25, 1755. Cf. March 6, and 13, 1759.

The trustees of the "New-York College" (King's College) visit and examine the pupils who are "under the Care of the Revd. Dr. Johnson," and are "mighty well pleased with the Proficiency they have made both in Latin and Greek.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 1, 1755.

Mrs. Van der Bil, a nurse on Beddes Island, is granted permission by the provincial council to return to Staten Island.—Cal. Coun. Min., 420.

Sir Charles Haldy, the new governor, arrives on board H. M. S. "Sphinx," nine weeks from Portsmouth. He remains on board over night.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1755. See Sept. 3.

Gov. Hardy lands at Whitehall from the barg of the "Sphinx," under "the Discharge of her Cannon," and is received by the lieutenant-governor, De Lancessy, the members of the council and general assembly, the mayor and common council, the clergy, and "all the Gentlemen of the Town." A royal salute from Fort George is given, and the governor is conducted there by line of publick.

After the usual ceremonies, he was conducted to the city hall, where his commission was published (Assign. Jour., II: 437) "with the Acclamations of the People." He returned to the fort, and received the compliments of the officers and citizens then present to the City Arms, where he dined, on invitation of the lieutenant-governor, with these gentlemen. At night, "the Windows in the City were ornamented with Lights, and two large Bonfires erected on the Commons; where several Hampers of good old Madera (which prov'd brisker than bottled Ale) were given to the Populace, and where Sir Charles's Presence, about Eight o'clock in the Evening, clos'd the joyful and merry Proceedings ..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 8, 1755; N. Y. Col. Docs., VII, 999; Cal. Coun. Min., 430. The "City Arms" was the Province Arms or New York Arms Tavern, kept by Edward Willett, at the present 115 Broadway.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977.

Gov. Hardy writes a circular letter to the several governors, notifying them of his arrival at New York, and his appointment as governor, etc.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 643.

Gov. Hardy finds that smuggling is practised, and takes action to prevent it.—Ibid., 643. The common council appoints a committee "to prepare the Draft of an Address to his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy Knight &c on his Safe Arrivial to This his Government."—M. C. G., VII: 24. The draft of it was read at the next meeting (Sept. 8) and approved; and "the Draft of a freedman" was also agreed upon. The engrossed copies were presented to the new governor on Sept. 10, the seal of the freedom being as usual enclosed in a gold box, and he expressed his appreciation.—Ibid., VI: 28-30.

Eighteen hundred British troops, having sailed from Boston in the spring to subdue the French in Acadia, Nova Scotia, and having succeeded in that, and been driven back to within less than a month with very small loss to themselves, now wantonly abash 4,000 of the inhabitants to the British colonies, and burn their property. The Acadians were Catholics, and refused to take the British Oath of Supremacy.—Winson, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., IV: 415-17.

Christopher Bancker's account for materials, etc., furnished the new battery, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 646. See Feb. 19, 1755.

Col. Ephraim Williams, with 1,000 men, leaves Lake George, and marches for the defence of Fort Edward, on the Hudson; but fails and is ambushed from two Barons Dieskaug, and driven back. Williams is killed in the encounter. Dieskaug and his men marched on to Lake George, where they attacked the English under Johnson. The French were completely routed, and Dieskaug is taken prisoner.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 285-315, and authorities there cited.

A committee of the common council reports that it has carefully regulated and laid out George Street.—M. C. G., VI: 25-26. This was the present Spruce Street.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000.

Mayor Holland turns over to the common council "Thomas Mitchell Map of Hudson Bay &c which his Excellency St Charles Hardy Knight Desired him to present to the Corporation."—M. C. G., VI: 30.

To explain the statute establishing quarantine regulations (see May 3), the provincial legislature passes another act, authorizing the use of force of men, or money, or both, to compel ships from infected vessels to return on board. Quarantine is also extended to cover all persons with contagious diseases.—Cal. Laws N. T., III: 1141-42.

The province authorizes the raising of $8,000 to be contributed to Connecticut for the expense of enforcing 3,000 men to be sent to Maj.-Gen. Johnson in the expedition against Crown-Point.—Cal. Laws N. T., III: 1131-39.

Upon receiving news of an engagement near Lake George, which occurred on Sept. 8 and 9, between the English and French, in which the French were defeated, Baron de Dieskaug taken, and Gen. Johnson wounded, Gov. Hardy immediately orders a large
FIRST AND LAST LEAF OF THE KING'S COLLEGE CHARTER, OCT. 31, 1754. SEE P. 656 supply of provisions, ammunitions, and war supplies shipped to the scene of action by Albany sloops, and, with some members of the council, including Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, embarks for Albany.
N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 15, 1755. See also N. Y. Col. Docs., VI:
1002-3; Col. Coun. Min., 421.

Johnson issues a proclamation appointing Thursday, Oct. 2, a day of public thanksgiving for the victory gained by Mag.-Gen. Johnson over the French.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 15, 19, 22, 1755; Col. Coun. Min., 421. The party arrived at Albany on Sept. 20.—Post-Boy, Sept. 29, 1755.

On this day, and on Sept. 19 & 20, news of the war, particularly the defeat of the French and Indians, etc. (see Sept. 8), was published in New York.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 15, 19, 22, 29 at 19.

The provincial council sits at Albany, with Gov. Hardy presiding, and James de Lancey, Daniel Hornsmaden, and John Rutherfurd present.—Col. Coun. Min., 432. The meetings of the council continued here through Nov. 22; on Nov. 30 they began again at Fort George in New York. During this interval, the business transacted related to the Indians, supplies, fortifications, troops, etc.

In New York, a committee of the provincial council, sitting in the secretary's office, with James Alexander presiding, receives from Gen. Johnson the returns of killed and wounded, and orders a copy sent to Secretary John Pownall of the board of trade.

The great Lisbon earthquake is now kept by Otto van Tyle, at Staten Island, and Abraham Bockee, at Whitehall Slip. Three boats are regularly maintained.—See Jan. 16. Denys van Tyle was drowned, with ten other men and three horses, in a ferry-boat wreck near Oyster Island on March 11, 1756 (q.v.). Regarding Van Tyle, see also May 15, 1747; March 3, 1755.

The ferry-house at Staten Island, lately kept by John Watson, is now run by Martin Duckett, "where the best of Entertainment may be met with, both for Man and Horse, and the utmost Expedition in transporting to and from New York."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 24, 1755. A week later, Duckett advertised his partnership with "Scottish Joiner," a tavern-keeper near Whitehall Slip.

James Murray, apothecary, having received orders to send fifty pounds of old linen for bandages for wounded soldiers, appeals to the patriotism and zeal of the women in New York for aid in filling the order, citing the example of "a neighbouring Province."—
N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 24, 1755.

The making of garments for the soldiers at the frontiers, such as waistcoats, socks, and mittens, is being considered or undertak-

It is whispered about Town, as if a certain Set of People [Quakers, particularly One to the Westward] designed to follow the Example of their Brethren in England, in the late Rebellion, by generously giving a sufficient Number of Woollen Waistcoats to the Soldiers on our Frontiers, the better to keep their Bodies warm during the ensuing cold Season, and to enable them to perform their Duty with the greater Comfort and Satisfaction. . . . This we presume, should it be accomplished, will largely compensate for their religious Backwardness, in not encouraging the Exercise of the Musket.

"Even the Ladies in this City, we are told, seem to be anxious to demonstrate their Loyalty in a particular Manner, on the present Occasion; some purpose the making of the aforesaid Waistcoats themselves, whilst others wait for the Stuff."—N. Y.
Post-Boy, Sept. 29, 1755.

Oct.

With this issue of the Mercury, Gaine names his office in Queen St. (see May 6, 1754), "the Bible & Crown."—N. Y. Merc., Oct.
6, 1751; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 8 (editorial note). See May 12, 1757.

New York is appointed by the lords of trade as the place for a general magazine of arms and military stores.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 1926; Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., II: 309-10. See Jan. 16, 1755.

Gen. Johnson acknowledges "murdy Prescants from the Inhabitants" of New York, forwarded through Oliver De Lancey. He has ordered an equitable distribution of the presents, and says that neither he himself, nor his family, officers, or servants, will share any of them, as he apprehends "the Rest of the Army stand in more need than we."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1755.

The provincial council at New York issues orders relating to
Gen. Baron de Dieskau, the French general, and his side-de-camp,
M. Bernier, captured by the English in the engagement at Lake George; other orders regarding De Dieskau were issued on Oct.
14. On Oct. 15, the general's (proposed?) quarters at Mrs. De Jocouret's, near the harbour (see Nov. 11, 1751), were ordered changed to Charles Arding's, near the Commons, as more con-denient. Capt. La Coste was lodged at Mrs. Dimmock's on Broadway; other French prisoners were more closely confined.

On Oct. 20, Baron de Dieskau, having been brought down from Albany, was landed at "about nine o'Clock at Night, to avoid a Crowd of People assembled to see him," and was "carried to Lodge-by, prepared for him in Nauyau-Street, where he now lies [Oct.
27] dangerously ill of his Wounds." His aide-de-camp accompanied him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1755.

On Oct. 23, M. Bernier was ordered to keep within his limits; and again, on Oct. 25, he was forbidden to send letters without leave.—Col. Coun. Min., 422.

The king's coronation day is observed "with the usual Rejoinings." A salute of 21 guns each is fired from H. M. S. "Sphynx" and "Garland," lying to the North River. At night, "Illuminations, firing, &c. concluded our Loyalty for that Twenty Four Hours." Two persons were badly wounded by the Discharge of a Pettera, which suddenly went off as they were, with an Iron Rod, ramming the Chamber of it."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 27, 1755.

The governor and the gentlemen with him continue at Albany.

N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 27, 1755.

The anniversary celebration of the discovery of the conspiracy to blow up King James I and the "Three Estates of England" (see Nov. 5, 1605) is held. It is a mock ceremonial. The "Devil, Popes and Pretender" are carried about the city on a litter at night,
"hideously formed, and as humourously contrived, the Devil standing close behind the Pope, seemingly paying his Compliments to him, with a three prong'd Pitchfork in one Hand, with which
At times he was made to thrust his Holiness on the Back, and A Lamborn in the other, the young Pretender standing before the Pope, waiting his Commands." It becomes a rout, during which the crowd "stoop at the French General's Lodgings, where a Guard was ordered, to prevent Mischief." The general sends down "some Silver to the Carriers," with which, "after giving three Buzzas, they march'd off to a proper Place, and set Fire to the Devil's Tail, burning the Three to Cinders."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 10, 1755. This disorderly form of the "Gunpowder Treson" celebration was first recorded as held in New York on Nov. 5, 1748 to.

In a letter to Secretary Bancroft, the Rev. Henry Barclay, rector of Trinity Church, New York, say "We have also resolved to lay the Foundation of a large Chapel of Ease to Trinity Church early in the Spring, our Congregation becoming so numerous that the Church cannot contain them."—Trin. Min. (MS.). See also
Dec. 21, 1748.

Gov. Sharpe of Maryland arrives from Philadelphia, and in the evening is "gentlely entertain'd on board the Sphere Man of War, where several Rounds of eleven Cannon were discharged between eight and nine o'Clock at Night" on drinking some of the "most loyal Healths."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 10, 1755. See Nov.

The following advertisements present glimpses of certain industrial activities of the time: "Robert McAlpine, Book-Binder, who lately lived in Hanover-Square, is removed into the House where Mr. Fielding, Gold-Smith, formerly lived, at the corner of Broad and Princes Streets, a few Doors above James Alexander's, where he continues to bind all Sorts of Books at the cheapest Rates: and Supplies Merchants and others with various Kinds of Blank Books, such as Day Books, Journals, Ledgers, etc.—Books left at the New Printing-Office in Beaver-Street, will be immediately delivered to him, and dispatch'd with all Expedition."—
N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 10, 1755.

G. Duyckinck sells imported goods "at his House on the Dock, next Door to the Sign of the Price of Orange, near the Old Slip.
Goodall and Cowper, in Hanover Square, keep a general retail store where they sell the following variety of goods "just imported" from Bristol: Fine and coarse Broad Cloths, naphtha Charges, Mix'd hair and worsted Sax, Serges, Shaloons, Calimosco,
Cross-bard and Irish Stuff, wide Damaskes, Tammies,
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

James Lawrence, living opposite to the Province Arms in this town, was appointed as one of the Old English, Barkers, at the Sign of the Riding Chair, mends and makes all Sorts of Coaches, Charest, Chaises, Chairs, Kittereens, Waggons, Carts, etc. etc. after the best and neatest Manner, with the greatest Dis- patch."—Ibid. Lawrence was the second coach-maker to do busi- ness in New York.—See Jan. 23, 1759.

In a petition to the common council, Joseph Simpson describes the fire risk arising from storing in near-by cellars or store-houses, or leaving on the wharves, such inflammable articles as pitch, tar, tarpentine, etc., large quantities of which are annually imported and held for exportation. He offers to build a warehouse for such goods in a safe remote place on condition that he be allowed to charge reasonable storage. The petition is refused.—M. G. Cu. VI: 41-42. An act for the prevention of fires was passed on Dec. 31, 1764 (p.0.).

"A Concussion of the Earth was very sensibly felt here on Tuesday Morning last [Nov. 17] about Four o’Clock. The Morning was calm, not a Breath of Wind stirring, and the Hemis- phere appeared somewhat dusky."—N. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 23, 1755. Cadwallader Colden described it in a letter to Peter Colliison, P. R. S., of London, Dec. 9, 1755: \ldots I felt the bed under me and the house shaking \ldots I plainly heard the noise like that of carts on pavements, going to the eastward, with now and then a noise like the explosion of a great gun at a distance. It was felt about four o clock at Philadelphia, and half after four at Boston, and was more violent to the eastward than the westward; and there was an eruption as if there was much the same was intended with the falling of the smoke in the town."—Philosophical Transactions, Royal Society of London (1755-6), 415.

William Smith, the historian, thus described it: "The moon was at the full, the sky bright and perfectly calm. About two minutes after four in the morning, a rumbling noise was succeeded by jarring vibrations for four or five minutes. The shocks appeared to be not undulatory, but horizontal. The house the author was in cracked, and the windows rattled, but no fissure was made in the walls, nor did a brick fall from the chimneys."—Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1870), VI: 221.

The first entry in the "Diary" of John Adams is a mention of this earthquake, which he felt at his home in Braintree, Mass.—See Life and Works of John Adams, ed. by his grandson, Chas. Francis Adams, II: 1. Lisbon, Portugal, had been the scene of an earthquake on Nov. 1, a description of which, by eyewitnesses, was published in the N. T. Merc., Jan. 6, 1756.

Gov. Hopkins of Rhode Island informs the governor and council of New York that he and Daniel Updike have been appointed commissioners to consult with Gen. Shirley and com- missioners from other colonies.—Col. Coun. Min., 432.

The post master publishes the following notice: "William Wood, the Albany Post-Rider, sets out from hence for Albany, on Wednesday the 26th Instant November, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon; and from Albany for New- York the Wednesday following. All Persons who have any Letters to write to New-York blow to see them at the said Post-Office the Day before he sets out from hence; and those who have Letters to send by him from Albany, to leave them at Mr. Edward William’s, Tavern-Keer-rer in Albany, the Day before said Post sets out from thence."—N. Y. T. Post-Bay, Nov. 24, 1755. Cf. ibid., July 31, 1756.

An advertisement informs the public that "Henry Dawkins, engraver, who lately lived with Mr. Anthony Lamb [see Dec. 1, 1760], this night saw the shop of his business opposite the Merchants Coffee-House, in New-York, where he en- graves in all sorts of mettals."—N. T. Merc., Nov. 17, 1755. Dawkins was in New York as early as 1754, when he engraved a book-plate for John Burnet, an attorney in the city. He was in Philadelphia from 1758 to 1774, but in the latter year returned to New York. He was also in Oswego, N.Y., 1763. Dawkins was a prominent engraver of Massachusetts and Connecticut money. As an engraver, Daw- kins occupied himself chiefly with book-plates, hill heads, and tit-page ornaments. "This work is executed in line, and is fairly good."—Stauffer, Am. Engraver on Copper and Steel, I: 60-62; II: 78-80. See also Dunlap, Hist. of Arts of Design, I: 185 and footnote.

Dawkins was prominent in early American Masonic circles, and engraved a number of Masonic notices, summonses, and other devices.—Fielding, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, 12, 89-91.

Gov. Hardy having received instructions from the lords Dec- tices to ask for the granting of a permanent revenue, his proposed speech to the council and assembly is first read to the council meeting, and is approved.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 78-80.

James Wilmot, Jr., advertises a stage-boat commanded by John Thompson (Scotch Johny!), as attending "at the White- Hall Slip," and sailing every Monday and Thursday for Amboy. There passengers will be met by Joseph Borden, and proceed by stage to Bordentown, where boats will carry them to Philadelphia.—N. Y. Post-Bay, Dec. 1, 1755. For the earlier Bordentown route, see Oct. 30, 1752.

Gov. Hardy, in a message to the assembly, states that he is commanded by the king to recommend without delay the passage of a law providing for a permanent revenue to support the government.—Assem. Jour., II: 461. The assembly, on Dec. 9, replied that it could not provide indefinite support.—Ibid., II: 464. This controversy between governor and assembly continued for a long time.—See July 2, 1756.

The provincial council receives a royal order approving the act enabling the Dutch Church in New York to sell Fordham manor.—Col. Coun. Min., 393. See Dec. 13, 1755.

John Diez’ account for making 61 bateaux bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSSs, Eng. 646. Dies is one of the commissioners of fortifications, with Christopher Bancker.—See also their account of Feb. 19, 1756, 1760, 1762

William Shirley, of Massachusetts, writes from New York to Sir William Johnson, at Fort Johnson, advising him that he (Shirley) has been appointed commander-in-chief in North America, and giving instructions in regard to dealing with the Delawares and other Indians.—Correspondence of William Shirley, ed. by Charles H. Lincoln (1912), II: 336-43; N. T. Col. Docs., VI: 1024-27.

The common council passes "A Law to Restrain and Prohibit the Giving or Selling of Strong Liquors to any of the Private Cen- trinals of His Majesties Garrison in the City of New York." The occasion for this law was the desertsion and disorderly conduct re- sulting from the use of intoxicating liquor by soldiers in garrison and quarters.—M. C. C., VI: 44-45.

Robert Livingston, James Debesotes, and the other owners of a wharf extending from Beeckman’s slip to "the End of the Lot of Ground of the aforesaid James Debesotes," submit a peti- tion to the assembly, stating that they obtained this grant (of water lots between Peck’s Slip and Beeckman’s Slip) from the common council (M. C. C., V: 249, 330), with Liberty, at their own Expenese, to dock out and fill up two hundred Feet, into the said East River and New York, publishes the following petition: "The petitioners now seek a law establishing the rates for "wharfage and charge."—Assem. Jour., II: 465. For the action are desired to take in the supreme council of war composed of governors and field officers is held in New York City & to decide upon the operations of the next campaign.—
Correspondence of Wm. Shirley (ed. by Lincoln), II: 717; N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 1025. The minutes of this council, which concern the plan to be pursued for the reduction of Fort Duquesne, were printed in New Hampshire, Prov. Papers, VI: 463-67, and in Archives of Ma., 31: 92. A contemporary manuscript copy of these minutes is preserved by Wm. Alexander, secretary of the meeting, was sold with the Rodney Papers (item no. 391) by Henkel, Phila., Oct. 22, 1919. This is now in the N. Y. Pub. Library. It is endorsed: "Enter in Minute of Council of 4th February 1756." It is evidently the officially attested copy which Lieut.-Gov. Morris, of Pennsylvania, sent with other papers to the Pennsylvania, Feb. 4, 1756, and which was engrossed in the minutes of the provincial council.—See Min. Prov. Counc. of Penn., VII: 1756-58 (Harrisburg, 1851), Proceedings for Feb. 4, 1756, pp. 18-19, 23-29.

The newspapers of the fortnight prior to the conference had recorded the arrival in New York of Gov. Hardy, Lieut.-Gov. De Lancy, Lieut.-Gov. Thomas Pownall (of the Jerseys), Daniel Horsemans and John Rutherford (members of the N. Y. council). Col. Daubeur, Sir John Sinclair, Gen. Shirley, Chief-J ustice Jones, thanke Bekker (of Nova Scotia), Gov. Thomas Fitch (of Connecti- cut), Gov. Morris for the money raised by Lord Byron (secretary of that province).—N. T. Prov.-Bye, Dec. 1, 8, 15, and 29, 1755. The minutes of the meeting (vide supra) show that the following participated in the conference:

"His Excellency William Shirley Esq" General & c.

"Lieut.-Gov. Hamilton" Governor & Commander in Chief of the Province of New York.

"The Honble Horatio Sharpes, Lieut. Governor & Commander in Chief of the Province of Maryland:

"The Honble Robert Hunter Morris Lieut. Governor & Commander in Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania.

"The Honble Thomas Fitch Governor & Commander in Chief of the Colony of Connecticut

"Colonel Thomas Dunbar

"Major Charles Craven

"Sir John St Clair Deputy Quarter Master General

"Major James Pierer

"Major John Rutherford.

See also Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1830), V: 224.

Cut taken from a saddle on a horse standing at the door of Mr. George Brewerton, at the sign of the Bull's Head, in the out-ward . . . a knapsack containing the following articles, viz.:

A red jacket trim'd with gold, a pair of breeches with vmb buttons-hole and garters, three fine bollard shirts mar'd M. T. one speckled shirt, a pair of shoes and a one quite book.

A reward of three pounds is offered for the return of these articles to the "Bible and Crown, in Queen-Street."—N. T. Merc, Dec. 15, 1755. The Bull's Head Tavern stood at the present Nos. 46 and 48 Bowery, and seems to have derived a large share of its popularity from its proximity to the slaughter-house, being a convenient place of meeting for cattle-men. Caleb Hyatt became the proprietor some time prior to June 23, 1765 (p. 92), when he was succeeded by Thomas Bayeux. By 1771, Cornelius Vandenbergh was in possession and offering entertainment to all "gentlemen travellers," as well as pasturing for horses, "at 1s. per night."—N. T. Merc, May 6, 1771. Richard Varian, who had been appointed "Keeper of the Pubbick Pound," on June 17, 1773 (p. 92), seems to have become the next proprietor, but, before June 8, 1782 (p. 92), he had been succeeded by Nathan Wetherel. Mrs. Varian had apparently returned to the house before Nov. 25, 1783, the day of the British evacuation and the triumphant entry of the American army, when this place, known as Wetherel, Washington and Gov. Clinton at the "Bull's Head Tavern, now kept by Mrs. Veren."—See Nov. 20, 1783. The Bull's Head was sold to Henry Ashdore (or Astor) in 1785 (Libert Deeys, XXXII: 361), and by him to the N. Y. Asso- ciation in 1826 (ibidc, CCXV: 116-27). It was quickly demolished and replaced (in 1844) by the theater that was erected on its site. —See Pls. 102 and 175, and their descriptions, pp. 603-45, Vol. III; Landmark Map Ref. Key, Ill: 977, 982.

Dr. Johnson writes to his son: "Our Govt's proves a good friend to the Arts & to the College." He explains that Gov. Hardy asked to see the subscription paper (see July 21), and to their surprise they were able to raise 600 pounds. This gives new life to our proceedings & great mortification to our Enemies, & we are now going to carry on our Subscription wth vigor. Mr Machan made his 1200 & we hope the Govt's Influence may induce them to Assembly to give us the money before they rise. —Johnson Papers (MS.). The Post-Boy of Dec. 22 speaks of this donation from Gov. Hardy; also of a 500 contribution from Maj.-Gen. Shirley, for the "Chartar College about erecting in this City."—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 22, 1755. Cf. Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 9-10.

It is explained by Chandler, in his Life of Johnson, that this disadvantage was taken of the arrival of Gov. Hardy to present him an inflammatory address, in the hope of securing his influence against the college. —"But Sir Charles Hardy put the Governors & Commanders to present to the college, presented by the President, with the greatest respect and politeness. He signified that he was de- sireous of seeing their subscription paper; and the next day, when it was brought to him, he generously subscribed, without any solicitations, 500 for the College. This was such a disappointment and mortification to its opponents, that from that time they were silent, and gave no further molestation. Not long after, the Board of Governors, who had an equitable and just right to the whole for the public use of the institution, peace agreed and, as the Assembly that it should be equally divided between the College and the public."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 9-10. The agreement referred to is embodied in the act of Dec. 1, 1756 (p. 9). William Livingston, John Morin Scott, and William Smith, Jr. deliver petitions to the assembly "for a great Number of the Freemen and Freeholders of several of the Counties and also for the Province. In this Colony, against a supposed Pettition of the Governors of the College of New-York, in the City of New-York in America, established by Charter." These state that the petitioners have been informed that the governors have preferred or are about to prefer a petition for passing a bill "to confirm the said Charter or Charters, and to invest the said Governors, with the Monies lately sundry Acts in certain Trustees" (appointed by the act of Nov. 25, 1751, p. 9), that they conceive the subject matter of such petition to be of the utmost Moment, and nearly affecting their civil and religious Liberties; and have "divers weighty and important Objections, against the granting of the Prayer thereof." They ask for a copy of the alleged petition, and permis-sion to be heard by council "at the Bar of the House" on the subject before a resolution is made thereon. It is ordered that their petition be returned to them with the information that there is no such Application made to this House by the Governors of the New-York College, as is suggested in the said Petitions; and that if such Application be made, this house will then be ready to receive the said Petitions."—Assemb. Jours., II: 468; but cf. Jour. 12. For the passage of a bill, see Dec. 27, 1756.

Gov. Hardy, in a letter to the lords of trade, says: "I have this week [see Dec. 12 & 13] attended General Shirley at a Council of War for determining the operations to be carried on next year, for the removing the French from their incroachments, and securing His Majestys Rights on this Continent, which I presume General Shirley will transmit to your Lordships."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VI: 1025.

A ball for the "Benefit of Jacob Leonart," is to be held on this day at the new exchange. Tickets may be had at Leonard's house, near the city hall, and of Mr. Hewes, "at the King's Arms."—N. T. Merc, Dec. 15, 1755. The "New Exchange" was in the centre of the street at Broad and Water Sts., and the King's Arms Tavern was on the east side of Broad St. between Pearl and Water Sts.

Gen. Shirley writes from New York to Sir Thomas Robinson, 19 secretary of state in London, that he arrived in "this city from Albany" the second Instant." He transmits a copy of the minutes of the "Council of War which I held here the 12th and 13th Instant" (p. 9), and gives in detail his plans for a campaign against the French and Indians at Lake Ontario, Niagara, Lake Cham-plain, and other points to the north.

In another letter, written to Sir Thomas Robinson on the next day, Dec. 20, he gave an account of his conferences with the Indians in the Mohawk Country. He also reported on the opposition to him on the part of Sir William Johnson, and added: "I have the further Mortification to find that I have quite retrospected my promise to the Governor of New York in the wrong Notions he hath entertain'd of the Effect.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1755 of his Indian Commission from General Braddock, with respect to Dec. 19 virtue of my Commission." He encloses copies of his correspondence with Gov. Hardy. These letters, with several of preceding and following dates, reveal the difficulties that confronted Shirley by reason of the jealousy existing between New York and Massachusetts, and Sir William Johnson's determination to continue his supremacy over the Indians of the Six Nations. To the end the opposition to Shirley was successful. His commission as colonial commander-in-chief was revoked, and he was recalled to England—Correspondence of William Shirley, ed. by C. H. Lincoln (1913), II: 113-64. See July 4, 1756.

The provincial council issues a warrant to Goldsborough Baynard for carpenter work done in the secretary's office by Thomas Brookman—Col. Grant. Min. 424.

22. Included among houses and lots advertised for sale is a portion of "the Church-Land in Division Street."—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 22, 1755. Division St., also called Parition St., was the same as the present Fulton St., west of Broadway. Through the middle of it passed the line of Trinity Church property, the south line of the Amuck Jan farm. The lots to be sold belonged to Trinity.

Examples of the business signs mentioned in advertisements of the period are as follows: 1755, Dec. 25,—"the Sign of the Unicorn and Mortar in Hanover Square;" "the Sign of the Gilt Dish in Dock Street, between the Old-Slip and Continent's Market" (which is sold), 1756; "the Sign of the Indian King and Cross-Guns," in the Fly; June 28,—"the Hand and Shears, near the Coffee-House" (where tailoring is done); July 5,—"the Sign of the Stocking-Weaver's Loom, opposite the Great-Dock;" Aug. 2,—"the Dial" (a watchmaker's shop); Aug. 13,—"the Sign of the Golden Key in Hanover Square;" 1755, Jan. 3,—"the Sign of the Golden Lock, in Dock Street."—See N. T. Post-Bay of these dates.

A concert of vocal and instrumental music is advertised to take place on this day at the new "Exchange" (see Feb. 11, 1754 and III: 942), for the benefit of Messrs. Cobbah and Tucket. Tickets to be obtained of them, and also at "the New-York Arms," "the King's Arms," and "the new Printing-Office in Beaver-Street." An "Ode on Masonry" will be sung.—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 22, 1755.

Richard Breckell, clock maker, exhibits a musical machine at the house of Adam Vandemerg in the Broadway. A play, was the tragedy by clock-work. Admission is one shilling, "and for boys, six pence."—N. T. Merc., Dec. 29, 1755.

Major-Gen. Johnson, who defeated the French and Indians at Lake George, arrives in New York from Albany. A number of gentlemen went some miles out of town to meet him, and he was welcomed "by a general Huzza of Multitudes of the Inhabitants, by the firing of Cannon, displaying of Colours, &c. and by the Houses being ornamented with Lights in the Evening."—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 5, 1756. He remained in town until Jan. 18—18th, Jan. 26, 1756.

Gov. Shirley writes from New York to Horatio Sharp: "In closed I send your Honour a Copy of the Minutes of a Council of War composed of Governors and Field officers according to his Majesty's Instructions held at this Place the 12th and 13th Instant [in] upon the operations of the next years Campaign, at which your Honour assisted. I doubt not but you will recommend to the Assembly within your Government in the Strongest Terms to Contribute their Just Quota of Men and Money towards carrying so Salutary a Plan into Execution."—Correspondence of Wm. Shirley (ed. by Lincoln), III: 371.

1756

— William Smith, the historian, writing in this year, gives the following description of New York: "The City of New-York . . . consists of about two thousand five hundred Buildings . . . The Streets are regular, but being paved with round Pebbles are clean, and lined with well built Brick Houses, many of which covered with tiled Roofs.

"No Part of America is supplied with Markets abounding with greater Plenty and Variety. We have Beef, Pork, Mutton, Poultry, Butter, wild Fowl, Venison, Fish, Roots, and Herbs of all Kinds in their Seasons. Our Oysters are a considerable Article in Support of our Seasonable Course. Their Bread is as good as the Brick Baracks, built formerly, for the Independent Companies. The Governor's House is in Height three Stories, and fronts to the West; having, from the second Story, a fine Prospect of the Bay and the Jersey Shore. At the South End there was formerly a Chapel, but this was burnt down in the Negroe Conspiracy of the Spring 1741. According to Governor Burnet's Observations, this Fort stands in the Latitude of 40° 42' N."

"Below the Walls of the Garrison, near the Water, we have lately raised a Line of Fortifications, which commands the Entrance into the Eastern Road, and the Mouth of Hudson's River. This Battery is built of Stone, and the Merlons consist of Cedar Joists, filled in with Earth. It mounts 92 Cannon, and these are all the Works we have to defend us. About six Furlongs, South-east of the Fort, lies Norten Island, containing about 100 or 120 Acres and covered with an Act of Assembly as a Sort of Denounce for the Governor, upon which it is proposed to erect a strong Castle, because an Enemy might from thence easily bombard the City, without being annoy'd either by our Battery, or the Fort. During the late War a Line of Palisades was run from Hudson's to the East River, at the other End of the City, with Block-houses at small Distances. The greater Part of these still remain as a Monument of our Folly, which cost the Province about 8000 L. The Inhabitants of New-York are a mixed People, but mostly descended from the original Dutch Planters. There are still two Churches, in which religious Worship is performed in that Language. The South Building is of Stone and ill built, ornamented within by a small Organ Loft and Brass Branches. The new Church is a high, heavy, Edifice, has a very extensive Area, and was completed in 1759. It has no Galleries, and yet will perhaps contain a thousand or twelve hundred Auditors. The Steeple of this Church affords a most beautiful Prospect, both of the City beneath and the surrounding Country. The Dutch Congregation is more numerous than any other . . . Their Church was incorporated on the 11th of May, 1696 . . ."

"There are, besides the Dutch, two Episcopal Churches in this City: the Trinity Church was built 1669. A new and larger Church was erected in 1737. It stands very pleasantly upon the Banks of Hudson's River, and has a large Cemetery, on each Side, included in the Front by a painted paled Fence. Before it a long Walk is railed off from the Broad-way, the pleasantest Street of any in the whole Town. This Building is about 148 Feet long, including the Tower and Chancel, and 72 Feet in Breadth. The Steeple is 175 Feet in Height, and over the Door facing the River is the following Inscription [quoted at length in Latin].

"The church is, within, ornamented beyond any other Place of publick Worship amongst us. The Head of the Chancel is adorned with an Altar-piece, and opposite to it, at the other End of the Building, is the Organ. The Tops of the Pillars, which support the Galleries, are decked with the gild Busts of Angels winged. From the Ceiling are suspended two Glass Branches, and on the Walls hang the Arms of some of its principal Benefactors. The All Hallows lamp still remaineth in its place.

"This Congregation . . . is become so numerous, that though the old Building will contain 2000 Hearers yet, a new one was erected in 1752. This, called St. George's Chapel, [Footnote: 'The Length, exclusive of the Chancel, 92 Feet, and its Breadth 20 Feet less 14'], is a very neat Edifice, adorned with iron Stairs and tiled. The Steeple is lofty [Footnote: 'One hundred and seventy-five Feet'], but irregular; and its Situation in a new, crowded, and ill-built, Part of the Town . . ."

"The Presbyterians increasing after Lord Cornbury's Return to England, . . . purchased a Piece of Ground, and founded a Church in 1719. The Fellows and Service were erected in 1719. This Edifice in 1748. It is built of Stone, railed off from the Street, is 80 Feet long and in Breadth 60. The Steeple, raised on the South-
—

CHRONOLOGY THE ENGLISH PERIOD
:

1756

—

west End,

is in

In the Front to the Street, the following Inscription gilt and Height 145 Feet.

between two long Windows, is cut in a black Slate six Feet in Length [printed by Smith in the original Latin].
is of Stone nearly a Square [Foot"The French Church
"The Area is seventy Feet long and in Breadth fifty"], plain both within and mthout. It is fenced from the Street, has a Steeple and a Bell, the latter of which was the Gift of Sir Henry Asshurst of London. On the Front of the Church is the following Inscription [in Latin, which states that the church was founded in 1704, and repaired within in 1714].

.

.

note:

^.

"The German Lutheran Churches are two. Both their Places of Worship are small: one of them has a Cupola and Bell. The Quakers have a Meeting-house, and the Moravians, ... a Church
"The Anabaptists assemble at a small Meeting-house, but have as yet no regular settled Congregation. The Jews, who are not inconsiderable for their Numbers, worship in a Synagogue erected
.

.

.

Part of the Town, plain without, but very neat and Oct. 12, 1750.]
[cf. Grim's Plan, PI. 32-b, Vol. Ij is a strong Brick Building, two Stories in Heighth, in the Shape of an Oblong, winged with one at each End, at right Angles with the first. The Floor below is an open Walk, except two Jails and the Jailor^s Apartments. The Cellar underneath is a Dungeon, and the Garret above a common Prison. This Edifice is erected in a Place where four Streets meet, and fronts, to the Southwest, one of the most spacious Streets in Town. The Eastern wing, in the second Story, consists of the Assembly Chamber, a Lobby, and a small Room for the Speaker of the House. The West Wing, on the same Floor, forms the Council Room and a Library; and in the Space between in a very private

[See also Oct. 31, 1748, within.

"The City

Hall

the Ends, the Supreme Court is ordinarily held.
"The Library consists of a 1000 Volumes, which were bequeathed to The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in for(See June 27, 1729.)
"In 1754 [q-v.\, a Set of Gentlemen undertook to carry about a eign Parts.

Subscription towards raising a publick Library, and in a few Days collected near 600I. which were laid out in purchasing, about 700

Volumes of new,

Payment

of 5I.

to the Use

well chosen, Books.

Principal,

of these

Books

Every Subscriber, upon and the annual

.

.

Sum

of los. is entitled

.

"Besides the City Hall, there belong to the Corporation, a large Alms-house or Place of Correction, and the Exchange, in the latter of which there is a large Room raised upon Brick Arches, generally used for pubhck Entertainments, Concerts of Music, Balls, and Assemblies.

"... The 2300 Men,

—

standing Militia of the Island consists of about
"The whole Number of the Inhabitants,

[Footnote:

On

135-36.
city as it

See also the Ratzer

was

:

1766-7,

in 1664-1763

Map
it

677 which depicts the

the "Seceders' Meeting."

(PI. 41, Vol. I),
is called

It

Society.

The second site of this congregation was on the north-east corner of Grand and Crosby Sts., where their church was erected in 1836 {q.v^.

For

church history, see Our Jubilee, by Wylie its

(1906); Greenleaf, H/5/. of the Churches ofN. T., 203-4; Landmark
Ref. Key, III: 932.
Thomas Hamersly, silversmith, worked in New York in this

Map

Some specimens of his work are described in Met. Museum of Art. Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N, Y., N, /., and the South (1911)1 3^^3'*
Gen. William Shirley writes from New York to the lords of trade in London, presenting the sketch of a plan that he proposes for the management of Indian affairs in

5

His plan comprises protection against the French; regulation of trade among them; regulation of the sale of their lands and protection of their hunting grounds; expelling the French missionaries, and introducing EngUsh Protestant ministers; convening general councils among them; establishing interviews between them and the Enghsh governours, and commissioners.
Correspondence of Wtlliam Shirley, ed. by C. H. Lincoln (1912), single director-general.

U:

373-77-

Gen. Shirley proposes a winter campaign against Ticonderoga. provincial council approves of his plan, and advises asking the assembly for the necessary means.
Cal. Coun. Min., 425. See

9

The

Gov. Hardy reports to the lords of trade the amount of "WarMagazine of th's Fort." The list is not with we have none in the publick Magazine but six chests that belong to the four independent companys; this city has a stand of 1000 muskets, they provided last year; and what is in the possession of private People are chiefly for Indian Trade. The Militia are by law to furnish themselves each man one good muskett, with a due proportion of Ammunition, some of them are so indigent that they cannot purchase like Stores in the

16

the letter, but he observes: "Small arms their proper arms.

which

I believe is

The Militia

Law

in

Force in this Province,

not only the best, but the only one on the Con-

Law,

—

Jan.

North America under a the Governour, in the Spring 1756, amounted to 10,468 Whites, and 2275 Negroes; but that Account is erroneous. It is most probable that there are in the City 15,000 Souls.") and the City has in Reserve, a thousand Stand of Arms for Seamen, the Poor and others, in Case of an Invasion.

"The North Eastern Part of New- York Island is inhabited, principally, by Dutch Farmers, who have a small Village there called Harlem, pleasantly Situated on a Flat cultivated for the

Because of a dispute on the question of psalmody, a part of the Wall Street Presbyterian Church withdrew in this year, and formed the Scotch Presbyterian or Associate Reformed Church. The congregation worshipped in a small wooden building on Little Queen (Cedar) St., between Broadway and Nassau St. Wylie, Our Jubilee. The i^oih Anniversary of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, Nvzu York 1756-1906, 13-14; Disosway, Earliest Churches inN. T.,

—

year.

tinent that can effectually answer the good purposes of such a City Markets."— Smith, The Hist, of Province ofN. T.from the First Discovery to the Tear MDCCXXXII (London, 1757), 187-96.

See 1757.
Walter Rutherfurd, writing in 1 800, recorded that, in 1 756, there were but " two houses of three stories" in New York; see, however, the Burgis View, of 1717, PI. 25, Vol. I. Rutherfurd added: "A house rented for £40 where the Governors, Generals, Admirals, and principal strangers were entertained. Many houses in that street now [1800] rent for from £200 to £600 per annum." Rutherfurd, Family Records and Events, 198. Compare with the list of private houses in New York in 1795. Man. Com. Court. (1855), was occupied until 1762; and was replaced in 1768 {q.v.) by a more substantial structure of stone, 55 by 65 feet. This was occupied by Hessian troops during the Revolution, and, on Nov. 10, 1783, an appeal was made for funds to repair it. This church contained a pew for the governour, and a "gallery for persons of color." The edifice was still standing in 1828, at which time another Presbyterian church stood on the north side of the same street between Nassau and William Sts.

1756
—

Picture ofN. Y, (1828), 219, 220. The ground was sold on Oct. 13, 1836; and, in 1906, it was owned by the Equitable Life Assurance
PI. 42, Vol. I.

exclusive of Females above sixty, according to a List returned to

—

—

—— —

— —

will fully inform your Lordships of their musterings and Gen. Wilham Shiriey, commander-in-chief of the Enghsh forces in America, causes a notice to be published calling for the enlistment of "Battoemen" for the following spring and summer. The notice contains detailed information concerning the pay, work,

N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 26, 1756.
etc.
Gtw. Shirley leaves New York for Boston. "As he passM thro* Beaver street into Broad-Way, the Cannon on Fort-George kept firing."—A^. r. Post-Boy, Jan, 26, 1756. See Dec. 12 & 13, 1755.
For furnishing materials and building a kitchen in Fort George, the assembly allows ^^500 to Charles Jaudine; and for work on the governour's house, £17:2:8 is granted to Teunis Jacobs. Assemh.
Jour., 11: 'i^-jd-'j-j. For further payment on house, see May 17, 19

opportunity for advancement,

^758The provincial council receives from Gen. Shirley his plan of operations, including the quota of the several colonies; the assemCal.
bly is to be asked for an appropriation to raise 1,000 men.

See Jan. 29.
Gov. Hardy sends a message to the general assembly, transmitting the proceedings of the council of war held by Gen. Shirley

21

24

26

Coun. Min., 425.

The council receives the votes of the assembly for subsisting 1,000 men by new emission of bills of credit. The council advises the governour to consent to the continuance of the bills outstanding.— Ca/. Coun, Min., 425.
The council issues a warrant to impress Johannes Quakenboss,

27

29

Fy

9 at Mrs. Baron's Rout Club at Weilts


Saddlers acct.
A pt. of shoes
Taylor's Bill

Feb. 15
New York

£6.10.10. is in Virga.
Cury. 4. 14. 4. More expenses, from the 18th to the 25th, also in "New York M'y," included:

By cash, for second slippers
Treating Ladies to ye Microcosm hiring a person to get horses
Mr. Robinson's Servts.
lost at cards

The population of the province of New York, taken from the returns of the sheriffs of the several counties of the province, in pursuance of warrants to them of this date, shows a total of 96,785, of whom 81,232 are whites. Of these, there are 13,040 in the city (and county) of New York, of whom 107,682 are whites.—Dec. Hist. N. Y. (4to. ed.), I: 473; and the Miller Papers, Vol. II, in archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Nine negroes were, on the 3rd of March, received by a public sentiment, in a most determined manner. They were "whipt at the Whipping Post," for illegally assembling on Sunday, Feb. 8. Their offence was a violation of the provincial act aimed to prevent "the Conspiracy and Insurrection of Negro and other Slaves" (see Oct. 25, 1790); and also of the city ordinance which required that not more than three negroes should be seen together at any time, except in their own service, under penalty of being whipped.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 16, 1796.

A "Magazine to be erected in N. Y." is referred to in a letter from one William Elphinstone to William Alexander, asking for a clerkship there.—See Letter in the "Logan Shipping Papers" at N. Y. Hist. Soc. There does not appear to be any reference in the public records of the time to any proposed new magazine or powder-house, or to the writer of this letter; yet the latter indicates that a rumour of such proposed construction had spread abroad. Cf. Nov. 11, 1755.

John Winslow is commissioned by Gov. Shirley to be general and commander-in-chief over the forces to be raised in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Hampshire, New Jersey, and Rhode Island.—Col. Hist. Mass., Eng., 449.

Another warrant is issued to Bancro and Dits, commissioners, for expenses in building New York fortifications.—Col. Coun. Min., 425. These commissioners appeared on April 23, May 25, July 5 and 16.—Ibid., 426, 428, 429. See also May 30, 1755, and June 8, 1757.

The council orders the building of barracks near Whitehall Slip.—Col. Coun. Min., 425. See also March 3.

A provincial statute establishes the rates for wharfage and cranage in New York city. The act recites that the "Several Wharfs called Burnets Key the wharf between the Smiths Fly Slip and Burling's Slip all fronting to the East River or Harbour" have proved very serviceable, but the laws fixing rates of wharfage have not secured full profits for the owners of these wharves. The proprietors of Rodman's Slip, of Burling's Slip, and of a wharf "extending in length from the Lot of Robert Livingston Esquire to the East end of the Lot of James Jebssrosees" (see March 14, 1754), all three slips being in the "Montgomery Ward," also seek the benefit of the rates for wharfage and cranage. The rates to be charged on all these wharves are therefore fixed. However, this act does not 'define the Right which the Mayor for Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York have to the Dock and the Several Slips herein before mentioned.'—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 23-27. The province had previously passed an act fixing the rates for "Burnett's Key."—See June 23, 1754.

A long letter, published, defining New York against the 23 slanders of New England newspapers. It is principally a defence of Gen. Johnson's conduct at the battle of Lake George. It contains the following: "They constantly speak of us in their public News Papers, as a Province whose whole Politicks consists in forming Schemes to enrich ourselves, at the Expense of every thing, that ought to be held sacred amongst Men, united together in civil society; one need go no further back, than the last Boston Gazette, of February 2d. for Proof of this vile Asperion, 'abou'd another Expedition be form'd (says a Writer in that Paper) and manag'd just as the last war, it would bring Money into their
The king has appointed the Earl of Loudoun commander-in-chief of all his forces in America, and expects the "governors in North America" to co-operate with him in every way possible.— N. Y. Col. Docs. VII. 3. See, further, March 25.

River Indians come to New York with complaints to the provincial council regarding the treatment of the white people. While here they boarded at the tavern of Adam van den Berg (see Oct. 11, 1742), whom the council paid on April 25 for their expenses.—Cal. Coun. Min., 426.

Rhode Island has voted to raise 300 men. Massachusetts will increase her contingent to 3,500.—Cal. Coun. Min., 426.

An advertisement reads: "Engraving in gold, silver, copper, and other metals, by John Lamb, at Sir Isaac Newton's head, on Hunter's Key, New York."—N. Y. Merc., March 15, 1756. Lamb was also a silversmith.—Stauffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Silver, I. 155.

St. Patrick's Day is observed by Irishmen in the city with a grand Entertainment at the Crown and Thistle near Whitehall: at which were present His Excellency our Governor, who wore a Cross in Honour of the Day; many Members of his Majesty's Council, and others of the Assembly of this Province."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 22, 1756.

New Jersey has voted to raise 200 men. New York assembly increases the quota to 1,715. The council issues a proclamation calling for volunteers.—Cal. Coun. Min., 426.

"For the benefit of a poor man, a concert of Vocal and Instrumental Music" is announced to be held on this day at the city hall where "a New Organ, made by Gilbert Ash," will be used.

Tickets may be had at "Mr. Cobbam's in Hanover-Square, at the Gentleman's Coffee-House, at the Bible & Crown in Queen-street, and at Mr. Ash's, joining Mr. Willet's in Wall-street."—N. Y. Merc., March 17.

Luke Clarke, who " lately lived with Mr. John Thompson [Scott Johnny], Tavern-Keeper, near the White-Hall Slip," announces that he is now keeping the "noted Tavern formerly kept by Mr. Benjamin Kiersteed, behind the Work-House."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 22, 1756.

"To be sold by Thomas White, at his store in the house of Mrs. Farara, in Queen-street, within two doors of the sign of the Bible & Crown, a parcel of choice Bristol short pipes, by the box."—N. Y. Merc., March 22, 1756. Mrs. Ferrara had removed her tavern to Maiden Lane before April 11, 1756 when she mortgaged the house and lot to Charles Arding.—Liber Mortgages, I 171. She was still in Maiden Lane on July 31, 1769 (p. 196), when she advertised that she was removing into the new coffee-house on the opposite cross-corner.

A London letter of this date states that Lord Loudoun (see June 29) is to leave Great Britain the beginning of April, for America, with the several Regiments under this Command, and a proper Convoy; there to dispute his Majesty's Right by Sword, " . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 24, 1756.

An attempt to burn Fort George is discovered. Three men, "Deserters from the King's Forces, had been taken and confined in a Place under the Ramparts, which had formerly been a Magazine, and it is supposed they see Fire among the Combustibles left in it, which burnt the Door open; but by the timely Help of the Inhabitants, it was extinguished, with little other Damage than the three Men's Death, who were found suffocated at the Bottom of the Steps."—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 5, 1756.

"Hogsheads of Tobacco and Snuff is to be sold, at Public Vendue . . . at Eleven o'clock, at the King's Store House on the Flat-Rock-Battery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 29, 1756. See Supp. Landmark List, Vol. IV.

Henry Fox, the first Lord Holland, secretary of war and state, writes from Whitehall to Gov. William Shirley (of Mass.) ordering him to come back to Exeter to treat with the white people in North America, and informing him that Colonel Webb is appointed commander-in-chief in North America in his place.—From the
The governor and council order the issuing of a proclamation for a day of fasting.—Cal. Coun. Min., 447, See May 1 and 21.

On proving cannon in the Fields this month, a 32-pounder belonging to the battery burst, and destroyed an 18-pounder nearby. The next day a 12-pounder broke, and later three others.—N.T. Post-Bay, May 17, 1756.

A proclamation is issued for a day of fasting and humiliation, on account of the earthquake, which was very severe in both this and the neighbouring colonies.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 652.

A committee is appointed by the common council "to Remove the Gallows from their now stations [City Hall Pl. between Pearl and Duane Sts.] to the place where the Negroes were Burnt some five years ago, at the foot of the Hill Called Catienums Hill near the fresh water" (intersection of Pearl and Centre Sts.).—M.C.C., VI: 51. See also May 10, 1756. For an early use of the new gallows see Feb. 4, 1755. For locations of the gallows on the modern plan of the city, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 972.

The council issues a warrant to James Parker for the expense of printing bills of credit.—Cal. Coun. Min., 447.

The subject of strengthening the fortifications, and particularly of providing musket-proof "mantlets," is also considered by the council.—Ibid., 447, 448.

A counterfeiter, described as "the forty thousand Pound Money-maker," is hanged, his execution having been deferred from the 7th for want of a hangman, and because of the cutting down of the gallows by persons unknown.—N.T. Post-Bay, May 10, 1756.

Before dying, he was hanged so that he might have full view of the gallows; and the stakes of 2,500 from Rhode Island money; about the same amount of New Hampshire money; £5,000 of Connecticut money, and of New money to have "printed large Sums of four different Emisions." When asked the denomination of these bills, he refused to say, leaving it, he said, to their learning to find out, and "so did obstructs."—Ibid., May 17, 1756.

Elizabeth Wragg advertises a school "to teach young Masters and Misses the first Rudiments of Learning viz. A Gentle Be-aviours, Spelling, Reading, and Needle work etc."—N.T. Post-Bay, May 10, 1756.

Louis Joseph, Marquis de Montcalm, informs Gov. Vaudreuil that he has arrived at Quebec to assume command of the French forces in place of Baron Dieskau.—Journal du Marquis de Montcalm durant ses Campagnes en Canada, de 1756 à 1759; 64: Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 366-68.

After fighting the French for two years, Great Britain makes 18 an open declaration of war by act of parliament. France formally declared war against Great Britain on June 10.—T haiwes, France in America, 179: 196. On June 22, hostilities were formally proclaimed at Albany, the declaration having been brought by express to Gov. Hardy, the documents show an agreement between Great Britain and Spain that all prizes made after Aug. 9, 1748, should be restored; under which agreement, the claim was made that certain Spanish prisoners in New York (in 1752 and later) should be restored to their vessels. Courts of vice-admiralty were held in New York to hear some of these cases, to determine whether certain negroes were free or slave.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 660-63. See Sept. 24.

The "New Exchange" is designated as the place for the election of 12 trustees for the New York Society Library, on the last Tuesday in April.—N.T. Merc., April 19, 1756.

The provincial council is informed that Oswego is besieged by French and Indians; and that Sir Wm. Johnson intends to march for its relief, and has ordered militia to reinforce Forts William Henry, and Edward. Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey is to go to Albany.—Cal. Coun. Min., 447.

The council orders that the cannon belonging to private persons be mounted on the river front.—Cal. Coun. Min., 448.

In a later editorial, James Parker objects to the recruiting of men for Halifax, which has taken, among others, an employee of the Post-Bay, who had been ordered by the council to deliver the paper. The editor observes: "To have it [the Provincial] pilaged of our best Men, by a foreign set of Cormorants, is almost insupportable."—N.T. Post-Bay, May 24, 1756. The editorial is significant as reflecting the spirit of the times.

Benjamin Palmer gives public notice that he proposes to erect a "Free-bridge" across the Harlem River, since "the toll charged on the Kings-Bridge [see June 12, 1693], is thought a heavy tax upon the public." He intends to raise funds for building the bridge through subscription papers.—N. Y. Merc., May 24, 1756.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1756
May
When completed, this bridge, known as the “Farmers’ Bridge,” 24 crossed the creek from the modern Muscoota St., Manhattan, to Muscoota St., The Bronx. The creek was filled in and the bridge finally discontinued in Aug., 1911.—Ann. Rep., Dept. of 28

An account of Dies and Buncer, for moneys laid out for the fortifications in New York and elsewhere, bears this date.—Cal.
Hist. MSS., Eng., 653. Their next account was dated July 5.—Ibid., 654.

29
An attempt is made to set fire to the Lutheran Church “by conveying a number of live Coals in a Quantity of Raqs and Shavings into the said Church.” But the fire is discovered before it can make any headway. The elders and deacons of the church offered a reward of £5 for the arrest of the incendiaries.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 21, 1756.

31
This is the day set by Dr. Johnson, president of King’s College, for the beginning of examinations for admission to the third class.
Two years have nearly passed “since the Beginning of Tuition in the College of New-York.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 24, 1756.

Peter Durand, “lately from Holland,” advertises that he “intends to teach Geography and Lay’s Machine, and write French, and likewise Singing . . . He may be spoken with at James Heryos, near Alderman Benson’s.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 31, 1756.
The advertisement is typical of those of the period.

June
The names of several Morrisians and Squakers are enrolled in the clerk’s office in the city.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 652. A similar enrollment was made May 19, 1755 (p. 4).

Bernard Lintot, “at Mr. Graham’s near the New-Exchange,” advertises, “The best superfine and other Clothes, fig’rd Brolion, Fustians, scarlet and black Baire, Everlastings, Serge, Denim, etc., likewise fine Irish Cloth, Stafey, Brown Hollands, Buckramns, Shalloons, glazed Linens, a great variety of Silk and Worsted Lace, fine Sweet oil, Starch, Stone and Powder Blue, Sealing-Wax, Brushes of all sorts, the best superfine Cards, and sundry other Articles,” which have just been imported from London.—N. Y.
Post-Boy, June 23, 1756. The following year, or in the summer house (lately Edward Graham’s) near the exchange wherein Mr. Delamoy own lives, was advertised for sale.—Ibid., Jan. 10, 1757.

After a passage of nine weeks and three days out of Plymouth, the “Grafton,” of 74 guns, and the “Nottingham,” of 60 guns, with four transports under their convoy, arrive at Sandy Hook, two transports having become separated from the others in a storm. In the “Grafton” come Major-General Abercrombie, commander-in-chief of the British forces in North America (second in command under Loudoun), Capt. James Abercrombie, of the Highlanders, as aide-de-camp, and Lient. William Abercrombie, of the Royal American Regiment. The “Grafton” being too large to come into the Hook, they came up to the city on the following morning in one of the Transports, and were saluted by the Cannon on the Battery.”—N. Y.
Post-Boy, June 21, 1756. On the 22d they left for Albany.—Ibid., June 18, 1756.

By order of Gov. Harcy, Capt. Hunt, in the “Olive Branch,” sails down to the “Grafton” and “Nottingham,” men-of-war, which lie at anchor outside the Hook, with a present of “two large fat Oxen, upforty Sheep, most Kind of Roots and Greens, Cherries, &c.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 21, 1756.

A letter from Henry Fox, secretary of state, informs the provincial council that the Earl of Loudon has been appointed commander-in-chief in America. The council also considers the subject of recruiting; a parliamentary grant, for the war, to New York,
New Jersey, and New England; indentured servants, and trade

Abercrombie, at Albany, billets his soldiers upon private houses, and proceeds to while away the summer.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 5, 1756.

Imported arms and ammunition are advertised for sale by local tradesmen of New York. For example, on June 28, muskets and musquets (1012), 38. cannon-shot and hand-grenade shells; and on Dec. 26, 1757, cannon powder, French prize muskets, bayonets, and bullets.—
N. Y. Post-Boy, of the dates mentioned.

Gov. Hardy informs the assembly that the Earl of Loudon has been ordered in behalf of all the forces in North America (see July 26, 1756), and that it is the king’s pleasure that the regiments in America shall “be recruited as soon as possible for their full Complement” of 1,000 men each. Parliament has given £155,000 to be distributed in the provinces of New England,

From this month until Jan., 1756, 128 privateers belonging to this port were fitted out for service in the war. For their names, with the number of their guns, and names of their commanders,
see Mast., 1752. See also Nov. 3.

Mayor Holland shows the common council “the Model of a Hay Machine, for the weighing of Hay for Sale in this City.”
It is resolved that three of these machines be erected: one at or near the White Hall Ship, in the South ward, one other at or near the Oswego Markett in the west ward, and the other near the Widow Van Cures in Montgomerie ward.”—M. C. C., VII: 78-79.

The assembly, resolving itself into a committee of the whole house on the subjects contained in the governor’s message of June 29, reviews various measures of defence for the province, undertaken at the expense of the province, and orders, among other things, the observation that “the Provision of 20,000
Tinounds, made to erect Fortifications for the Defence of the City of New-York; which, though not trifling Sum, is an Expense that most of the other Colonies have been Strangers to,
since the late Incursions and violent Proceedings of the French, all the other Ministers of Great Britain, and the whole Continents, and, finally, the French, in Holland,” shall be given £155,000 to be distributed in the provinces of New England,

From this month until Jan., 1756, 128 privateers belonging to this port were fitted out for service in the war. For their names, with the number of their guns, and names of their commanders,
see Mast., 1752. See also Nov. 3.

Mayor Holland shows the common council “the Model of a Hay Machine, for the weighing of Hay for Sale in this City.”
It is resolved that three of these machines be erected: one at or near the White Hall Ship, in the South ward, one other at or near the Oswego Markett in the west ward, and the other near the Widow Van Cures in Montgomerie ward.”—M. C. C., VII: 78-79.

The assembly, resolving itself into a committee of the whole house on the subjects contained in the governor’s message of June 29, reviews various measures of defence for the province, undertaken at the expense of the province, and orders, among other things, the observation that “the Provision of 20,000
Tinounds, made to erect Fortifications for the Defence
of the City of New-York; which, though not trifling Sum, is an Expense that most of the other Colonies have been Strangers to,
since the late Incursions and violent Proceedings of the French, all the other Ministers of Great Britain, and the whole Continents, and, finally, the French, in Holland,” shall be

The assembly receives from a number of freemen and freeholders of the city a complaint against a house built by Henry Brazier in the Montgomerie Ward, “across Orange and Montgomerie Streets.” The building not only obstructs passage from one street to the other, but also the attendance upon service in St. George’s Chapel. As Brazier has refused many advantageous offers for his property for a public street, the petitioners ask the assembly to remove the building and convert the ground for this

The council receives a letter from Gen. Shirley asking for battering cannon for the Crown Point expedition; and one from Maj.-Gen. Abercrombie, who requests that Mirabeau’s ordnance be sent to Albany. Gov. Hardy intends going to Albany.—Cal.
Coun. Min., 429.

Six “18 Pounders” are “taken off our Battery, and shipped on board a Sloop for Albany: We hear they are to be employed in the Crown-Point Expedition.”—N. Y. Merc., July 12, 1756.

The government gives 100 small ordnance-discharges; on Aug.
9, cannon-shot and hand-grenade shells; and on Dec. 26, 1757, cannon powder, French prize muskets, bayonets, and bullets.—
N. Y. Post-Boy, of the dates mentioned.

Gov. Hardy informs the assembly that the Earl of Loudon has been ordered in behalf of all the forces in North America (see July 26, 1756), and that it is the king’s pleasure that the regiments in America shall “be recruited as soon as possible for their full Complement” of 1,000 men each. Parliament has

According to a notice of July 5, signed "Lamb. Moore, Cl.," a meeting of the governors of the "College of the Province of New York" (King's College) was scheduled to be held on this day "at the House of Edward Willet, at the Sign of the New-York Arms."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 5, 1756. This tavern was again selected the meeting-place of Gov. Hardy and other persons of note, when they participated in laying the cornerstone of King's College.—See Aug. 21. In 1752, when John Crawley was proprietor, meetings of the governors of the college were still held here.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 3, 1762. The plans for a college building, already approved by Gov. Hardy, are adopted by the board of governors.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 20. For the cornerstone laying, see Aug. 23.

There is held in Albany, a conference, or council meeting, attended by Gov. Hardy, Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, Sir Wm. Johnson, and Mr. Chambers. The defense of Oswego is considered.—Col. Coun. Min., 449.

The assembly of Philadelphia orders an address to be transmitted to Benjamin Franklin, one of its members, "now at New York, to be by him presented to General Shirley in the Name and Behalf of this House." The address is one of thanks for Shirley's expression of appreciation of that colonist's conduct during the war, and of hope for his safety during his voyage to England.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 16, 1756.

The Earl of Loudoun, "General and Commander in Chief of all his Majesty's Forces in North America, Colonel of the Royal American Regiments, and Governor of Virginia" (see June 29), arrives on the "Nightingale," man-of-war, and comes up to the city from Sandy Hook in a pilot boat, between three and four o'clock in the morning. "His Lordship thus taking the Advantage of the City in coming up so privately, prevented the Inhabitants giving that publick Testimony of Joy and Respect on his Arrival as was intended, by their appearing under Arms: And when at Sunrise it was noticed to him their Intention still to muster, he recommended it as needless. However, when he was conducted to his House by Whitehall, the Guns on the Battery fired, being about Six o'Clock in the Morning." At about 11 o'clock, such members of the council and the general assembly as were then in town waited upon him with congratulations on his safe arrival, and with thanks for engaging in so important a service. "As did likewise at the same Time the Mayor and Corporation, the Clergy, and all the Gentlemen in Town—And at Night the City was handsomely illuminated."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 26, 1756.

Benjamin Franklin, in his autobiography (written in 1771), probably referred to the events of July 23 when he described himself "arriving at the very instant the city of New York to Lord Loudoun on his taking upon him the command," in place of Gen. Shirley.—Works of Benj. Franklin (ed. by Bigelow), I: 289.

Gov. Hardy being still in Albany on the arrival of the Earl of Loudoun with the king's declaration of war against France, expresses are immediately dispatched to him.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 2, 1756. See, further, July 31.

The Earl of Loudoun was accompanied on the voyage to New York by Mr. Pownall, the secretary of the British board of trade. Gen. Shirley, who had returned to New York on July 4, awaited Loudoun's arrival, and, on Aug. 1, sailed for Providence for Boston, and thence to England, and was followed a fortnight afterward by Mr. Pownall.—Smith's Continuation in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1870), 235; Dickerson, Am. Colonial Government (1912), 74, 77. See Aug. 3.

A third prize, the "Centaur," is brought into port by the "Nightingale" man-of-war. It is a vessel of 50 tons, loaded with sugar, cotton, and coffee; has a crew of 30 men, and is pierced for 20 guns, six having been thrown overboard before she was captured. The price is valued at $200,000.—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 26, 1756.

Oliver de Lancey, by letter to Gov. Hardy, asks for a commission for the sloop "Hardy" as a privateer, of which he and Messrs. Cruger, Watts, and Henry Cuylér, Jr., are owners.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 657.

The Earl of Loudoun (see June 29) receives an address from the representatives of several members of the general assembly (see Assemb. Jour., II: 499), expressing the determination that "every Measure calculated for His Majesty's Service and the Security Happiness and Prosperity of his American Subjects, will be executed with the utmost vigour."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 2, 1756.

Gov. Hardy writes from Albany to Archibald Kennedy, the presiding councillor, evidently, under Hardy's instructions of July 10, to take measures to prevent the introduction into New York of the small-pox, which is raging in Philadelphia.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 657.

Gov. Hardy writes to Mr. Kennedy that he has published the declaration of war in Albany, and orders that it be published in New York City and throughout the province.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 657.

A report is made to the common council on the laying out and regulating for the paving of Cherry Street.—M. C. C., VI: 60-61. Cherry Street was originally laid out prior to 1750, and was first shown on the Carwirthian Plan, Pl. 27, Vol. I. It was ordered continued to Rutgers' Slip, May 28, 1790.—M. C. C. (MSS.), IX: 390.

An order is received by the council in New York from Gov. Hardy, at Albany, to publish at the city hall the king's declaration of war against France, which he sends.—Col. Coun. Min., 449. At four in the afternoon, the proclamation is read at Fort George before all the members of the council and assembly who are in town, the civil and military officers, and the magistrates of the city. After the usual drinking of healths, the company proceed to the city hall, where the proclamation is again published, "After which the Company proceeded to the City-Arms, where His Majesty's immortal Memory, and numberless other loyal Healths were proposed, and every Thing concluded with great Order and Decency."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 2, 1756.

We now have in this Harbour, fitted out, and fitting for Privates, one Snow, two Brigs, one Schooner, and five Sloops; and we are told there are several large Vessels to be immediately put on the Stocks, and finished with all Expedition, in order to cruise against his Majesty's Enemies" (the French).—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 2, 1756. See also description of Pl. 35, I: 376.

Ten transports from Plymouth arrive at Sandy Hook. They carry "about 400 Men, including a Number of Officers, and some private Men for the Royal American Regiment, and a very complete Train of Artillery, besides the Tents and Arms belonging to Lord John Murray's Highland Regiment, and a vast Quantity of all Kinds of Warlike Stores." On Aug. 16 and 17 (9.5.7.), the transports came up N. from New York. On Aug. 23, 1756, Fort Ontario (Oswego) capitulates to Montcalm.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, I: 405-16, and authorities there cited.

Sir Charles Hardy returns to New York, "disgusted with the Earl of Loudoun, who had checked his intermeddling in military concerns, and denied his request of two independent companies for his guards."—Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y. in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1870), V: 253-56.

One Edward Thompson, an officer of the British navy, writes from his ship, anchored in New York Bay: "... I had no idea of finding a place in America, consisting of near 2000 houses, elegantly built of brick, raised on an eminence and the streets paved and spacious, furnished with commodious keys and warehouses and employing some hundreds of vessels in its foreign trade and fisheries—but such is this city that a very few in England can rival it in its show, gentility and hospitality... There are very few Indians on this island, being cut by interminable wars or diseases; the laborious people in general are Guineo negroes, who lie under particular restrains from the attempts they have made to massacre the inhabitants for their liberty, which is ever desired by those (you find) who never knew the enjoyment of it."

The following advertisements are published:

"Lately come to this City from Philadelphia, John Elliott, who hangs House and Cabin Bells, in the nearest and most convenient Manner, as done at Loudoun, with Cranks and Wires, which are so liable to be put out of Order, as those do with Pulleys, and also gives ready Money for broken Looking Glasses, and may be heard of at John Haydock's, in the Fly, opposite Beakman's Slip."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 16, 1756.
1756. "Wanted in an arid Part of the Town, somewhere between Aug. Pearl street and Oswego Market up the Broad-way [at Liberty St.] a good convenient Dwelling-house, the Yearly Rent not to exceed Forty Pounds per Annum."—ibid., Aug. 16, 1756.

16 Eleven transports come up from Sandy Hook, where they arrived on the night of Aug. 14 (r. v.) from Plymouth, under convoy of H. M. S. "Stirling Castle," of 70 guns.

The "M" monument brought by the Stirling Castle, amounting to $13,500 Sterling, in Silver and Gold, for reimbursing the Province Part of the Charge of last Year's Campaign, was landed here on Wednesday last (Aug. 18), and filled 24 carts.—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 23, 1776. This was the precise sum granted by parliament.

—See June 24 and 25, Ef., Aug. 19.

19 A vessel from Glasgow (Capt. Gallbraith) arrives with 100 Highlanders for Lord John Murray's Regiment "... conveyed Part of the Way by a Bomb Ketch."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 23, 1776. See also J. F. Lewis's Historical Account of the Settlements of the Scotch Highlanders in Am., Prior to the Peace of 1783 (Cleveland, 1900).

The provincial council receives a letter from Mr. West, secretary of the treasury in England, regarding the quota of money granted by parliament (see June 24), New York's share being transmitted with a letter from Messrs. Tomlinson and Hanbury. On Aug. 21, the provincial treasurer reported to the council of this subject.—Cal. Coun. Min., 430. See also Aug. 16 to 18.

22 Mayor Holland makes a report concerning French neutrals sent back from Georgia.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 678. The provincial council gave orders accordingly on Aug. 24 for their distribution.—Cal. Coun. Min., 430. For their names and destination, see ibid., 427, 430, under dates of May 6 and Aug. 25. These evidently were Acadians, as appears by the record of April 30 (r. v.). They were under strict surveillance.—See ibid., 434 (July 11).

23 The "First Stone of King's College" is laid, by Gov. Hardy, The newspaper report of the event states that the Governor is Honorable James De Lancey, Esq., our Lieutenant Governor, with the Governors of the College, and Mr. Cutting, the Tutor [vide infra], with the Students, met at Mr. Willett's, and thence proceeded to the House of Mr. Vandenbergh, at the Common, whither his Excellency came in his Chariot, and proceeded with them to One o'Clock to the College Ground, near the River on the North-west Side of the City, where a Stone was prepared, with the following Inscription: . . . This was inaccuracy quoted in the newspaper; it was printed as follows in Hist. of Columbia Univ., 21, from the original stone, which is still preserved by the university:

DIPLOMATA CONSTITUTI IN HOMONEM DEI OM. ATQ: IN ECCLESIE REIQ: PUBLICE EMOLUMENTVM, PRIMVM HVNC LAPIDEM POSVIT VIR PRÆCEL LENTISSIMVS, CAROLVS HARDY, EQVIV AVRAVTVS, HVIVS PROVINCAE PERFECTVS DIGNISSIMVS. AVGTVS. DIE 23VS. AN. DOM. MDCCLVI.

The newspaper account gives the English translation thus: "This first stone of this College, called King's, established by Royal Charter, for the Honour of Almighty God, and the Advancement of the public good, both in Church and State, was laid by his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy Knight, the very worthy Governor of this Province, August 23d, An. Dom. 1756." The account continues:

"A large Stone was laid, a Health was drank to his Majesty, and Success to his Arms, and to Sir Charles, and Prosperity to the College, and to the Advancement of true Religion, Loyalty, and Learning, under his Administration; Upon which the Reverend, Dr. Johnson, President of the College, made the following short congratulatory Speech in Latin. . . ." The Latin address is printed in full and given the translation of provisions.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 678.

"Gentlemen, the worthy Governors of this College, established by Royal Charter, ["Addressing the Governors of the College"]" I do most heartily congratulate you on this happy Occasion of laying the first Stone of this Edifice; and that his Excellency Sir Charles Hardy Knight, the very worthy Governor of this Province, hath condescended to do us this Honour. . . . And, ["Turning to the Governor"] Most honoured Sir, I gladly take this Opportunity, in the Name of this Corporation, very humbly to thank your Excellency, both for the Favour you have now done us, and for your most generous and noble Donation, towards promoting this Foundation; on which Account, your Memory shall ever be dear, both to us and our Posterity. . . . And yours also, Honoured Sir, ["Turning to the Lieutenant Governor"] a very worthy Lieutenant Governor of this Province, who have founded this College on a Royal Charter, to whom we do moreover render our humblest Thanks. . . . May God Almighty grant, that this College, thus happily founded, may ever be enriched with his Blessings; so that it may be increased and flourish, and be carried on to its entire Perfection, to the glory of his Name, and the Advancement of his true Religion and good Literature; and to the Greatest Advantage of the public Weal, to all Posterities for evermore." The account closes:

"Which being done, the Governors and Pupils laid each his Stone, and several other Gentlemen, and then they returned to Mr. Willett's; where there was a very elegant Dinner; after which all the usual loyal Healths were drank, and Prosperity to the College; and the whole was conducted with the utmost Decency and Propriety."—N. Y. Post, Aug. 30, 1756.

The "Tutor" referred to in this account was Mr. Leonard Cutting, of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, England, who replaced Mr. William Johnson [see 1755] in 1756, the latter having gone to England to take orders in the Episcopal Church.—Hist. of Columbia Univ., 21. The meeting-place, "Mr. Willett's," was the Provost's Arms (or "City Ae major") near the University, and the place where New Yorkers in 1785 included the "worthy Lieutenant Governor of this Province."—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977. "The House of Mr. Vandebergh" was west of Broadway, between Vesey and Barclay Sts.—ibid., III: 981. For an outline history of this building, with references to views in this work, see ibid., III: 940.

26 At some period after the laying of the corner-stone, the college governors sent an undated letter to the Bishop of London, saying in part: "... we are also building a next and convenient edifice for public Schools & Lodgings (being one side of a Quadrangle hereafter to be carried on) on a very valuable and most agreeably situated site near the Town Square. . . .--Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 977. "The House of Mr. Vandovergh" was west of Broadway, between Vesey and Barclay Sts.—ibid., III: 981. For an outline history of this building, with references to views in this work, see ibid., III: 940.

News from Albany is published in New York that, on Aug. 19, a large Army of French and Indians had arrived at Oswego to lay siege to that garrison; but that forces under Gen. Abercrombie at the "Great Carrying Place," and, it is hoped, will arrive at Oswego in time to frustrate the French attempt. "The French News-Writers say, that the Conquest of Oswego would secure to them the quiet possession of Pennsylvania, and give them a free Entrance into the Province of New-York."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 23, 1756.

Mayor Holland having reported, on Aug. 24, about the French neutrals (see April 30) who have been sent back from Georgia, the provincial council now distributes these families in Westchester and Orange Counties, and in other localities in the vicinity of New York.—Cal. Coun. Min., 430.

Abraham de Peyster advertises to Archibald Kennedy, receiver-general of the province, the property No. 1 Broadway, for a consideration of $600.—Liber Deeds, XXXIV: 246-49 (New York). In the description of Pl. 98, in III: 289, this conveyance is incorrectly cited as in Liber Deeds, XXIV: 246-49. See Aug. 25, 1764. On the same day, Kennedy absolves De Peyster from the payment of quit-rent on the water lot in the rear of the house, reciting that De Peyster has deeded to him (Kennedy) "that lot on the South side of the house wherein I now live, formerly granted to William Smith and lately of Mrs. Martha Heathcote; and by her made over to Charles Sleigh upon which there is reserved for his Majesty five pounds, 1 shilling, Proclamation Money, as the yearly quit-rent." This proves that the receiver-general lived in the next house north of No. 1 Broadway. See a codicil to his will, dated March 13, 1745, reading: "I by this codicil devise my two houses in Broadway, in one of which I live, to my Governor, which is the house of the widow of Peter Bayard, in one of which I now live and in the other the Custom House is kept . . . to my dear wife during
In October, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the “Harlequin,” the sloops “Squirrel” and “Weazel,” the brigantine “Prince George,” and the ship “Earl of Halifax.”—*Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 664.

James Parker protests against a provincial act prescribing a stamp duty on newspapers. He describes the hardships of operating a newspaper in New York. “The late Mr. Bradford printed a News-paper in this City about 20 years; he was a sober diligent man and so all that time had the same price, and the same salary from the publick, as is given men now, but is intrinsically worth more than it is now; yet he could acquire but a bare livelihood, and died poor. Another News-paper [the Journal] was printed many years in this City by a ingenious man [Zenger] but under those disadvantages that Few ever thrive by, and the issue according. This weekly paper has been printed here now upwards of 14 years, and the proprietor thereof, amidst a constant series of diligence and sobriety, jo/a’d to the strictest parsimony, was many years tempted to leave the place as unable to hold out. And even yet is far from catching the fore-horse by the mane” —*N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 4, 1756. The “Stamp Act” was passed Dec. 1, 1756 (p. 6).

About this time, the first British packet-boats commenced running between Falmouth and New York. Edmund Atkin, superintendant of Indian affairs for the southern colonies, writing to the lords of trade from New York on Dec. 27, said: “By the Earl of Loudoun Packet I sent your letter (and a petition of mine) here on the 6th Oct. by the General Wall Packet being the first that sail’d from Falmouth after I received my Dispatches . . .”—*N. Y. Col. Desc., VII: 208.

The lords of trade, in a letter to Gov. Hardy, direct that an embargo be laid on vessels clearing with provisions, except to other British colonies.—*Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 664.

A case of small-pox is reported in New Street; measures are taken by the provincial council to prevent the disease from spreading. A sloop from St. Croix is ordered into quarantine at Bedloes Island; it was discharged on the 29th.—*Cal. Col. Min., 431. For Dr. John Bard’s report on quarantine inspection of this sloop (the “Dolphin”), see the original MS. in the “Collection of autograph letters, etc., 1674 to 1762,” in Columbia Univ. Library.

The common council appoints a committee “to confer and Treat with the City Members of the General Assembly, for this Province, Concerning the Building of a Pest house [see Feb. 13], and of Erecting proper and Convenient Goals on Some Grounds to the Southward of Fresh water.” —*M. C. G., VI: 71. See Nov. 2.

The common council orders payment of £9915 23: 6 to Peter Clopper for his advances “for Repairing the Meal and fly mark-ets.” —*M. C. G., VII: 79.

The common council orders payment of £23176 to Philip Liv-ington for his advances “for two Iron Backs for the ferry house and for stone &c: for the meal Market.” —*M. C. G., VI: 71.

The form of a warrant for privates, directed to Lewis Morris, comissary and judge of the court of admiralty, although worded, is entered of record after an item of this date.—*Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 664.

Paul Richard, former mayor of New York, and representative in the present general assembly, dies. On Oct. 24, his body was interred in Trinity Church.—*N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 25, 1756. He left a legacy of £200 to King’s College, “now erecting in this City.”—*Ibid., Nov. 8, 1756. On Nov. 8, Oliver de Lancy was elected to his place as representative.—*Ibid., Nov. 15, 1756.

Hardly informs the lords of trade that “Fort George has gone through great repairs and is now completed; its two side & three Bastions Command the Rivers leading to the City, and should properly have heavy Cannon mounted, for the defence of the Harbour; . . . in the spring other works are to be constructed in the east River for the defence of the Harbour, that will require twenty or twenty-four, twenty four Pounders.” He also advises that “some heavy guns to his majesty should be mounted on the Narrows, and upon Nutter Island.”—*N. Y. Col. Desc., VII: 164; Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y., III: 510.

The provincial council registers its objections to the following acts: An act for the salaries of the several officers of the government; an act for erecting and publishing a stamp duty in this province; and an act for laying an excise upon all tea of foreign growth within the province.—*Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 665.
In November, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the • Prince of Orange," the sloop "Blackeney," the brigantine "Mary," and the ship "Blackeney" (sic) — Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 665.

A minute of council bearing this date answers the assembly regarding the application of the funds for the college to the building on the common (see Oct. 19), and the assembly's proposal to take half the funds, etc. — Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 665.

Oliver de Lancy is unanimously elected to represent the city and county of New York in the assembly in the place of Paul Richard, deceased (see Oct. 12).— N. Y. Merc., Nov. 15, 1756. He had been absent a part of the Out Ward on Sept. 30, but never refused to be qualified.— M. C. G., VI, 66, 124, 13–74. Henry Ryker succeeded him as alderman for one meeting only, and was in turn succeeded immediately by John Morin Scott.— Ibid., VII, 76, 60 (footnote).

The common council orders payment of £1,125 to Jacob Brew- ington for straw sent "to the Governors Island for the Royal Americans."— M. C. G., VII, 73.

It is also ordered that "the Kings Troops" which lately arrived from Albany, and the others that are daily expected, be furnished with wood and straw, for a period not exceeding 30 days, to be paid for "out of the Monies belonging to this province, on account of the Excise now remaining in the Hands of this Corporation." — M. C. G., VII, 74.

This was in response to an order issued to the governor by Lord Loudoun (see Gov. Hardy's report, in Nov. 16, 1756). An assembly act for billeting soldiers was passed Dec. 1, 1756 (see Dec. 7).

A bill is introduced in the assembly for raising £1,125 by a lottery, "towards erecting a new Goal, in the City of New-York, in Lieu of that which is now in the City-Hall."— Assem. Jour., II, 513. For the final form of the bill as enacted into law, see Dec. 10.

Mayor Edward Holland dies. The next day the governor appointed John Cruger, Jr., a merchant, to be mayor, water bailiff, clerk of the markets, and justice of the peace.— M. C. G., VII, 74. Mayor Cruger was continued in office ten years.— Ibid., VII, 101, 125, 221, 265, 294, 316, 351, 432. For a short sketch of Cruger's life, see Mem. Coun. (1853), 409.

Gov. Hardy receives an order of the king, dated June 50, for issuing letters of marque in the colonies, with forms of warrants and commissions, and instructions for privates.— Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 654.

A message from Gov. Hardy to the assembly states: "His Excellency the Earl of Loudoun, having demanded Quarters in this City for a Battalion of the Royal American Regiment; and his Lordship having informed me they were soon to embark from Albany, and Part of them are already arrived, and are now encamped, I have ordered the Barracks to be prepared, and the Block-Houses to be fitted up, for the Reception of as many Men as can be quartered therein; but as the whole Number cannot be thus disposed of, it is necessary that Provision be made for the Remainder. The Troops in the Barracks and Block-Houses, must be provided with Fire, Candle Light, and Beds: Articles of Expenditure included in that of Quarters."— Assem. Jour., II, 514. Regarding the action of the assembly on this message, see Nov. 26, 1756.

A list of privates belonging to New York is printed, of which 19 are on cruise, five in the harbour, one expected from London, and three in the stocks, "which when fitted out will make a Fleet of Twenty-Eight Sail from New York."— N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 22, 1756. See also July 19.

The governor's council having requested a conference with the assembly on the bills for establishing a stamp office, and for laying an excise on tea of foreign growth, the assembly replies that as these are money bills they cannot consent to a conference.— Assem. Jour., II, 518. See Dec. 1.

The council also considered the governor's message of Nov. 15 (p. 9), with respect to "quarreling one Battalion of the Royal American Regiment, in the City of New York," agrees in the opinion "that, notwithstanding the distressed State of his Majesty's Colony, by its being the principal Seat of the present War, every effort should be made to support and assist his Majesty's regular Troops, by providing Pay for the Militia so frequently called out on Alarms, by providing for great Numbers of French Prisoners, and People called neutral French, brought into this Colony, by paying for Horses and Carriages, impressed and lost in his Majesty's Service, and Numbers of other Articles of the like Kind; yet as the Troops in this city are not such rigorous Service, as this was formerly. Here was a great Loss of Stoves, and Candles, and Beds to lie on, immediate Provision should be made for furnishing such of them as are to be quartered in the Barracks and Block-houses in the City of New-York, with those necessary Articles." A committee is appointed to convey this opinion to the government, and represents the "desire that his Excellency will be pleased to give Directions to the Commissaries of New-York, to furnish the Troops ... with Beds ... Firewood and Candles, sufficient for them for the Time they are to continue in Winter Quarters; and to assure his Excellency that this House will provide for the Expenditure attending the same." — Assem. Jour., II, 520.

An act is passed to repeal the fourteenth clause or section of each of the first four lottery acts, to raise £2,250, £1,800, £1,125, and £1,125, respectively, for King's College (see Dec. 6, 1749, Apr. 9, 1759, July 4, 1759, Dec. 6, 1759). The clause referred to is that which required that a deduction of 15 per cent. "upon the whole Number of Fortunate Tickets" should be "paid into the hands of the Trustees," to be by them "put out at Interest ... until the Same Shall be employed by some future Act for and towards founding a College; ..." and which provided for salaries and other expenses in conducting the lotteries.— Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 104. The fifth lottery act, that of Dec. 7, 1754 (p. 9), is omitted from this repealing act for reasons explained in the act of Aug. 19 (p. 9). Final disposition of the moneys raised by the four college lotteries is provided for by the new act of Dec. 1 (p. 9).

Because "the Present Exigency of Affairs" requires the raising of large sums of money "to promote the services of the Colony, and as taxes upon "all Kinds of Luxury" are of "Publick Utility," the legislature passes an act "for laying an Excise upon all Tea of foreign Growth retained within this Colony. Retailers of tea in quantities less than 100 pounds must be licensed, and pay sixpence for every pound retailed.— Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 105. On Dec. 20, 1756, Abraham Lynsen, collector of the excise for New York City, notified all retailers to apply to him for licenses.— N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1757. The act expired, Jan. 1, 1760.— Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 564.

It is conceived by the provincial legislature that revenue may also be raised "by a Stamp Duty without being over burdensome to the Inhabitants of this Colony." An act is therefore passed "for Erecting and Establishing a Stamp Office in this Colony for Stamp- ing all Vellum Parchment and Paper." That is, a stamp of one cent of five denominations and a tax of a penny on every book to be affixed to every skin or piece of vellum or parchment, and every sheet or piece of paper, whether written or printed upon. The law presents a detailed schedule of the various legal documents and papers requiring the stamps of different denominations. (See Dec. 27.) Abraham Lott, Jr., and Isaac Low are appointed by the governor to be managers of the stamps for the province, and to keep an office in the city of New York. They shall provide the stamps after Jan. 1, 1757.— Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 110. The act expired Jan. 1, 1760.— Ibid., IV: 250.

The province does not possess enough barracks to quarter the forces raised or sent here by the king. An act of the general assembly is therefore passed "for Billeting and Quartering His Majesty's Forces within this Colony." — Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 123. It was continued by later acts until it expired Jan. 1, 1762.— Ibid., IV: 256, 476.

The Earl of Loudoun, after the loss of Oswego, sent a thousand of his troops to New York. The magistrates of the capital crowded the privates into the barracks, and left the officers (about 50) to find lodgings for themselves. When the earl came down in December, he sent for Mayor Cruger and insisted that the officers be not separated from expense, saying that this was everywhere the custom; and that he had, in consideration of New York's efforts, put the army to inconvenience by so wide a dispersion, but that, if Cruger made difficulties, he would convene all his troops here and billet them himself.— Smith, Hist. of the Late Province of N. Y. (1896), II, 292.

An act is passed for raising, "by a Publick Lottery for this
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1756,

Colony," the sum of £1,125 "towards Erecting a New Goal in the Dec. 1756. City of New York." It is intended for "the Reception of such Prisoners of War as shall be brought in this Colony." Ebenezer Grant and Theodores van Wyck are made managers of the lottery, the whole proceeds of which are to be paid to the City of New York. The advertisement of the lottery in the Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1756, and Jan. 3, 1757 (p. v.), states it is to raise money "towards building a commodious New-Goal . . . in Lieu of that now in the City-Hall of the said City." For details of the building of the jail, see March 1, 1757. For the lottery drawings, see March 9, 1757. See also the act of Dec. 1 (infra), relating to the college lotteries, containing a provision for the benefit of the new jail.

A legislative act for the payment of several provincial debts allows £518 "for Building a Watch House Near the Beacon at Rockaway;" and £6014 for building one near "the Beacon at the Narrows on Staten Island."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 145.

By another act, Robert Charles, the agent of the province in Great Britain, is allowed £200 as a reward for his services from Sept. 1, 1755 to Sept. 1, 1756. Other provincial officers, including the governour, are allowed various salaries.—Ib. ibid., IV: 171.

An act is passed ‘for appropriating the Moneys Raised by divers Lottery for Erecting or founding a College in this Colony.’ This provides that the sum of money raised by lotteries for this object, and “now vested in the Trustees” appointed by the act of Nov. 25, 1756 (p. v.), and which have been "put out at Interest from time to time and not Yet disposed of by any Act for that purpose Made,” shall be thus disposed of: One “Moity” or half part, with interest, etc. is vested in the governors of King’s College, “and may be disposed of by them in such manner as to them shall seem best for the advancement of Learning in the said College . . .” The receipt of the governors or their treasurer, given to the treasurer of the province for this moiety, “shall be good and sufficient discharges to him for the same.”

The other “full and equal Moity, with interest, etc.” or such part of it as shall be needed for the purpose, “shall be applied for and towards the purchase of Necessary and Suitable Quantity of Land in or Nigh the City of New York and for Building and Erecting there on a proper Pest House for the Reception of Such Persons as may be infected with any Contagous Distempers.” All “the Residue of the said Money shall be applied to and for the Erecting a New Publick Goal in the City of New York in Lieu of that which is now in the City Hall.” The treasurer of the province is required to “pay the same” to the mayor, etc., and the receipt of the mayor, etc., given to the provincial treasurer, for this moiety, shall be “Sufficient discharge” to him.

The act also provides that the annual sum of £500, directed to be paid to the treasurer of the province by the act of July 4, 1755 (p. v.), for seven years, beginning Jan. 1, 1754, shall yearly hereafter be paid by the treasurer of the province “to the said Governors of the College of the Province of New York in the City of New York, or their Successors,” together with “all the Moneys received or that is become due for the Tuition of the Scholars in the seminary;” as well as any part of the above-mentioned sum of £500 received by the treasurer of the province, and not expended by the trustees (with specified exception). The governors are made chargeable with all contracts entered into by the trustees with the “chief Master” (Dr. Johnson) or any other masters, as provided in the act of July 4, 1753. The trustees are discharged from such contracts, and the receipt of the governors of the college or their treasurer shall be sufficient discharge to the treasurer of the colony for the same.

The treasurer of the province is required to apply the sum of £500 (“part of the Said annual Sum now in his Hands or that Shall first come into his Hands in pursuance of the said Act”) towards cancelling the bills of credit emitted on the credit of “the Duty of Excise on Strong Liquors retail’d in this Colony” (see June 4, 1755). The trustees of the college and the college funds are discharged from any further trust powers and authorities given to them by either the act of Nov. 25, 1751 (p. v.), or that of July 4, 1753 (p. v.).—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 160. For an explanation of this act, see Dec. 21, 1755. The common council took action on Jan. 15, 1757 (p. v.) to purchase a lot for the college from the trustees, and to pay the price, "or such sum as shall be . . . the Governor and Council direct."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 431. See June 9, 1747.

This date is found on "AN EXACT DRAUGHT of the BATTERIES, AND FORT GEORGE in the CITY of NEW YORK, for the HONORABLE THOMAS POWELL Esq. Lieut. Governor of New Jersey N.B. the ABOVE is LAID DOWN by a SCALE of 16 Feetoms or 96 Feet to the INCH by JOHN DIES." This drawing, which is in ink, on paper measuring 14½ in. by 20 in., belongs to a splendid collection of 88 manuscript maps, charts, surveys, plans, and views, delineating the many points of interest along the eastern seaboard of North America, from New Foundland to Pennsylvania, the majority of which were made for the purposes of military operations during the Seven Years War, by William Alexander, William Bontinck, Cadwallader Colden, Matthew Dixon, Richard Grifilley, P. Mackellar, Lieut. Elias Meyer, Capt. James Gabriel Montresor, Capt. Bernard Ratzer, Charles Rice, Capt. G. C. Wetterstrom, John Williams, and several other British engineers, officers of the 60th Royal American Regiment. They cover a period from 1714 to 1760. This very important collection was formed by an English collector, probably in the third quarter of the eighteenth century, and is contained in a large folio volume bound in morocco, and elaborately tooled. The collection is at the present time (Dec. 1919) in the possession of Mr. L. M. Thompson, of New York.

The following references on the above-mentioned plan give a clear idea of its character and importance:

"y" above Batteryes mounds 92 Guns Flank included.

1. the Breadth of the Platforms
2. the Pickd Line the whole Breadth of y" Rampart
3. the E. Side
4. the College, and other buildings
5. for the Province House
6. the west Block House
7. the Provence House
8. A Still Larger one
9. the Office House
10. Bundle House
11. the Governors Stables
12. the Governor’s House
13. the Bowling Green
14. the Ravilin before the Fort Gate
15. the Seecrators office
16. Fort George
17. the Barracks
18. the W. W. Magazine
19. the S. E. Magazine
20. White Hall Street
21. White Hall Slipp
22. Staten Island Ferry Stairs
23. the General Course of the E: River warts
24. the Gov. House
25. the old Ruines Chappel
26. this will Mount 4 Guns Amberlit

Of the above references, Nos. 16, 17, 18, 19, 24, and 25 are within Fort George itself. This is the earliest known plan of Fort George drawn in such a manner as to correspond with the above-mentioned plan, and is contained in the same collection as the above-mentioned plan. The same collection contains other important drawings of New York interest, as follows:

1.—"Plan, and Sections of Fort George. Built upon Hudson’s River: A. D. 1757." By J. Montresor. Scale 50 ft. to an inch. This is drawn in ink, on paper 16½ in. by 11 in. There are five references:

A.—Barracks for 140 Men.
B.—Store-house, which will contain 2500 Flower-barrels
C.—necessary-house
D.—Plaford platform for one Gun
E.—Gate of the Fort

2.—"Plan, Elevation, & Section of the Store-house built at Fort George, which contains 2500 Barrels of Flower." Scale 50 ft. to an inch. Drawn in ink, tinted, on paper 11½ in. by 7½ in.

3.—"Plan, Elevation, & Section of the Barracks at Fort George which contains 150 Men." Scale 50 ft. to an inch. Drawn in ink, tinted, on paper 11½ in. by 6½ in.

4.—"Plan of the Narrows. Shewing the several Batteries proposed to prevent ships coming up to New York." Signed by James Montresor, engineer. Scale 1,000 ft. to an inch. Drawn in ink and water-colour, on paper 15½ in. by 10 in. A beautifully finished drawing, showing six batteries, three on Staten Island and three on Long Island.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1756

5. Map indexed “Hudson’s River,” which is undoubtedly Dec. Cadwallader Colden’s original map of the Province of New York.

4. Drawn in ink on paper 18 in. by 21 in. Evidently elaborated from the imperfect draught at Albany, reproduced, in part, and described by Justin Winsor, in the Narrative & Critical History of America, V. 4, 1876, p. 307. The printed map shows the line of the New York boundary to 1756, and is covered with interesting and important information regarding the early settlements, topographical features, etc.; probably the map prepared in response to a letter written by the lords of trade to Gov. Hunter, on Aug. 18, 1756—“The Maps we have at present of America, being not so correct or particular as we could wish, I have sent you the best we have of New York, and in such a manner that you can get of New York and New Jersey, and likewise of any of your Neighbouring Colonies, or others which you can at any time procure.”—N. Y. Col. Dict., V. 422. Gov. Burnet wrote to the lords of trade on Dec. 16, 1753: “I have likewise enclosed a map of this province, drawn by the surveyor General Dr. Colden, with great exactness from all the surveys that have been made formerly and of late in this province, which is in his hands, and from the French map of the lakes, corrected by some late informations in those places that lie near this province.”—Ibid., V. 704. Colden himself wrote on Dec. 4, 1754, to Secretary Montagu: “I have the honor to send you a map of the province in the hands of a person in whose part of this province are now in the hands of a few persons paying trifling Quit Rents; as will more fully appear by a Map of this Province which I am preparing by the Governor’s Order for their Lordships & my Memorial.”—Ibid., V. 806.

6. By order of the provincial council, an embargo is laid on provisions except to the British Colonies, by order from the lords of trade.—Col. Conn. Min., 451. See May 24.

1757

In this year, William Smith (21), A. M., who, like his father, was later (see Nov. 4, 1767) a member of the provincial council, published in London a history of this province. It bears the title The History Of The Province of New-York, from the First Discovery to the Year M.DCC.XXII. To which is annexed, A Description of the Country, with a short Account of the Inhabitants, their Trade, Religious and Political State, and the Constitution of the Courts of Justice in that Colony.

I am aware of the new discovers’d World, Gay Colonies extend; the calm Retreat Of unconquer’d Dangers.

By William Smith, A. M. London: Printed for Thomas Wicks, bookseller at Vrgi’s Head, opposite the New Church in the Strand. M. DCC. LVII.

It is dedicated (June 15, 1756) “To the Right Honourable George, Earl of Halifax, Viscount Sunbury, First Lord Commissioner of Trade and Plantations, &c. &c.” under whose direction the affairs of the British colonies have been for several years. Although most of the facts presented by Smith have been covered by the Chronology, his estimate of the character and efficiency of the several governors, and his references to governmental establishments are worthy of special notice. His opinions in some important particulars were not shared by Liet.-Gov. Cadwallader Colden, who expressed his views at length in a letter to his son, July 5, 1759 (q. v.). For the author’s reply to a critic, see July 7, 1759. See also Bibliography, Vol. V. For Smith’s description of New York, contained in his History, see 1756. For his continuation of his history of the province from 1753 to 1764, see Hist. of the late Province of N. Y. from its Discovery to the Appointment of Governor Colden in 1764 (pub. in 1819), Vol. II. For reproduction of the title-page of the original edition, and of a page of the manuscript of the Continuation, see Pl. 35, Vol. IV.

In January, petitions were made on this day and on the 14th, for commissions for the commanders of the schoon “Harclequin” and “George,” respectively.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 660.

The “Scheme of the New-York Lottery” is published (see Dec. 1, 1756), for raising the sum of £1,125 “towards building a commodious New-Goal in the City of New-York, in Lieu of that now in the City-Hall.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1757. See, further, March 1, 1757.

“Uriah Hendricks, next door to the Golden-Key in Hanover—
THE CONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND.

Square," sells imported goods at retail, looking-glasses, clocks, etc. Samuel Judah, "at his Store in Hanover-Square, opposite to 3 John Cruiger, Esq; Mayor," sells European and East-India goods, also "Caster and Felt Hats, and a Variety of Gold and Silver laces,"—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 14, 1757. A fortnight later, Patrick Caryll, "at the Sign of the Unicorn and Mortar, in Hanover-Square," advertised a fresh supply "of the best merchandise."

—ibid., Jan. 17, 1757. Hanover Square was a centre of retail trade at this period.

Advertisements of the day are the following—

"Peter Rushon, who lives adjoining to the Quakers Meeting-House, dresses all Kind of Furis, in such manner that they are not subject to the Moth coming into them. He likewise makes Muffs for Gentlemen or Ladies, in the newest Fashion."—Richard Lyneall advertises to teach "the right Method and true Art of Defence, and Pursuit of the Small Sword . . ., and extraordinary quick and speedy, with all the Guards, Parades, Thrusts . . ., and the best Rule for Playing against Artists, or Others with Blunts or Sharps," at Mr. Hulet's Dancing School.

"Imported in the last Vessels from London, a large Assortment of choice Drugs, chemical and galenical Medicines, to be sold wholesale or retail, by William Brownjohn, from London, near the Meal-Market."

"Just imported in the Brig. Maria, Capt. Grant, from London, a large Assortment of fresh Mediterranean Life, Surgeons Capital and Pocket Instruments, Cases of Artery Needles and Lancets; to be sold at the lowest Prices, by James Murray, Druggist, at the Corner House facing the Meal-Market."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1757.

"There are now 30 Privateers out of this Place, and ten more on the Stocks, and launched. It has hitherto bore good Success, having brought in fourteen Prizes, Value 10000 L."

The Earl of Loudoun sets out for Boston.—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 17, 1757.

A proclamation is issued convening the assembly at Flatbush, on Feb. 8.—Jour. Leg. Coun., 1209.

H. M. S. "Sutherland," of 50 guns, comes into the harbour. This vessel, "in coming up from Sandy-Hook, struck the Ground several times; but stuck fast opposite our own Battery, until she was forced off by some Cakes of Ice."—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, ed. by J. Ford, II, 4.

Joseph Richards causes the following notice to be published: "Whereas the Subscriber hath been instrumental of propagating a Stage between Philadelphia and New-York [see Oct. 30, 1753], and by Experience, finding some Difficulty some Times to pass by Water to Ambey Ferry to New-York: Notice is hereby given, That a Stagecoach is constantly to be had Opposite to Ambey-Ferry, on Monday the 17th Instant, January, and to pass through Staten-Island, Load or no Load, to Mr. John Watson, Mrs. Ducker's, and Mr. Van til's, and on Tuesday proceed back to the aforesaid Dote's, and so in like Manner every Day in the Week . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 24, 1757. Cf. Richards' advertisement in ibid., May 1, 1758.

There is advertised to be let: "A Small Lot of about 22 Acres, belonging to the noted Tavern, known by the Name of The Union-Flag, about 4 Miles distant from New-York, on the Post- Road, adjoining the East-River, having a good Wharf, and a good Landing belonging to it; There is on it a good Orchard and Garden. Enquire of James Mc Kinney, living near Turtle-Bay."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 24, 1757. See also Feb. 6, 1758; Jan. 21, 1757.

The common council appoints a committee "to meet with a Committee of the Commoners of the City, to make a Bill later of the Lottery Money Given them" by the act of Dec. 1, 1756 (p. v).—M. C. C., VI, 80. On Feb. 11, an agreement was entered into between committees representing the college governors and the common council, respectively, whereby certain bonds and mortgages "are to be sold to the Corporation" (representing, apparently, part of the investments made of lottery funds by the college trustees).—Ibid., VI, 94-95. On July 4, it was resolved that the treasurer or chamberlain of the city "Receive from Messrs. Grant and Theodorus Van Wyck Managers of the Late Lottery the monies Raised by the said Lottery," amounting Jan. to £1,001,186, and that the treasurer or chamberlain "Retain thereout three Quarters of Cent for his Trouble in Receivings and paying out the Same."—ibid., VI, 97-98. On July 25, it was necessary for the common council to empower John Morin Scott as attorney to sue certain ones of the "obligers, on the bonds and mortgages."—ibid., VI, 94-95. The next and last entry of record in the Minutes in this transaction was one of a year later, July 12, 1758, at which time the managers of the "Late Lottery" (see Aug. 17, 1755), exhibited their accounts "of the said Lottery" to the common council, showing that "There is due thereunto" the sum of £966,167, and the common council ordered that they pay this balance to the city treasurer.—Ibid., VI, 139.

Payment is made for "sundry Necessaries" which have been provided for various persons "who were sent from this City to Mr. Kennedy's Island [Bellows' Island]—see May 3, 1755—with the Small Fox."—M. C. C., VI, 80. Another payment was made on April 14 (g.v.). Kennedy sold the island to the city Feb. 18, 1758 (g.v.).

A petition of New York merchants, with 41 signatures, is addressed to Gov. Hardy, setting forth the need of a pilot for Hell Gate, and recommending Richard Lawrence for the place. The petition recites that "the Passage through Hell Gate is known to be exceeding Difficult and Dangerous and in which many Vessels have been lost or taken up by the Aid of Pilots."—Emmet Collection, item No. 10858, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

Three more of the transports (see Jan. 20) come into port and land troops.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II, 4. (In a footnote Mr. Ford, the editor, gives a résumé of the various regiments that came to America prior to 1757, but is unable to identify the exact troops arriving in this convoy.)

Two young men, aged 18 and 25, are hanged "at Fresh-Water" Feb. for "House breaking, Street robbery, etc."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 7, 1757. For the erection of a gallows in this neighbourhood, see May 5, 1756.

In February, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the signers of the "Revenge" and "Mary."—Ibid, 34.

"Catharine," the dogger "Decoy" (Isaac Sears, commander), and the ship "King of Prussia."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 670.

A contribution to the Post-Boy proposes a plan for "erecting and maintaining of a Light-House on Sandy-Hook, and a Residence for the Pilots at that Station," and a salary of £120 a year for a master of a battery. He states that such a proposal has been "hitherto omitted" among the various schemes advanced "to cultivate the Trade and Commerce of this Colony; and for the Safety of our Navigation."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 7, 1757. The light house was first petitioned for on March 13, 1761 (g.v.).

The common council orders payment made of £379:11:11 to William Coventry "for Several Coards of fire wood sent to the Camp for the Soldiers there."—M. C. C., VI, 81. The location of the camp was not mentioned, but was probably Sutton (Governor's) Island. See Aug. 11, 1757, the troops "Fox" and "Pike."—Ibid., VI, 84.

Mathew Earnest (see Jan. 24) asks the common council for a permit "to Erect and run out a small Dock or peer of about thirty feet on some part of the water Lott belonging to this Corporation Lying in the North River Between high and low water marks, fronting his land in the out ward of this City, Commonly Called . . . New found Land, having on the south side thereof the land of the late Sir Peter Warren and on the North the land of one Mr. Mathew, and Contains in Breadth towards the Rivers between four and five hundred feet." Granted.—M. C. C., VI, 81-82. A "glass house," an establishment for the manufacture of glass bottles, etc., was erected there in 1758.—See Oct. 30, 1758. The Glass House Farm derived its name from this establishment. It was DOMINIONS IN NORTH AMERICA, 1755. SEE P. 664.
The jail was already in full operation on the last named date, for this payment was "for Victualing Sundry Criminals and for Sweeping 26 Chimneys and Emptying 231 Tubs in the New Goal from the 18th Feb'ry 1765, To the 21st of October foll'g inclusive," etc. (ibid., VII: 356).

In 1770, the jail yard was paved (ibid., VIII: 228); and in 1772 a new chimney of stone (VII: 361, 362), and a stove to keep in front of the building (VII: 373, 393), were built.

On Oct. 14, 1767 (p. v.), it was ordered by the common council that two rooms "in the New Goal House" he fitted up for a "Bridewell" (ibid., VIII: 87), and from that time the building served the double purpose until the construction of a second one for a bridewell, the plans for which were adopted in 1775 (p. v.) (ibid., VIII: 82), but were not fully executed when the British forces occupied the city in 1776 (ibid., VIII: 174). For an account of the building of the bridewell, and of the purpose for which it was established, see Nov. 11, 1765.

For the later history of the "New Goal," known after the Revolution as the "Provoct Jail," see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 974; where references to views in this work are given; also Chronology, 1869; Man. Com. Couns. (1853), 473; ibid. (1866), 670-71, 679, 692, 731; Mem. Hist. Soc. (1853), 346, 347.

The embargo (see May 24, 1776) was extended to apply to all vessels at the request of Lord Loudoun—Cal. Coun. Min., 432; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 5 (where March 3 is given as the date). The embargo was partially lifted on June 25—N. T. Merc., June 27, 1775. An act of parliament was reported on July 9 (p. v.) for building a habor at the mouth of the Hudson, which was completed, except to England and Ireland.—Cal. Coun. Min., 454.

Gov. Hardy issues an order to three master shipbuilders (Joseph Totten, Stephen Crossfield, and Thomas Cheeseman) and four mariners (John Griffith, Richard Jeffery, John Long, and Thomas Browne) to survey the transports.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 670. Five of these made report on March 21 (p. v.).

Lord Loudoun, writing from New York, informs Pitt that this "Port, has already produced, above the half of the Ships wanted [for transports]; but our Distress lies, in providing Sailors and Water Casks; but I hope we shall get the better of those difficulties. This has obliged me, to apply to Captain Falkingham of the Sutherland, to remain here, in order to assist, both in fitting the Transports, and securing the hands, which he has agreed to do."—Correspondence of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 39.

Gov. Hardy issues a warrant to John Roberts, sheriff of New York, to impress water casks, and also materials and workmen for making what may be deficient.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 670. He issued a warrant on March 14 to Nicholas Gouverneur and Leonard Lippencourt to apprise the casks impressed.—Ibid.

The meeting of the common council is held at "the House of Work." This is apparently the name given by a common council committee "for repairing the work house, House of Correction and alms House in such Manner as they shall Judge Necessary and Convenient," and to "Cause a small piece of Ground to the Eastward of and adjoining to the fence of the said Work House, of the Length of two Boards, to be Inclosed and fenced in, for a Buryall place for the poor belonging to the said Work House."—M. C. C., VII: 86.

The shipbuilders and mariners appointed on March 8 (p. v.) to survey the transports make their report. A list of the vessels appointed as transports bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 679, 671. On March 22, a warrant was issued to the same inspectors to appraise all vessels chartered for the public service.—Ibid., 671.

"About the beginning of" this month, Benjamin Franklin came to New York, expecting to sail immediately for Europe, but was detained until near the end of June by Lord Loudoun's inactivity and inefficacy.—Works of Benj. Franklin (ed. by Bigelow), I: 185. The packet on which Franklin sailed accompanied the fleet on its expedition to Louisbourg (see June 20) for five days and then proceeded to England.—Ibid., I: 187. See May 25; June 3 and 8.

The object of Franklin's visit to England is stated thus in his autobiography: "The Assembly [of Penn.] finally finding the proprietary [owners of that province] obstinately persisted in man- chacing their deputies with instructions inconsistent not only with the privileges of the people but with the service of the province, I sol'd to petition the king against them and appointed me their
In April, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the ships "Richard and Ann" and "Essex," and the brigate "Achilles."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 671. See May 16.

A list of vessels already commissioned to act as privateers, with the names of their owners and the dates of their warrants, is recorded under date of April, 1757.—Ibid.

The sloop-of-war "Ferris" having brought over a commission May appointing Gov. Hardy rear admiral of the Blue Squadron, his flag is hoisted to the main-gaff. "Nightingale," lying in the North River, and salute is fired by the other men-of-war "and by near 100 sail of vessels at anchor in the harbour."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 9, 1757. The Mercury of May 9 recorded the event as happening on May 4, and the jour. of Hugh Gaine as on the 6th. See also "The Chronological Diary," p. 19, in New Am. Mag. (Woodbridge, N. J., Jan., 1758).

Gov. Hardy writes to Pitt: "I am now preparing to leave this Province, and expect by the Packet to receive his Majesty's Permission to resign this Government."—Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 99.

The provincial council receives a letter from Secretary William Pitt regarding the operations of the campaign. The militia are under standing orders to march when occasion requires.—Cal. Coun. Min., 435.

Robert Charles, agent of the province of New York in London, writes to David Murray, speaker of the New York assembly, that there is a report in London that "Lord Loudon is gone from New York for Halifax with 8000 Regulars & Irregulars, with a View it is thought of Meeting the Armament with Adm'l Holbourney Squadron, In that Case it is hoped your Province is left in full Security from any hostile Attempt."—From a copy of the letter among the original Smith Papers (MSS.) in N. Y. Pub. Library. Loudoun did not actually sail until June 20 (g.v.). The Public is desired to take Notice, That, this Day, the printing-Office formerly kept in Queen Street [see Oct. 6, 1755] will be removed to the House next Door to Doctor William Brown's, in Hanover Square, near the Meat-market.—N. Y. Merc., May 12, 1757; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 8 (editorial note). Gaine had an advertisement in the Post-Boy, Nov. 17, 1756, showing that his printing-office (the "Bible and Crown") was "but two Doors from the Meat-market." On April 30, 1759, Gaine bought this property. For deed of purchase, see Liber Deeds, XLI: 593 (register's office). For Gaine's removal from this place, see April 18, 1765.

The owners of the ship "Scot" petition for a commission for her commander.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 672.

Gov. Hardy writes to the first judge of the admiralty court, to issue letters of marque to the commanders of the ships "Grand Duke" (see March 26), "Richard and Ann," and "Essex" (see April 28).—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 672.

Several merchants of New York meet to debate the subject of the importations to the Great Britain. They agree to wait a few weeks longer in hopes of hearing that the duty on tea (see Dec. 1, 1756) has been repealed. In the meanwhile, no orders for goods are to be sent over until further information arrives.—Upcott Coll., I: 289, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The Earl of Loudoun reviews the Highland Regiment, together with Abercrombie's and Webb's.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 8.

"At two o'clock this morning, about 3,000 soldiers were passed round this City, whilst many different parties patrolled the Streets, searched the Taverns, and other houses, where sailors usually resorted and impressed about 400, taking all kinds of Tradesmen and Negroes, near 800 were impressed on the whole, but above 400 retained in the Service. This Night or the next Day about twenty soldiers, a Sergeant and a Subaltern, were sent on board every Transport in order to keep the men from getting on shore, and to prevent all kinds of Disturbance. The whole Number of Forces were on receipt of a few days after [see May 25], and sailed for the Hook, with as much speed as the Nature of the Case required, and without running foul of each other on their way down."—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 8-9. See May 25 and June 20.

Gov. Hardy orders that no Boatman or Marketer, coming to or going from this City, or bringing Provisions or other Necessaries to the King's Ships; or any of the Transports in His Majesty's Service, shall be impressed or detained on any account whatsoever.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 30, 1757.

26, 27 Five French prizes are brought into port by three privateers, being taken out of a fleet bound from Cape Francois to Bordeaux. "The Ships are 14 Carrage Guns each, are Letters of Marque, stock-full of provision, and full complement of men. Our Vessels were obliged to board them before they struck." They are "deep loaded with Sugar, Coffee, Cotton, &c. And, we hear, one of the Ships has between 80 and 100,000 I. de Indigo on board. The Whole, at the lowest Computation, is valued at about 70 Thousand Pounds Sterling."—T. Post-Boy, May 30, 1775. See description of Pl. 32, I. 276.

30 Lord Loudoun writes from New York to Pitt concerning the preparations made for the expedition against the French. He says: "Sir Charles Hardy, to whom I had, on his offering to take the trouble, given the entire Management of the Transports, having Complained that Sailors, both from the Men of War, and Transports, had deserted, in order to get on board the Privateers, from the great profit they make there, and that those Sailors were "harbour'd in Town, and that he could not retake them, without my Authority. I have, therefore, this moment, the pleasure of informing you, have sent three with Battalions, to prevent their making their Escape, whilst he Employed the Sailors in taking up the Deserters, who finding themselves overpower'd, made no resistance, and the whole was finished by six in the morning, without any disturbance.

"Our Situation here, is, the Troops are all Embarked; and the last of the Ships, will probably get to the Hook, to-morrow or next day; for Convoy, we have one 50. Gun Ship, the Sutherland; We have two of 20. Guns, the Nightengale and Kennington; two Sloops, the Ferret and Vulture..."—Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I. 69-71.

9 In the eve of his departure, the council offers a complimentary address to Sir Charles Hardy on his promotion in the navy, to which he replies appropriately.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 672.

13 The oaths are administered to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancy, after the reading of his commission, and he presides at the council meeting.—Cal. Coun. Min., 437; Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1701.

Isaac Sears, commander of the sloop-of-war "Catharine," is ordered by the provincial council to cruise off Block Island and the east end of Long Island, to intercept illegal traders between Rhode Island and Hispaniola.—Cal. Coun. Min., 434.

The council issues another warrant to the commissioners of fortification for securities to be given for the new Forts, as directed by the orders (see Feb. 19, 1756) for expenses.—Cal. Coun. Min., 434. Another was issued Oct. 22.—Ibid., 436.

See, further, Sept. 27, 1758.

20 The council orders that the fortifications be completed.—Cal. Coun. Min., 433.

20 The provincial council orders the issuing of a proclamation for a day of fasting.—Cal. Coun. Min., 434.

Lord Loudoun sails with the fleet from Sandy Hook for Halifax.—Jour. of Hugh Gaine, II: 10. In the fall of 1756, Loudoun had proposed to the English ministry the reduction of Cape Breton Island as an important step in the contemplated campaign for the ensuing year. Upon receipt of their sanction and promise of co-operation, orders were made for making a fleet at New York.—See April 21 and 27, 1757. By May 5, this was accomplished, and Rear-Admiral Hardy took command the following day (see May 3). As no news was received of the whereabouts of the English fleet which was to assist them, sailing was delayed until June 20, when they departed from New York, as already mentioned, on June 30.

The English fleet came in detached groups, and it was not until July 9 that all the forces were assembled.—Am. Mag. (Philadelphia, 1758), June 9-30. See Aug. 30 for result of the expedition.

A proclamation is issued appointing July 15 as a day of fasting, etc., on account of the war.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 674.

After eleven weeks' service without a ministry, George II is forced to accept the one formed by the union of the Pitt and Newcastle parties. The new ministers "kissed hands" on June 29. As "Secretary of State for the Southern Department," Pitt had practically complete control of the administration. His great power and important work properly dates from this period.—Williams, Life of Wm. Pitt, I, 317-318; Thackery, Hist. of Wm. Pitt, I: 289-294.

The privates and merchant vessels in New York harbour number 172.—N. T. Post-Boy, June 27, 1757.

The ship "King William the Third," built by the Messrs. Corwalls as a privateer, is launched. She is "esteemed by the most Judicious, as fine a Ship for the Purpose as has been built in America for a long Time. She is to carry 20 Nine Pounders, and 18 Men."—N. T. Post-Boy, July 4, 1757.

The ship "Sturdy Beggar" comes into the harbour from East Jersey where she was building, the keel having been laid the preceding summer.—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 30, 1756. The vessel is a double-decker, designed for a privateer, and mounts 26 guns. She is "esteemed the best Ship of War belonging to the Port, and is to be commanded by the experienced Robert Troup, who particularly signalized himself the last War in the Command of the Hester Privateer Brig."—Ibid., July 14, 1757.

The provincial council receives an order from the Earl of Holderness to remove the embargo on vessels bound to England or Ireland with provisions. They receive from Secretary John Pownall an act of parliament forbidding expostion of provisions from the colonies except to England and Ireland. The council orders that the act be published in the New York Gazette.—Cal. Coun. Min., 434. See March 2.

Gov. Hardy, on his departure from New York, advises the lords of trade of certain revisions in the navigation laws, whereby importation of dutiable goods from England is discouraged, and royal revenues consequently diminished. Vessels bring tea, canvas, arms, etc. from Holland, stop at Sandy Hook, smuggle in cargo, and go to New York empty; others load at Holland and start at some "out port in Britain," where they report and pay duty on only half their cargo.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct., VII: 771-772.

The council, having received royal orders with instructions for commanders of privateers, conveys them to the commanders and the admiralty judge. On July 16, the council ordered the publication of these orders by proclamation.—Cal. Coun. Min., 434.

This day is proclaimed one of prayer, fasting, and humiliation throughout the province.—N. T. Post-Boy, July 11, 1757.

The provincial council orders the arrest and trial of Richard Hadden, commander of the privateer "Peggy," of New York, on charges of piratical behaviour made by Vice Admiral Townsend, just received by the council in a letter from the Earl of Holderness.—Cal. Coun. Min., 434.

The proclamation is issued (see July 11), publishing the royal instructions to privateers relating to Spanish vessels, dated Oct. 5, 1756.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 675.

The common council orders that the issue of their warrant which require a payment to Israel Dunseway $50 for making "an addition to the ferry Bridge on Long Island," 20 feet farther into the river, and "at the End of that a Dock or pier," 21 feet broad extending 10 feet into the river; also for additional work on this plan.—M. C. C., VII: 96. Cf. Balkelew View, Fl. 33, Vol. I.

The common council ordered the Alderman of Coventry £561:13:1 for sums expended on the "Guard Room."—M. C. C., VII: 97.

News is published in New York of the loss, on July 21, of 280 Aug. men of the New York and New Jersey regiments, who were ambushed by the enemy near Ticonderoga. Col. John Parker and Capt. Jonathan Ogden, of the New York regiment, are the only officers who escaped alive.—Supp. to the N. Y. Merk., Aug. 1, 1757.
The council issues an order on the military store-keeper, Francis Aug. Stevens, for powder and ordnance to the detachments going to Albany (see Aug. 6)—Cal. Min. 435. The provincial council transmits a copy of the report that Fort William Henry has surrendered to the French, and that the capitulation has been broken by them (see Aug. 5). Gen. Daniel Webb needs reinforcements.—Cal. Min. 435.

The council writes to De Lancey that 600 men under Maj. Courtlandt have been sent to Albany and that troops are to be sent from Quebec and New Jersey, 500 men having already gone from New Jersey. Gov. Belcher has written to De Lancey from Elizabethtown that 1,000 troops have been ordered for Albany, and 3,000 more are to be raised.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Aug. 677.

A court-martial is held at New York to determine why certain troopers have not accompanied the troops to Albany.

David Jones writes from Fort Neck, L. I., to Archibald Kennedy, the presiding councillor, of the great intimacy between negro slaves and the neutral French.

Richard Floyd writes from Brookhaven to the council, advising them of the sailing of one-half the militia of Suffolk Co.

A signed opinion of several masters of vessels presents what they believe is the best mode of fortifying the city.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Aug. 677.

French prisoners are transferred from the New York jail to the care of Col. Richard Stillwell and Sheriff Maurice Lott of Kings County, who were called before the council the day before.—Cal. Min. 435. This is in accordance with a decision of the council on July 22—Ibid., 435. On Aug. 18, such prisoners were ordered sent to Suffolk County by water.—Ibid., 456.

The council orders Francis Stevens, the king's store-keeper, and Christopher Blundell, store-keeper at Fort George, to deliver to John Brant, a pilot, material for the Newerisk beacon fortifications.—Cal. Min. 435.

Jacob Goelet, reporting on the proper place of cannon for the defence of New York City, recommends Dominies Hook on the North River, Des Brosses battery, and Albany pier on the East River, and it is so ordered.—Cal. Min. 435.

The embargo against the exportation of provisions is removed.—Ibid., 435.

The council hears from Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey (who is at Albany) that troops from Fort William Henry were returning in distressing condition; the militia of Suffolk and Queens Counties are to return home.—Ibid., 436.

The provincial council orders Christopher Blundell, store-keeper at Fort George, to deliver the key of the magazine under the north-west bastion of Fort George to Francis Stevens, king's store-keeper.

The council advises the lieutenant-governour to call the assembly to meet either on Long Island or in Westchester County (see Aug. 23)—Cal. Min. 456. Also a report of the number of cannon and the amount of stores wanted for the battery and fort at New York bears this date; also a list of vessels, giving their names and the names of their captains, appointed for transport service, with appraisements.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Aug. 678.

Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey returns from Albany. The assembly is directed to meet at Harlem (see Aug. 31)—Cal. Min. 456.

The common council reimburses Major Cruger for advances, amounting to $16518.89, paid by him "for officers Billets the last winter."—M. C., VI: 98. For later officers' billets, see July 12, 1758, May 4, 1759.

On account of James Brewerton for provisions and houses for French neutrals, numbering 78 persons, at the Brooklyn ferry, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Aug. 678.

A warrant is issued to impress sloops, boats, and other vessels of small draft, for well.—Ibid.

The provincial council issues a warrant to Lieut. Duncan to impress vessels for transporting the Earl of Loudon and his troops from Halifax to New York.—Cal. Min. 456.

Christopher Kilby, one of the contractors for victualling the force, presents a memorial seeking a warrant to impress provisions for 8000 men to be sent to Albany.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Aug. 678.

The council orders pilots to look out at Sandy Hook for Lord Loudon's transports.—Cal. Min. 456.

The return of Lord Loudon with his fleet from Halifax marks...
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

1757: the beginning of the end of the expedition against Louisbourg.

Aug. On Aug. 1 and 2, the troops at Halifax had embarked for a supposed attack on that objective, but plans were suddenly changed and the forces divided. On Aug. 18, Admiral Holbourn with his forces, consisting of 9 ships, set sail to capture the French fleet at Louisbourg; Gov. Lawrence and his part of the fleet went to the Bay of Fundy; and the remaining vessels, under Loudoun, were convoyed to New York. On Sept. 24, Holbourn’s ships were so shattered by storm that a definite end to the campaign for this year resulted. The men, who returned to New York, were sent immediately by Dec. 29, 1756. See June 20, 1757; and March 4, 1758.

Sept. Since the beginning of the war, 39 privates have been fitted out at New York. For an enumeration of them, showing number of guns and men, see Man. Com. Coun. (1780), 871.

5 During September, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privates: the sloops “St. George,” “Little David,” and “Harlequin;” and the ship “Hunter.” — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 679.

The following advertisement shows the operation of the early post-office: “A Letter is now at the New-Printing-Office in Beaver-street, from Mary Kethby, Annapolis, or Long-Island, with the greatest Dispatch: And as it is thought to be of great Consequence, this Method is taken to inform him of it.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1757.

9 The privateer “Harlequin” enters port and her captain reports that with the aid of a Rhode Island privateer he captured three French vessels bound from the West Indies to Bordeaux with cargoes of sugar, coffee, and cotton. One prize he brought into harbour with him; the other two were taken into a Rhode Island port. — N. Y. Merc., Sept. 12, 1757.

The July mail arrives from England. One item of news is that “a sumptuous Mansion belonging to Mr. Westminster Abbey, to the Memory of Sir Peter Warren.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 12, 1757. Warren died in Dublin on July 26, 1752 (r. v.) — Ibid., Oct. 30, 1752.

The council receives a request from the lords of trade for an account of iron made in the colonies. — Cal. Coun. Min., 176.

17 Samuel Holland draws a plan of that portion of the city which extends about two miles north from the present Chambers Street, from river to river. It is entitled “A Plan of the North East Environs of the City of New-York, Performed by Order of his Excellency the Earl of Loudon on the 4th of May.” It is evidently intended to show the surrounding country (see July 6, 1754). — Ibid., 1757. The plan shows脩 very clearly outlined, the Nicholas Bayard estate, with an avenue of trees leading to it from the “High Road” (Bowery Road); also the estate of Lieut.-Gov. “Somerdicks,” to the north of Bayard’s, but on the opposite (east) side of the High Road. It also shows the Widow Rutgers estate, west of the Fresh Water Pond; the slaughter-house, powder magazine, pot baker’s, ropewalk (extending in a northeasterly direction from the present Chatham Square), and the Jews burying-ground. The plan is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pt. 36-b (from the original in the state library); see also Man. Com. Coun. (1839), opp. 102. Writing in 1757, William Smith said that the palisades had “bob-house at small distances;” also “The greater part of them still stand as a monument of our folly, which cost the province about five thousand.” — Smith, Hist. of the Prov. of N. Y., (1757), 188. See also April, 1754; and May 8, 1761; and “Palisades of 1746,” in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945.

25 The following advertisement shows the commission for two sloops, “Immaculate Concepcion and St. Ignatius de Loiola,” sailing under a pass from the Pope, having been taken by two privateers, and set free, petitions that his agents, Lewis Morris, Jr., and Robt. L. Livingston, may land (presumably at New York) and sell articles of his to pay for refitting of said sloops, as far as may be attached to a libel of the commanders of the privateers “Revenge” and “Hornet.” — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 679. Four certificates as to the repairs and stores needed bear date of Oct. 19. One of these Sept. asserts that a new suit of sails will cost £445. — Ibid., 680.

“His Excellency Lord Loudon, has removed his Dwelling from Whitehall to Fort-George, in this City.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 26, 1757.

The privateer “Royal Hester” arrives with two prizes, esteemed the richest brought into America during this war, “being valued at upwards of £30,000.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 5, 1757.

During October, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: 1 “Lovely Martha,” the ships “Spadill” and “Duke of Cumberland,” and the brigantines “Earl of Loudoun,” “Johnson,” and “Betsy.” — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 679-80.

William Walton marries Miss Polly de Lancey, daughter of Gov. De Lancey, “at his Honour’s House in the Bowery.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 10, 1757. The alliance of these two families had more than passing interest in the history of the city. Both names figured prominently for many years in the official, commercial, and land-title, records of early New York.

A List of Privates fitted and fitting out of New York, since the commencement of the present War, to the 10th of October, 1757,” was printed in The American Country Almanack for the Year of Christian Account, 1758 (pub. by Parker & Weyman). This was reprinted in the Hist. Mag., 2d ser., VI: 250.

In an advertisement of this date, mention is made of Benjamin Parson’s “Corner House” facing the Greenwich Market, where he sells “Rum, Wine, Arrack, Sugar, and Molasses; Wholesale or Retail. Also sundry shop Goods; Beef and Pork by the Barrel; And, Indian Corn.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757. The general store of this kind is frequently mentioned in advertisements of the colonial period.

Ebenezer Grant, in Hanover Square, sells at wholesale or retail “Best Madeira, and other Wines, old Jamaica Rum and Brandy by the Five Gallons, or less Quantity; best Florence Oil by the Bette, Spices of all Sorts; Black Pepper, pounded Rhubarb; best Derby Mustard by the Bottle, Muscovado and Loaf Sugar, rum, Tea, and Chocolate, Currents, and Raisins; best French Indigo; and Scotts Souff to Bladders.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

As appears from an advertisement of this date, Gaine’s printing-office in Queen Street is now the house of Garden Proctor, a watchmaker, where William Proctor sells Peruvian Cortex (Jesuits Bark). — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

There are advertised for sale “The two corner houses and ground, belonging to the estate of the late Cornelius Depeyster, deceased, near the New-Exchange; the one fronting the Great-Doek, now in the tenure of Mr. Peter Goleet; the other fronting the street wherein his house now lies; both pleasantly situated, and convenient for a merchant or a shopkeeper.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

“Lawrence Kilbourn[,] Linmer, from London, Continues as usual, to draw to the Life. Ladies and Gentlemens that have not as yet seen many of his Performances may now have an Opportunity of viewing sundry Pieces together, which he hath drawn to the entire Satisfaction of the Persons for whom they were designed. He may be applied to at his Lodgings, at the House of Mr. Peter Roosevelt, in Bayard’s Street.” — N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 17, 1757.

Proceedings are commenced to build barracks on the Commons. These are for the use of the king’s troops. — Assem. Jour., III: 529.

The common council appoints a committee to consult with the principal carpenters of the city to determine “what material can be taken” for immediately providing materials for “The Building on and Completing Barracks” to contain 900 men, and whether a sufficient number of carpenters can be had to complete the barracks in a fortnight. — M. C. C., VI: 108. The committee reported on Oct. 21 that it had consulted with “the most principal Carpenters of this City,” and that they were of the opinion that it would be impossible to obtain the required materials at that moment. The common council resolved that the building be carried on forthwith under the direction and inspection of this committee, with power to treat with such persons and purchase such materials as they might judge proper. It was further ordered that the building should be 420 feet long by 21 feet wide, and contain 20 rooms, two stories high, each 21 x 21 feet square; also that the building should be built “on some of the Common Lands of this Corporation, to the southward of freshwater Between the New Goal House and Oct. the house of Catemuts."

At the same meeting a committee was named "to wait on the Governor and Council, and Request of them to draw a warrant on the Treasurer of the Colony, in favor of the Corporation for a sufficient sum to build and Compleat said Barracks out of the monies in his hands Raised for fortifications," and that this committee shall have power to agree "that the monies so to be drawn for shall be Replaced by this Corporation in Case the General assembly shall not allow and approve of such Draught." —Ibid., VI: 111-12. On Oct. 25, the governor and council permitted the loan. —Cal. Cmfs. Min., 436.

At a meeting of the common council held at the work house, Oct. 25, a committee was appointed to receive of Christopher Bancker and John Dies the £2,000 which "they Received of the Treasurer of the Colony out of the fortification money, by Virtue of a warrant to them from the Governor and Council the said sum to be applied towards Building of Barracks in or near this City, pursuant to a Resolution of this Board," on Oct. 21. —Ibid., VI: 113. The work of actual construction of the barracks was soon under way. —See Oct. 31, 1757.

A minute of the common council relative to building barracks for 800 men hears this date. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 680.

The remainder of the household furniture of Sir Charles Hardy is advertised to be sold on this day; "Also the Chariot, Horses, &c. and Drums, &c. of the New York Train Band," —N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 24, 1757.

A range of barracks (see Oct. 19) is being built "on the Common, near Fresh-Water," 424 feet long, to accommodate 1,000 soldiers. It is to be finished "at the Expense of the Corporation," and as soon as possible. —N. Y. Merc., Oct. 31, 1757. The first remit of payment for equipment and operation of the new barracks is dated Nov. 29, 1757; namely, £200 for firewood. Another payment was made the same day for firewood for the barracks at the Battery. —M. G. C., VI, 117-18. Presumably the building was then finished. John Dempsey was paid by the city, Sept. 26, 1757, a balance of £500 for 289 in full payment for what he had advanced and expended on the "New Barracks." —Ibid., VI: 145. For the arrangement perfected to repay the sum borrowed of the provincial treasury (see Oct. 19) to build these barracks, see Dec. 24, 1757.

For later references, see "Upper Barracks," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 942.

The brig "De Lancey" arrives in port with one of two "French-Dutch" ships captured on Oct. 22. The other prize arrived Nov. 15. —N. Y. Merc., Nov. 14 and 21, 1757.

On this date, a warrant is received from Cadwalader Colden a map of the western frontier, and his recommendation for a line of blockhouses; this is adopted. —Cal. Cmfs. Min., 437.

An addition to the law "for the better preventing of fire" is passed by the common council. It prohibits the placing or keeping of any "hay or straw in Barracks or in any other House or their yards or Yards Garden or Gardens, or in any other place or places, to the Southward of Freshwater;" the keeping or putting of hay or straw "in any House Stable or other Building to the Southward of the Freshwater that is or shall be within Ten feet of any Chimney Hearth or fire place, or place for keeping ashes," etc. —M. G. C., VI: 116.

President Johnson of King's College having retired with his family to Westchester, on account of the small-pox in the city, to remain there a year, leaves in the college about thirty pupils, in the three classes; and the tutor, Mr. Outwater, being unable to do justice to them all, the board of governours appoints, as professor of mathematics and natural history, Daniel Treadwell, "a young gentleman of a very excellent character, educated at Harvard College, and recommended by Professor Winthrop as eminently qualified for that station." This was the first professorship established in the college. Mr. Treadwell had begun his duties on Nov. 15; his annual stipend was to be £100. Soon after this, mathematical and philosophical instruments were purchased, and Rev. Dr. Brittowe (see 1756) bequeathed to the college his library of about 1,500 books. —Hist. of Columbia Unive. (1904), 22, citing Chandler's Life of Johnson.

At the meeting of the governours on Nov. 8, the vestry-room was assigned to Prof. Treadwell; and Mr. Cutting, the tutor, was obliged to take his classes in his private lodgings, for which he was allowed £20 per annum, and his salary was raised from £80 to Nov. £100. —Ibid., 22-23. President Johnson returned in March, 1758. —Ibid., 25.

The provincial council (Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey presiding) received a royal order approving the act disposing of part of the Philip van Cortlandt estate. —Cal. Cmfs. Min., 490.

During November, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for the commenders of the snow "Hetter," and the sloops "Keiziah" and "Harlequin," and the brigantine "De Ley'er." —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 681.

Col. Peter Schuyler, who had been taken prisoner at Oswego on Aug. 14, 1755, and carried to Quebec, arrives in New York by way of Albany. "At Night, several publick Buildings, in this City, were handomely illuminated, on the Colonel's happy Return; and an elegant Entertainment made on the Occasion, at the King's Arms Tavern. . . ." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 21, 1757.

The council orders that warrants be issued to impress sloops for military transportation to Albany. —Cal. Cmfs. Min., 457.

Firewood is paid for by the common council for "the Gard House and Hospital." —M. G. C., VI: 117. A guard-house at the Battery is mentioned in Ibid., VIII: 116. Montcresson calls the barracks at the Battery the "Military Hospital." (Pl. 40, Vol. I).

The St. Andrew's Society holds its first annual meeting, at "Scotch Johnny's," after which the members, with a number of Scotch army men who are in this town, "in a most elegant and sociable Manner. Many loyal and patriot Healths were drank on the Occasion, heartily, yet soberly. In the Evening, the same Company gave a Ball and Entertainment, at the Exchange-Room and King's Arms Tavern, to the Town; at which a large and polite Company of both Sexes assembled. The Ladies in particular, made a most brilliant Appearance; and it is thought there scarcely ever was before so great a number of elegantly dress'd fine Woman seen together at one Place in North-America. As there were a great many of his Majesty's Officers present, several too of the first Ranks, who had never before seen a publick Company of Ladies in this Part of the World, they were most agreeably surpriz'd and struck with the charming Sight. . . ." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1757. For organisation of this society, see Nov. 19, 1756.

A large French prize ship of about 400 tons, loaded with sugar, is now "coming up." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1757.

After adjournment from time to time since Sept. 3, the "House" (of representatives) meets, by direction of the lieutenant-governor, "in the Assembly Chamber, at the House of Mr. Truxis Somerndyck, in the Bowery Division of the Out-ward." —Assemb. Jour., II: 539. This is on account of the small-pox in the city. —See Feb. 15 and Aug. 31, 1757. Meetings continued here until Dec. 24. —Ibid., II: 547.

The last session met here from Jan. 24 to Feb. 4, 1758 (ibid., II: 547); and again from March 7 to 24 (ibid., II: 548, 555), and from May 2 to June 5, 1758 (ibid., II: 555, 560).

Meetings were resumed in the city hall on Nov. 14, 1758. —Ibid., II: 566.

For location of the Somerndyck house, see Pl. 46b, Vol. I, and cf. Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 932. On Dec. 18, 1761, the assembly allowed Somerndyck £50 for the use of his house by that body. —Assemb. Jour., II: 684. The foregoing official record of the meeting of the assembly of Dec. 6 is oddly different from the minutes kept by William Smith, who affirmed that, instead of the meeting being held (as by some said) at De Lancey's kitchen, they "met in an out-house occupied by the overseer of his own farm upon the skirts of the town." —Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. T., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1856), V: 258.

The council receives newspapers which contain mention of the appointment, in England, of Robert Cholmondeley as surveyor and auditores-general of the revenues in America. —Ibid., 457.

Four certificates of this date, by the master and wardens of the port of New York, attest that four shipmasters are each qualified for the office of branch pilot. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 681.

During December, petitions are made, beginning on this day,

15 The west range of barracks in the fort, with its stores, is destroyed by fire, caused by sailors working in one of the rooms, "who had left the charge of their fire with their Lordship." It had been burned by the governor's house in the fort, and Gov. Hardy lived in his own house half a mile out of town. The loss by this fire was £570.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 341-42. The N. Y. Post-Boy (Dec. 19) stated that the fire broke out on the 15th, but the N. Y. Merc. (Dec. 19) and the Penn. Cour. (Dec. 29) reported it as occurring on the 18th. It was probably in the night.

19 The provincial council refers to the assembly the following accounts, with others: that of Sir Charles Hardy and John Dies for repairs of a house in Fort George; of Margaret Steels for boarding French prisoners; and of John van Remselaer for express services. —Col. Coun. Min., 47.

24 It is stated in a legislative act that "the free quartering of soldiers in the City of New York has by experience been found too unequal as well as too heavy a burthen for the inhabitants to bear." To relieve them, "the corporation have erected proper and convenient barracks near the stockade for those already built and furnished them with Cribs Beds Bolters [sic] Tables Benches Firewood Candles and other Necessaries;" and it is further stated that "the expense of free Quartering of Officers at the Requisition of the Earl of Loudoun together with the Necessary and Contingent Charges have so much Exhausted Their Treasury that they are at present unable to Pay and discharge the Debts Accrued in Building Barracks and furnishing them with Necessaries without the Aid . . . of the Legislature." It is therefore enacted that the common council may annually use a sum not exceeding £5,000 by a tax upon the real and personal estates of all the "Freethinkers Free-men Inhabitants Residents and Sojourners within the City of New York." The city is allowed to retain title to the soil on which barracks are built or to be built, as these barracks are "for the relief of the inhabitants . . . from Billeting of Soldiers in time of War," and may be rented out at other times as the common council sees fit. —Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 211-14.

On Dec. 29, the common council took steps to put the act into effect. Receipts were filed by J. de Peyster, Jr., showing that he had received, for use on the barracks, sums aggregating £3,000, from Aldermen Livingstone and Linnean. —M. C. C., VI: 119-20. On March 30, 1758, John de Peyster, Jr., was reimbursed in the sum of £400, advanced by him for firewood and candles for the barracks, and £500 additional on April 1. —Ibid., VII: 128, 129.

On April 1, the day appointed in the act above cited, the collectors of the various wards turned over to the common council sums aggregating £3,928:13:18, out of which Aldermen Linnean and Livingston paid to the treasurer of the colony £2,000 which they had borrowed (see Oct. 19, 1757). —Ibid., VII: 128-29. Later items of expense and payment on the barracks were as follows: On May 18, 1758, Abraham de Peyster, the colonial treasurer, was paid by the city £414:16, "being what this Board paid short on the two Thousand pounds by them Borrowed of the Government for Building of the Barracks the Last fall." —Ibid., VII: 134.

On Oct. 17, 1758, the common council resolved to "provide fire wood, Candles and Straw for the New Barracks, the Encasing winter for the Quartering of Such of his Majesties Troops as shall be order'd to this City." —Ibid., VII: 151. On Nov. 23, 40 "pot Hooks & Chains" were provided. —Ibid., VII: 159. On Dec. 8, the mayor reported that General Amherst Requests of this Corporation a Blanket for Each of the New Barracks for his Majesties Troops there, and they were accordingly ordered. —Ibid., VII: 161. On March 7, 1760, David Provostt was reimbursed for the expense for 92 "Trammells for the Barracks." —Ibid., VII: 207.

Regarding later accounting for the maintenance of these barracks, see the entry for May 25, 276, 308, 322, 358, 376 in the Col. Coun. Min., 1856, 506; and "Upper Barracks" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 944. The common council, Jan. 15, 1759 (p. v), ordered the sale and removal of the buildings.

Later act is passed (see Dec. 1, 1756) "for Raising by a Publick Assessment on the Colony the sum of £1,155, towards finishing a New Goal in the City of New York." The methods of conducting the lottery, and keeping the accounts, are defined in the act in the usual manner. The first Tuesday in April next is set as the time set for closing the sale of the 5,000 tickets. —Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 202.

Advertisements of this period reflect the material advantages enjoyed by the people. For instance, Henry van Vleck, at his shop in Wall Street, sells "Striped blankets, red and blue duffels, kerseys, striped swanskins, flannels, green, red and blue pencions, cotton romsalls, coat and vest buttons." —N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 26, 1757.

In a notice in the N. Y. Post-Boy of this date, mention is made of "the Ferry-Stairs near the Fly-Market," Late in the year 1754 (M. C. C., VII: 162) a committee of the common council was empowered to permit this neighbourhood "to build a Convenient pair of Stairs in the Said Slip at their Own Expense." About a year later (ibid., VII: 185), a similar record appeared. We have evidence in this newspaper extract that the stairs were actually constructed.

Pitt informs Gen. Abercrombie that, in order to begin the invasion of Canada as soon as possible, the king "has been pleased to direct the Governor or Lieut. Gov. of New York to provide such a Number of Boats, and such Vessels, as you and the said Governor or L' Gov. shall judge sufficient for the use of the Troops, &c." —Corresp. of Wm. Pitt with Colonial Governors, I: 145. He wrote to De Lancey on the same day to induce New York to raise a large body of men for service against Canada. —Ibid., I: 154-55; N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 379.

Lord Jeffrey Amherst is appointed commander of a division of the British army in America; James Wolfe is his lieutenant.—Mayo, Jeffrey Amherst, A Biography, 42-65.

1758

At some time prior to this year, and after 1754 when he opened a house at Trenton Ferry for travellers between New York and Philadelphia (N. Y. Post-Boy, April 17, 1757), George Burns had returned to New York and become proprietor of a tavern on Wall St., opposite the First Presbyterian Church, where he hung out the sign of Admiral Warren (see Feb. 20, 1749, and May 29, 1758). In the spring of 1758, Burns replaces "Scoth Johnny" as inn-keeper of the noted Crown and Thistle, at Whitehall, but the sign of Admiral Warren continued to be maintained at the Wall St. site.

Walter Brock was proprietor in 1765 (N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 17, 1765), and his house, generally called "Brock's Tavern," was often used as a meeting-place for committees of the common council, because of its proximity to the city hall. Brock died before Jan. 19, 1771, when the house, then in the possession of his widow, was offered for sale. It was described as 3 stores high, having 7 fireplaces, and "completely finished." —N. Y. Merc., Jan. 7, 1771. On May 20, 1773, Mrs. Brock announced that she had moved to Whitehall, to "that elegant and pleasant situated House . . . the sign of the fry'd Oysters." —N. Y. Gen. Adv., May 30, 1773. By 1774, the old tavern on Wall St. had become a hair-dressing establishment, but during the Revolution it was temporarily revived under the name of "Burrow's Tavern," and was a head-quarters for Loyalists. —Rivington's N. Y. Loyal Gaz., Oct. 18, 1785. On Feb. 16, 1778, the house was sold by Mrs. Kibble, and described as "A large corner house at upper end of Wall-street, opposite the Old Presbyterian Meeting, for many years past a noted tavern." —N. Y. Merc., Feb. 16, 1778.

The German Reformed Church, writing to the classis of Amsterdam on Feb. 5, 1766, stated that, about 1758, it bought, for 1,370 dollars, the theatre building on N. South St., and fitted it up for public worship, thereby incurring a debt of 2,000 dollars.—Eccles. Rec., 1758 VI: 4038. The location was 62 and 66 Nassau St., on the east side of the street, between John St. and Maiden Lane. There is no deed record, however, in either New York or Albany, showing a transfer from the estate of Riph Van Dam to the German Reformed Church of the property deeded to its church. An Act of 1755, is recorded in Albany (secretary of state's office), which, in form, appears to be a mortgage in trust, for church purposes, from one board of trustees to another, covering lots 5 and 6 on a map made by Francis Maeschalck of the Riph Van Dam property bought by this church, on part of which the old theatre stood—Wadhams, X: 568-69. See also, March 8, 1756; and "First German Reformed Church (first site)," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935.

Jan. A map is made of "the Lotts calledly Spring Garden lots" (see Aug. 28, 1754), as divided in this month. This is preserved in the Bancker Collection (see B-E, folder 73), N.Y. Pub. Library.

During January, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the ships "Thorton," "Phaeton," and "George," the brigantine "New York," and the packet "Curaga."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 682.

Thomas Pownall, now governor of Massachusetts, communicates with the council at New-York.—Cal. Coun. Min., 438. See March 14, 1755.

Fifty-nine prizes have been brought into New York from the beginning of the war to this day. Twenty-six others have been sent to other ports by New York privateers. For the list of these, see N. Y. Merca., Jan. 9, 1758.

Joseph Hancock advertises that he still continues to carry on the stage business, attending in New York at Whitehall Slip, and in Philadelphia at the Crooked-Billot Wharf. He conducts his stages in conjunction with Daniel O'Brien (see Feb. 23, 1756). This notice is given because "there is another Stage set up from the same Places, which may impose on the Public."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1758.

Another stage-line between New York and Philadelphia, requiring the shortest "water carriage," is advertised: "Reuben Fitzrandolph attends with a good Boat at the Whitehall Slip in New-York, every Tuesday and Friday, to carry Goods or Passengers to the Blazing-Star where a good Wagggon by Isaac Fitzrandolph, will set out every Wednesday and Saturday for New-Brunswick, where another Wagggon by Francis Holliman, will set out every Monday and Thursday for Trenton Ferry, and then another Wagggon by Humphry Mount will set out every Tuesday and Friday, directly into Philadelphia. The said Mount sets out from the Sign of the George in Second-Street Phila-delphia, every Monday and Thursday for Trenton; and weather permitting, the Waggons will be regular in meeting and exchanging their Passengers and Goods. And it is by much the least Water-Carriage of any yet attempted between New-York and Philadelphia and is through the thickest inhabited Part of the Country, and the best Entertainment, it is hoped this Undertaking will meet with all due Encouragement, whilst the most careful Means shall be used to give Satisfaction to the Public . . ."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1758.

The council directs that the list of French prisoners brought in by privateers be delivered to the mayor.—Cal. Coun. Min., 438.

The account of Christopher Bancher for moneys expended between 1755 and 1758 for a battery, blockhouses, etc., in New York, is submitted.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 681. See Feb. 19, 1755.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to saih the assembly Chamber in the City Hall and make such other necessary ornamental Reparation to the said Chamber as they shall Judge proper."—M. C. C., VI: 123.

The preparations of the king's instructions against captures of Spanish vessels by privateers sailing out of New York bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 683.

John Philips, "Teacher of the French Tongue," gives public notice to his scholars "that he is removed from Mr. Wrage's to Doctor S. Samwll's; his residence is opposite to Aaron Nassau St. A bond, Bake-House, in New Dutch Church-street; where he will attend them every evening, from the Hour of Five, till Eight." He adds: "Any Person willing to learn, may depend upon being taught in the most Modern and Expeditious Method; and according to Mr. Paullaret's System; who had the Honour of Teaching the Royal-Family."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 30, 1758. For more particulars about the teaching of French, see Jan. 16, 1761.

The council orders that a warrant be issued to Capt. John Bradstreet for impressing workmen, ordinary officers, carriages, etc. for military uses.—Cal. Coun. Min., 438.

John Dowers, tavern-keeper, near Spring Garden, advertises Feb. 6 that a "single sleigh" has been left at his door, which the owner may have proof of its right.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 6, 1758. The tavern of John Dowers evidently stood at this time on the west side of Broadway at the south-east corner of the rectangular block between Ann and Fulton Sts., being a part of Spring Garden. As no building appears here on Maeschalck's map of the city, made in 1754-5 (Pl. 34, Vol. I), the house was probably erected between 1755 and 1758. On March 4, 1758, John Dowers, "Vintner," and Deborah, his wife, mortgaged this property to John Beckman.—Liber Mortgages, 1: 75. On April 27 of the same year, a second mortgage was given to Simon Johnson (ibid., 1: 82-83), and on May 28, 1759, it was again mortgaged by Dowers, to Richard Bidder.—Ibid., 1: 123. It is to be noted that the first two mortgages do not mention a house, while the last recites one. Dowers offered the property for sale in October, 1759. He described it as a "Tavern, having the Sign of the King of Prussia, and next Door to Dr. Johnson's."—See Oct. 8, 1759. The lot was on lease from Trinity Church, and Dr. Johnson was the first president of King's College. See Ibid. on Jan. 11, 1760, Dowers was trying to dispose of the house. This he succeeded in doing, for by June 2, 1760 (p. v.), John Keats was conducting a tavern in the Fields, where he hung out the sign of the "King of Prussia," which he had evidently acquired from Dowers. The latter now removed to another site, on Broadway and Robinson St., where he opened another tavern, this time at the "Sign of King George III."—See Jan. 25, 1762. Dowers mortgaged this property on May 2, 1761, to John Maron Scott.—Liber Mortgages, 1: 250-51. He was still keeping tavern in the West Ward in 1773 when his wife "Jane" was witness at an inquest over the body of a young woman who had been burned on a stocks for the murder of her husband. The coroner's verdict seems to indicate that the Dowers house and that of Mary Harvey next door were not altogether reputable. The verdict was that the woman "being intoxicated with Liquor, her Clothes accidentally, and by Mis-fortune took Fire, whereby she was badly burned, and languished from the 17th of April till the 1st of May, and then died, and so came by her Death in Manner and Form as aforesaid, and not otherwise."—N. Y. Jour., May 13, 1773. The old tavern of Dowers in Spring Garden had passed into the hands of John Kerby by Feb. 24, 1768 (p.v.).

Lord Loudoun sets out for Hartford, accompanied by Gov. De Lancey, to meet Gov. Thomas Pownall of Massachusetts, the commissioners of New Hampshire, etc.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 20, 1758.

Roper Dawson, merchant, secures a lease of the "upper part of the Exchange together with the Room under the stair" for the term of three years, at £50 a year. The city reserves the right of "making use of the premises . . . four Days in Each Year."—M. C. C., VI: 124. Dawson afterwards advertised to sell "green tea, coffee, &c." at "the Long Room over the Exchange."—N. Y. Merca., July 10, 1758.

Two of the aldermen are required by the common council to "wait upon Archibald Kennedy Esq., and purchase for him for this Corporation the Island Commonly Called Bedloes Island (see April 14, 1755) for a sum not exceeding one thousand pounds in order to Erect thereon a part House and make Report thereof to this Board how and in what manner they have Treated with him for the same." They report immediately that they have agreed to pay Kennedy £1,600 in two payments, £500 on the first, and £1,100 on the first of May, 1759.—M. C. C., VI: 124. This agreement was confirmed by the Board on the 26th of June, and the amount of £1,000 to be paid in two parts, £500 on "his Executing to this Board a Release for the same," and £500 on "the first of May next [1759] by bond without Interest."—Ibid., VI: 131.
An embargo is laid on all outward-bound vessels of more than 50 tons, a count having been made ten days before those in the harbour.—Journal of Hugh Gaine, II: 13, 14; Cal. Coun. Min., 438.

The general assembly votes ten pounds bounty to each able-bodied man who voluntarily enlist in the king's service for the province of New York.—Assem. Jour., III: 551.

De Lancy, writing to Secretary Pitt, says: "... the country is drained of many able-bodied men, by almost a kind of madness to risk the peril of a voyage, and even in the Bagaduce and Penobscot numbers are necessarily impressed for waggons to carry up provisions etc., so that the Assembly have voted more Men [2680], than I had encouragement to expect from them."

"... My Brother Oliver De Lancy having undertaken the Command, his example will I believe have a good effect on other Gentlemen, and facilitate the raising men..."—N.Y. Col. Docs., VII: 347.

Major-Gen. Abercrombie issues orders for the recruiting officers and the absent officers of various battalions of the "Royal Americans," and of Montgomery's and Fraser's "Highlanders," to join their regiments; and for those of the 17th and 22nd Regiments "to repair to New-York." He offers pardons to deserters who shall return and join their regiments on or before May 1.—N.Y. Post-Boy, March 20, 1758.

The embargo is extended to vessels above 25 tons.—Cal. Coun. Min., 439.

A warrant is issued to the deputy quarter-master-general, to impress carpenters, etc., for fitting out transports, etc.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 684.

An act is passed to prevent bringing small-pox, yellow fever, and other diseases, into the colony. It provides that all vessels having persons with such diseases on board or clearing from infected ports shall quarantine at Bedloe's Island until released.—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 237-39. For earlier act, see May 3, 1755. On April 17, printed copies of this act were ordered distributed among the pilots.—Cal. Coun. Min., 439. Despite all precautions, the city was visited by a serious outbreak of small-pox the next year.—See June 2, 1759.

The assembly passes the act desired by De Lancy (see March 10), for raising, paying, and clothing 2682 soldiers, to join the forces of the neighbouring colonies (amounting in all to 20,000 men), to invade Canada "in conjunction with a Body of His Majesties Regular Troops." The sum of £100,000 is to be raised for this purpose by a levy on the real and personal estates of all the "Freeholders Inhabitants and Residents within this Colony." The quota of the city and county of New York is £3,000, payable in the next two years. Bills of credit are to be printed by James Fetter, having on the right side "the Arms of the City of New York and under the Arms in the different Characters these words r'ts DEATH TO COUNTERFEIT THIS BILL." If volunteers are insufficient before April 15, the lieutenant-governour is empowered to supply the deficiency by detachments from the militia. New York City and Country are required to furnish 330 effective men.—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 245-35. See March 25.

De Lancy publishes a proclamation announcing the government act of March 24 (p. 49). He states that, as an encouragement to persons to enlist voluntarily, certain specified payments are allowed; also certain specified clothing for each man (which includes "a Pair of Buckskin Breeches"), as well as tents and other necessities for the campaign.—N.Y. Post-Boy, April 3, 1758.

An auction is advertised to be held on April 12, at Fort George, of "all the Horses, Coaches, Plate, and Furniture belonging to the Right Honourable the Earl of Loudoun. Inventories of which may be seen at Mayor Robertson's."—N.Y. Post-Boy, March 27, 1758. See March 4, April 17.

Capt. John Montresor arrives in New York from his cantonment, by Abercrombie's orders, and is appointed "an Engineer on the Establishment," and ordered to proceed to Louisburgh. The "Harmpshire," "Leviathan," and "Scarborough" are in the harbour.—Montresor's Jour, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1881), 152. Montresor was engaged for nearly two years, beginning Nov. 23, 1764 (p. 49), in important work as a military engineer in and about New York City.

Part of the 48th Regiment (500 men) arrive from Livingston's Manor, to join their regiment "at their Counthomes in the Jerseys."—Montresor's Jour, (op. cit.), 152. The movements of other troops and of transports are also recorded in this Journal.
1758. "The Ordnance ships loading as fast as possible with stores for the Expedition. Seven provided for that purpose. At the Ordnance wharf on that part of the town fronting the North River." Apr.

1.

2. De Lancey issues a proclamation asking all men who enlist, who possess arms of their own, to bring them "to the Rendezvous" (Halifax), believing they will prefer their own to those furnished "by the Crown," being lighter, and the owners being accommodated to them under a much less risk of losing or damaging service, the commander-in-chief will make good the loss in money. And as a Powder-Horn, Shot-Bag, with a Case for the Lock of their Gun, to preserve it from the Weather, are thought more proper for the present Service than the common Accoutrements, are also recommended. They shall receive it accordingly. De Lancey further requires that all justices of the peace and sheriffs shall cause diligent search to be made for arms concealed by deserters, to seize and send them to New York, to be delivered to Christopher Blundell, the store-keeper at Fort George. —N. Y. Post-Boy, April 10, 1758.

3. This is the day on which the sale of the belongings of the Earl of Loudoun was advertised to be held (see March 25), prior to his departure for home on April 28 (p. v). See also April 17.

4. The 17th and 2d Regiments arrive from Albany, and are "ordered to remain on board their respective sloops till they are hailed ready to receive them." —Montresor's Jour., op. cit., 152.

5. The city's possession and care of implements of war is shown in a record of a payment "for Cleansing the City's arms, fitting the Bayonets &c." (M. C. C., Vol. 150. In 1682, the military watch appointed for the day was under orders from the provincial commander-in-chief, Brockhalls, who required, among other things, that each person appointed to be on watch should bring "his Sword and Gunn" (ibid., 1:91); but, in 1755, the city sent to England for 1,000 stand of arms, "in order to furnish those who have not Arms of their Own in Case of an Attack," and these arrived on or about Aug. 18 of that year (see Jan. 16 and Aug. 7, 1755).

6. On receipt of a letter of advices from Sir Charles Hardy, who is at Halifax, the council orders that vessels carrying provisions there shall be free from impress, and that a proclamation to this effect shall be issued, as well as to discontinue desertions. —Cal. Coun. Min., 459. De Lancey issues such proclamation, which states that, as the king has ordered "a considerable Number of Troops, with a powerful Fleet, to Rendezvous at Halifax," he has thought fit "to encourage the Inhabitants of this Province, to carry Provisions thither, for their Refreshment." He therefore gives notice "that the Persons employed on Board of Vessels laden with Provisions, for the said Port, will be free from all Impress, and have the utmost Countenance and Protection from the Commander of his Majesty's Ships there . . . ." He also gives notice that he "intended to perform the Deletion of Seamen at this time, when there is so great a Demand for their Service, to man the Transports fitting out in this Port, and a large Convoy of Transports are daily expected to arrive here from England, must be highly prejudicial to his Majesty's Service," he has thought fit that "all Persons, who shall harbour or conceal any Seaman, or other Deserters, belonging to any of his Majesty's Ships, or to any Transport Vessel, now, or which hereafter shall be in this Port, shall be prosecuted with the utmost Rigour of the Law." All magistrates, justices of the peace, sheriffs, constables, and other civil officers in the province, are commanded "to make, and cause diligent Search and Enquiry to be made for all such Deserters," to apprehend them, and cause them "to be sent to this City." To encourage enlistment in the transport service, those enlisting will be protected from impress during this service until their return home. —N. Y. Post-Boy, April 17, 1758. See also April 15.

7. A proclamation is issued setting apart May 12 as a day of fasting and prayer. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 655. See May 15.

8. Several muster rolls, showing the number, names, ages, and size of the men enlisted in the several counties, bear dates from April 15 to May 1758. —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685-86.

9. "Arrived in this harbour the Prince of Orange Privateer, her hands pressed as all vessels are when they come in. Genl Forbes set out from this place for Philadelphia for the Southern Expedition." —Montresor's Jour., op. cit., 152.

10. The quarantine is still maintained off Bedloeis Island to it the" 1758 at this place for his Majesty's service" have dropped down to May 1 Sandy Hook, "there to meet and join those that lately arrived from thither, under convoy of H. M. S., "Devonshire," of 46 guns; the "Hind," 20 guns; and the "Hunter," 18 guns, "making in all 84 guns. They were to be joined by the "Searic-borough" and the "Gramont." The "Diana" has already arrived at this rendezvous. On May 30, Commodore Durell, who had arrived at New York early in March, went to the Hook on the "Gramont," to "take charge of the fleet from thence to Halifax, whither they sail in a few days."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 13 and May 1, 1758: New Am. Mag. (Woodbridge, N. J., 1758), p. 102 of 3 A return of men furnished by Kings Co. bears this date; and a muster roll of the several companies of Suffolk Co. is dated May 4; a "size roll" of Capt. Brewerton's company of New York troops is dated May 5.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685.

4 The Earl of Loudoun sails for England on the "Hampshire," and the 17th and 22d Regiments embark for Halifax, the fleet consisting of 45 sail.—N. T. M., May 8, 1758. See May 1.

5 "Set sail yachts. Art's herd from New York [apparently at Sandy Hook—see April 24 and 26] with the Hampshire with Lord Loud-non to proceed to England. Signals fired this day from the Commodore for unmooring . . . The fleet sail's, the Hampshire in Company the whole consisting of about 58 sail."—Moniteur's Jour., op. cit., 155. This record proceeds with similar entries regarding movements of the ships, etc. The convoy consisted of the "Devonshire" (74 guns), "Ludlow Castle" (40), "Diana" (32), and the sloops "Gramont," "Hunter," and "Win-chelsea."—Ibid.

6 Yellow fever having been reported on April 18 on the privateer
"Oliver Cromwell," Dr. John Bain reports as to the sanitary condition of this ship and the "Prince of Orange," lying at quarantine.
—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685, 687. The former was discharged from quarantine on this day; the latter on May 8.—Cal. Coun. Min., 439.

10 Since Feb. 18 (g.v.), the common council has come to a new agreement with Archibald Kennedy for the purchase of "Bedloes Island," which he owns, and the board approves the draft of a release of the island to the city.—M. C. C., VI: 131-32, 133.

12 De Lancey issued a proclamation on April 14, appointing May 12 as "a Day of publick Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer, to supplecitate the Pardon of our Sins, and to inspire the divine Protection and Blessing on his Majesty's sacred Person, his illustrious Family, his Kingdoms and Colonies, Fleets and Armies."—N. T. Post-Boy, April 17, 1758.

15 On receipt of a letter from Gen. Abercrombie, the council takes off the embargo on exports of provisions.—Cal. Coun. Min., 439.

Also at the general's request, the council issues a warrant to Lieut.-Col. John Bradstreet to impress bateaux men.—Ibid., 439.

Jacob Goetzler is allowed £14:8: for binding 47 volumes of old records of the colony, for examining them, and translating various old Dutch documents. (See May 22.)

Mayor Cruger produces a letter at a meeting of the common council, which he has received from Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, in which it is stated that the writer has received word from Gen.
Abercrombie regarding "the difficulty there is to supply the Provincial Troops with Arms." The lieutenant-governor desires that the 1,000 stand of arms belonging to the city may be deerivered to Captain Macloed or other proper officers, with the assurance from the general that they will be replaced when the arms come from England "for the use of his majesty's Troops."—

De Lancey's original letter is preserved in metal file box No. 4, the city clerk's record-room. It is ordered that the following answer be given: "That as the arms Required of us, were purchased by this Corporation at a Very Great Expense for the use of the Inhabitants of this City and such other Bodies of the militia of the Country as may be Called into our assistance in Case of an Invasion and as so Dangerous an Event may with some Reason be specifically Expected,
It is with the utmost Concern and Reluctance the we who on all occasions are willing to Testify our obedience to the authority of Government, find ourselves Constrained from a sense of that duty which we owe as Trustees to the publick, to signify to Your honour our Imposition with your Command by Consenting to deprive the City of the use of their arms at this Critical and Important Jurctune. Hoping therefore that your Honour will not attribute our non Compliance to any Disposition to oppose the Demands of Government but to our absolute Inability to Comply with them in this Instance, We are," etc.—M. C. C., VI:

131-32.

17 May 19, however, De Lancey having urged compliance with his desire, "fearing that should he be obliged to Impress them for the service it might tend to Establish a Disagreeable president" (sic), and having also represented to the common council that the want of these arms "would Cause an unavoidable delay to the great prejudice of his majesty's service," the board decided not to part with the arms, "as they are immediately wanted in the service; and the necessity of them in the City this season is uncertain." The mayor was required to sign this answer, which stipulated that the arms were "to be paid for in Cash at the rate of three pounds five shillings for Each Muskett, in which sum we include the Cartouch Boxes Bayonets, fill'd Cartridges, flints and other acccumements belonging to them," and that the city was ready to deliver them to the comptroller of ordnance, or any other person properly authorized to receive them, "upon his giving us a receipt in Writing for the same, in order to the obtaining of a Warrant, from General Stanwicks for the payment of the money which he has been pleased to assure the mayor he will Grant us immediately upon producing such Receipt."—Ibid., VI: 135. See, further,
June 20.

19 John Dies is allowed £660 for material and workmanship on the house in Fort George.—Assemb. Jour., II: 557.

During May, petitions are made, on this day and on the 26th, for commissions of the commander of the snow "Greyhound" and the brigantine "King George," respectively.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685.

The assembly appoints a committee to wait on the governor with a complaint against the quartering of French prisoners for so long a time in the colony.—Assemb. Jour., II: 557. See July 24. De Lancey answered on May 23 that he would give orders to have them sent away as soon as possible.—Ibid., 557. See July 4.

Gen. Abercrombie writes from Albany to Pitt: "New York has . . . completed their Levies; four of their Companies came on duty at the same time with me, and are arrived; the Remainder, I am told, are in Motion, so that we may expect them all in here soon . . . prior to my Departure for this Place . . . I embarked nine Companies of the 4th Battalion of Royal Americans, that had been in Garrison at New York during the Winter, and could not be removed any sooner, by Reason of their having been daily employed as Labouerm, in embarking the Battering Train, artillery Stores &c for Halifax, which has been a great saving to the publick."

John Thompson (of the Scotch tavern and Thistle), near Whitehall Slip, advertises the sale, on this day, of all his home goods, kitchen furniture, etc. He also desires to settle all outstanding accounts.—N. T. Post-Boy, May 15, 1758. By May 29 (g.v.), George Burns had taken over the tavern. Scotch Johnny had been inkeeper of the Crown and Thistle since 1751, and poorly earlier. See May 19.

A draft of the charter of a vessel for the transportation of troops and stores is now on record under this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 685.

"Ordered that Mr Nathaniel Marston have further Leave for the four Lots of Ground on which his Still house Stands behind the Church yard for the Term of Eleven Years from the 25th Day of March 1757, on which Day his last lease expired at the Annual Rent of Ten pounds and that the said Rent be paid free of all taxes and other charges . . ."—Trin. Min. (M.S.).

George Burns (see May 21) announces that the "famous and noted tavern lately occupied by Mr. John Thompson (known by the name of Scotch Johnny's) near the Whitehall slip, is now kept by the subscriber in the same character, who lately removed thereto, from the sign of Admiral Warren, opposite to the Freshwater Meeting-house."—N. T. Post-Boy, May 30, 1758.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

The governor and council receive a royal mandate to swear John Watts as member of the council, in place of James Alexander, deceased; he is sworn in and takes his seat.—Cal. Coun. Min., 440.

The council orders that timber be provided for the batteries at the Narrows according to the plans of Chief Engineer James Montresor.—Ibid., 440.

A journal to this date of the proceedings of the fleet and army off Louisburg is among the New York provincial records.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 689.

M. Dorell, writing from Quebec to the Marshal de Belle Isle various particulars regarding the war in America, says "The sea swarms with English privateers, and we have not one."—N. T. Col. Dee., Xi: 718.

A committee of the common council is appointed to purchase 300 of "the subscription arms lately imported into this City to pay for the same out of the monies, which arose by the Sale of the City arms to Genl Abercrombie [see May 17] and that the Remainder of the said monies be sent to England by the said Committee, for the purchasing there, for this Corporation, one Large Fire Engin, one small one and two hand forges, and that Mr. Buckets also four hundred and fifty Small arms and that the said Committee order their Correspondent to Cause the same to be insured."—M. C. C., VI: 173-78. These purchases were made in London, through the London merchant, William Baker (see June 19, 1741), at a cost of £390 sterling.—From letter dated June 26, 1755, preserved in comptroller's office, box of vouchers no. 1. An invoice, of March 27, 1759, signed by Baker, consigned these fire-engines to John Cruger in New York, "for Account & Rique of the Corporation of the City of New York . . . by the Ship Britannia, Capt. George Massam." Baker received 2s. per cent. commission for his part in the transaction. In another letter, of Jan. 7, 1760, Baker expressed to Cruger the hope that the fire-engines "done came safe to your hands," and he made a new statement of the balance due him, on account of his having recovered three guineas insurance because the ship "Britannia" had been conveyed by himself part of the way.—From originals in ibid.

The first "Commencement" of King's College is held. One who attended, describing it in a letter to the press as "the first Solemnity of the Kind, ever celebrated here," adds: "The Order of the Procession from the Vestry Room, where the College is now held, to St. Paul's, was well arranged, was an opportunity for his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, who, by his Presence graced the Solemnity, were preceded by the Candidates for Bachelor's and Master's Degrees, with their Heads uncovered, and were followed by the Governors of the College, the Clergy of all De- nominations in this City, and other Gentlemen of Distinction of this and the neighbouring Provinces. After short Prayers suitable to the Occasion, the Reverend Dr. Johnson, the President, from the Pulpit, opened the Solemnity, with a learned and elegant Oration inaugural. The exercises of the Bachelors were introduced by a polite salutatory Oration, delivered by Provost, with such Propriety of Pronunciation, and in engaging an Air, as justly gained the Admirations and Applause of all present. This was followed by a metaphysical Thesis, learnedly delivered by Rittzea against Ver Planck and Cortlandt, with another held by Reed, and opposed by two Ogdenes. The Bachelors Exercises were closed by a well-composed and rich Oration, on the Advantages of a liberal Education, delivered by Cortlandt, whose fine Address added a Beauty to the Sentiment, which gave universal Satisfaction to that numerous Assembly. After this, Mr. Treadwell, in a clear and concise Manner, demonstrated the Revolution of the Earth round the Sun from astronomical Observations, and the Theory of Gravity, and defended the Thesis against Mr. Cutting and Mr. Witmore, a candidate for the Degree of Master of Arts. This Dispute being ended, the President descended from the Pulpit, and being seated in a chair, in a solemn Manner, conferred the Honours of the College upon those Pupils who were Candidates for a Bachelor's Degree, and on several Gentlemen who had re- ceived Degrees in other Colleges. The Exercises were concluded with a Valedictory Oration [in Latin] by Mr. Cutting, universally esteemed a masterly Performance. The President then addressed himself in a solemn pathetic Exhortation, to the Bachelors, which could not fail of answering the most valuable Purposes, and leaving a lasting Impression on the Minds of all the Pupils. The whole Solemnity being finished, by a short Prayer, the Procession returned back to the City-Arms [see Aug. 23, 1760], where an elegant Entertainment was provided by the Governors of the College. This important Occasion drew together a numerous Assembly of People of all Orders, and it gave me a sincere Pleasure to see the Exercises performed in a Manner, which must reflect Honour upon the College and invite every Friend of his Country, to promote so useful, so well regulated an Institution."—N. T. Merch., June 26, 1758. See also Justice, Hist. of St. George's Church, 28.

The names of the graduates and their degrees, from 1758 to 1774 inclusive, were published by Hugh Gaine, as a Catalogue, in the form of a broadside, probably in the latter year.—See reproduction, Pl. 53b, Vol. I. This list shows nine who received the degree of bachelor of arts in 1758 (the name of the last, "Timothy Wetmore, A. B.", being omitted from a similar list, which shows only eight, as printed in the Hist. of Columbia Univ., 1894, p. 25). The Catalogue shows that we have received the degree of Master of Arts in 1758 (not thirteen, as stated in the Hist. of 17, p. 24).

Orders are issued by the provincial council for the militia to do guard duty in Fort George. It is also ordered that ordinance stores lost in the late fire in Fort George (he be replaced), and that the barracks there be repaired.—Cal. Coun. Min., 440.

The governor and council receive a royal mandate to swear July 4, 1771, William Walton as member of the council in place of Edward Holland, who died Nov. 10, 1770 (q.v.). He is sworn in and takes his seat.—Cal. Coun. Min., 440.

Plans are being executed for the disposal of French prisoners (see May 19).—Cal. Coun. Min., 440. See, further, July 17.

The provincial council at New York holds a conference with July 6, 1771, Cherokee Indians who are going to join Sir William Johnson. On July 8, Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey answered a speech of these Indians, and gave them presents.—Cal. Coun. Min., 440. On Dec. 6, the council issued a warrant to pay Thedora van Wyck and Jan Winne for presents given to Cherokees, and for boarding and transporting them.—Ibid., 443. June 8.

The French ambuscade the British advance near Fort Ticon- deroga; Lord Howe, "the soul of the army," is killed, and the soldiers are dispirited, having no confidence in Abercrombie.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 83-99, and authorities there cited. See July 8 and 12.

An account of John Winne for transporting 21 Cherokee Indians and an interpreter, from New York to Albany, and one of Theodore van Wyck, for presents for these Indians, bear this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 690.

The Battle of Ticonderoga is won by the French.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 99-113, 431-36 and authorities there cited. During July, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the brigantine "Catharine," the snows "Prince Ferdinand" and "Argo," and the schooner "Betsy."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 690-91.

The council receive a letter from Capt. Cunningham, aide to Gen. Abercrombie, regarding the death of Lord Howe, and the sending of 140 French prisoners to New York; a letter from Capt. De Lancey, reporting the repulse of the English forces and the repunctuation of cannon; and one from Brig.-Gen. Stanwix at Albany reporting the need of militia.—Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, about to depart by land for Albany, gives instructions to the council, as follows: An embargo is laid on all vessels. Packet boats are to do guard duty in the harbour. Details from the militia of New York, Queens, Suffolk, Kings, and Richmond Counties are to march to Albany.—Cal. Coun. Min., 441.

The mayor presents to the common council an account for billeting regular officers last winter on several persons. It is ordered that there be allowed 10s. per week for each captain and 6s. 4d. for a lieutenant, ensign, or surgeon that Mrs. Play be allowed 10s. for a "Guard Room," and that the city chamberlain pay the several persons to whom these sums are due.—M. C. G., VI: 140; 14 of Mar. 1759.
701
1758
Seven French prisoners escape from the jail in New York. All 15 marshals and other officers in the colony are ordered by the provincial brigands are to be kept in the block bounded by the present Government, and Governor Wylly is told he is to answer for his 16 and this is just to what the community is exposed by the presence of St. George a second time, and make another attempt on Tiendbrora, but I'm afraid we shall make a scary figure. The Indians will not go with us. They told the General [Abercrombie] that the English Army had very fine limbs but no head. That he was an old Squaw that he should wear a petticoat, go home and make Sugar, and not by pretending to a task which he was not equal to, blunder so many braver men by himself into distraction.”—From MSS. Letters of Charles Lee, 1756– 17
In a will of this date, reference is made to a lot on the north side of Van Cliff St., adjoining the churchyard of St. George's Chapel. It is described as “in a field commonly called the Beckman pasture, which is laid out into streets, lanes, and lots for building for enlarging of the city.”—Abstracts of Wills, V: 258, in N. Y.
State Historical Soc. Collections, II: 103.
18
441.
19
The common council orders “that one other Storie be added to the New Goal now a Building, so as to make the same of three Stories high, and that the Carried on of the Same be under the Direction and Inspection of the Committee formerly appointed for the Building of the said Goal.”—M. C. G., VI: 141. For summary of the building operations, see March 1, 1757.
20
One John Smith, “a Deborth, confined in the Goal of this City, siring himself under the Cupola of the City-Hall, unhappily fell over the Rails into the Street, and was instantly crushed to Death.”
—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 7, 1758.
21 During August, petitions are made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the ships “William and Thomas,” “Bettie,” “King of Prussia,” and “Peggy,” the schooner
Peterscy, and the sloops “Four Friends” and “Harlem.”—Col.
Hist. MSS., Eng., 691.
22
News of the fall of Louisbourg on July 26 (q.v.) reaches New York.—N. Y. Post-Boy, and N. Y. Mert, Aug. 21, 1758. The city celebrated the victory on Aug. 28 (q.v.).
23
The newspapers and journals near Goshen, Orange Co., and the 24
The British, under Col. John Bradstreet, take Fort Frontenac (Kingston, Ontario), also 66 cannon, 9 vessels of war, and a large quantity of military supplies.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 127–30 and difficulties there cited.
25
New York celebrates the victory over the French at Louisbourg (see Aug. 26). At noon “the Cannon on Fort-George began to play, and continued till Sunset on the Succession of every Loyal Health drank at the Entertainment at the Province Arms in the Broadway, and the Governor and all the Gentlemen of the City dined.” In the evening the houses were illuminated, and fireworks were displayed on the Common.—N. Y.
26 Sherrif John Rogers of New York is required by the council to hand in to a list of French prisoners-of-war in this city.—Col.
Curr. Min., 442.
27 Nicholas Bayard, having had two horses, seven sheep, and a number of pigs and poultry shot by hunters during the summer, besides himself—run great risk of being shot,” advertises his determination to prosecute the New York man who has found nothing on his premises. He also offers a reward of $5 for the discovery of the person or persons who maliciously destroyed harnesses and plow gear, and who broke off “above twenty locust trees equal with the rails of the fence, which was planted along-side of the lane aback of my woods, as an ornament and convenience for gentlemen, and others, who take their walks that way.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept.
11, 1758. Bayard’s house stood in the block bounded by the present
Grand, Broome, Crosby, and Lafayette Sts.—See Landmark Map
Ref. Key, III: 948.
In September, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the ships “Terrible,” “Duke of Cumberland,” and “Hunter,” and the sloops “Harlequin” and “Ordered that the Church Wardens be desired to have all the Streets that are laid out on the Church Lands Registered according to the several plans or Drafts thereof made.”—Trin.
Min. (MS).
28 Charles Lee, recovering from a wound at Albany, writes to his sister that the army is now “waiting for sitting for Six Regiments from Louisburg, in order to cross Lake George a second time, and make another attempt on Tiendbrora, but I'm afraid we shall make a scary figure. The Indians will not go with us. They told the General [Abercrombie] that the English Army had very fine limbs
but no head. That he was an old Squaw that he should wear a petticoat, go home and make Sugar, and not by pretending to a 29

24

25

26

27

28

29

30 sent to Albany for the forces. A committee is appointed to fix the prices of the provisions to be impressed.—Cal. Coun. Min., 442.

5

6

In October, petitions were made, beginning this day, for commis- sions for the commanders of the following privateers: the ship "Tartary," and the brigantines "Polly and Fanny," "Axe," and "Neubuchadnezzar."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 692–93.

7 Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, about to go to Albany, gives instruc- tions to the council.—Cal. Coun. Min., 442.

8 A fourth justice of the supreme court, David Jones, is appointed. —Ibid., 442.

9 Gen. Amherst, chief in command of the forces at the reduction of Louisbourg, arrives in New York from Albany. On the following morning and evening he was given a public ovation.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 16, 1758.

11 Again it is necessary to pass an ordinance, imposing a fine for any vessel carrying large stores west of the Fresh Water Pond.—M. C. G., VI: 152. Such an ordinance was passed 50 years before.—Ibid., II: 278. Indeed, this was a condition which frequently or generally prevailed throughout the Dutch and English colonial periods; and even far into the nineteenth century. See description of Fl. 85, Vol. III, p. 564.

13 The council minutes record the list of ordnance which Chris- topher Blundell, the store-keeper at Fort George, is ordered to deliver to Mr. Furnis, comptroller of ordnance.—Ibid., 443. On Oct. 26, the order was increased.—Ibid., 445.

14 Matthew Ernest advertises that "the new erected Glass- House, at Newfoundland, within four Miles of this City, is now at Work, and that any Gentleman may be supply'd with Bottles, Flasks, or any sort of Glass agreeable to their Directions."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 30, 1758. For location, see Feb. 8, 1757. The "Glass-House farm" comprised 350 acres. When advertised for sale Sept. 27, 1762, it was stated that "The glass-house and out-houses can be taken off the place, if required."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 27, 1762. It evidently did not long succeed as a glass manufactory, and was soon opened as a roadhouse. —Cal. Coun. Min., 485. The farm-house, which was near the foot of West 55th St., apparently was not torn down until 1866.—Hist. of Chemical Bank (1915).

16 An advertisement announces an auction sale, on Nov. 19, of a farm of about 100 acres in Bloomingdale, formerly the property of the late Nicholas Dyckman.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 13, 1758.

17 The first law enacted by the city to establish a closed season for fishing is passed. It is called the "Law to prohibit the Selling or Bringing in of any Fish into the City of New York, During the Time therein mentioned." It provides that "Bass or Twaalt" shall not be offered or exposed for sale or exchange, or given, or brought into this City or the limits or jurisdiction of it, in December, Janu- ary, or February.—M. C. G., VII: 157. It was repealed on Jan. 28, 1763, and again Dec. 21, 1779. See May 28, 1770. In November, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the brigantines "True Briton," "Polly and Fanny," and "Sampson," and the ships "Ranger," "Fame," and "Resolution."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 695–96.

18 Capt. Kiendel, the present keeper of the "House of Correction, Work-House, and Alms-House," being ill, the common council Nov. appoints March 5, 1759, and the house of Edward Willett (115 Broadway) as the new place of conference for a new keeper.—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 20, 1758.

19 The toll for crossing King's Bridge, "on the High-Road to Boston," has become very burdensome to travellers, particularly the inhabitants of Westchester and Dutchess Counties, being said for each carriage, 75s. for each horse and each head of cattle, and 1d. for each foot-passenger. Certain "publick spirited Persons have lately contributed a large Sum of money, and therewith built a fine new Bridge across the said [Harlem] River, a little to the Southward of the said Bridge, which shortens the publick Way and adds Half a Mile." This bridge is called "N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 20, 1758. See also Dec. 28; Jan. 2, 1759.

20 De Lancey reviews the events of the war, in an address to the assembly. Gen. Abercrombie is to disband the New York regi- mental as soon as possible, and this is daily expected to be done.—Assemb. Jour., II: 666–67.

23 The assembly sends a message to the council relative to the appointment of a committee to prepare the draft of a representa- tion to the king on the expenses of the colony in furnishing troops.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 696. Such a representation, asking for an allowance for this purpose, was in the hands of the council on Dec. 16.—Cal. Coun. Min., 444.

24 Major-General Amherst, the conqueror of Louisbourg (see July 26, 1758), having been summoned by special express to come from Halifax, arrives in New York, where his commission has been re- ceived, by packet from England, appointing him general and commander-in-chief of all the British forces in North America, in place of Gen. Abercrombie, who is ordered home. Amherst takes up his residence in Fort George, "as being the center of the British Colonies." His baggage and stores also arrive there. Abercrombie is soon to sail for England on H. M. S. "Kenning- ton," which is now at New York.—New Am. Mag. (Woodbridge, N. J., Dec., 1758), p. 317 of "The Hist. Chronicle." De Lancey writes to the lords of trade: "a French letter of Marque of 26 twelve pounders ... stopped to cruise on this Coast and has taken 25 Vessels coming to or going from this Port, Philadelphia among them for the amount of Richard Had- don, commander of the privateer "Peggy," on a charge of piracy, in seizing a Spanish schooner. Various depositions were taken during the month in this connection.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 694-5 Cal. Coun. Min., 445.

25 For a consideration of £500, Cornelius Clopper, Jr., and Catha- rine, his wife, convey by a trust deed to the trustees of the Jewish congregation (Daniel Gomez, Joseph Simson, Jacob Francs, and Myer Myers) the property now covered by parts of Nos. 18 and 20 South William St.—Liber Deeds, XXXV: 72–75. This last ad- joined the Jewish synagogue on Mill St. See Dec. 17, 1759.

26 An advertisement announces an auction sale, on Nov. 23, of a farm of about 100 acres in Bloomingdale, formerly the property of the late Nicholas Dyckman.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 13, 1758.

27 A theatre on Cruger's Wharf is opened, and the tragedy "Jane Shore" is acted "with great Applause, to a most crowded Audience."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 1, 1759.

28 Writing of the beginnings of the theatre in New York, O. G. Sonneck says: "Douglas arrived in New York in 1758. In the meantime, the Nassau Street Theatre had been converted into a place of worship and consequently Hallam's mower saw himself..."
of Broad and Water St. had been opened as the "Fountain Tavern."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 8, 1759. It enjoyed only a brief popularity. By June 2, 1760, the "London Shoe Warehouse" was in possession of a part of the house, and "All the upper Part, two Rooms on the Lower Floor, and the Cellars of the late Fountain Tavern" were offered for let.—Ibid., June 3, 1760; N. Y. Merc., Nov. 17, 1760. In the spring of 1763, this corner house and the house adjoining it on the east, famous as the old Coffee House and the Fighting Cocks, were offered for sale. The former was owned at this time by Wm. Milliner, and the latter was described as "lately in the Occupation of Mr. Richard Waldron." The situation is "allowed to be the best in the City for Trade,"—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Apr. 26, 1762. Milliner mortgaged the old Coffee House to Philip van Cortlandt on June 13, 1762 (Liber Mortgages, I: 304-5), and Van Cortlandt sold the Fighting Cocks tavern to Waldron on Oct. 79, of the same year (p. 2).

The master of the Dutch schooner "Dolphin," brought into the port of New York by Nicholas Horton, commander of the privateer "Johnson," issues a representation or memorial concerning outrages committed on himself and his crew, with two supporting depositions showing that the vessel was plundered and an attempt made to bang the ship's doctor.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 669.

Abraham Sarzedes advertises for sale "a very pleasant Country Seat, situated nigh the North-River, about three miles from the City, generally known by the Name of Greenwich." It contains "near about four Acres, all in Garden, inclosed with a good Board Fence, six Feet high, and Red-sequelize Posts; a Dwelling House, the best Part whereof is finish'd in the best Manner not above six Years ago; fit for any Gentleman."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 15, 1759. The item shows that the name "Greenwich" was applied to a private estate as well as to the village or neighbourhood. The same is true of Oliver de Lancy's "Bloomendal" (Bloomgindale). For references to the villages of these names, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 986, 987.

Hugh Gaine advertises in his paper that he has just published and has for sale A New Manual Exercise, For the Foot. Very useful for the use of the Army and Militia, &c. (p. 176). Although no copy of this work was located by Ford (see Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 103), there is one in the archives of the Mass. Hist. Soc., and a photostat of its title-page is in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

Major-General Abercrombie embarks on the man-of-war "Kennington" (Capt. Jacobs) for England; "early the next Morning the Cannon on Fort George were discharges, as a Compliment done his Excellency's Embarkation, which was returned by the Man of War."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 22, 1759.

It is deemed necessary "that a pest House be fourtith Built on the Island Commonly Called Bedsllows Island, which this Corporation lately purchased of the Crown, and appointed for that purpose" (see May 10, 1758), and a committee is appointed "to order the purchasing of materials for Carrying on and Compleating the Same."—M. C. C., VI: 162. Payments were made "towards Carrying on the Building of the pest house," on June 20, July 20, Aug. 21, Sept. 19, and Nov. 15, 1759; and on Jan. 9 (partly "for sundry Necessarys to be sent to such Sick as were Lately up on Bedsllows Island"), Feb. 13, and Aug. 4, 1760 (this last date representing payment for “Painting and Glazing the Sick house or Hospital on Bedsllows Island”).—Ibid., VI: 175, 176, 178, 180, 196, 203, 205, 218, 270.

The vestry of Trinity Church leases to John Marshall for 21 years from March 25, 1759, at an annual rental of $50, a piece of ground described as the "Old Bowling Green" (see March 29, 1758), enclosed in a hedge fence, 150 by 225 ft. They also lease to Marshall another piece of ground, north and east of the "Old Bowling Green," between the ropewalk of Elias Degrussie and the paths, "being in length from the northwest corner of the Bowling Green to the eastern most block house on the Church Farm, containing about four-fifths of an acre of land."—Sandford, Chan. Rep., VI: 657.

The ministers, elders, and deacons of the Lutheran Church petition Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey for a charter. The petition is referred to the governor's council. On March 14, it was approved, orders being given for a "draft of such Charter of Incorporation" to be prepared and submitted for approval.—Col. Conn. Min., 400. No further action was taken until a second petition was presented, Sept. 29, 1765 (p. 5).—Dec. Hist. N. Y., (410 ed.), III: 297.

The statements above recited were embodied in the later petition.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1759 Samuel Parker announces: "Whereas the Partnership between Feb. James Parker and William Weyman, in this City, being expired; and the said James Parker having found his Health so much impaired, as to be obliged for some Years past to leave the City of New-York; he has therefore now assigned, sold, and set over to his Nephew, Samuel Parker, all his Right and Interest in the New-Wridding Office in Beaver-street: And as the said Samuel Parker has served a lawful and just Apprenticeship of Seven Years, to the said James Parker, in the City of New-York, he humbly hopes the Favour and Custom of his Fellow-Citizens, in the said Business..."

1759 Advertisement in the New-York Gazette, still to continue to be carried on in the usual Manner, with the utmost Fidelity...—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 12, 1759; Early Newspapers, II: 427. See also Jan. 4, 1743.

1759 Weyman's imprint of this date shows that his printing-office is in "Broadstreet, in the House where Mr. John Cox now lives, opposite Synagogue Alley." This Alley was commonly known as Jerry Alley. This is now So. William St.—See Landmarks Map Ref. Key, III: 1009.

1759 The "house of Edward Willett" is designated as the meeting-place of a joint committee of the provincial council and assembly.—Assemb. Jour., II: 596. This was the Province Arms or New York Arms Tavern, at the present 115 Broadway. —See "City Tavern," Landmarks Map Ref. Key, III: 975.

1759 A message from Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey is read to the council and assembly, in joint session at the city hall, concerning the ensuing campaign; also a letter from Gen. Amherst on the same subject.—Cal. Coun. Min., 444.

1759 The council sends a message to the assembly recommending the passage of a bill to authorize drafts from the militia.—Cal. Coun. Min., 444.

1759 "Since our last a Company of Carpenters consisting of 60 Men, arrived here from Philadelphia, on their Way to Albany."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 26, 1759.

1759 Francis Maerschalk, the surveyor, draws a "Map of the Vineyard Property," which bears this date. It was filed on May 1, 1850, in the register's office of New York County, as map No. 153.—See description of Pl. 72, I: 457.

1759 A common council resolve to meet March 17, "near the Goal House in order for the Laying out in Lots some Ground Belonging to this Corporation which lies between the said Goal House and the House Commonly Called Catiemuts," and the city surveyor is to attend and make a survey of the lots. —M. G. G., VI: 215-66. On March 20, it was ordered that advertisements be published "for Letting to farm the several Lots of Ground Belonging to this Corporation that Lies between the New Goal House and the Dwelling House of Capt. John Browns near the palisades where the wind-mill formerly stood," for the term of 21 years, commencing the first of May next.—M. G. G., VI: 167. The results of the "Publick Querries" for this purpose are recorded in the Minutes.—Ibid., VI: 173.

1759 The "Goal House" is shown as landmark No 8 in block 121 (in the Park), Pl. 174, Vol. III. Catiemut's Hill was the Windmill Hill. Stone (Hist. of N. Y., 339) says that 'Katey Mutz' had a garden at Wind-mill Hill—more recently the site of the Lithuanian Government Chapel." The chapel was on the same site as Chatham Garden Theatre, in the present Park Row, near the corner of Pearl St.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 983.

1759 Capt. John Brown, mentioned in the above records, lived at the north-west corner of Barclay and Pearl Sts.; and Pl. 172, Vol. III, landmarks 150-1 on Pl. 172, Vol. III. This was the site of the windmill (cf. also Liber Mortgages, I: 506), wherein a "Widow Brown" (evidently the relic of Capt. Brown) was described as living in 1761. This designation of lots between the jail and the house of Capt. Brown refers to the plot between Tryon Row, New Chambers St., Park Row, and Centre St., which was common land...
THE HISTORY OF THE PROVINCE OF NEW-YORK,
FROM THE
First Discovery to the Year M.DCC.XXXII.

To which is annexed,
A Description of the Country, with a short Account of the Inhabitants, their Trade, Religious and Political State, and the Constitution of the Courts of Justice in that Colony.

Let ! swarming o'er the new discover'd World,
Gay Colonies extend, the calm Retreat
Of undefer'd Diftress.

Bound by social Freedom, from they rise,
O! Britain's Empire the Support and Strength.

Nec minor est Virtus, quam quaeque, parte tueri.

By WILLIAM SMITH, A.M.

LONDON:
Printed for THOMAS WILCOX, Bookseller at Virgil's Head, opposite the New Church in the Strand.
M.DCC.LVII.

A. TITLE-PAGE OF FIRST EDITION OF SMITH'S HISTORY OF NEW YORK, 1757.
B. PAGE OF SMITH'S MS. "CONTINUATION," CONTAINING REFERENCE TO THE CONFLAGRATION OF MARCH 18, 1741. SEE PP. 565, 566, 687.
1759 in 1769, the irregular plot beyond (see Landmark Map) up to Mar. Duane St. being probably included. In the entry of March 14, 1759, the house was more accurately at Chatham St., on the west side of the street, a direction, this house lying beyond Brown's on the same side of Chatham St.—Cf. N. Y. Jour., March 16, 1769, wherein a meeting of the "Friends of Liberty" is called to take place "at the House of Henry Van De Water, (otherwise called Catemut's)". In both entries in the Minutes, March 14, and March 20, 1759, these same Negroes were alluded to; they were those facing Park Row (Chatham St.) from Tryon Row to Duane St. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1866), 604-5.

16 Brij.-Gen. Monckton arrives at New York from Halifax.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 19, 1773. The name of the Post-Boy is changed to Parker's New-York Gazette or, the Weekly Post-Boy.—Early Newspapers, II, 427. See also Jan. 4, 1773. The partnership of Parker & Weyman had been dissolved by March 21, 1773, because of the voting for the choice of the Prayers for the election of a new proprietor, with consequent further edicts to remove them.

19 A French vessel, sent into port by two privates, is thought to be the most valuable prize brought into New York since the out-break of the war.—Upcott Coll., I, 359, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Samuel Francis, "at the Mason's Arms, near the Barracks," threatened to prosecute, "to the utmost Rigour of the Law," the person who took "two tuns Stock-Buckley, and one Bosom Buckle, from a vessel."—Cf. N. Y. Jour., May 28, 1767, 1768, and October 11, 1767. The house of Joseph Deane is described, in a published notice, as "in New-English-Church-Street."—N. Y. Merc, March 19, 1779. This probably means Beekman St., where St. George's Chapel had been completed and consecrated July 1, 1752 (q. v.).

The minister (Rev. David Bostwick), elders, deacons, and ten others of the Presbyterian Church petition for a grant and confirmation of certain premises on the northeasterly side of Wall St.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 699.

The common council directs the clerk to make payment of $3 to Henry Play, "for the hire of his House as a Guard House for his majesty's Regular Troops Quarter'd in this City the past year."—M. C. VI, 167. This was at the rate of ten shillings a week.—Ibid., VI, 140. The same house was used in the winter of 1757-8. Ibid., VI, 140. It has not proved possible, from title records or other sources, to determine the location of this house.

The council hears from Secretary Pitt concerning the operation of the campaign.—Col. Coun. Min., 445.

A new city ordinance is enacted "for Regulating the Lying of Vessels in the Great Dock and Slips of this City and Ascertaining the Rates to be paid for the Same, and for Preserving the Bridge and Common Sewer of the Same Great Dock." The former law on the subject (see March 22, 1768, and Nov. 18, 1773) is repealed. The new provisions, now enacted, are as follows: After May 1, 1759, dockage is to be paid yearly, by the master or owner of the vessel, on his first coming to "any of the docks, wharfs, piers, Keys, Moles, or slips belonging to this Corporation." The rate is 3 shillings and 4 pence for each vessel (except sea vessels that are not coasters), is six shillings yearly on vessels of five tons burden or less, and one shilling per ton above that burden. Dockage rates are prescribed for "Trading and Coasting Vessels" which come from as far "Eastward" as New Hampshire and as far "westward" as North Carolina, inclusive, with the customary allowance of only one month for the sojourn here; these rates being higher than formerly for vessels of 20 tons burden or over. The tonnage (or burden), when in dispute, is to be determined by the oath of the master or owner; or, in case of his refusal to swear or prove it, it shall be settled by the oath of the person suing or prosecuting. The penalty is raised from 6 to 20 shillings for every tide that a vessel stays at the mouth of the dock or slip longer than necessary to load or unload. No vessel is permitted to make fast or "hall down" (cf. Dec. 24, 1717) "by the Bridge in the Great Docks;" or load or unload ballast, flour, or goods there; or careen by the bridge or by "any of the docks Wharfs, Piers, Keys, Moles, or Slips" belonging to the city. Only at such docks, etc., in the Out Ward is it permitted to make or keep a fire on board at night. Only small craft, "Such as ferry Boats Market Boats Pettitagurs and Canoes," are permitted to come into "the Slip at the end of the Common Seuer, that Leads from the Market House Common Called the Fly Market, and empties itself into the East River." Sea vessels are permitted to "Come into or lie at or Within" any of the docks, etc., from Dec. 20 to March 20, paying dockage at the rate of six shillings a day while loading or unloading and one shilling a day while discharging.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

when not loading or unloading. Half the penalties and forfeitures recovered by the dock-master are paid to the churchwarden.

26. View of the use of the poor, and the other half he is to retain.—M. C. C.

VI: 168-72.

27. Jacobus Roosevelt, John Chambers, Oliver Roosevelt, Jacobus Roosevelt, Jr., Cornelius Roosevelt, and William de Peyster, who are the owners of several lots in the Cripple Bush, convey to the City land for a public highway, to be called Ferry Street, from Queen St. to the Cripple Bush.—Sessions of Streets, Liber I: 1 (in Bureau of Engineering, Division of Design, Dept. of Public Works, Manhattan. See March 15, 1749). The street was ten years before.—See March 15, 1749 and Landmark Map Ref.

28. Depositions taken on this day and later show that the captain and first lieutenant of the brigantine "Hawk" cruelly chastised two negroes, one of whom died.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 699.

29. The council at New York is informed that Rear Admiral Saunders is appointed naval commander-in-chief in North America.—

30. The Presbyterian make application for a charter.—Doc. Hist.
N. Y. (40 ed.), III: 304. Regarding the unsuccessful outcome of this and a later petition, see March 18, 1766.

31. Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey intends going to Philadelphia with Gen. Amherst, after appointing John Johnson colonel of the 32. The privater "King George" (Capt. Lecraft), of this port, sends in here a small French sloop loaded with sugar and coffee.—

Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

33. Gen. Amherst, Gov. De Lancey, Christopher Kilby, and several officers of the army return to New York from Philadelphia.
"The Guns upon Fort-George were discharged upon the Occasion."—
Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

34. The 26th day His Majesty's Ship Lizard, of 26 Guns, Captain Doake, arrived here from Plymouth: She sail'd the 18th of February, in Company with Admiral Saunders's, with a Fleet of 8 Ships of the Line, and 20 Transports, bound for Louis-bourg; and parted with them the 9th of March; so it is not doubted but they [the transports] are arrived at Louisbourg. Maj.-Gen.
General Wolfe, Commander in Chief upon the Expedition up the River St. Lawrence, is on board the Neptune of 90 Guns, the Admiral's Ship.—Ibid.

35. Part of Col. Fraser's Highland Regiment has recently arrived from Albany. "This said Regiment is to proceed to Halifax, in order to go upon the Expedition up the River St. Lawrence, at the particular Request of Maj. General Wolfe, who experienced their Bravery at the Siege of Louisbourg."—Ibid. See May 8.

36. Benjamin Franklin, about to take passage for England, and resides in New York, writes at length to Dr. Lining of Charleston, S.
C. Col. Franklin a subject of experiments with electricity and fire.—
See tales catalogue of Henkels, Phila., who sold the original holograph letter at auction, July 1, 1920. Franklin's letter does not reveal that, at this or any other time, he undertook such experiments in this city.

37. Brig.-Gen. Monckton, with several officers of the army, embark on board a sloop, and sail for Halifax.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

38. News from Antigua is published in New York regarding the remarkable success of the privater "Sturdy-Beggar" (Capt.
Troup), of this port, in an encounter with the French fleet. Three of her captures, a ship and two snows, have arrived here.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 16, 1759.

39. ... the New York Regiment is by voluntary Enlistment, completed to 3000 Men; and as a remarkable Spirit for the Service prevails, there is not the least Doubt, but in a few Days we shall be entirely completed to 2868 Men [see Mar. 25, 1758], for the First Establishment of this Colony."—Parker's Post-Boy, April

40. ... the following Colonies have agreed to raise the following Numbers of Privaters for the Service: Massachusetts-Bay 5000; Connecticut 3600; New-York 1680; New-Jersey 1000; Pennsylvania 2700; Virginia 1000. In all 15,980."—Ibid.

41. On this day, 27 warrants are issued to pay the bounty and relieving money for volunteers, amounting to over £5,500. Five warrants, to supply officers' tables, are also issued—to colonel-in-chief, £10 each; to colonels, £5 each; to lieutenants, £3 each, and to major, £6 each.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Apr.
1, 1759. On May 7, 1759, such warrants for the benefit of 26
582 men amounted to £30,678.—Ibid., 709.

50. Maj.-Gen. Amherst embarks for Albany on board the Hon. Mr.
Kibby's sloop. The cannon on Fort George are discharged as a compliment to him.—Parker's Post-Boy, April 30, 1759.

51. The lease by the city of Fort George is renewed. Elias Sneed Thomas Brown near the stockade."—Emmet Coll., item No.
16872, N. Y. pub. Library. The "stockade" were the palisades of 1746, stretching across the Island in an irregular line above the city. They are shown on the same map; see also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945.

52. A man, jailed on suspicion of counterfeiting bills of credit, is

53. The XLI, or Royal Highland Regiment, which was "quartered in this City all the Winter Season," embarks "on board Sloops for Albany."—N. Y. Merc., May 7, 1759. Military items of this character, detailing the movements of commanders and troops, as well as maritime news (particularly relating to priva-ters) fill the local news columns during these critical times. The Mercury is often compete'd by private set up at a few weeks
During the week prior to this date, "upwards of 40 Sails of Transports arrived from England, being those that came out with Commodore Holmes. The Commodore, in the Somerset, with the Terrible, proceeded for Halifax, as soon as the above Vessels got safe into Sandy Hook."—Colonel Frasier's Highlanders are now all embarked, and most of the Vessels that have them on board, as well as others with Artillery, &c. are fell down to the Watering-Place, and some on the Hook ..."—N. Y. Merc., May 7, 1759.

55. The Charles W. Anphord, financial agent for the army, writes to the provincial council of the difficulties in procuring money for the king's troops. Paymasters Oliver de Lancey, John Cruger, and Beverly Robinson are asked to lend from funds intended for the provincials, and the council accordingly issues a warrant on the treasurer for £4,500.—Cal. Coun. Min., 445 Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 701.

56. The council issues a warrant for impressing ship carpenters.—

57. Lord John Murray's Royal Highland Regiment, which embarked on May 6 (4. v.), departs for Albany.—Parker's Post-Boy,
May 14, 1759.

58. H. M. S. "Nightingale" (Capt. Campbell) and "Trent" (Capt.
Lindley) sail "from the Hook for Louisbourg, in order to join Admiral Saunders's Squadron, with the first Division of Transports under their Convoy, with Col. Fraser's Highland Regiment on board" (see April 15) —Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

59. H. M. S. "Lizard" (Capt. Doake), which arrived from England on April 13 (4. v.), sails for Louisbourg, "with the second Division of Transports, having the 47th Regiment (that embark'd from Aberdy" on board."—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

60. Gen. Amherst issues a proclamation offering exemption from impressment to persons who will convey to Lake George provisions for the troops destined for that point and beyond.—Parker's Post-Boy, May 21, 1759.

61. The race was advertised to be run on this day at "Greenwich Farm," the horses to be entered with James Ackland.—N. Y. Gen.
(Weymen), Apr. 16, 1759. Races had been held since 1753 at Greenwich, on the estate of Sir Peter Warren.—See May 14, 1753, and Bayles' Old Taverns of N. Y., 182.

62. A large French private sloop letters here, taken by the privater brigantines "True Britton," "Masterson," and "Duke of Marlborough."—Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

63. On this day and the next, the provincial troops furnished by this city as its quota of the 1,680 men (see April 23), embarked for Albany. The present year's land troops embarked at the same time.—
Parker's Post-Boy, May 14, 1759.

64. His Majesty's frigate "Diana" (Capt. Scamber), with several transports under her convoy, sails from Sandy Hook for Louis-bourg. Major Morris is on board the "Diana" as a passenger.—
Parker's Post-Boy, May 21, 1759.

65. In May, petitions were made, beginning this day, for commisions for the commanders of the following privaters: the ship

The privet snow “General Abercrombie” (Capt. Valentine) returns to port with a French prize tartan of about 20 tons burden, having a valuable cargo of wine, brandy, raisins and nuts.—Parker’s Post-Boy, May 21, 1767.

Parker’s accounts for Casting dirt and Gravel to fill up the Street or peer at peaks Slip.—M. C. C., VI: 174. This is an example of the character of the construction work done by the city in extending the city’s boundaries along the docks at this period. The grant of water lots to individuals as a rule required the streets to be made at the expense of the grantee.

The mayor presents to the common council an account amounting to £24361, for billeting the officers of the 42d or Royal Highland Regiment on several persons last winter. This shows an allowance of 16d. per week for a colonel, 12s. for a major, 10s. for a captain, and 6s. for a lieutenant or ensign. It is ordered that the city treasurer or chamberlain pay these accounts to those to whom they are due.—M. C. C., VI: 174-75. For later officers’ billets, see ibid., VII: 179 VII: 115.

June

The council rules that persons stricken with fever and other serious maladies are to be removed from the city.—Cal. Coun. Min., 445. The small-pox epidemic raged in the city as late as Oct. 17, 1759 (p. vi), and again the next spring.—See March 11, 1760.

Oliver de Lancey, as trustee of the children and heirs of Sir Peter Warren, deceased, lets to “Christopher Killip Exq Of. of Christ Church and Maj’r of Y’s Forces in North America,” for the “use of Himself and the other Contractors for Victualling His Majesty’s Forces in North America,” lots in the West Ward shown on MacFarland’s maps as 8, 9, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, and 23. The lease runs from Nov. 1, 1759, for 21 years, and Killip is to pay 12 “Spanish Pieces of Eight” for each lot, amounting in all to 210 “Spanish Pieces of Eight.”—From original MS. in De Lancey Papers, 1647-1804, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

Gen. Amherst writes from Fort Edward to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey regarding the pecuniary distresses of the army, and asking for a loan of £15,000.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 702. On June 13, the council decided to ask the assembly to act upon the proposal.—Cal. Coun. Min. See July 3.

In June, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the brigantines “Hope” and “General Amherst,” the snows “Union” and “Dreadnought,” and the ships “York,” “Bradstreet,” and “Junco.” —Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 703.

Colwalleden Colton writes from “Coldingham” to his son, continuing his critical review (see 1759) of William Smith’s History of the Province of New York (pub. in 1757. p. vi). He thus defends constituted authority: “We may clearly see the [sic] pernicious effects of liberty turned to licentiousness in New York, at the time of the Revolution (of 1778). All the Governors of New York, even supposed for a while as bad governors, Smith; but these, they did not produce half the mischief, in all the time of their Government, which was produced in one year by the suppression of legal Government. Blood shed, Rape, confiscations, Arbitrary & tyrannic acts & animosities, which could not be stifled in many years, were the consequence... This is not generally the case in all popular commotions, under the plausible outcry for Liberty. How cautious then ought every one to be in contributing anything towards the weakening of the legal powers of Government, or to do any thing which may give power to a disorderly Mob. A mob can never be directed by reason; but is hurried into the worst extremes, by prejudice and passion. The consequence generally turns to the destruction of those, who plumed themselves in their ability to incite the mob, which afterwards they are no more able to govern, than to govern a whirlwind.”

“Twill Enemies never fail to take advantage of intestine divisions & confusion. It is probable this induced the French at this time to attempt the Conquest of New York. Mr. Smith has given an account of this, from Charlevoix; but he has omitted to inform us of an Instruction given to the Captains de Frontenac, of the case of a French ship, which, if well understood, must be of great use to the people to know. The French King ordered that all the inhabitants should be driven out of the Country, Papists only excepted, who would swear allegiance to the King of France.

Mr. Smith tells us that Coll Slaughter, the first Governor of New York after the Revolution, was utterly destitute of every qualification of government, licentious in his Morals, Avaricious & poor. Who can read this Character without thinking that it is greatly exaggerated?... Colonel Slaughter may well be thought weak, in having been prevailed on, while in liquor, to order the execution of a person whom he had resolved to have reprieved till their Majesty’s pleasure should be known, as I have been told he was; but this is no proof of licentiousness of his Morals. Nor is there any thing in the History of New York to prove his Avarice...

Mr. Smith’s Character of Colonel Fletcher is that He was by Profession a Soldier, a man of Strong passions, & inconsiderable talents, very active, & very avaricious. I find several instances in the History of New York, which shew that Col. Fletcher pursued the Interest of his Country with zeal & activity: & I discover no want of talents, unless it be, that he seems not to have studied much the art of cajoling an Assembly; & this Mr. Smith might have excused, by his being bred a Soldier, had Mr. Smith any inclination to excuse any Governor. But I cannot discover the least instance of his Col. Fletcher’s avarice....

While Col. Fletcher was Governor, the Inhabitants of New York carried on a Trade to Madagascar, while that Island was frequented by Pirates. Many likewise of the Pirates came & dispersed on Long Island & round Delaware Bay. They brought a great quantity of Gold with them. When I came first to America, in the year 1710, no payments were made without a considerable subsidy in Chickens or Shillings; tho’ scarcely one of them is now to be seen. Several of the now principal families, I have been told, took their first rise from their commerce with the Pirates, some of them by Gaming. However it has been often remarked, that none of the Pirates made any use of their money to any real advantage to themselves, tho’ they consumed it in drinking. The South side of Long Island, whereon made a remarkable figure as Speaker of the Assembly, while Mr. Clinton was Governor: excepting this one, no remains of the others are to be discovered. That Col. Fletcher was really concerned in this commerce no where appears, so far as I know, or have heard. It would have been very difficult for him to have put a stop to it with his utmost in- deavour, where there are so many harbours, under the inspection...
1759
July 5

of no officer, & where the temptations to concealment were so strong.

I intend to remark no farther on Mr. Smith’s Character of any Governor, because what I have wrote I think sufficient to shew how far his Characters are to be depended on. Notwithstanding of what I have observed, it does not follow that he has willfully & maliciously calumniated them. This was of early prejudice, a weak Judgement & a stubborn temper of mind are sufficient to account for these & many more absurdities in such kind of writers. How differently, at all times, do different Sects & parties think & speak of the same actions. The truth often is hid between them, & neither of them discovers it.

I intend to make no farther remarks on Mr. Smith’s History, till I come to the time in which I had opportunity to be well informed of the public transactions; only before I leave the subject I have been upon, I cannot forbear taking notice of that assuming air which these Independents take upon them, in Judging & condemning others, and in setting up for Patronis. This they know gives them authority among the gaping mob. . . . In place of argument, it is think, it may be better to set the colony of New York, in its worst state of Government, while it was under the despotic rule of the Duke of York, in contrast with the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, while it was entirely under the Government of genuine independent republicans, that we may see how much reason these modern independent have to boast.

“In New York a general liberty of conscience was allowed; not the least appearance of persecution on religious matters. In the Massachusetts Bay none but Independent privileges; all others were persecuted, either driven out of the country or severely whipt, & some put to death.

“In New York Mr Smith allows that Justice was speedily administered, the people remain’d easy & quiet in their possessions, & very few law suits any where, except those few suits which were settled here. In the Massachusetts Bay, on the contrary, it is known, that the people were exceedingly litigious, on every little difference at law. Offences were multiplied by Positive Laws, retarding the innocent freedom & pleasures or diversions usual among men. A man was whipt at Boston who accidentally meeting his wife in the street, after long absence, kissed her. By this unnecessary restraint of our natural freedom, Hypocrisy was unavoidably introduced among all ranks. By these unnatural restraints, a kind of Inthusiasm prevailed in Boston, which, if it had not been restrained by the Kings Authority, had gone near to have unpeopled the Country, by the numerous prosecutions & Executions on pretense of Witch Craft.

“Lastly New York generally was at peace & in amity with the Indians and its neighbours; But New England was almost perpetually at War with the Indians, & at variance with its neighbours.”

In closing, Mr. Colden gives discerning definitions of tyranny and of bigotry. The letter was published in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1869), 203-11.

William Smith, whose well known work, The History of the Province of New York, was published in 1757 (p. v.), replies to a letter he has received from Mrs. Farmer, a granddaughter of Jacob Lesler. He has chance “to fall under the Displeasure” of Mrs. Farmer because of what he has written about her grandfather. He says he cannot hope to assuage her grief, but assures her that his account was “collected from the most authentic Materials . . . the original Letters and Papers of Mr. Lesler & Mr. M’bourn from which is still in my Custody. The Facts asserted are indisputable and if my Observations upon them are not well grounded I am sure they were not owing to any Brief in Favour of Mr. Lesler’s opponent for I had always a good Opinion of his Heart and Denisons in setting up for the Prince of Orange and if there was not the greatest Prudence used by that Party it must be ascribed in a great Degree to the Confusion & Heat of the Times.”—From a copy of the letter among the original Smith Papers (MSS.) in N. Y. Pub. Lib., shows that the correct copy was published in History of the Province of New York from its Discovery to the Appointment of Governor Colman in 1765 (pub. in 1825), I 384-90, Smith printed the act reversing the attainder (see May 3, 1825), a copy of which Mrs. Farmer had enclosed in her letter.—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1869), 249.

Since last the Troops that arrived here from Guadaloupe last week, have embark’d on board of Sloops, in order to proceed to Albany, and so on.—Most of the Sloops have proceeded forward.”—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 23, 1759.

Fort Niagara capitulates to the British under Sir William Johnson after a bloody battle. French communication between Canada and Louisiana is forever broken off.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 245-49, and authorities there cited.

The French and English ships from Port Ticonderoga to Crown Point at the approach of Gen. Amherst. Later, they abandoned the fortress at Crown Point, and surrendered the valley of Lake Champlain without a battle.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 235-45, 249-56, and authorities there cited.

John Tabor is to be tried for a forged Attorney-general and advocate general in place of William Kempe, deceased.—Col. Coun. Min., 446.

Gen. Wolfe is cooked in an impetuous assault on the French at Quebec, in which he loses 400 men.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 227-54, and authorities there cited.

In August, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for Aug. commissions for the commanders of the following privateraters: the brigantines “Charming Molly” & “Earl of Loudoun,” the sloop “Elizabeth and Mary,” and the ship “Eagle.”—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 704.

Newl arrives at New York of the evacuation of Crown Point by the French on July 31.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 6, 1759.

Newly arrived French prisoners from Niagara are sent to Suffolk County. The week before, prisoners taken at Niagara were distributed to New Jersey, Connecticut, and counties of New York.—Col. Coun. Min., 446.

Gen. Amherst having sent for more cannon, the council orders September 29 Christopher Blandell to deliver them to Capt. Glegg of the artillery.—Col. Coun. Min., 446.

The British army under Wolfe, having scaled the heights at Quebec, attacks the French under Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham and defeats them decisively. Wolfe is killed and Montcalm mortally wounded. The city surrendered to the English on Sept. 18.—Parkman, Montcalm and Wolfe, II: 255-326, 458-47, and authorities there cited. Great Britain won a vast empire by this single battle, which Bache calls “one of the most momentous victories in the annals of mankind.” See Oct. 12.

In September, petitions were made, on this day and the next, for Sept. commissions for the commanders of the privater sloops “Relief” and “Hope,” respectively.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 704-5.

Israel Desotow is paid £262 for Building a New Dock at the Out side of the Great docks.—M. C. C. VI: 181.

At the suggestion of Gen. Amherst, the council orders that a proclamation be issued encouraging people to return to their settlements, etc.—Col. Coun. Min., 446.

A proclamation to his forces, the British out William Heysham, master of the snow “Speedwell" of New York, for high treason, in giving comfort to the enemy.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 705.

At the request of Gen. Amherst, the governor and council summons the assembly to make provisions for continuing the New York provincials in the service.—Col. Coun. Min., 446. This was enacted on Oct. 18.—Ibid., 447.

The council issues another warrant to Bancker and Dies (see 27
In accordance with the act of July 3, 1759 (p.v.), regarding the transfer of prisoners from the city hall to the new jail, the common counsel or board of aldermen, by a vote of 19 to 19, that this should be accomplished by 1759, before Oct. 27, M. C. C. VII: 181, Vol. 6. After this date, the city hall ceased to be used by the sheriff, or as a prison. For an outline of the history of the new jail, later known as the "Provoat Jail," see March 1, 1757.

The common counsel gives orders for grading and paving Dey Street, in M. C. C. VI: 185-36, 190, 191-92. For other regulations of this street, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 997.

"To be sold, a House and Lot of Ground situated in the Broadway, at the Corner of the Spring Garden, now made use of as a Tavern, having the Sign of the King of Prussia, and next Door to Dr. Johnson's. It is two Story high, has five Fire Places, and 8 square Rooms in it, and a large Cellar Kitchen, with proper Cellars and Conveniences for Liquors. The House is 29 Feet Square, and the Lot 70 Feet deep. For further Particulars enquire of John Dowers. The Title is indisputable."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 8, 1759.

One of John Doe's Bankers, the Grocers, for work, batteries, herrais and fort, at New York, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 705.

In October, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the following privateers: the sloops "Harlequin" and "Nicholas," and the brigantines "Roebecca," "Quebec," and "Catharine."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 705.

Thomas Davis offers a reward for the return of a run-away slave to his house, "The Sign of the Harlequin at the White-Hall Slip."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 1, 1759. No other reference to this house has been found; it probably was a tavern. At this time, Capt. Thomas Doran, commander of a fast-sailing privateer, the "Flying Harlequin," was also proprietor of a tavern. In 1768, his house, which stood on Burnet's Quay, fronting the East River, was offered for sale.—Ibid., July 11, 1768. In 1770, the "house of Thomas Doran" was on the "New Dock," near the Fly Market. Doran was still keeping tavern on Jan. 8, 1776, when the Marine Society held its annual meeting at his house.—Ibid., Jan. 8, 1776.

To celebrate the"Success of his Majesty's Arms at the Battle of Quebec the 13th of September last, between General Wolfe and Mons. Montcalm, and, in Consequence thereof, of the Surrender of that Capital," the cannon on Fort George are fired. The shipping in the harbour continues firing most of the afternoon; colours are displayed, and at night the city is extraordinarily illuminated, "Besides two large Bonfires erected on the Commons, the one by the City, the other (this said) by the Company of Hatters."—N. Y. Dist. Post-Bull., Oct. 15, 1759.

On account of the small-pox in town, the assembly again meets (see Dec. 6, 1757) at the house of Teunis Somerdyck, in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward.—Assemb. Jour., II: 663-4.

It adjourned the next day, and also from time to time thereafter until Dec. 4, when it reassembled in the same place, and continued its sessions until Dec. 24.—Ibid., II: 615. Its next session was held from March 11 to 22, 1760 (ibid., II: 615, 620); and again on May 13 and 14 (ibid., II: 620-21). Sessions began again in the city hall on May 16, 1760.—Ibid., II: 621.

The provincial council meets briefly at Fort George to secure action by the assembly to continue the New York provincials in the service.—Cal. Coun. Min., 447.

John Morin Scott is made special attorney by the common counsel for the New York provincials, for the defence of the late Mayor Holland for the fees received by him for licenses granted to retailers of strong liquors during his mayoralty.—M. C. C., VI: 190. His executors, Mrs. Holland, filed the account with the board on Feb. 23, 1762, showing a balance due the city of £416:17:10, and she was ordered to pay this amount to the treasurer.—Ibid., II: 283-84. For the number of licenses granted, see April 18, 1749.

In the case of Mayor John Cuger, the younger, on Jan. 13, 1767 (p.v.), the corporation exercised its declared right of control and of disposition of fees from liquor licenses by granting him a special license. Oct.

The final plan for regulating Dey Street is adopted by the common council, the work to be finished by Nov. 15, under penalty of a fine for neglect.—M. C. C., VI: 191-93. The first order for grading and paving this street was over 10 years before (July 11, 1749); and the committee to survey the ground reported, April 26, 1759, showing their proposed descending grade from Broadway to the river.—Ibid., VI: 165, 290-91. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 997.

There is advertised to be sold a dwelling-house, bake-house, Nov. and lot, "in Crown Street, commonly called Oswego Street."—N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 5, 1759. For the origin of the name Oswego Street, see De Vor, Market Book, 271. See also July 2, 1766.

The meeting of the common council is held "at the Dwelling House of Samuel Francis in the West Ward."—M. C. C., VI: 193. This was at the Mason's Arms Tavern, on the corner of Broadway and Warren St.—See March 19, 1759.

In November, petitions were made, on this day, and the 19th, for commissions for the commanders of the privateer ship "Position" and the packet ship "South Carolina."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 706.

The king's birthday is celebrated. "At half an Hour after Twelve o'clock, The Royal Salute was fired from the Cannon on Fort-Gore; the Grenadiers, who were under Arms that Day, had, at their own Expence, a large Ox roasted whole, on the Banks of the North-River, with which they made Merry; . . . a deal of Fireworks play'd off near Mr. John Marshall's; his House hand-somely illuminated, where his Majesty's and many other Local Provinces were drank by his Honour our Governor, and other principal Gentlemen of this City."—N. Y. Post-Bull., Nov. 12, 1759.

John Marshall's house was the "Old Bowling Green."—See March 29, 1759.

St. Andrew's Society meets at the house of George Bures, the sign of the Thistle and Crown, near Whitehall Slip.—N. Y. Post-Bull., Nov. 19, 1759. The anniversary meeting of this society was again held here in the next year, but in the interim the sign had been changed to "King George's Head."—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 17, 1760.

Benjamin Bilgge is appointed manager of the excise on tea in New York City, in place of Abraham Lysen, deceased.—Cal. Coun. Min., 447.

Lient.-Gov. De Lancey, writing to the lords of trade on Feb. 16, 1760, said: "... the 22d of November last was observed here, as a Day of Publick Thanksgiving, on the Success of His Majesty's Arms, by Prayer in the Morning, Firing of the Guns at Fort George at Noon, a Grand Dinner I gave to the Council, Assembly and principal Inhabitants, at which were present the whole Clergy of the several denominations in the City, and the Evening was concluded with Illuminations and Fire Works prepar'd for the occasion."—N. Y. Cal. Doc., VII: 426.

In December, petitions were made, beginning on this day, for commissions for the commanders of the sloop "Salley," the brigantines "Polly" and "Charming Beckey," the schooner "Fly," and the ship "Hibernia."—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 706.

In a message to the assembly, De Lancey refers thus to the existing law governing private lotteries: "And here it may be proper to point out to you, a Defect in the Act against private Lotteries, for though the Law be sufficient to restrain them in this Government, yet it seems to fall short of the End proposed, as it leaves this, a Mart for the Lotteries set on Foot in other Provinces."—Assemb. Jour., II: 604; Ross, "Hist. of Lotteries in N. Y.," in Mag. of Hist., V: 148.

The assembly presents an address to De Lancey, in answer to his speaking containing news of British victories at Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Special mention is made of Gen. Wolfe, "who with an Army unparalleled, the Disinterested has sacrificed Life and the public Weal."—Assemb. Jour., II: 607. At some time between this date and 1762 (curiously it has not proved possible to fix the exact date), a monument to Wolfe's memory was erected in New York City. It appears on the Montresor Map and the Ratzer Map of 1766.—See Pls. 40 and 41, Vol. I; and description of A. Pl. 5, b, Vol. II. For more information regarding this monument, see 1764; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 964, title "Obelisk Erected to the Memory of General Wolfe and Others."

An account of money expended by the province of New York, in carrying on the war in North America, from 1754 to 1759, inclusive, bears this date.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng. 706.
1760

M. Pouchot, French commandant of Forts Niagara and Levis, and subsequently transported as an English captive to France via New York (see Oct. 6), in memoirs published at Yverdon in 1781, described New York as it was in 1760. Translated, his observations are as follows:

“The city is thrifty and quite commercial, and every one has an easy air. There are about fifteen or eighteen thousand souls.

“The principal harbor which is on the side towards Long Island, is always full of merchant ships which come and go continually, and there are usually two hundred and fifty or three hundred in port. Very little gunnery can be seen there. It is a little deeper on the Hudson Riverside, but there is much less frequent, because it is not then sheltered from the south winds. The bars that we meet near Sandy Hook, doubtless would prevent vessels of the greatest force from coming up the river.

“New York they have coast pilots, for conducting vessels from Sandy Hook to the city, for which the charges are very high. Along the quays of this city, they have constructed piers to receive the vessels which come up directly to the shore, and unload by planks or flying bridges.

“This city is not fortified, and has only a citadel at the point of the two passages. This is square, and about sixty toises on the outside, revetted in good masonry, without ditch or covered way. It is well fortified with cannon. At the front, which is on the point of land, they have built upon some notches in the rocks, a wall twelve feet thick, which forms an almost unapproachable and a kind of false-bray or citadel which, when they have ninety pieces of cannon on battery, of from twelve to twenty-four pound balls. The platforms are all of large flat stones. These pieces are mounted on marine carriages, and sweep not only the bay, but a small island used as a hospital for the Quarantine.”—From Memoir upon the Late War in North America between the French and English, by M. Pouchot, translated by Franklin B. Hough, II: 84-86.

The following is found in a descriptive account of New York: “In the province of New York [outside of Manhattan Island], to obtain a good title to the vacant lands, first there must be produced an Indian deed, which must be approved by the governor and council, by warrant; it is surveyed by the provincial surveyor, and patented by the governor and council; the fees are very high.”

“The valuations of the several counties may be taken from the quotas allowed each of them, in proportion to their respective taxes, when paper money was emitted upon loan; for instance 1778, they emitted 40,000 l. currency upon loan, whereas To New York city and county 10,000 l. . . .”—From A Summary, Historical and Political (1760), by William Douglass, M.D., II: 254.

“Here is a court of chancery, a court not known in New England. It is a court where all is chancery and law.”—Ibid., II: 257.

Copper ore, from Schuyler’s mine in New Jersey, is shipped from New York.—Ibid., II: 258.

The earliest streets to be identified by number rather than by name were designated at this time as First, Second, and Third Streets, shown on “The Ratter Map” (Pl. 41, Vol. I). Valentine (see Man. Com. Cen., 1855, p. 499) says they were “projected about 1760.” They do not appear on the Maerschalk Plan of 1755 (Pl. 54, Vol. I). They are shown but not named on “The Montresor Plan” of 1766 (Pl. 49, Vol. I). The numbers were displaced by the present names, Chrystie, Forsyth, and Eldridge (heroes of the war of 1812), on March 24, 1817 (q.c.). See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 999, 1009, 1010.

Capt. Archibald Kennedy erected his spacious and famous mansion on the site of No. 1 Broadway at about this time.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 950. For a history of the plot, see Aug. 26, 1766, 4 col., N. Y. Hist. Soc. MSS. The house is Missadellia, N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The “Minutes of the estate of Philip & Stephen Van Cortlandt Engr d dec’d 1760” mention houses and lots in Stone St., “fron’ting the Exchange” also on Broadway, in De Peyster St., at the dock “behind the Treasurers,” etc., and the names they bought there in the same year, are recorded in their names at the MSS., N. Y. Hist. Soc.

The first lease from Trinity Church property along Broadway which is found recorded, bears date in 1760, and was for four lots on the southwest corner of Murray street; the lessees were Bell & Brockman, carpenters; the term, twenty-one years, and the rent eight pounds per annum.—Man. Com. Cen. (1855), 54 t f.

The domestic establishment of Abraham de Peyster, who lived in a three-story brick house, has been described by Valentine to illustrate the style of living among the wealthiest merchants at this period. Two leather-bottomed sofas were in the entrance hall. Mahogany and black walnut furniture, brasses, chins, snocces, etc., are listed as distributed throughout the various rooms of the establishment. The best bed-room, which was on the second floor, was called the “wainscot-room.” On the wall of this room, so called from the old tapestry it contained, which had been preserved in the family. The house contained, besides the usual living rooms and bed-rooms, an office, an apple-room, a garret, and a wine-cellar. The stable, in the rear of the yard, contained a chaise, a two-horse sleigh, and a one-horse sleigh. The family plate presented an array of solid silver dishes, salvers, tankards, bowls, and a variety of other articles, weighing 1,727 ounces and valued at about $2,000.—Man. Com. Cen. (1855), 532-53.

From this date until 1769, Matthew Pratt occasionally painted portraits in New York. Colmen was one of the prominent people who sat for him.—Dunlap, Hist. of Arts of Design, II: 114. For a history of Pratt’s life and work, see Ibid., III: 110-16.

Secretory Pownall writes to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey: “His Majesty’s postmaster General, having represented to the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, that the packet boats, established for carrying on a correspondence between these Kingdoms and His Maj’y Colonies in North America, have frequently been detained considerably longer at New York, than the time allotted them to stay there, which is twenty days, . . . I am directed by their Lordships to recommend it to you, never to detain the packet Boats longer than the day they are to be in, or necessary for His Maj’y service, and especially when there are two or more Packet Boats lying at New York.”—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 419-20.

Secretory Pitt urge the government of America to persuade their various assemblies to raise at least as large a force of men for the Canadian campaign as they did last year.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 420-21. See Feb. 16.

The committee appointed on May 11, 1755 (M.C.G., VI: 151), “for inspecting into the Increasements made upon the Rights of the Corporation in the Outward,” makes its report. They “have caused Several Surveys to be made of a Number of Patents Contiguous to the Commons in the Outward.” The surveys which they have hitherto caused to be made have been chiefly confined to “that Tract of Land Surrounded by the Bowery Lane and Bloomadale Road the Road leading thence to the great Kils, the Road from the Great Kill to Greenwich Lane and the Green치 Lane on its Extent from the Great Kill Road to the Bowery Lane,” within which extent of ground several patents are included on which the present owners have made encroachments. These encroachments and the persons who have made them are named. They include “the Weylantid Patent,” second, an encroachment made by Peter van Orden; third, an unpatented “Vacancy” (belonging to the corporation) in the possession of “Annie Covenhoven Thomas Clarke and the Representatives of Sir Peter Warren on the one Side and John Dewit and Jacobus Horne on the Other”; and fourth, another “Vacancy,” in the possession of Jacobus Hune. On the discovery of these “Vacancies,” the committee reports, they “Convened” the various persons concerned, and demanded “what Terms they had to Offer to us in Behalf of this Board Concerning the same.” Their replies are embodied in the report.

The committee further reports that it will determine by exact survey “the Stale [old] Controversy Between m’ét abraham Leffertse and John Devoor Concerning the Lands Belonging to this Corporation lying Between their respective Tracts and the Road,” also that they are of opinion that what waste or those parts of Cutting place, in pulling down the Dwelling house,” is “destroying the wood.” The committee asks for instructions on certain points, and the common council orders that certain leases be made, and that Alderman Scott be given warrant of attorney to prosecute certain actions of trespass and ejection.—M. C. G., VII: 168-225. For location see Landmark Map Ref. Key (title, “Streets”), III: 952 et seq.
A Subscription some Days ago was set on foot, and carried on with such Spirit throughout the several Wards in this City, for the Benefit of the Poor thereof, that a very considerable Collection was soon made, and, by our worthy Magistrates, immediately laid out for the Relief of the Poor, in Wood, kc. all the Necessities of Life, at this Time, being at a much higher Price than was ever known. —[T. F., et al.: Report "with All", 1765, M. C. C., VII. 206. No report of this committee is entered in the Minutes. Nine years later, April 7, 1769 (p. v.), the same petition was presented to the common council and another committee was appointed with the same instructions (ibid., VIII. 159), and with the same result. On June 16, 1772 (p. v.), when the same petition was again presented, the board took it into consideration without referring it to a committee. See June 22, 1772.

The location of the Meal or Wall St. Market is shown by an advertisement of this date, which reads: "To be sold at public vendue... a large and convenient dwelling-house, with the lot of ground thereto belonging, on the corner of Wall Street and Queen [Pearl] Street, opposite to the Meal Market, near the Merchants' Coffee-House, now in the occupation of Mr. Daniel Bright." —[N. T. Post-Bord, May 3, 1766. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 173.]

In an address to the assembly, Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey communicates the substance of Sec. Pitt's instructions (see Jan. 7), and then adds: "You must be fully sensible that the Safety and Welfare of America, and of this Province in particular, are so nearly concerned in this Event that I cannot entertain the least doubt, but that you will proceed with the utmost Application and Dispatch, in this promising and decisive Crisis, and by speedy and vigorous Resolutions, enable me to have the Troops of this Province, in Readiness to attend the Commander in Chief, as early as it shall be practicable for him to begin his Operations." —[Assem. Jour., II: 617.]

The Baptist meeting-house is opened for worship. —Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 226. See 1768, and May 4, 1782. The site of this edifice, which is now covered by No. 35 to 43 Gold St., had been purchased and the corner-stone of the church laid in the preceding year (1759). —Greenleaf, op. cit. Although the congregation had come here from the "Anabaptist" meeting in Cliff St., which was the earliest church of this denomination in the city, the Gold St. meeting became known as the First Baptist Church. For later land-mark history, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 928; see also Life of Spencer Hougham Cone, by his son (N. Y., 1856), 265-69.

From this time until 1803, the promoters of the "Free Bridge" (see Jan. 2, 1759) made several vain attempts to recover from the government the amount of their subscriptions in money. A petition to the house, Jacob Dyckman, Jr., John Vermilye, and Benjamin Palmer, stated that they had erected the bridge at a cost of £350, and received but £310 in private subscriptions. They, therefore, now ask permission to raise the balance "by way of Lottery, or otherwise." —[Assem. Jour., II: 619. No action was taken; and on Dec. 7, 1763, Palmer and his associates again submitted their petition to the house, this time suggesting that a toll be allowed on all traffic across. Ibid., II: 734. Once more the matter was postponed until October 4, 1764, when the petitioners again sought reimbursement. —Ibid., II: 757. On October 12, the house and to reject the petition. Colonel Philipse, whose monopoly at Kingsbridge had been broken by the erection of the "Free Bridge," voted against giving aid to Palmer. —Ibid., II: 757. For further attempts on the part of the builders of the bridge to regain their money, see Aug. 6, 1766, March 5, 1767 and April 18, 1769.

On March 19, 1803, a committee of the assembly made the following report regarding the petition of Benjamin Palmer: "It appears from statements made by the petitioner, that a number of individuals with the petitioner, built a bridge across the Harlem river, in the year 1753 [1758], by subscription; and that the petitioner paid $200, more than his proportion, which is a specific legal interest to this day, amounting to $300, which the petitioner prays may be paid him, either by a state tax or lottery. Your committee conceive that it would be improper to grant the prayer of the petitioner." The assembly also refused to grant the request. —[Senat. and Assem. Jour. (1803), 126-17.] The legislature passes an act for "levying Paying and Clarething" 22
The iconography of Manhattan Island

1760
2,680 soldiers, including officers. Forces from neighbouring colonies, combined with this New York contingent, will make an army of 25,000. The 'Majesty's Regular Troops Montreal and other Posts belonging to the French in Canada.' Provision is also made for emitting bills of credit for $560,000 and for cancelling the bills in short periods. This amount is to be 'Levied and Paid by the Freeholders Inhabitants and Residents of this Colony during Eight Years' according to definite proportions. The yearly quota for New York City is £2,500.—Col. Lewis N. Y.: Vol. IV, 398-418.

1 Private sale is advertised of a 'very commodious new House and Lot of Ground, situate in the Broad-Way, next Door to the Rev. Dr. Johnson, being this From Land North Broadway, from Breadth 22 Feet, two Stories high with 5 Fire-places in it, and a Cellar under the whole House.' For further particulars, enquire of Mr. John Dowers, who will give a good Title for the same.—*N. T. Post-Bay, March 31, 1760. See Feb. 6, 1758.

1 The provincial council receives a letter from Gov. Franklin of Massachusetts, addressed to Lieut.-Gov. De Lancey, reporting that a fire has destroyed part of Boston (on March 20—see Boston Post-Bay, March 24). It is ordered that the assembly be asked for a grant to the sufferers, and that collections be made for their relief.—*Col. Coun. Min., 448-9. See June 10.

1 April 1
1 The provincial council reports a survey made "of the Road Leading to Bloomcandall Road," containing the following description: "Beginning at the North East Corner of Sir Peter Warrens Land [at the junction of the Abingdon and Bloomcandall Roads.—21st St. N. E. from the point of Surnas from the new Elevent Degrees and Forty five minutes, East Above Ten Chains to the junction with the Old Post Road, from thence North fourteen Degrees [eastery] to the East side of a Large Split Rock in the Middle of the Road About One hundred Yards, to the north ward of Peter Van Nordens House." This house, which is shown on Pl. 86, Vol. III, stood on the west side of the road, south of 31st St.—*Liber Deeds, XXXVIII: 307 (New York); *ibid., XXII: 64. The board accepts the report with the amendment that "the Road there to be made to be four Roads wide and done at the Exence of this Corporation," but afterwards revised "by the Inhabitants of said Bloomcandall Division."—*M. C. C., VI: 209. *Man. Com. Coun. (1862), 519. The road had been completed before Sept. 29, on which date payment "for Finishing the Bloomcandall Road as far as Peter Van Nordens" was ordered by the common council.—*M. C. C., VI: 224. Prior to the changes covered by this survey, the Bloomcandall Road had been very crooked at this point.

May 1
1 The King's College building is so far completed that the officers and students begin "to Lodge and Diet in it."—*Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 26, citing "the records." Pres. Johnson moves in a new commodious room, "a little over forty years after he had first done the same in the College House."—*ibid., 36, citing Chandler's *Life of Johnson. The building, called King's College, in accordance with the terms of the charter (see Oct. 31, 1754), in honour of George II, was surmounted by an iron crown, which is still preserved by Columbia University—a witness to its royal foundation.—*Ibid., 26. See also July 13.

1 Gen. Amherst, on embarking for Albany, is "saluted with the Canon on Fort George." Gen. Montcotton sets out for Philadelphia.—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 5, 1760.

1 The 2680 effective men [see March 22] ordered to be raised by this Province for the approaching Campaign, are very near completed; and 'tis thought that within 8 or 10 Days, they will all be ready to proceed to the General Rendezvous at Albany.'—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 5, 1760. See May 26.

1 A "Company of Rangers, independent," arrive in the city from New Jersey, on their way to Albany. "They are of the likeliest healthy sturdy young Men that perhaps has met together for the Purpose during the War; and we make no doubt but that they'll convince the World they were not idly put together."—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 26, 1760.

1 An account of a fashionable horseman, for work done on the Coggey post since July 28, 1759, bears this date.—*Col. His. MSS., Eng., 711.

1 News arrives in New York of the French attack on Quebec (April 26-28), and their repulse by the English troops under Gov. Murray.—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 26 and July 7, 1760.

1 All the men in this Governor's service (see May 3) are gone to Albany, under the Command of Col. Le Roux, of the 31st, Cora of the 24th, and Woodhull of the 3rd Regiment. Captains of the three companies out of this City and County, were Hubbell, De Forest and Buren."—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 26, 1760.

A newspaper advertisement mentions "Benjamin Keats, at the June Sign of the King of Prussia, in the Fields."—*N. T. Merc., June 2, 1760. This tavern, which stood at the present 233-234 Broadway, had been formerly run by Philip Kayswick. See April 5, 1754.

The remainder of the inhabitants (between them) have "laid in Provisions, stores, &c."—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 9, 1760.

1 The province, through an act of the legislature, contributes $5,000 to the relief of the sufferers in the recent fire in Boston, when 200 families were left 29 Feet Behind.—*Cam. N. Y., 1: 154; Assem. Jour., II: 621. In large measure this money came from citizens of New York City, and is an early indication of the broadly benevolent spirit shown in later years under similar circumstances.

An act is passed "to regulate the Practice of Physick and Surgery in the City of New York." It is enacted "because many ignorant and unskilled Persons in Physick and Surgery in order to gain a Subsistence do take upon themselves to administer Physick and practice Surgery in the City of New York to the endangering of the Lives and Limbs of their Patients," that every person desiring to practice as physician or surgeon must be first examined and attested before receiving a certificate. Jurisdiction in this matter is given to members of the council, judges of the supreme court, the attorney-general, and the mayor of New York City.—*Col. Laws N. Y., VII: 455-56.

May 1
1 Payment is made "for sundry nights watches in the Steepel of the City Hall" from April 15 to May 13, 1760.—*M. C. C., VI: 214. "Watching at the City Hall" was a matter of record twenty years before (July 28, 1741).—*Ibid., VI: 23.

Francis Maerschalk delivers to the common council the "Draft or plan of a Road which he hath lately Laid out by the direction of this Corporation in the west ward of this City." It is thus described: "Beginning from the Spring Garden House [Broadway and Ann St] where the street now is of the Breadth of Eighty Two feet six Inches, and Extending from thence North Thirty seven Degrees, East Thirty Minutes, Until it Cunes to the Ground of the Late Widow Rutgers [Broadway, Church and Thomas Sts]. Leav- ing the street thereof Fifty foot in Breadth." The report is approved and ordered recorded.—*M. C. C., VI: 214. The street was called Great George Street in 1775.—"See "Broadway" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 904-5, and description of Pl. 76-b, II: 279-80.

The committee of the common council which had charge of the regulation and paving of Dey St. (see Oct. 31, 1759) in the West Ward, is required "to cause the Broad way Street from said Dey street as far as Division [now Fulton] Street on both sides to be forthwith with Regulated and paved, and report the same to this Board with all convenient speed."—*M. C. C., VI: 214. The report was however, until July 24, 1761 (p. v.), when they recommended a specified grading for the convenience of buildings already erected on Division (Fulton St. This was ordered to be executed)—*Ibid., VII: 254.

"We have now but two Privates, on a Cruise out of this Port, viz. The Ship Duke of Cumberland, and Slop Harliequin [see Aug. 26], which last has been on Foot from the Beginning of the War, and most of her Cruises remarkably successful."—*N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 16, 1760.

The first commencement of King's College in its own building is held.—*Hist. of Columbia Univ., 26. A published account states: "On Tuesday last [June 24], a public Commencement was held in this City. In the Morning the College Hall was opened with a short and elegant Latin Speech, by the Rev. President; whence the Students and Candidates, dressed in their Gowns, and uncovered, proceeded to St. George's Church, followed by the Governors of the College, and other Gentlemen ... The Audience on this Occasion was large and polite, and expressed a great Satisfaction at the Order, Decency andJudiciousness, with which the whole was conducted."—*N. T. Post-Bay, June 30, 1760. See also July 13.

Amidst the turmoil of the Boston 1768 Burnaby, an English clergyman, traveling through the middle colonies, makes the following observations on New York.—"From Staten Island, 'I embarked for New-York; and, after a pleasant passage over the bay, which is three leagues wide; and various delightful prospects of rivers, islands, fields, hills, woods, the Narrows, New York city, vessels sailing to and fro, and innumerable porpoises playing upon the surface of the water; in an evening so severe that the hemisphere was not ruffled by a single cloud, arrived there about the setting of the sun.

"This city contains between two and three thousand houses, and 16 or 17,000 inhabitants, is tolerably well built, and has several good houses. The streets are paved, and very clean, but in general they are narrow; there are two or three, indeed, which are spacious and airy, particularly the Broadway. The house in this street have most of them a row of trees before them; which form an agreeable shade, and produce a pretty effect. The whole length of the town is something more than a mile; the breadth of it about half an one. The situation is, I believe, esteemed healthy; but it is subject to one great inconvenience, which is the want of fresh water; so that the inhabitants are obliged to have it brought from springs at some distance out of town. There are several public buildings, though but few that deserve attention. The college [see May, 1760], when finished, will be exceedingly handsome: it is to be built on three sides of a quadrangle, fronting Hudson's or North river, and will be the most beautifully situated of any college, I believe, in the world. At present only one wing is finished, which is of stone, and consists of twenty-four sets of apartments; each having a large sitting-room, with a study, and bed-chamber. They are obliged to make use of some of these apartments for a master's lodge, parson's house, chapel, hall, &c. but as soon as the whole shall be completed, there will be proper apartments for each of these offices. The name of it is King's College.

"There are two churches in New York, the old, or Trinity Church, and the new one, or St. George's Chapel; both of them large buildings, the former in the Gothic taste, with a spire, the other upon the model of some of the new churches in London. Besides these, there are several other places of religious worship; namely, two Low Dutch Calvinist churches, one High Dutch ditto, one French ditto, one German Lutheran church, one presbyterian meeting-house, and the Scotch Presbyterians, one Moravian ditto, and a Jews synagogue. There is also a very handsome charity-school for sixty poor boys and girls, a good workhouse, barracks for a regiment of soldiers, and one of the finest prisons I have ever seen. The court or stadhous makes no great figure, but it is to be repaired and beautified. There is a quadrangular fort, capable of mounting sixty cannon, though at present there are, I believe, only thirty-two. Within this is the governor's palace, and underneath it a battery capable of mounting ninety-four guns, and barracks for a company or two of soldiers. Upon one of the islands in the bay is an hospital for sick and wounded seamen; and, upon another, a pest-house. These are the most noted public buildings in and about the city."—Burnaby, Travels through the Middle Settlements in North-America (London, 1775), 105-

713

8.

The people carry on an extensive trade, and there are said to be clearing houses for trade from New York, New Jersey, and Philadelphia. They export chiefly grain, flour, pork, skins, furs, pig-iron, hickory, and staves. Their manufactures, indeed, are not extensive, nor by any means to be compared with those of Pennsylvania; they make a small quantity of cloth, some linen, hats, shoes, and other articles for wearing apparel. They make glass also, and wampum; refine sugars, which they import from the West Indies; and distil considerable quantities of rum. They also, as well as the Pennsylvanians, till both were restrained by act of parliament, had erected several stilling mills, to make nalli &c. But this is now prohibited, and they are exceedingly disunited at it. They have several other brands of manufactures, but, in general, so insconsiderable, that I shall not take notice of them; one thing it may be necessary to mention, I mean the article of shipbuilding; which, in which, in different parts of this province, they employ many hands."—Ibid., 110-11.

But they have made no greater progress here than in the other colonies; but as a subscription library has been lately opened, and every one seems zealous to promote learning, it may be hoped that they will hereafter advance faster than they have done hitherto. The college is established upon the same plan as that in the Jerseys, except that this at New York professes the principles of the Established Church of England; and that the state of it is far from being flourishing, or so good as might be wished. Its fund does not exceed 10,000 l. currency, and there is a great scarcity of professors. A commencement was held, nevertheless, this summer, and seven gentlemen took degrees. There are in it at this time about twenty-five students. The president, Dr. Johnson, is a very worthy and learned man, but rather too far advanced in life to have the direction of so young an institution. The late Dr. Bristow left to this college a fine library, of which they are in daily expectation."—Ibid., 112-

13.

"The inhabitants of New York, in their character, very much resemble the Pennsylvanians; more than half of them are Dutch, and almost therefore, habitually frugal, industrious, and parsimonious. . . . The women are handsome and agreeable; though rather more reserved than the Philadelphia ladies. Their amusements are much the same as in Pennsylvania; viz. balls, and sleighing expeditions in the winter; and, in the summer, going in parties upon the water, and fishing; or making excursions into the country. There are several houses pleasantly situated upon East river, near New York, where it is common to have turtle-feasts: these happen once or twice in a week. Thirty or forty gentlemen and ladies meet and dine together, drink tea in the afternoon, fish and amuse themselves till evening, and then return home in Italian chaises, (the fashionavel carriage in this and most parts of America, Virginia excepted, where they make use only of coaches, and these commonly drawn by six horses), a gentleman and lady in each chaise. In the way there is a bridge, about three miles distant from New York, which you always pass to a kissing-bridge, which is handsomely built, and the etiquette to salute the lady who has put herself under your protection."—Ibid., 113-14. See also Winson, Nar. & Crit. Hist. of Am., v.: 245, 245; VIII: 489.

John Riker and others (over sixty persons are named), inhabitants on both sides of the river, ditto, in a petition to the common council that, "Notwithstanding the good Intention of making or Leaving that space for a slip Called Burling's slip and the Erection and Building a market house there at the head of said slip," such purpose has failed, as the slip and market are almost wholly disused "by Boats and Other water Crafts which Commonly apply to and attend market places;" that "the said slip and market house have Become more a Common Nuisance to the publick than a Convenience and Advantage by the Cattle of this City Sheltering and lying in the said market house and Idle people, Boys and Negroes spending their Masters Time by playing and Gaming and that the said slip by the Filth of higher parts Descending by force of Rains is in a Great Measure filled up so that Scarce any Craft but Very small can be Conveyed within several Rods Distance from the said market house, and that such Filth and dirt at many times and Generally in the Warm Season are Naustious and Offensive as well to the health of those Living Contiguous to the same as to such as Frequently pass and Repass." They further complain "that the Docks or wharfs on each side of the said slip are so narrow that when foot people meet Carts passing there it is Dangerous for them." This is especially true of "the dock or wharf on the west side of the slip which has a considerable front from the walls of the houses to the Slip," so that "in Icy Times, it is with much Difficulty and Danger Both for Carts and Carriages as well as People on foot to pass. All which Obstructs a Communication and Negotiation of Business of the Residents and Others Between the Coffee house and Beekmans." The petitioners ask that the slip be filled up or that a foot-bridge be made across it.

—M. C. C., VI: 215. This petition is opposed by a petition of "Sundry Persons Owners and Proprietors of Real Estates Lying in Queens Street," offered at the same meeting, and a hearing is ordered.—M. C. C., VI: 215-16. On Oct. 30, it was ordered that the slip "be filled up and a Common Shovel Shed made at the Expense of this Corporation."—Ibid., VI: 228. On Aug. 13, 1761, payment was made "for Filling up Burling Slip and Causing a Drain to be made and finished there."—Ibid., 235-39. The original petitions (MS.) are in the record-room, city clerk's office.

The market at Burling's Slip was never a popular one, as may be inferred from the foregoing petition. It had been standing for about 14 years, this being the market-house erected "in Rodman's Slip," by permission of the common council of Feb. 28, 1746 (q.v.). Rodman's Slip had been previously known as Lyon's Slip on the Lyne Survey of 1750 (Pl. 27, Vol. 1). The market at Burling's Slip is on the East Front of South street, at the intersection of Greene and Lafayette Street, and is mentioned in the Gazette of June 1, 1752,—"at Burling's Slip, near the new market." For the various changes in the name of this slip, see Lundmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988. The market ceased to exist about 1760.—De Voe, The Market Book, 279.

Nearly eighty of the "Soldiers taken Prisoners by the French (July at Quebec, the 28th of April"—(see May 26), arrive in New York to be exchanged.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), July 14, 1760.

13 At 3 o'clock, late in the evening, a messenger from the Hunter's College, writes to the Arch Bishop of Canterbury of having lately held a Commencement (see June 24), "when six were graduated Bachelors none having, till next May, sufficient standing for Masters." He describes the college building thus: "Our house, all at present intended, is now near finished, and it a very neat & commodious building, 180 feet in length by 50, 3 Stories in a very delightful Situation near Hudson's river, opening to the Harbor. This is designed for one side of a Quadrangle, to be carried on, and completed in time, as we shall need and be able."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 46-47.

14 A committee of Trinity vestry is appointed "to have a Cupulo Erected and a Bell hung upon the Charity School House."—Trin. Min. (MS.). The school stood on the south side of Rector St; it was burned, Feb. 23, 1750 (q.c.), and rebuilt the same year.

15 "Our Army at Crown-Point, consisting of 900 effective Men, were all well the last Account we had from them, and in high Spirits, and supplied with all Sorts of Necessaries in great Abundance."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), July 28, 1760.

16 Lieut.-Gov. James de Lancey dies suddenly. His funeral on the following day was thus described in the Mercury: "At three Quarters past Six, P. M. his Majesty's Ship the Winchester, of 50 Guns, ... now in the North-River, fired a Gun for the Funeral to move, which was done from his Honour's Seat in the Bowery Lane. At the same Instant Minute Guns began firing from Copy Borough Battery, and a number of the Numbers were followed by the Winchester, and she by the General Wall Packet, each firing the Same Number with the Battery." The orde of procession to Trinity Church is fully described.—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 4, 1760. For sketch of his life, see N. Y. Post-Boy, July 31, 1765; Man. Col. Coun. (1845), 755; "Memoir" by Edward F. de Lancey, in Doc. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.); V: 637-93; Smith's Continuation of the Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1850), V: 281-83. For an account of his estate, see Man. Com. Coun. (1866), 584-85; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 949.

17 Cadwalader Colden, as oldest councillor, is summoned by express messenger to administer the government.—Cal. Coun. Min., 4: 48.

19 Cadwalader Colden, who arrived in town yesterday from his home in Coldenham, Ulster Co., is sworn in as president of the council, and made the place deliver to him the seal, and he takes the chair. He issues a proclamation giving notice of the death of Gov. De Lancey, and continuing all public officers in their places.—Cal. Coun. Min., 4: 493-95; N. Y. Gaz (Weyman), Aug. 4, 1760; N. Y. Merc., Aug. 11, 1760. Colden was several times called upon after this to serve as lieutenant-governour of the province; namely, from Aug. 8, 1761 to Oct. 26, 1761; Nov. 1, 1761 to June 14, 1762; June 18, 1762 to Nov. 15, 1762; Sept. 13, 1769 to Oct. 19, 1770; and April 7, 1774 to June 28, 1775. He died at Flushing, L. I., Sept. 21, 1776.—See Chronology, under these dates.

20 Payment of $210:00 was made by the common council for repairs made to "the meat Market and the Dock and Drain there."—M. C. Co., VI: 217. See, further, Feb. 23, 1762.

21 Colden invites Gen. Amherst to share the house within the fort with him. He proposes that the general have "all that part of the House on the left hand of the Stairs, or North part of the House, which contains all the large rooms, with the kitchen, Garden and all rooms over the Kitchen & likewise the two Rooms on the first floor where Mr. Appy kept his office. The other small rooms on the right hand above stairs will be sufficient for my family, with the room on the first floor of the right hand of the stair case for a Kitchen."—Histori. Soc. Mag., (1845), L: 131; see also J. Sept. 12.

22 The privatee slooper "Harlequin" (see June 16) arrives at New York. She "has made a saving cruise, having taken 7 prizes. She was chased by a Ship about the Lat. 37 or 38, but did not think proper to speak with her."—N. Y. Gaz (Weyman), Sept. 1, 1760.

23 Inhabitants of the City or of their own house "extends from the Market in the Broadway to the North River" petition the common council that this street be regulated, by lessen-of the English; the extension of British dominion over new and productive territory; and the General’s “Humane and Generous Use of Victory,” which “must Convince the attentive World that Britons never Conquer to enslave.” The draft of “a freedom” is also read at this meeting, and it is ordered that it “be handsomely Engrossed on parchment and the Seal of this Corporation affixed thereto, and this sealing in Gold Box” with an inscription in Latin.
engraved thereon, the text of which is recorded in the Minutes.

The address and freedom were presented to Geo. Amherst on Nov. 27.—Ibid., VI: 212-36, 237. The cost of the gold box was £27.
—Ibid., VI: 254.

The nine branches of the city’s revenue for the past year were:
ferry rent, £650; dock rent, £500; licenses (for two years) £2450; rent of market stalls, £245; rent of water lots, £1611.41.. land rent, £1218; Exchange rent, £50; total, £22813124.—*Jour.
City Chamberlain, III: 198. The fiscal year begins Oct. 14.—See Duggan Charter, April 27, 1686.

The companies of “Col. Montgomery’s Highland Regiment” embark for Halifax.—*N. Y. Gan., Oct. 20, 1760. They arrived Aug. 31 (q.v.).

This day is appointed “for a general Thanksgiving to Almighty
God, throughout this Province, for the Continuance of his Divine Providence and Provisions in the Forming, Favoring and Sovereign, and the Reduction of all Canada.”—*N. Y. Gan. (Weymun),

In the morning between eight and o’clock, “Our late most Gracious Sovereign, King George the Second, was suddenly seized with illness at his Palace at Kensington, by a violent Disorder, and fell down Speechless, and so soon expired, notwithstanding all possible Methods used for his Recovery. His Majesty departed this Life in the 77th Year of his Age, and the 34th of His Reign: Beloved, Honoured, and Regretted by his Subjects for his Eminent and Right Virtue.”—v. 7, Gan. (Weymun), Jan. 5, 1761; N. Y. Col.
Docr., VII: 449. Official notice of the king’s death reached New York and was received by the common council on Jan. 1, 1761 (q.v.).—See also Jan. 16, 1761. The new sovereign, King George III, reigned until Jan. 20, 1820.

The old remarkable large Bass or Linder Tree facing Barnet’s at the Entrance of the Bowery” is blown down.—N. Y. Gan. (Weymun), Oct. 27, 1760. “There was a merchant named Benjamin Stout, who lived at 6 Golden Hill when peace was declared after the Revolutionary War. Uncle Ben they used to call John Thurman writes to John Sargent of London: “Our Good, therefore wise General [Amherst] is coming down tho’ he has done all that can be done, & what none before him could do Success had all his undertakings, and he has restored Peace to this Land, without the Loss of many Men, he always secured the considerable Towns and the fore and coastal Inhabitants, even in Times of War, tho he has done this, & excluded the French from any commerce with the Indians, Relieved the Inhabitants from the Tiranry of the army, had a Strict eye to Justice, punishing all that were guilty in the Army, as Civil Law done in Government without respect to persons; after all this, many say more was in his power & he ought to have done it, & others as Ignorantly say all was done for him, & he has done Nothing, this shows the absolute Impossibility of Pleading every Body, or Acting in a Publick Character without Blame. I hope those at the head of affairs may see & Reward his merit, and never give up the Great acquisitions, but annex them to the Crown, & Future Ages Bless the Man that’s rooted out so noxious an enemy . . . the General has established

New York Paper Money thro’ all his conquests even to Quebec, this will be a Great advantage to this Government & a mighty support to the Credit of its mony we dont know but war may last another 20 Years.”—Col. Jour. N. Y., 1761: 1; ser. IV: 282-86.

Last week a remarkable Tryal, which has been in the Law near 20 Years, came on in the Supreme Court here, between The Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York of the Church of England, as by Law Established, and the Family of the Brookes, who have a Publick School in Gold Street, when the Jury after being out about 20 Minutes, gave their Verdict in favor of the

From “Our Court at Saville House,” the king addresses the following letter to Cadwallader Colden, “or in his Absence to the Commander in Chief of our said Province for the time being”:

“Gentlemen and Friends, We do hereby Authorize and impower you to make Use of the Publick Seal made out of within Our Province of New York in America, during the Life time of Our dearest Grandfather, the late deceased King, for sealing all things whatsoever that are used to be sealed therewith, until another Seal shall be prepared and transmitted to Our said Province duly Authorized by Us. And for so doing this shall be Your Warrant.”—
From an official letter among Golden MSS., in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

A committee of the common council is appointed “To treat with Mr Henry Van Vlack Concerning the Rent of the Pot Bakers House Belonging To this Corporation near the Neckroes Burying Place.”—M. C. C., VI: 128. On Dec. 10, three lots were leased to John Haines and Eve van Vlack, on the representation of their brother Henry van Vlack, a merchant, who stated that the former Builder a Potting House pot oven and Sunk a Well Supposing at that Time the said Lands were his property.”—Ibid., VI: 218, “Pot Baker’s” is shown on Pl. 58-b, Vol. I.

It is ordered by the common council that “the Neighbourhood of Crown Street Slip have Liberty to Lay a Stone Wall w.Cross said Crown Street Slip.”—M. C. C., VI: 218.

The “Lords of the Privy Council” order that King George III
(see Oct. 25) be proclaimed at New York (see Jan. 1, 1761).
On Jan. 16, 1761, the order was read in council, and on the 17th the proclamation of the act and charter was made throughout all the Province kept in the Emmer Coll., item No. 10749. This was done according to a form sent to Colden. On Feb. 28, he sent a printed copy of the proclamation to the lords of trade, in his report of the event, which he stated was conducted “with all the solemnity that could be expected.”—N. Y. Col. Docr., VII: 458.

Postage amounting to 3½ shillings was charged on two tracts accompanying a letter sent from New York by Rev. Dr. Johnson, president of King’s College (see July 17, 1754), to the archbishop of Canterbury, at Lambeth Palace. It was considered exorbitant by the recipient, who advised Johnson to “write a little for opportunities

Francis Brown is found guilty in the court of general sessions of “Feloniouly Stealing & Carrying away from out of one of the Stage Boats (see Aug. 28, 1759) Six Doozo pair of Stockings,” and is sentenced to be “whipped Thirty Nine Lashes upon the Naked Back by the Common whipper.”—Min. Gen. Sessions of the Peace (MS.), 1753-1762.

The assembly thinks it necessary “that the Laws of this Colony, passed since the 25th of November, 1751, shall be revised, digested and collected, in one Volume, and that a General Index be made and added to the same.” As William Livingston and William Smith are willing to undertake the work for £100, the assembly resolves that, upon its completion by them, “this House, will at their Next Meeting thereafter, provide Ways and Means, for paying them the said Sum.”—Assembly Jour., II: 644. On May 16, 1761, the assembly authorized, if Livingston and Smith would include also in their work all the laws passed since the last resolution ordering the revisal, they should be paid “in the same Proportion, they were to be paid by the said Resolution.”—Ibid., II: 661. A similar provision was made on Jan. 5, 1762.—Ibid., II: 688. The laws were published in 1762 (q.v.), and payment for the work was made on Dec. 20, 1765 (q.v.). The laws passed from 1668 to 1751 had been printed by James Parker. See Nov. 24, 1760.

A legislative act is passed “to enable the Mayor Recorder and Aldermen of the City of New York . . . to order the raising a Sum not exceeding Five hundred Pounds by a Tax on Estates Real and Personal in the said City.”—Col. Jour. N. Y., 1761: 406. Former pounds was the amount which the treasurer of the colony was ordered to pay to the president of His Majesty’s Council for “providing fire wood and Candles for his Majesty’s Garrison in fort George, in the City of New York,” for one year ending Sept. 1, 1761.—Ibid., IV: 472. On Dec. 31, 1761, it was again necessary to raise money (£700), because the “expense of providing of the Barracks in the City of New-York with Fire-Wood Candles Bedding and other Necessaries for accommodating His Majesty’s Forces Quartered within the City of New York has proved much greater than was expected, by which means the City is become greatly in Arrear.”—Ibid., IV: 776-78.

This being the king’s birthday (and the news of his death, on Oct. 25, not yet having been received), the cannon on Fort George 1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
1760
The Iconography of Manhattan Island

"should begin at least from the year 1761."

The number of homes in the city is 2,737. — Bancker MSS. in N. Y. Pub. Library.

The earliest public monument recorded in the history of the city

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1760 are fired "and other Demonstrations of Loyalty and joy shewn."

— N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Nov. 17, 1760.

A general "Department of European and India Goods suitable for the Season" is advertised for sale at the store of Robert and Richard Ray, "in Smith-street, near the Old Dutch-Church."

— N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 17, 1760. Smith [William] St., was at this time one of several retail shopping districts of the city.

Gen. Amherst arrived in the city, having been "sabled by the Cannon on Fort-George," and soon after: "waited on by the principal Gentle-

27, he received from the corporation an address, unusual in its fervour.

"The invaluable Services" of the general "in Annexing the extensive Country of Canada to his Majesty's Dominions in America" are emphasized in the opening lines. Whereas numerous frontier settlements, "abandoned to the Restless fury of an insatiate foe were soon reduced to dismal and Undistinguishing Ruin," and this city "famous for its extensive Commerce Beheld and was the Diminution of its Staple," now "The Peasant may Return in Security to his Fields; Husbandry will soon Revive; the face of nature smile with the Blessings of peace; and this Flourishing City rejoice in the Plenty of its districts. This surprising

Change we attribute with the most humble Gratitude to the paternal Care of our most gracious Sovereign in appointing, Your Excellency to Conduct his Victorious Armies in America... But, Sir while so Remarkable an Event will never Fail to Furnish the most ample Testimonials of Your Military Accomplishments, the ingenuous mind must at the same Time receive a peculiar Satisfaction from the Contemplation of an other prize of Your con-Temporary Success... Your Compassionate Treatment of the Vanquished Canadians must appear most Singularly amiable. To Require of a disarmed yet Impeachable Foe whose Inhumanities have deserved the Severe Strokes of Vindictive Justice, nothing More than a quiet Submission to the Gentile Dictates of British Rule is indeed a Disinterested Virtue and must Convince the attentive World that Britons never Conquer to enslave... Sir, that the God of Armies may Continue to Furnish your head with Wisdom, Your Breast with Fortitude and Your Arm with Strength; that he may Cover you as with a Shield and make You terrible to your Enemies in the day of Battles that You may Long live to enjoy the Gracious smiles of your Royall Master, the Greatfull acclamations of the British Nation and the peaceful Eulogium of an approving Consciency: that Your name may be Remembered With Thankfulness by the Lattest Postoty; and that Your unwearied Labours for the publick Welfare may meet with their due Rewards hereafter, and an unfading Crown of Glory hereafter; are the Earnest Wishes and Desires of Your Excellency's most obedient humble Servants." At the same time he is presented with the freedom of the city, with seal ecclosed in a gold box.— M. C., V: 35. He replies: "It is a particular pleasure that the Success of his Majesties Arm's in the Reduction of Canada has Contributed so much to the Happiness of the people of this Continent, and it is my most hearty Wish that this City may reap all the advantages it Can desire from this Conquest, and that it may prosper and flourish to the Latest time." — Ibid., VII: 237.

Dec.

1 Bills, Monthly Returns, and other Engravings neatly done on Silver, Copper, &c. with Care and Dispatch, and all Sorts of Copper Plate Printing done in the best Manner, at reasonable Rates, at Anthony Lamb's at Sir Isaac Newton's Head, in New-York. — N. Y. Merc., Dec. 1, 1760. As Henry Dawkins lodged with Anthony Lamb (see Nov. 17, 1755), Lamb "may have been an employer of engravers, rather than an engraver himself. No engraved work signed by Lamb is known."— Stauffer, Am. Engravers on Copper and Steel, II: 15ff.

5 Augustus Bradley writes from the "City Hall Jail, N. Y."

to Gen. Amherst, informing him of the illicit trade between New York and the West Indies, and describing the ill-treatment he received from Abermen Livingston and Bogart for exposing it.— Cal. Hist. Min., Eng., Dec. 10 and 11, 1760; to the latter's lists of the vessels engaged in the illicit trade to Hispaniola.— Ibid., 718. For depositions relating to this subject, see ibid.

1761

In 1771, John Adams wrote to William Gordon, who was collecting documents for a history of the Revolution, that his history...
salute repeated. The procession returned to the fort where healths were drunk and further salutes fired. It is noted that, "not with-standing the Severity of the Weather, the Whole began and con- cluded with great Order and Decency."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 19, 1761. See also Col. Coun. Min., 452.

An advertisement reads: "William Clajon, In order to satisfy the Gentlemen and Ladies, who desire to be taught the French Language grammatically, and with a true Pronunciation, having, according to his Proposals, been examined at the College in this City, by the Revd. Mr. Carle, Minister of the French Church, and the Revd. Mr. Testart, another French Minister, in Presence of the Revd. Mr. Johnson, President of the College, and fully satisfied them of his Capacity, intends this Day to open his School, at the House of Mrs. Boskirk, two Doors from the Coffee House, in Dock Street."

He takes no Children; his design being to perform within Six Months, what he promises to do, viz., to give a true Pronunciation to his Scholars, to enable them to translate French into English and English into French, so as to fit them to improve afterwards without any other Help, than the Method he will advise them to take. He therefore undertakes to teach no others, but such as are both willing and capable of Improvement, and is determined not to sacrifice his Honour and Character, or to the Caprice of Children, or to the Lavishness of some Parents."—

"He has compiled a Compendious Grammar of the English Language for such Gentlemen and Ladies as are unacquainted with Grammar."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 26, 1761. Clajon later (see May 19, 1764) established his school in close conjunction with the French Church.

Feb.

More than the usual amount of exposure to public ridicule is involved in the punishment imposed on one Edward Dillon by sentence of the court of general sessions. After being "put into a Cart and carried round the City," he received 79 lashes at the whipping post. He was then confined for some additional days, but brought forth for 39 additional lashes before receiving his discharge.—Min. Gen. Sessions of the Peace (MS.), 1732-1762.

An advertisement in the Post-Boy reads: "To be sold at a very reasonable rate, by Samuel Francis [see Jan. 15, 1764], at the sign of the Masons' Arms near the Green, New York, a small quantity of portable [potable] soup, catchup, bottled gooseberries, pickled walnuts, pickled or fried oysters fit to go to the West Indies, pickled mushrooms, a large assortment of sweetmeats, such as currant jelly, marmalade quinces, grapes, strawberries and sundry other sorts."—Parker's N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 5, 1764.

Forty-three merchants of New York sign a memorial addressed to Colden urging the necessity of a lighthouse at Sandy Hook (see Feb. 7, 1757). A loss of £30,000 by shipwreck within the last few months shows, they claim, that "more certain guide than High-hat lighthouses" is needed by mariners. The purpose also to build a pilot-house there and provide whale boats. The owner's demand, however, of £1,000 for four acres of "barren sandy soil" there they consider exorbitant.—See the original memorial, Emmet Cell, item No. 10759 in N. Y. Pub. Library. On March 23, the memorial was referred to the assembly.—Cal. Coun. Min., 452. A bill to raise £3,000 for the same by lottery was signed by Colden, May 19 (g.v.), but the drawings did not begin until June 14, 1763 (g.v.). There is preserved in the Library of Congress a series of 22 wash drawings by Ozanne, the official artist with the French fleet that visited our shores during the Revolution (see July 11, 1776). One of these drawings is the fleet lying off the Hook, and the Sandy Hook lighthouse in the distance.

The council and assembly appoint a joint committee to draft an address condoning his Majesty, King George III, on the death of his grandfather, King George II, and congratulating him on his accession to the throne.—Assemb. Jour., II: 650.

Colden, by the king's orders, urges the assembly to provide for the raising two thirds of the number of men raised for the last campaign.—Assemb. Jour., II: 650. See March 26, for the assembly's action.

Colden was directed at a meeting of the governors of the council to be held on March 25 (g.v.) "at the house of Edward Willet, at the Sign of the New-York Arms."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), March 16, 1761.

Francis Maemschelk makes a survey of the land at Greenwich belonging to the heirs of Sir Peter Warren.—See the original with the Warren Papers (Ms.), in N. Y. Hist. Soc.; see also, May 26, 1762 and A. Pl. 5-b.

A fire which starts during the night "in a Block-House at the upper End of this City" is extinguished "without any other Damage than to its total Reduction."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), March 23, 1761.

Some New York merchants (not named) present a memorial to the provincial council relating to a lighthouse at or near Sandy Hook; it is referred to the assembly.—Cal. Coun. Min., 452. See May 13 and Apr. 3.

Because of the small-pox in the city, an "Assembly Chamber" is again established (see Dec. 6, 1757, and Oct. 17, 1759) in the house of Teunis Sonderzych at the Out Ward. Sessions continued to be held here until April 4 (Assemb. Jour., II: 650, 657), and again from May 5 to 19 (ibid., II: 657, 665). The assembly returned to the city hall on Sept. 1—ibid., II: 663. It was necessary to move again the following May 19.

Edward Willet is appointed steward of King's College. He is to have the use of two rooms and a kitchen in the college, and such part of the garden as the president may allow; he is to keep the students' rooms clean and have their beds made, and provide for such as may choose to "dine with him" upon terms to be agreed upon. It is ordered by the college authorities that "the students Breakfast, Dine and Sup together in the College Hall, but that they be allowed no meat at their Suppers." The rent of rooms in the college building for students is fixed at £4 per annum. A committee, consisting of the Rev. Henry Barclay (rector of Trinity Church), the Rev. Samuel Johnson (the president), the Rev. Mr. Auchmuty, and Mr. John Livingston, is appointed to "settle the Rates that the students are to pay for their Diet." The rules established by the committee show weekly rates for one, two, and three meals (being 3s. 4d. a week for three meals a day); also the "Bill of Fare for Every Day in the Week."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 27-28; and Moore, Origin and Early Hist. of Columbia College (1806). See March 16.

The assembly resolves that inasmuch as his Majesty is about to withdraw his regular forces in North America (see March 11, 1764), immediate provision should be made "for levying, paying, and clothing 1780 effective Men, Officers included, to be employed in securing the Possession of his Majesty's Conquests in North-America."—Assemb. Jour., II: 652. On March 27, the assembly resolved to allow £5,000 for the purpose.—ibid., II: 653. On May 6, Colden compared the new levies less greatly short of the number provided for by the law passed at the meeting of the Assembly, and urged that the number be completed without delay.—ibid., II: 658.

Norse French prisoners, "by the Remainder of the Garrison of Fort Detroit," arrive at New York. Rumour says they are to be sent "to Jamaica on Long Island."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), April 6, 1761.

In a message to the assembly, Colden says: "The Erecting a convenient Building for a Light-House near Sandy-Hook is an Object so worthy your Consideration, and a Provision for it, so essential to the Welfare of our commercial Interests, and the Preserva-tion of a very useful Part of the Community, that I cannot avoid recommending the Memorial I received on this Subject [see March 13] to your closest Attention."—Assemb. Jour., II: 655. A law for this purpose was passed on May 19 (g.v.).

Cadwallder Colden, president of the council, gives his assent to several acts which are published "in the usual Manner . . . with-out the Walls of the Fort."—Assemb. Jour., II: 657. Outside these walls, facing Bowling Green, was a usual and most conspicuous position for posting such bulletins.

A committee of correspondence is appointed to correspond with the agent of the colony at the court of Great Britain "concerning the publick Affairs of this Colony."—Assemb. Jour., II: 657. See, further, Oct. 18, 1764.

The anniversary feast of St. George is to be held "at the House of James Elliott, at Collester Hook."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Apr. 13, 1761. On Oct. 31, 1765 (g.v.), this tavern, which was owned by James De Lancy, was leased to James Auchland. Later (see Apr. 2, 1762), it was run by John Bradlay, and was called "Corlear's Hook Tavern." It can probably be identified as Campbell's tavern at Cheele's Hook, which was offered for sale or lease on June 9, 1777 (p. v.).

17 A wager of £50, dependent on a horse's going from Mr. Adam Van Vechten, and Bridg and Bryan, for Ten Minutes, being 4 Miles and 3 measured," is decided. The horse covered the distance in one hour and fifty minutes.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman) April 20, 1761. Van Denberg was the proprietor of a tavern and garden at Broadway and Vesey St.

2 Two Companies of the Men raising in this Province, for the ensuing Campaign, Capt. Byrnes's men, who were levied in this City and Capt. Walter's levied in Richmond and King's Counties...are embarked on board Sloops; and will proceed directly to Albany. The Quota of Levies for the City and County of New-York is likewise very near complete.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 27, 1761.

May

"The Men of War and Transports, lately preparing here to assist in some important Expedition against our common Enemy the French, fell down a few Days ago to Sandy-Hook, where they were left on Saturday last [May 2] all well, waiting for a Fair Wind to push out. As the Wind yesterday in the Morning blew fresh from the Western Board, no doubt they took the Advantage of it."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 4, 1761.

According to a mortgage of this date given by John Marshall to Lawrence Read, the palisades and blockhouses along the line of Chambers St. (see Pl. 43, Vol. II; Landmark Map, Pl. 172, Vol. III; July 6, 1745; Sept. 17, 1757) were still standing.—Liber Deeds, I: 211.

The members of the assembly pass a resolution refusing to increase the number of men which, on March 26 (q.v.), they ordered to be raised for the coming campaign.—Assemb. Jour., II: 660.

In accordance with its action of March 14 (q.v.), the assembly draws up an address to the king.—Assemb. Jour., II: 663-65.

"...An act of the assembly for raising by lottery a sum not exceeding £3,000 for the purpose of building a lighthouse at Sandy Hook (see March 17) is signed by Lieut.-Gov. Cadmus.—Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1435. Additional funds were necessary to finish the work (see Dec. 11, 1762). The lighthouse was completed June 11, 1764 (p. v.).

Archibald Kennedy, Joris Brinckerhoff, and others petition the common council for "two Ferries Between this City of New York and the Island of Nassau the one of them from the present Ferry House on the said Island to Pecks Slip in this City and the other from the Land of Hendrick and Peter Remsen on the said Island to Coenties Slip in this City as also proposals of Hendrick Remsen and Peter Remsen Relating to the Same." Consideration of the petition is deferred.—M. C. C., II: 247. On July 9, Peter Schuyler (q.v.) and William De Witt (q.v.) were directed to make such proposals as might be granted; and they petitioned for "Liberty to erect and Build a peer from the Wharf of Colonel Peter Schuyler into the East River in order to make a more Safe harbour from thence to Mr Crugers Wharf [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 989] and also Easterly to Comolies Wharfe upon the Same Conditions as the peer at Counties was lately Granted." Consideration of this petition also was deferred.—Ibid., II: 252. No further reference to either of these petitions appears in the Minutes. That a second ferry was not established at this time is shown by the fact that, in 1766, an application for a second one was again unsuccessfully made.—See Feb. 19, 1766.

The history of the proceedings begun on April 26, 1759 (p. v.), and renewed on May 21, 1754 (q.v.), to obtain grants of water lots at Hunter's Key (between Wall St. and Old Slip—see Pl. 43, Vol. I), is again revived when William Brownjohn, Rinier Shreets, and others, who are owners of houses and lots "fronting that part of the East River Commonly Called Hunters Key or Rotten Row," complain in a petition to the common council "that the Ground and Soil fronting their Respective houses and Lots of Ground" have been "much encroached upon by Reason of the Fifth that Floats there from the said River." That this condition led to the use, in jest, of the name "Rotten Row" may perhaps be the case; or, on the other hand, the commanding situation of this locality on the East River may have induced the residents there to borrow this aristocratic title from London. The neighbourhood was both residential and recreational. The petitioners ask for a grant of the ground and soil "as far into the said East River as the present Wharfs on the East and West Sides do Extend with the benefit of Wharfsage on reasonable terms."—M. C. C., VII: 247. May 26

No further action is recorded in the Minutes regarding this petition at this time. "Rotten Row" was still a harbour for shipping.—See N. Y. Post-Buy, Nov. 17, 1760, advertising a sloop for sale, "as she now lies in Rotten Row, opposite to the Coffee House."

Brownjohn's petition came up again on Aug. 23, 1762, and Feb. 27, 1766 (M. C. C., VII: 152 in Two Houses 1752); but no action was deferred until July 9, 1766, when the common council agreed to grant "the said Corporation have to the ground pray'd for, not to exceed 175 feet beyond the present wharf, renewing for the use of the public, a slip on the east & west sides thereof," provided the petitioners accepted the corporation's terms. A committee was appointed to hear proposals and to have a plan of the ground. Ibid., VII: 22-23. Brownjohn protested, on Aug. 7, against the proposed use of the water lot fronting his house for a public slip, but the board considered the protest "insolent and impertinent" and ordered that it be "thrown under the table."—Ibid., VII: 27.

Other citizens soon joined in the application for lots on Hunters Key, but their petitions were deferred.—Ibid., VII: 25, 32, 37. On Oct. 2, the committee appointed on July 9 reported that the petitioners had offered to pay for the water lots either an annual quit-rent of 5 shillings per foot, or £3 per foot, "Cash down," and a quit-rent of 18s. per annum for 25 years. The wharfs they would build should remain to them and their heirs and assigns for ever. Action on this report was deferred to "some future Common Council."—Ibid., VII: 37-38.

It appears that, at this stage of the proceedings, resort was had to legal advice, for, on Dec. 25, 1767, a Memorandum delivered to the common council "the Several opinions of William Smith Jun, William Livingston, James Duane and Benjamin Kissam, on the Case made before them, Respecting Hunters Key."—Ibid., VII: 79. The petitions for the water lots, the legal "opinions," and the petitioners' proposals were then taken into consideration on Aug. 31, and the corporation decided to grant the lots "without Reserving a hundred feet...for the use of the Corporation," and to accept the offer of an annual quit-rent of 5 shillings per foot. A sufficient amount of ground in front of Brownjohn's property was to be reserved for a public slip.—Ibid., VII: 81-82.

This decision concerning the public slip met with protests from William Weyman (the printer) and others, but, on Dec. 10, the board decided to adhere to it.—Ibid., VII: 84-85, 91; see also ante, p. 22. (The ground at the end of Wall St. was declared to be a public slip in 1766 (p. v.).) The granting of water lots at this part of the shore was now begun. John Burger's claim was approved on Jan. 14, 1768; and on March 2, 1768 (q.v.), further grants were decided upon.—Ibid., VII: 98-99, 106. For other references to Hunter's Key or Rotten Row, see advertisements in N. Y. Post-Buy, March 26, 1761; N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Feb. 25, 1765; N. T. Merc., May 8, 1768, and Sept., 1768; and Rivin-ton's Gazetteer, March 7, 1773.

The common council appoints a committee "to View and Cause to be Established and Paved Vesey Streets as also Division Street and the Broad way Street in the west ward."—M. C. C., VII: 249.

For the report of the committee, see July 24. A tavern kept by the widow Vernon at the "Sign of the Lion- don's Arms, on the New-Dock" is the meeting place of St. Andrew's Society.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 18, 1761. The society was still holding its meetings here in February, 1765 (N. T. Merc., Feb. 11, 1765); before June 10 of this year, the widow Vernon had removed to Albany, where she opened the "King's Arms Tavern."—Ibid., June 10, 1765.

King George III's birthday is observed "by a Discharge of Twenty-three Pieces of Cannon from Fort-George, being the Number of Years his Majesty was then old." At night the city is "handsomely Illuminated."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 18, 1761. Weyman publishes a notice "That Order of the Deputy Post-Masters General, another Set of Posts are soon to be established between New-York and Boston, to set out on Thursdays from each of those Places, and meet at Hartford in Connecticut, whence they shall be delivered to the several Wharfs or Masts, and the principal Towns, and will arrive at New-York and Boston on Wednesday, weekly."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 8, 1761.

General Monckton arrives "at his Seat at Greenwich" from Philadelphia.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 15, 1761.

An extract from this poem on this subject in every "Body's Mouth; but such Preparations for War was never made before."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 21, 1761.
The public is warred against counterfeit "New-York Ten Pound Bills" which are being circulated in the city.—N. Y. Gaz., June 22, 1761.

The members of St. John's Lodge are asked to meet at "Mason's Hall, in Anne-street." The notice is dated at "Tyler Tavern."—N. Y. Gaz., June 22, 1761.

July 9

The "Aldermen and Common Councillors" of the Dock and South Wards are appointed a committee to repair "the Long Bridge on the North Side of the Exchange." On July 24, they were required to repair "the Long Bridge to the Southward of the Exchange (the South Bridge)."—M. G. C., VI: 252, 255.

For the location of both the "Long Bridge" and the Exchange, see Pl. 30, Vol. I. Between Nov. 25, 1761, and Dec. 1, 1762, about £800 was expended on these repairs.—Ibid., VII: 275, 290, 295, 308, 312–13.

It is ordered by the common council "that the Clerk of this Board prepare a Bond from this Corporation to the Ministers Elders and Deacons of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of this City," in the penalty of £5,000, conditioned to pay £1,000 on or before July 24, 1762, with interest at five per cent., and dated July 24, 1762.—M. G. C., VI: 252. The interest (£50) due July 24, 1762, was paid Sept. 15, 1765, by warrant to Adrian Banderck.—Ibid., VII: 500.

The top of the steeple of the New Dutch Church is struck by lightning, which tears off some of the shingles "in the crooked Course of its Direction," and sets the building on fire. The flames are extinguished, but they prepare that the spire be "very inconsiderable." It is said "this is the third Time this Church has been struck with Lightning—probably occasioned by its Situation."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), July 25, 1761. This was the Middle Reformed Dutch Church. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935, and Pl. 28, Vol. I. A similar accident happened to it two years later (see June 15, 1763).

For earlier ones, see Oct., 1750.

After receiving reports from two committees, one appointed June 12, 1761 (q.v.), the other, May 28, 1761, recommendations are approved for the regulation and paving of Division (now Fulton), or, more correctly, that part of Division west of Broadway and Vesey Sts., and also Broadway between those streets. The committees are continued.—M. G. C., VI: 254–55.

The chairman of the committee for regulating the streets in Montgomery Ward reports to the common council that he has caused "Frankfort Street" to be regulated by the city surveyor with a specified grade. It is ordered that the owners and tenants of the property on this street be required to pave it at their own expense, in such manner as the alderman and assistant of this ward shall direct.—M. G. C., VI: 256.

A Camp is now forming on Staten Island, near the Centre of which is Fort St. George, a piece of Ground is allotted for a Market Place, where all Persons willing to supply the Town with Provisions or Goods, are invited, and will be encouraged and Protected; Ground for putting up Tents or erecting Booths, will be allowed to every Person, who applies to the Commanding Officer, without any Reward; and all Manner of Things will be permitted to be sold, without Tax or Restraint it will only be required, that nothing be sold but in the Market Place; and that no spirituous Liquors be brought under any Pretences to Camp. James Robinson, D. Q. M. G.—N. Y. Merc., July 27, 1761.

Richard Nicholls, the "landwarter" (an officer of customs who attends on the landing of goods), petitions for the establishment of fees for his office.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 729.

Cadwallader Colden, who was appointed lieutenant-governor on March 20 (see March 17), is now sworn into office.—Col. Coun. Min., 453. Colden had previously been president of the council and commander-in-chief.—See Aug. 4, 1760.

Colden informs the lords of trade that, like Hardy, he is directed in the king's instructions to grant commissions to judges and other officers "during His Majesty's pleasure only." Nevertheless, Clinton while governor, and DeLancy, while lieutenant-governor, granted commissions (Gaz., March 21, 1761).

Colden informs the lords of trade that, like Hardy, he is directed in the king's instructions to grant commissions to judges and other officers "during His Majesty's pleasure only." Nevertheless, Clinton while governor, and DeLancy, while lieutenant-governor, granted commissions (Gaz., March 21, 1761).

Justice Benjamin Pratt reported to the lords of trade that 50 years ago, the chief-justice's salary of £500 would support him better than £200, now, "such has been the difference in the mode of living, & augmentation of the Expence of supporting a Family with Decency." He, however, is compelled to act without salary, because "The Assests and Income of the late Judge were not sufficient to support the Judges, unless their commission were granted during good Behavior, & even then, to grant the Chief-Justice no more than £300 New York Currency; this is 85 or 90 pence. worse than sterling."—Ibid., VII: 500. One reason why the people of the colony "are so infinitely grateful to His Majesty's Government, for preventing the Judges, to grant my pleasurable, or, as they consider it, During the Governor's Pleasure, is that they fear a perversion of power by the governor or chief-justice to satisfy some private end which may be repugnant to the interest of the Crown."—Ibid., VII: 501–2. Chief Justice Pratt was granted a temporary allowance out of the quit-rents. Colden was commended by the lords of trade for desiring to adhere to his instructions regarding judges; but they criticised him for giving his assent to a bill for the payment of officers' salaries (including his own), which was "an unprecedented and unjust attack upon the authority of the Crown," and they proposed that the act be repealed.—Ibid., VII: 503–4. This act granted a certain salary for the year ending Sept. 1, 1762, to the judges, on the express condition that they hold their Commissions during good behavior."—Ibid., VII: 505. See also ibid., VII: 705–6.

On Jan. 5, 1763, Chief-Justice Pratt died (ibid., VII: 505, footnotes); Gov. Morris appointed Daniel Horrsmonden to his place.—Ibid., p. vii: 528. O'Callaghan states regarding Horrsmonden: "To his continuance on the bench until his death [in 1778], may be ascribed the introduction of that article in the Constitution of the State of New York, formed in 1777, which limited the duration of the office of judge."—Ibid., VII: 528.

It is ordered by the common council "that Mr Anthony Ten Eyck have Liberty to Cause the upper end of Queen Street on Cowfoot Hill [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 965] to Be Demolished as far as the Committee for Regulating and paving the Streets in Montogomerie ward Shall think proper."—M. G. C., VII: 256.

The common council orders that the amount paid out by Philip Livingston for filling up Burling Slip and causing a drain to be made be refunded to him.—M. G. C., VII: 256–59. See Aug. 9, 1761; 1762; May 5, 1762; March 2, 1764; 1751; 1771; and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988; Pl. 174, Vol. III.

In a letter to John Sargent of London, John Thurman says: 15

"The Glaring hopes of Peace, from the Publick Prints seem to be quite Vanished & in the stead of a cessation of arms a mighty exaction from all Quarters to bend them & Force & Superior Power. I wish we may make a Lasting & Honourable peace or war on to Maintain the Honours we have acquired, & God grant they may Increase to the subvention of French Treachery & Power. I am glad to hear his majesty sets a proper Estimate on Canada & intends to hold things valuable acquisition."—From "Letter Book of John Thurman, Jr.," in Hist. Mag., 2nd ser., IV: 287–88.

"Last Week His Honour the Lieutenant Governor was pleased to give Mr. Douglass Permission to build a Theatre, to perform in this City the ensuing Winter."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 17, 1761. "This was in opposition to the wishes of the Assembly, and of the Mayor (Cruger) who endeavoured, but in vain, to prevent theatrical entertainments, which they looked upon as detrimental to good morals."—Ireland, Rec. of N. Y. Stage, I: 32. The theatre was built on the southwest corner of Nassau and Chapel (now Broadway) Sts. It was 90 ft. long and 40 ft. wide and constructed of wood by Philip Miller for Douglass at a cost of $1,651. The scenery and wardrobe were worth $1,000. The opposition to the theatre was so great in the beginning that Douglass was allowed a season of only two months, of two nights a week, but subsequently the time was extended and increased. The theatre wasFive months of the
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1761 Aug.
27
House Keepers who Buy for their own use) the Hucksters and Retailers within this City shall not sell again for the sale of any of the aforesaid Markets, to make their provisions and Buy to sell again any flesh, fish, poultry, Eggs, Butter, Cheese, Bacon, or any other sort of market provisions or Goods of what kind soever, of any of market people until the afternoon of every Day to the end the House Keepers may Provide themselves in the formation of every Day at the first hand with the aforesaid provisions or Goods at moderate Rates upon pain that every such Huckster and Retailer shall for every offence forfeit the sum of Ten Shilling... with Costs of suit." It was also ordained that no huckster or retailer shall expose for sale any provisions or other goods in the public markets or on the streets.—*M. C. C., VI: 260. These regulations were embodied in the new law of Aug. 24, 1763 (g.v.).

It is ordered that "the Steeple of Trinity Church be Rough Cast and that Mr Reade do agree with Persons to purchase and prepare Materials for the doing thereof and pay for the same."—*Trim. Min. (MS.).

Coden informs the council and the assembly of his appointment to the office of lieutenant-governour (see March 17), and communicates to them Gen. Amherst's request that they continue in pay, for a longer period, a company of 175 men.—*Assemb. Jour., I: 665. On Sept. 24, the assembly complied with Amherst's request.—*Ibid., II: 665.

A bill "to prohibit the acting of Plays or the Entertainment of the Stage" is passed by the assembly and sent to the council.—*Assemb. Jour., II: 666. The latter appears to have taken no action although the bill was sent to them again on Dec. 19.—*Ibid., II: 684.

18 "The Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New York &c. (Trinity Corporation) prefer to the common council "a Release or Quit Claim to the Corporation & their Successors of a number of Streets bounded in a Map annexed to the said Release or Quit Claim." This the board accepts; and orders that "the Clerks enter the Same in the book of Grants belonging to this Corporation."—*M. C. C., VI: 265. The date on the deed is April 9, 1761. The MS. deed, with the map by Macrauchel annexed (both on velvet), was until recently in the possession of the comptroller, but is now recorded in Liber of Ancient Conveyances, I: 21, register's office, New York. The streets thus released to the corporation were: Reade, Chambers, Warren, Murray, Barclay, Vesey and Fulton Sts., all from Broadway to the Hudson River; Robinson, the present Park Pl., from Broadway to King (Columbia) College grounds; Church St. from Fulton St. to Lipscenard's land; College Pl. from the north side of the college grounds to Lipscenard's land; also Lumber St. (Trinity Pl.) in Trinity Church lands; Rector St., and First, Second, and Third Sts. on Trinity land (streets not now in the present Island four of... modern Greenwich, Washington, and West Sts.) also a narrow lane, 50 ft. north of Warren St., from Broadway to the river, a lane not existing on the modern map.

Benjamin Blagg, John Alliner, and Joseph and Daniel Latham give to the city a piece of ground in Montogomery Ward, 24 x 160 ft., on the north side of Cherry St., bounded on the east and west by land owned by the grantors, and on the north by "the meadow ground Commonly known by [as] Wollert Webbers's meadow." It is to be used forever as a public street. The common council accepts it, and orders that the clerk enter it in "the Book of Grants."—*M. C. C., VI: 266-67. This became part of Roosevelt St.—*Liber Ancient Conveyances (Register's Office), I: 12-13; Liber Deeds, XXII: 196; XVIII: 249; Liber City Grants, C: 273. See also "Roosevelt Street," Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1006.

A committee, appointed April 1, 1760, to treat with the executors of John Cruger, Stephen Bayard, and Edward Holland, deceased, the late mayors, and also with the present mayor, "Concerning the Monies Arisen by the stalls and standings during their respective Mayoralty," and "to Consider and settle the form of a plan for the Regulation of the same," arising from the said stalls and standings for the future" (M. C. C., VI: 209), makes its report. Its recommendation is that the board accept the offers of the gentlemen concerned in this dispute (which has lasted since March 7, 1751, g.v.), "to pay to this Board All the Monies in their hands... Received by all Lessees to Tavern Keepers deducting one half of the Amount of what the said Stalls and Standings Sold for During their respective mayoralty"; but that the board should reserve "their Right to all the monies proceeding from the Stalls and Standing in future. Unless an Explanatory Clause to the present Charters Could be Obtained Whereby a Certain sun not Exceeding one hundred pounds £, annun Should be appropriated to the use of the mayor for the Time Being and the Remainer to the Use of the Corporation." The common council thereupon orders that the committee "proceed to the said Explanatory Clause to the present Charters, so that City and Solicit the passing of it Accordingly."—*Ibid., VI: 262. No such provision appears in the acts of the provincial legislature.—*Col. Laws N. Y., IV, Vol. IV.

His Majesty's ship "Alice" arrives with a fleet of transports "to carry the Troops Inland from the north shore of the Hudson River to a Point of land considerably to be a Consideration Weighty enough in this Place where Wood is so dear." He describes the advantage of a chimney over "a Pot with Coals." The merchant in his counting-room and the tradesman in his workshop, without a chimney, is obliged to idle half the time in cold weather, "to the improving of his Family," or else be reduced to the "disagreeable Necessity" of using "a Pot with Coals," by which "his Health is in great Danger of being impaired." He says "the great Fire in Boston" (see June 10, 1760) was caused by "a Pot of Coals in a Work Shop."—*W. T. Gen. (Weymann), Nov. 2, 1761. On Dec. 31, g.v., an act was passed "for the more Effectual Prevention of Fires and for Regulating of Buildings in the City of New York." This was deemed necessary because many houses were roofed with shingles.—*Ibid., IV: 571. See Dec. 1, 1778.

The trustees of the First Presbyterian Church resolve to purchase "a Proper Parsonage House and take a Deed for the Same in Trust for the Church"—*Proceedings of the Trustees of the 1st Presby. Ch. ("Wall Street Church"), Vol. I. On Feb. 25, 1793, "John Murray, et al., Trustees of the Presb. Ch. of the N. C. N.,..." conveyed this piece to Stephen van Cortlandt.—*Liber Deeds, XLIX: 16 (New York). The parsonage plot is now covered by the western end of the United States Realty building and by the western part of Thames St. adjoining.

Sir Jeffery Amherst is invested with the gold collar and red ribbon of the Order of the Bath, the ceremony taking place in the military camp on Staten Island. The letter from Sec. William Pitt to Maj.-Gen. Robert Monckton, governor of the province, announcing it to be the king's pleasure to make Amherst a knight commander, is read to the presence of several officers of the army. The letter, dated Whitehall, July 17, 1761, expressed the king's pleasure that Monckton should perform the ceremony and that it was "his Majesty's intention that the same degree in the most honourable and distinguished manner that circumstances will allow of... and as may at the same time, mark in the most public manner his Majesty's just sense of the constant zeal and signal abilities which General Amherst has exercised in the service of his King and country." Amherst, having received the order, responded to General Amherst: "I am truly sensible of the distinction which of his Majesty's General Amsterdam has exercised in the service of his King and country."—*Universal Mag. (London), Dec., 1761, XXIX: 336. This was the first investiture of the order ever performed in America. The second investiture was upon Sir William Howe, sixteen years later.—*Mayo, Jeffery Amherst, 1751. See Jan. 18, 1773. The first Explanatory Clause to the present Charters was saluted "with a Royal Discharge of the Cannon on Fort George."—*N. T. Gen. (Weymann), Oct. 26, 1761.

Maj.-Gen. Robert Monckton is sworn in as governor, having received on the 20th "His Majesty's Patent" appointing him. It seems as he was expecting an order from the king to "Quit the Province, to go on an Expedition, that is fitting out...
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

1761: here,” be merely enters into the necessary formalities of appointment and installation as governor.—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 475; 24 Nov.

Oct. 26: 455; Col. Gaz. Nov. 16.

30: The draft of an address to the “Honourable Robert Monckton, Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over the Colony of New York” (see Oct. 26), etc., is agreed to by the common council. It compliments him upon his “Gallant Conduct and intrepid Behaviour in the Monmouth Campaign, on the plains of Abraham and at Quebec.” The draft of a “Freedom” is also agreed to, “with the seal thereto, Inclosed in a Gold Box with the City Arms Engraved on the Lid thereof.” These, engrossed and “Signed by the Members of this Corporation,” were presented on Oct. 31.—M. C. C., VII: 270–72.

Nov. 2: A message to the Assembly.—Lieut.-Gov. Colen 3274: “The excessive Number of Tippilng Houses throughout the Province, points out the Utility of a Law to restrain them; they are ruinous to many poor Families that might otherwise be useful to the Community. And Destructive of the Morals of Servants and Slaves, evil so prevalent and pernicious, as to claim your most serious Consideration.”—Assemb. Jour., II: 669. On Nov. 27, a bill was ordered brought in “to regulate the Licencinng of Inns and Taverns, and for the Suppression of Tippilng Houses.”—Ibid., II: 671–72.

1762: Shakespeare’s Hamlet is staged for the first time in New York, at the Chapel St. Theatre (see Nov. 18), by Permission of his Honour the Lieut.-Governor:—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Nov. 26, 1761. Cf. Brown, Hist of N. Y. Stags, I: 6; Ireland, Rev. of N. Y. Stage, I: 33. On Jan. 25, 1762 (p. 90), Othello was presented.

The provincial council hears from Lord Egremont that Pitt has retired from office, and that he (Egremont) has been appointed secretary of state for the southern provinces.—Cal. Min., 455.

An advertisement of the London Magazine for the months of July, Aug., and Sept. speaks of “A Description of the City of New York, with a Picture, exhibiting a South East View of it” (copied from the Bakewell View)”—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 14, 1761. This description appears in the August issue and includes the following information: “The streets are irregular, but being paved with round pebbles, are very clean. No part of America has greater plenty and variety in its markets. . . . Oysters are a considerable part of the support of the poor, and that single article is computed to be worth, annually, 10 or 1200 l. some kinds are very large, so that one or two of them try’d, are a meal for a reasonable appetite. . . . Here are two Dutch, two episcopal, one French, and two German Lutheran churches; one Presbyterian, one Ana- baptist, one Quakers, and one Moravian meeting-houses, and one Jew synagogue. The city hall is a strong brick building, oblong, and two stories high, with two wings, at right angles with the centre. The floor below is an open well, except two goals, and the goalor’s apartments. The cellar underneath is a dungeon, and the Garrett a common prison. This edifice is erected in a place where four streets meet, and fronts to the south-west, one of the most spacious streets to the town. The eastern wing, according to the plan, is an assembly-room, a lobby, and the speaker’s chamber. The west wing, on the same floor, forms the council-room, and a library; and in the middle space, the supreme court is usually held. . . . The city has, in reserve, 5,000 stand of arms, for seamen, the poor, &c. in case of an invasion.”—London Mag. (Aug. 1761), 400.

Colden, in a message to the Assembly, says: “It is well known that when the Salary of the Chief Justice was first fixed at Three Hundred Pounds, about the Year 1715, the Value of the current Money was much higher, and the Price of all Necessaries for the Support of a Family, much lower than at present.”—Assemb. Jour., II: 681. The Assembly, on Dec. 18, decided that in their opinion the salary allowed the chief-justice was sufficient “to engage Gentlemen of the first Figure.”—Ibid. II: 683.

The Post-Boy advices for this evening the production of Shakespeare’s King Henry IV at the Chapel St. Theatre, with Mr. Douglass taking the part of Falstaff.—N. T. Post-Boy, Dec. 18, 1761.

Payments made on Sept. 15 and Dec. 28 for repairs to the ferryhouse (on Nassau Island) amount to £200.—M. C. C., VII: 262, 278.

The provincial legislature passes a act to raise £5715 in the city and county of New York to be paid to John Burnett, the present .
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1761
Dec. 31
The coroner, who "hath taken (during the space of near four Years) Twenty seven Inquests on the dead Bodies of Poor Persons And Assistance to the said for which he hath Received No Allowance or Reward."—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 580-81.

An act of the assembly becomes effective for levying a tax to provide the city "to the southward of Fresh-Water" with lamps (see Nov. 21) and "Oyl for the same," also for the payment of 10 months' arrears of office allowances for the said officers "shall think necessary for Guarding the said City And attending the said Lamps."—Cal. Laws N.Y., IV: 571-74. See Jan. 13, 1762.

Another act of this date is "for the more effectual Prevention of Fires and for Regulating the Buildings in the City of New York." It was made necessary by the number of persons living in the rooftops with shingles. It appeared that, after Jan. 1, 1766, every building, whether public or private, to the south of Fresh Water Pond, "shall be made of Stone or Brick and Roofed with tile or slate." In the case of a house already erected, or built before that date, which shall at any time have to be new roofed, and whose walls are not sufficient to bear a roof of tile or slate, it shall be lawful for the owner to roof it with board or shingles. The final clause referred to the storage at specified places only of "Pitch, Tar, Turpentine, or Shingles," after May 1, 1762.—Cal. Laws N.Y., IV: 571. For a special ordinance concerning the publishing of the final clause, see Feb. 23, 1762. By an enactment of Dec. 23, 1766 (g.v.), the date when this law should become effective was postponed for two years.—Ibid., IV: 589. On Dec. 31, 1768 (g.v.), the law was suspended and an act passed "to indemnify such persons as have incurred the Penalities mentioned in the said Act."—Ibid., IV: 1046. The original act was rescinded by an act of 1775 (g.v.).

A committee is appointed by the assembly "to enquire into the Causes of the Complaints of the dilatory Proceedings of the Courts of Law, and the heavy Ex pense in obtaining Justice within this Colony."—Assemb. Jour., II: 687.

1762
In this year Livingston and Smith published the colonial laws of New York which had been enacted after 1751, down to and including May 22, 1762.—Evans, Bibliography, No. 9213. There is a copy in the N. Y. Pub. Library. See Nov. 8, 1760, and Dec. 20, 1761.

A descriptive account of New York written in this year contains the following:

The "municipio de New York [State], according to the general estimate, does not exceed 18,000. The whole number of souls is computed at 100,000..."

"New York [City] is one of the most social places on the continent. The men collect themselves into weekly evening clubs. The ladies, in winter, are frequently entertained either at concerts of music or assemblies, and make a very good appearance. They are comely and dress well, and scarce any of them have distorted shapes. Tinctur'd with a Dutch education, they manage their families with becoming parsimony, good providence, and singular neatness... Their schools are in the lowest orders; the instructors want education, and through a long shameful neglect of all the arts and sciences, the common speech is extremely corrupt; and the evidences of a bad taste, both as to thought and language, are visible in their proceedings, publick and private..."

"Gentlemen of estates rarely reside in the country, hence few or no experiments have yet been made in agriculture... they have not, as yet, entered upon any other manufactures, than such as are indispensably necessary for their home convenience. Felt-making, which is perhaps the most natural of any they could fall upon, was begun some years ago, and hats were exported to the West-Indies with great success, till lately prohibited by an act of parliament... Their cotton is not so fine as the West Indies and Carolina... as the consumption of the commodity in value near 10,000 L. sterling per annum..."

An act is passed by the provincial legislature for the more effectual Collection of his majesty's Quit Reets in the Colony of New York and for Partition of Lands in order thereto.

One of the provisions of the act is that "two true Field books" shall be made "of all Surveys and allotments made by Virtue of this act," and that maps "Specifying the Bounds of every Lot shall be made and the several Lotts laid Down and Numbered on the said map and then signed by the said Commissioners & their surveyor." One book is to be filed in the county clerk's office and the other in the town clerk's office in New York City. An advertisement is then to be published in a city newspaper for six weeks giving notice that the maps have been filed, and appointing a time and place of meeting at which balloting is to take place for the division of the lots among those interested.

The method of balloting is described in detail: the commissioners are to make as many "Tickets as there are allotments with the Number of each allotment on every Ticket, and as many Tickets as there are patentees with the Name of each patentee on every Ticket; The Tickets of Names shall be put into a Box and the Numbered Tickets into another Box, and such other person or persons as the Commissioners and the appoint shall immediately proceed to Draw a Ticket of the names and then a Ticket of the Numbers and so proceed till all the Tickets are Drawn, and the allotment of the Map bearing the Number of the Ticket drawn next after drawing the Ticket with the Name shall be the separate and divided share of that patentee in the Lands so to be divided...—Cal. Laws N. Y., IV: 584-601.

Abraham Lott is directed to revise, digest, collect, and have printed the votes and proceedings of the assembly "from the Revolution to the present Time..."—Assemb. Jour., II: 689...

A committee of the common council is appointed to "purchase for the use of this Corporation Such a Number of Lamps and lamp posts as they may Conceive to be Necessary for the Illuminating of this City agreeable to an act of assembly of this province lately made and published for that purpose" (see Dec. 31, 1761). To Isaac Stouwenburgh, who had been in charge of the three lamps at city hall since they were placed there March 6, 1752 (g.v.), and who was also overseer of the watch, was given the responsibility of contracting with some one "for lighting such lamps as will Specifically be Erected," and of securing the necessary watchmen.—M. C. Lamps, VI: 278-79. On Feb. 21, a committee was appointed to "Erect Lamps in such parts of this City as they shall Judge most proper and Convenient for the Inhabitants..."—Ibid., VI: 282. On May 12, John Lansing was paid £40 "on account of what he hath lately laid out and expended by order of this Board, for the Erecting of Lamp posts and Cost of Lamps, and providing Oyl for the same..."—Ibid., VI: 382. Additional payments were made to Lansing later.—Ibid., VI: 294, 309. Among N. Y. Mss. (1761-1800) in the N.Y. Hist. Soc., is this account (strongly flavoured with irritancy) of apparitions authorized by Lansing:

"New York May 3 sp 1762.
Corporation of
To John Balthas Dasch

By order of Mr Lansdom [Lansing] 94. New Street Lamps at 11/9/[] B... £31: 14
37. Old Lamps Mended [Mended] £3: 8
78. In Set [lined] Lamps at 18/6d £170
5 Gallin Butt [gallon botles] at 8/2 £10
[81aart Mq Quart Mug] £1 15
12 to the above Contant upon the order of John Lansing

John Balthas Dasch"

£64: 400"

Samuel Francis, "Inkeeper," and Elizabeth, his wife, mortgage to Walter Rutherford for £400 and interest, payable in one year, all "two certain Lotts of Ground Situate Lying and being in the West ward," known on a map of the Church Farm Lots at 32 and 322, which lots had been leased by Trinity Church on Feb. 28, 1752, to John Duncumb and Peter Runhton for 21 years at £x annually, and by them transferred to James Mills, "Perukemaker." Mills assigned the lots to Mary Alexander and John Provoost, and they in turn to Samuel Francis. The dimensions of the lots are given and their boundaries are described. Northerly by a Street in the said map Called Warren Street, West-
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

Mar.

1762

by Lott number three hundred and Twenty four and Southerly by Lott number three hundred and Twenty one.—"Liber Mortuorum, listed among the Trustees of the Theatre, and also at the Lott, at the Theatre, and also at the Public Library at the Theatre, and also at the "Fraunso's Tavern."—See Addenda.

The actors at the Chapel Street Theatre (see Nov. 26, 1761) give a performance of "Other Poor Families as are not provided for by the Public."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 25, 1762. The proceeds of this performance were £114:10.—
Ibid., Feb. 1, 1762. These actors gave another benefit performance on April 26 (p. v).—

Eleven years remaining on a lease of two houses and lots on Trinity Church farm, fronting the Broadway, near the Almshouses, are offered for sale. The two tenements fronting the Broadway, may be occupied in one, for a public house, being very convenient for that purpose. Applications are to be made to John Dowers, living on the premises, "at the Sign of King George the IIIrd."— N. Y. Merc., Jan. 25, 1762. This tavern stood at Broadway and Robinson St.

Royal instructions to Gov. Montekton are received, and those of the council present are sworn in.—Col. Coun. Min., 456.

The law "to prohibit the selling or Bringing of Certain fish in the City" is to take effect in December, January, or February, is repealed.—M. C. C., VIII: 279. See Nov. 14, 1758.

Feb.

"Scarce a night passes now but some Depredation or other is committed in this city, by a Gang of Fellows yet undiscovered; for besides their several Attempts of Burglary; skipping into Houses at Daybreak, and skulking behind Doors, and under Beds, till the Family is gone to Rest; &c. &c.—they make nothing of knocking any Person down who refuses to stand and deliver: ...
As the Necessaries for fixing of Lamps throughout this City, conformable to an Act lately made by the Legislature, is preparing with all Expedition, the good Intent thereof will undoubtedly soon be found to be of the utmost Utility and Safety to its Inhabitants; more especially as the Watchmen be provided for by the said Act, to be under much better Orders and Regulations than heretofore."— N. Y. Gaz. (Wayman), Feb. 8, 1763. See Feb. 11, 1760.

Cadwallader Colton resigns the office of surveyor-general (for his appointment, see April 21, 1760), and his son, Alexander, is (p.v.), Alexander Colton had been helping with this work. See
June 29, 1774.

The "New Course at Harlem" is mentioned in an advertisement of the "New-York Races," which are to be run for a purse of £100.—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 23, 1762. While the location of this race-course is not defined in this notice, it probably gave the name to the "Race Course tract," a piece of land owned by Adolph Benson, well-known in title records.—See 1757; April 14, 1774.

Inhabitants living near the Meal Market petition the common council for its removal, because it is "of no Real use or Advantage Either to the Community in General or to the inhabitants living near thereto; That Poultry and other Country produce being Generally carried to other Markets, And no Provisions is sold in the Meal Market Except by a few Butchers who might be as Well Accommodated with Standings in other Markets." They complain that it "greatly Obstructs the Agreeable prospect of the East River which those that live in Wall street would Otherwise enjoy; Occasions a Dirty Street Offensive to the Inhabitants on each side, and Disagreeable to those who pass and repass to and from the Coffee house a place his Great Cafe From the original petition (MS.) in file 4, city clerk's record-room; and M. C. C., VIII: 283. For the result of the petition, see May 12.

In an address to the council and the assembly, Coldeo says:

3 "I am, in Obedience to his Majesty's Commands, . . . to recommand to the rising of the late Great Rebellion and Seventy Nine Men, . . . Which Number is the Quota of this Province . . . towards completing the regular Regiments which have been sent to America, for the Defence and Protection of the Possessions of his Majesty's Subjects there."—Assemb. Jour., II:
689, for the assembly's response to this request, see March 13.

In a message to Coldeo, the members of the assembly say that at the outbreak of the war with France they had felt the necessity of conquering Canada, "to prevent a total Depopulation of our Country." With this thought "that one strenuous Effort would put an End" to all their "Difficulties and Dangers," they had exerted themselves "beyond what could have been expected." They are now greatly disappointed to find themselves "still involved in so great an Expence," but they will go beyond what can justly be expected, rather than lose the chance of such a "Beneficial Imputation." On their "Zeal for his Majesty's Service," and in the hope "that a safe and glorious Peace, will soon put an End to all Requi-

As the king "is about to withdraw his regular Forces in North-America, to be employed upon some impending Occasion in the Economy," the assembly resolves that provision he made for paying and clothing "so many Men, as with the 173, now in his Majesties Service in the Pay of this Colony, will make the Number of 1790 Men (Officers included) to be employed during the Absence of his Majesties regular Forces in securing the Possession of his Conquests in North-America." This proves that the forces of the king (see March 26, 1761) had not yet been withdrawn on this date.

In regard to Coldeo's message of March 3 (p.v.), the members of the assembly resolve that they "cannot, consent with the Treaty reposed in them, provide for the leaving of any regular Forces, and that it being a Custom interwoven into the Constitution of this Colony, for the Inhabitants thereof to provide for defending themselves only by their Militia, and to serve his Majestie in all attacks on the Enemy, by Provincial Forces raised for a limited Time."—Assemb.

A race between four horses for a £50 stake, on the Bowery Lane "at the De Liocese's Arms," is announced for March 17. The participants are to start "at Mr. John Watt's Gate [the Rose Hill Farm] and to come in at the near Corner of M'r Tiebout's Gate."— N. Y. Merc., March 15, 1763. For the location of these places, see

St. Patrick's Day is celebrated at John Marshall's, or Mount Pleasant, near the college.—N. Y. Merc., March 15, 1762. This was the Old Bowling Green on the North River. See March 29, 1758.

Trinity vestry appoints a committee for repairing and painting the steeple of Trinity Church and have it Washed and also to have a Bellcorys [sic] built upon the Roof of the said Church."—Trin.
Min. (M.S.), See July 7.

The American Chronicle, a weekly newspaper, is started by Samuel Fieldly.—See Early Newspapers, II: 417. See also the "Bibliography of Am. Newspapers, 1690-1820," compiled by C. S.

Colston writes to Montekton: "The . . . conquest of Mar-timique [see Nov. 14, 1761], in so short a time, gives the greatest joy to every one in this place, as this signal success adds great Glory to his Majestie, and is a great reward to your self . . . I am now raising the same number of Provincial Indians that were raised last year, & at the same time recruits for the Regulars."—

Montekton arrived in New York on June 13 (p.v.).

The declaration of war with Spain is proclaimed in New York.

—N. Y. Merc., April 5, 1763. The declaration was made in England on Jan. 2 (p.v.), with orders for its proclamation on Jan. 4, but did not reach here until Apr. 1.—N. Y. Gaz. (Wayman) Apr. 5, 1762 (which issue contains a copy of it). Concerning the proclamation ceremonies, Smith, writes in his diary under this date: "The Lieut.
Govr. & Council, met at the Fort—the Militia were in Array—
Lord Stirling and his Grenadiers drew up just before the House Door—Deputy Secretary Bayar came out and on the steps after a Proclamation the Declaration was read, all Hatts off—Three Cheers —the Grenadiers advanced—the Constables two by two & then the 2 undersherrifs—the then sheriff well carried out the end then the Common Council, the Aldermen the Mayor and Recorder then the Council . . . & L. Govr. After them a Train (tho' very small of a few Gentlemen of the Town & some military officers —they proceeded through the Broad street to the City Hall between the Liberty Tree was cut down again—Three Cheers & they returned to the Fort drunk Healths fired the Guns and dispersd."—Wm. Smith's Diary (MS.), IV, in N. Y. Pub. Library.
See also Col. Coun. Min., 457.

Announcement is made by Edmund Willett, the Steward of King's College (see March, March 27 this year). On Monday the 16th inst. a school will be opened in King's College to teach 20 Scholars (summer and
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

10 John Jones "Begs Leave to inform the Publick that he is removed from the House which formerly has been kept by Mr. Samuel Francis, at the Sign of the Mason's Arms next door to Mr. De Grusse's in the fields, where he intends to give the same Enter- tainment as formerly has been done by Mr. Francis. . . ."-N. Y. Merc., April 10, 1762. This was at Warren St. and Broadway, and De Grusse, next door, was owner of a rope-walk, which extended along the present Warren St. from Broadway to a point beyond Church St. (see Pl. 34, Vol. 1). For a history of the Mason's Arms tavern, see March 19, 1759. Francis (later known as Fraunces) was now occupying the house in Broad St. (see Jan. 15).

13 This Board agreed with Mt [Nathaniel] Mason for Several Lotts of Ground in the Broad Street [Broadway] for the sum of Two thousand five hundred pounds Containing about one hundred feet in front and one hundred & fifteen feet in length more or less subject to the Leases by him made."—Trin. Min. (MS).

14 The Dutch shop "Hope" arrives laden with sugar, coffee, and indigo. She was captured by the brig "Mars."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 19, 1762.

23 On this day, the "Anniversary of St. George, his Excellency Sir Jeffrey Amherst, gave a Ball to the Ladies and Gentlemen of this City, at Crawley's New Assembly Room. The Company con- sisted of 96 Ladies, and as many Gentlemen, all very richly dressed, and 'tis said the Entertainment was the most elegant ever seen in America."—N. Y. Merc., April 26, 1762. Crawley kept the "New York Arms."—Ibid., Jan. 31, 1763; Landmark Map Ref. Key, H. 3.

26 "The Committee: or The Faithful Irishman" is presented at the Chapel Street Theatre for the benefit of the "Charity School."—N. Y. Merc., April 26, 1762. "This is the second Play the Company have given this Season to public Uses [for the first, see Jan. 25], which, with their unblemishable Conduct during its Residence here, and the Entertainment the Town has rec'd from their performances, has greatly increased the Number of their Friends, and considerably Obviated many Objections hitherto made against Theatrical Representations in this City."—Ibid., May 3, 1762. See May 5.

29 It is announced that the printing business under the firm name of "James Parker and Company in New York, Printers," will begin, after May 1, be carried on solely by John Holt, "who has had the Management of the Business for near two years past."—Parker's N. Y. Post-Boy, April 29, 1762. For the first publication of the Post-boy by the near January. See May 6.

May 1 A Maerschalk survey, bearing this date, of lots "on East side of Road leading from new Jail to Fresh Water," is preserved in tube No. 3 in "Real Estate Division" of comptroller's office, Municipal Bldg.

3 Places of several of the sites of engagements between the French and Indian Nations are engraved and described in 1762, and are "Chapel of Cornelia," on the Hill, where the above engraved Plates may be seen."—N. Y. Merc., May 3, 1762. For De Brul's proposed views of New York City, see Oct. 11.

16 David Douglass advertises that "A Pistole Reward, Will be given to whoever can discover the Person who was so very rude to throw Eggs from the Gallery upon the Stage last Monday [see April 26], by which the Gouts of some Ladies and Gentlemen in the Boxes were spoiled, and the Performance in some Measure interrupted." The advertisement is headed "Theatre, in New York."—N. Y. Merc., May 10, 1762. On April 2, 1762 (q. v.), the theatre was advertised for lease.

18 Jacobus Roosevelt and Philip Livingston present a request to the constancy of the Dutch Church, "signed by a great number of members of the congregation, as well as others, together with a request from young men baptized and partly reared in our church," for the services of "a minister using the English language . . . according to the Dutch or Continental Constitution." The president of the consistory, J. Rittema, replies that an answer will be delayed, because "there is a great number of members, to whom they owe no less consideration, who have not signed said petition."—Eccles. Rec., VI: 3817-18. The proposal was considered at meetings of the consistory on May 13, 17, and 18 (ibid., VI: 3819); on July 6 and 12 (ibid., VI: 3826-27); and on August 26 (ibid., VI: 3828-30). On the last date, 29 of the great consistory consented to the call of an English minister; and on Sept. 19, it was agreed that a May subscription should be circulated for his support.—Ibid., VI: 3851. There was some opposition to the plan, and on Dec. 19 (ibid., VI: 3852-53); but on Dec. 16, the plan was perfected whereby a minister might be introduced to preach in the English language in the new church on Nassau St. The eighth article of this plan provided that "if this plan be approved, and such an English minister shall be called, and shall be speedily and independantly be constructed in the New Church, not only to remove the present great noise [echo] but also to make more room for those who neither have nor can obtain sitings, and are inclined either to the Dutch or English service."—Ibid., VI: 3853-54. For further details, see in this connection Journal of the Proceedings of the Consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of the City of New York in regard to the Petitions of their Congregation for Calling an English Preacher and the Disputes arising therefrom—1762 (MS.), compiled by Theodorus Van Wyck, and printed by the N. Y. Hist. Rev. Morgan D. D., late rector of Trinity Church, quoting Dr. Benjamin F. de Costa, stated that the movement to erect a second "Chapel of Ease" (St. Paul's) for Trinity corporation, which was begun with a resolution at the vestry meeting of April 5, 1762 (q.e.), "may have been and probably was encouraged by the state of things existing in the Dutch congregation. Already preach- ing in the Dutch language had become unpopular amongst the younger portion of the Dutch congregation, which, it was thought by not a few, showed signs of diminution. The better portion of the people were now familiar, in some fair measure, with both English and Dutch, and intermarriages were very frequent. The young people improved every opportunity of worshipping at Trinity, the 'English Church,' and there was a lead call for a minister in the Dutch Church who could preach in both languages." He then describes the dissatisfaction in the Dutch congregation for removing the, their Residence Hendrick Vischer, in 1764, resulting in a "new movement in the direction of Trinity Church with which body the Dutch had been on the kindest terms from its foundation. An established Church, too, was in accordance with all their ideas, their own Corporation having been recognized as the establishment down to the occupation of New Netherland by the English. Therefore the defection could not be stayed, and Peter Van Brugh Livingston said that if the change in the Dutch Church had been made thirty years earlier they would not have met with such losses, but, as it stood, the greater half of Trinity consisted of ascensions from the Dutch Church. . . . and the third edition [St. Paul's] was not commenced any too pecuniary. See also C. E. Rec., VI: 3911, citing Dis, Hist, of Trin, Church, I: 302-3.

Colden, in a message to the assembly, refers to the declaration of war with Spain (see April 3) and urges the assembly to provide its quota of men. He thinks the deficiency of enlistments may be partly imputed to the fact that enemies of the colony, "the Sum of Ten Pounds," and suggests the impression of deserters and "all others, who having no visible Employment or Means of Subsistence, are a Burthen, and even dangerous to the Community."—Assemb. Jour., II: 700. The assembly answered, on May 5, that the bounty of $50 was more than that paid in any other colony; that 1,200 men had already enlisted, "and near a Month yet to come before the Time for inflating expires; and that to impress men would rather tend to prejudice the Service."—Ibid., II: 701. Notice is hereby given, that: The Post-Office is removed from the Whitehall, to the Corner-House of Mr. Cornelius Fisher, opposite Mr. Joseph Hayne's, in Smith-street."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 10, 1762. It was moved again May 2, 1763 (q.e.). Cf. June 28. An act for raising $5,000, by "Way of Lottery," for repairing the city hall receives Colden's signature.—Assemb. Jour., 701; Col. Laww. N. Y., IV: 621-22. The lottery was advertised Sept. 9 (q.e.).

John Holt becomes the sole printer of Parker's New-Tork Gazette or, the Weekly Post-Boy, and changes its name to The New-York Gazette or, the Weekly Post-Boy, which was the title it had borne some years earlier (see Jan. 1, 1753). For fuller details, see April 29; Early Newspapers, II: 427; and Am. Antiquarian Soc. Proc. (1917), XXVIII (5).

This is appointed a day of fasting and prayer, "to implore the Continuance of the Divine Blessing, on His Majesty's Arms, and for restoring and perpetuating Peace, Safety and Prosperity to His Majesty's His Kingdoms and Colonies."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 19, 1762.

"The Regular Forces are daily arriving here from Quebec, 10
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664-1763

May 1762
Moorestown, and encamping on Governor's or Nutten Island, near May which the Transports are rendezvous for the reader Reception of the Troops."—N. Y. Gaz. (Wee man), May 10, 1762.

June 7
"The said DeLancey, by his said order, directed, the 31st inst., May, and two the Day following, being the 1st June. Set up for the Entertainment of Lovers of that Sport, by George Barr, at the DeLancey's Arms, in the Bowery, where the best of Liquors and Attendance may be had. Not less than Ten will be admitted under Subscription of each Day: The Price to be proportion'd to the Number that ride.

"This is thought this Riding being a new Thing in this Place will afford great Diversion."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weeman), May 10, 1762.

A published notice requires the annual meeting of the govern- ors on the 24th of June as "at the House of the said Elias De Grushe near the negro's Burial place for the Reception of such pitch Tartar Turpentine and Shingall."—M. C. C., VI: 587. See Nov. 12, 1755.

The common council orders that the Meal Market be removed and Carried and affixed to the Oswego market."—M. C. C., VI: 587. Where now is the intersection of Wall and Pearl Sts. The Oswego Market, to which some of the material is here ordered to be taken and "affixed" was in the middle of Broadway opposite Crown (Liberty) St. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 929.

It is ordered by the common council that "the 16th, Francis Marschall the City Surveyor do Lese out the Several lots by him Lately laid out near Catiemills [see "Catiemills Hill" in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 929] lying to the Eastward of the Kings high Road leading from Spring Garden to the Kings Bridge for the Term of Twenty One Years under a yearly rent of four pounds with this Restriction to the Lese to not assign or make over the Same or any part thereof without the Leave and approbation of the Corporation first had and obtained."—M. C. C., VI: 587-83.

"Lawrence Kilbrun, Portrait Painter, Takes this Opportunity to acquaint the Publick, that he is removed to Crown-street, which leads from the Flys-market up to the New Dutch Church, next Door to Mr. Stephany, Chymist, and over against Messrs. Livingston's Sugar House."—N. Y. Merc., May 17, 1762.

18
Colclson informs the assembly that 456 men are lacking to complete the colony's quota of forces, and urges the completion of the levy of 1000 men on the 31st next. He calls for the return of 400 men to the Eastward of the Kings high Road leading from Spring Garden to the Kings Bridge for the Term of Twenty One Years under a yearly rent of four pounds with this Restriction to the Lese to not assign or make over the Same or any part thereof without the Leave and approbation of the Corporation first had and obtained."—M. C. C., VI: 587-83.

"This is to give Notice, To all Gentlemen and Ladies, Lovers and Encouragers of Music, That on Thursday next, being the 27th Instant, will be opened, by Messrs. Leonard and Deiuvall, Musick Masters of this City, at Mr. Burnes's Room, near the Battery, A publick and weekly Concert of Music," admission, four shilling...—N. Y. Gaz. (Weeman), May 24, 1762. See May 27.

Colclson writes to Gen. Amherst: "The Mayor tells me that the Corporation have a house on Bedol's Island of four rooms each of which is let out for the reception of the sick, and another House on the said Island where the Physicians & Surgeons may be accommodated."—Colclson Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1876), IX: 210.

Mr. Mayor, in behalf of Oliver DeLancey, Esq. produced to this Board the Draft of the Survey of a publick Road or high way by him proposed to be Laid out at Greenwich instead of the present one; to Begin from the Road Leading from Capi Clarke's, and so to Run of the Same Breath the Road now is through the Land of M's Warren to the Southward of the house and ground of Yellis M's. Mayor has ordered it for this Board, that the said Oliver DeLancey have Liberty to alter the Road accordingly in such manner as by him above proposed, provided the same Road do bind to the Southward of the said Mandeville Land the whole length thereof so as to Give him access thereto, from every part of the Southerly side of his Lands and that the said Oliver DeLancey in consideration of his Carrying the said Road through M's Warren Land, have Liberty in her Behalf to Fence in and Induce the old road Leading to the River as private property."—M. C. C., VII: 283.

The above mentioned survey, dated May 24, 1762, was approved by Francis Maerschall; it is preserved among the Waren Papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See Sept. 3, 1765. The road made by Oliver de Lancy is shown without name on the Rater Map of 1766 (Pl. 41, Vol. I). It was subsequently the Great Kill Road; to the present day it survives as at the Gansfoorst St., See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1000 (Gansfoorst St.) and 1001 (Great Kill Road); Pl. 175, Vol. III. Maerschall appends to his survey the remark: "The New Intended Road is Good Level Land." See also the following important surveys of Sir Peter Warren's lands: (3) One showing the land between Broadway and Green- wich St, and the grant in the Hudson River; and (3) the "Survey of the Alteration of the Road at Grinage" (Greenwich), the latter being the one above referred to, showing Capt. Thomas Clark's road, Warren's Lane, the old road which leads from Greenwich, and the "New Intended Road which leads from Grinage." All of these surveys are preserved with the Waren Papers, in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See, further, A. Pl. 5b, Vol. III.

The Earl of Stirling writes from New York to Lord Romney: "This part of his Majesty's dominions in North America, though populous and Bourlishing, still labours under the very great disadvantage of wanting a Regular Survey for the Collection of Taxes. Some attempts have been made towards establishing one. A College has been founded and partly built, but for want of sufficient funds it is, in some measure, at a stand, and cannot go on with spirit.

"It is an object that seems to me worthy of the notice of the Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Com- merce (of which Lord Romney was president); that I could not avoid recommending it to your Lordship. The bearer, Dr. [James] Jay [see Aug. 19], will present your Lordship with an address from the Governor of the College. They most ardently wish for the countenance it will be the best recommendation they can have to the rest of the world."—From The Life of William Alexander, Earl of Stirling [son of James Alexander], in N. J. Hist. Soc. Collections (1847), II: 63.

A weekly concert is opened by Messrs. Leonard and Dionval [see May 24] at "Mr. Burnes' Room, near the Battery."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 27, 1762. The tavern of George Burns was at White- hall and bore the sign of the King's Head.

The merchants of the city, in a petition to Colclson, give their reasons for having, up to the present time, continued their "Commercial Intercourse ... with the French West India Settlements." They now propose to discontinue such trade themselves, and, if possible, "Totally to suppress it, during the Continuance of the Present War in America." They ask that Colclson "abate the rage of that resentment which some of our fellow Citizens at present Labour under, from a Concern in such trade." The petition is signed more than fifty names.

"The king's birthday is celebrated with the usual Demonstrations of Loyalty and Joy, by firing of Cannon, Illuminations, &c."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weeman), June 7, 1762.

"Most of the Men of War and Transports lately rendezvous here, has fallen down to the Hook, to proceed on their destined Voyage, which yet remains a Secret."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weeman), June 7, 1762.

A galley of 12 guns, called the "Harlequin," is launched at the ship yards. "She is reckoned a very fine vessel, and is very well built."—N. Y. Merc., June 14. Another galley of 16 guns, the "Moncton," was launched that day, and, if possible, "Totally to suppress it, during the Continuance of the Present War in America." They ask that Colclson "abate the rage of that resentment which some of our fellow Citizens at present Labour under, from a Concern in such trade." The petition is signed more than fifty names.

The last commencement of King's College under Dr. Johnson, its first president, is held, nine students being graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts. He was succeeded on Nov. 16 by the Rev. Myles Cooper, as acting president, who, on April 12, 1763, was elected president.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weeman), June 14, 1763. Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 28-29, 42.

Robert Moncton arrives in New York. At his landing at Whitehall he is "welcomed by a Discharge of the Artillery from Fort George, and the Earl of Halffax Packet ... and received by his Honour the Lady Moncton, and many of the principal Gentlemen of this City, as could be collected on so short a Notice. It was intended that the City Militia, and the Independent Companies were to have been drawn out on the Arrival of his Excellency, but the Time would not admit thereof."—N. Y. Merc., June 14, 1755. Gen. Moncton was returning to
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1762 from his successful conquest of Martinique (see Nov. 19, 1761) to
18 June
12 begins "with a splendid and magnificence equal to his birth" to set 13 a monument to the occasion and Langdon's Continuation of the 14 Hist. of N. Y., in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1850), V: 308. On 15 June 15, the common council presented him with an address of 16 congratulation upon the success of the British forces under his 17 command.—M. C. G., VII. 292—94; N. Y. Merc., June 21, 1762.
See Sept. 8.

13 The old Coffee House on the corner of Broad and Water Sts., which had been in existence since Sept. 22, 1709 (q.v.), and perhaps earlier, and which had passed into the possession of William Milner, is on this day mortgaged by him to Philip van Cortlandt.
The mortgage describes the house on the said Dock Ward "Be it northerly side of the Broad Street and fronting the East River formerly called the Coffee house." It is bounded on the west by Broad St., on the east by ground of Philip van Cortlandt and in the possession of Richard Waldron, on the front by the dock or street, and in the rear by other ground belonging to Milliner and also mortgaged.—Liber Mortgages, I: 304—5.

14 Gov. Monckton, in council, receives the seals and public papers.

16 Eleven sail of transports arrive from New York from Martinique
"having the Sick and Wounded, Officers and Soldiers on board from that Place."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 21 1762.

17 The "General Monckton Row Gallery, of 14 Guns and 28 Oars," is launched.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 21, 1762.

25 The provincial council receives a royal remandus to swear William of James Alexander's (see Notes for May 26) "claiming to the earl of Stirling," as a member of the council in place of Archibald Kennedy, resigned; he is sworn in and takes his seat.—Cal. Con-
v. Min. 458; N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 28, 1765.
For his biography, see N. J. Hist. Soc. Collections (1847), II: 61.
Although the house of lords did not pass favourably upon his claim to the title, he was known in America as the Earl of Stirling. At this time (see May 27), he was one of the governors of King's College. He served the American cause in the Revolution as colonel and brigadier-general.

28 There are now "fitting out in this Harbour" the following privatees, viz., the brig "Matth" of 18 guns, and "Monckton," 16 guns; the schooner "Harlequin," 14 guns; "Polly and Sally," to guns, and
"New Harlequin," 14 guns; also the sloop "Dolphin," 10 guns.
"There is also a fine new ship to be launched next week to carry 18 guns,"—N. Y. Merc., June 28, 1762.

29 The "second Fleet of Men of War and Transports are near to sail from this Place."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 28, 1762.

30 The post-office is, at this time, on Post-Baker's Hill (cf. May 7) as appears by the advertisement of William Richards, a dealer in liquors, sugar, etc., whose address is "Post-Baker's Hill, opposite to the Post-Office."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 28, 1762.

32 The "sloop Pot-Baker" is advertised in the New York Public Advertiser and Lady's Magazine and Gentleman's Magazine, to be in service in the coasting trade. —Trin. Min. (M.S.).

33 There was a "French Boarding-School" in this city at the time, as we know from an advertisement containing this notice: "The Rev. Mr. Frederic Rothenhubler, Minister of the Reformed Switzer Church, in New York, is removed to the House of Mr. John Duns-comb, in Oswego-Market Street: He continues teaching young Gentlemen and Ladies the Latin and French Languages as usual, with great Facility, in a short Time, to the utmost possible Perfecion. As well as Young Gentlemen and Ladies Gentlemen and Ladies may be boarded by him, agreeable to their Rank: to instruct them in whatever is necessary for the finishing of their Education: All at a very reasonable Price."—N. T. Post-Boy, July 8, 1762.
During colonial times there were also French boarding schools for girls exclusively (see April 25, 1762), for boys (see May 21, 1775). Fees charged at this period for teaching languages, see May 19, 1766.

35 The common council appoints a committee "to ascertain the Range" on the east side of "Van Clyff's Slip, now commonly 15 called Burling's Slip," where Peter Rensselaer and others possess the appropriation grant and where they are "about to Build and make some Considerable Improvements."—M. C. G., VII. 293—94.

15 Samuel Francis for the first time advertises his occupancy of the house now so well-known as Fraunces Tavern (see Jan. 15), "at the Sign of Queen Charlotte, near the Exchange."—N. T. Merc.
July 26, 1762. See April 11, 1760.

A certificate of manumission in favour of Lawrence Broome's
"Melatto Man Slave Called Robin" is filed with the court of general sessions. Three men appear in court and give bond "in the penal Sum of Two hundred Pounds with Condition to Keep and Maintain him in sickness and health for life, to the use of either him or to any other Town Precinct or place Within the Colony of

In this year, James Jay, M.D. (see May 27), was in England soliciting and collecting subscriptions as agent for King's College; likewise the Rev. William Smith, D.D., in behalf of the college at Philadelphia (the present Univ. of Penn.). King George III issued letters patent (a "Royal Brief," endorsed, on Aug. 19, by Archbishop Secker of Canterbury), "under the Great Seal of Great Britain authorizing the making a collection throughout the Kingdom, from House to House, for the joint and separate credit of the Two Seminaries and Bodies Corporate aforesaid." This resulted in a benefit of about £5,000 to King's College, the king giving £40 out of his private purse.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 31—34. See 8th to Mr. W. White, saying that he "was well contented with my procuring twice as much for the King for New York College, as for Philadelphia, because the former is a Royal Foundation, and hath no other Patron."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 567—8.
It was rumoured in New York on May 9, 1765, that the king's gift was £5,000. N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 9, 1765.

A summary of early contributions for the college shows the following items: Five or six acres of the King's Farm (see May 12, 1755) from Trinity Church, said to be worth £1,000 or £2,000, consisting of the four blocks now boiled by Church, Barclay, Greenwich, and Murray Sts., and which, with the exception of 15 lots on Park Pl., are still held (1904) by the college; £3,020 raised by lotteries authorized by the assembly (see Nov. 25, 1751); £5,000 per annum out of the excise monies of the province, for seven years from Jan. 1, 1754 (see July 4, 1753); contributions from the govnors appointed by the charter, who subscribed £50, £100, or £200 each, and from other gentlemen of the city; £500 from Gov. Hardy (see Dec. 22, 1755); the bequest of the library of Joseph Murray (see 1757, and May 16, 1765), and his estate worth over £9,000;
the bequest of the library of Rev. Dr. Bristow (see May 16, 1765);
£2,041 from Edward Antill; £500 from the Soc. for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts; £100 from Charles Ward Atporphae; £200 bequeathed by Paul Richards, and £100 by James Alexander; £100 from Gen. Shirley (see Dec. 22, 1755); £500 from Gen. Monckton; £20 guineas from Mr. Tanner, rector of Lowestoff in Suffolk, England; "Generous Donations," for which resolutions of thanks were passed in June, 1765, to the Rev.
Hon. William Pitt, and the two universities of Oxford and CambrIDGE; and contributions of small amounts, including, as shown by the college records, the picture of Pres. Johnson from Mr. Kilbourn, painter; "a Curious Collection of Ancient Alphabets on ACOPPERPLATE" from Dr. Morse; books for the library from Mr.
Nod, the bookseller, Bartholomew Canning, and other gentlemen;
the organ from Jacob Le Roy; and the bell from a person unnamed.
—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 33—35. See further, Feb. 26, 1767.

30 Gov. Monckton gives "an elegant Entertainment at the Province Arms in this City on Occasion of the glorious Success of His Majesty's Arms [see June 12] in the Reduction of Bunker's Hill.
Various toasts are "drunk under the Discharge of the Cannon at Fort George."—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 13, 1762.

A lottery ticket is advertised to raise £3,000 to be applied toward repairing the city hall (see May 6).—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 9, 1762.

15 "To the Public,
That Benjamin Blagge, of New-York, and William Richards, of New-Port, Rhode-Island, have provided, and properly fitted, two Sloops, to go between New-York and New-Port, Rhode Island, as the Proprietors, to trade for Fish, and the purchase of Cyder and of the Passengers; and in all manner of Grog, and other mentioned Drinks, Tobacco, and other Goods, at such lower Rates; to sail, the one from New-York, every Friday, and the other from New-Port, every Thursday, Wind and Weather.
CHRONOLOGY: THE ENGLISH PERIOD: 1664–1763

1762 permitting.—The Masters to be spoke with (when in Port) from 1763 12 till 1 o’clock, at the Coffee-House.” Letters will be delivered to pistol; a steetage passenger, two dollars, and a two wheel carriage, horse, or one pistol.—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Sept. 13, 1762.
This appears to have been the first regular transportation service established via Long Island Sound.

1765
The House does “A Law Prohibiting the sale of Hay by measure,” which is a method “unequal and uncertain” by reason of the “Unskilfulness” or “Disingenuous” of the “Cartman or Waggoner,” and which gives rise to controversy “between the Boatmen and Cartmen” or “between the Buyers and Cartmen.” This law requires, among other things, “that the Masons, Millers, Machi-

11 Water Views and two different Land Views” (of New York City) which he bought. These were in English, High Dutch and Low Dutch,” and are to be “curiously engraved on a Copper Plate, of 21 by 12 inches each, and printed on best large Paper.” There will also be “neatly engraved on another Copper Plate” a plan of the streets “with their respective Names.” Along with the prints will be published a pamphlet giving “an exact Account of the wholesome Climate, pleasant Situation, Products, etc. of this Province, for the Benefit of the Subscribers, which they may choose either in English, High Dutch or Low Dutch.” The subscription price is stated as 20 shillings, “One Half to be paid on subscribing, the other Half on the Delivery of these Five Prints.” Each subscriber will “give his Quality and Place of Abode,” and subscriptions will “be closed on the last Day of January next.” Delivery will be made “on or before the first Day of February next.” De Bruij’s establishment was “at the lower End of New-Street, Next Door to Col. Thodey.”—N. T. Post-Buy,
Oct. 11, 1762. In the Expense Account Book (MS.) of Cadwaller Colens (preserved in N. Y. Hist. Soc.), under date of Oct. 31, 1761, appears this item: “Paid De Bruijs for publishing a set of 5 Prints of his Plans of New York . £14.5.0.” Da Similitude, in his notes on maps, etc. (book 1412 Y, Ridgeway Branch, Library Co. of N. Y.) he begins his account of the city of New York as follows:
“De Bruij, a German and good workman but a mauvais sujet, undertook in 1765 to engrave some views of New York which he had drawn himself. I saw there [in New York] in that year the plates which had been commenced. He took up a subscription, by the terms of which he was to receive half of the sum (250) at the time of the subscription, but he kept the money and never finished the work.”

1764
The managers of “the New-York Assembly” advertise its opening on Oct. 28, and state that it will be held fortnightly, during the season, “at Crawley’s New Room.”—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Oct. 11, 1762. This was apparently a dancing assembly.—N. T.
Merc., Nov. 8, 1761.

1765
A public vendue is advertised to take place on this day of a “Large commodious dwelling-house” with a “famous large garden ... that with little improvement, might be made the finest garden on the island.” The property, which is on a lease of which seventeen years still remain, from March 25, 1765, subject only to a ground rent of £23, is “pleasantly situated on a bank on Hudson’s River, near the College (known by the name of Mount Pleasant)
...” Applications are to be made to Mr. George Harrison, “in the Browder and Aldersman, Oct. 30, 1764. For a lot in the Manor of Mount Pleasant, or the Old Bowling Green, see March 30, 1758.
On April 18, 1765, the premises were again advertised “To be Sold, or Let” (ibid., Apr. 18, 1765), but by June 20, 1765 (q. v.), John Ellin was in occupation.

Nov.
Sir William Franklin (illegitimate son of Benjamin Franklin), the governor of New Jersey, writes from “Seberton, near Fareham Hants,” to William Strahan (an old friend of his father), stating, — among other things, that he desires a portrait of the king to be painted by “Ramsay, who paints the King’s Painters,” and sent to him at New York. He also states: “The Print of Mr. Chamberlayne’s Picture of my Father was not done when I came away, but I told him that if the Execution was approved of by Mr. Ludwell and Mr.
Myers, that I would take 100 of them.”—From the original letter, sold at N. M. Klings, Phila. (in N. Y. Gaz., Nov. 2, 1765.

1766
“Mr. Edmund Blount, in his large Book on China, has, I think, lately published an Essay on the China Trade.”—N. T. Gaz. (Weyman), Nov. 1, 1762.

3 Preliminaries for restoring peace” with France and Spain are signed at Fontainebleau. They were ratified Nov. 22, at which time hostilities were to cease, and from which date the return of ships captured at sea was to be redeemed. On Nov. 26, proclamation was issued at the court of St. James, and, on Jan. 22, 1765 (q. v.), the news had reached New York, and a like proclamation was made.—
N. Y. Merc., Jan. 24, 1765. For the peace treaty, see Feb. 10, 1765.
By a secret treaty of the same date Louis XV cedes to Spain “that part of Louisiana which lay west of the Mississippi, with the island on which New Orleans shall sit.” France had thus lost all her American possessions, except her claims to Canada, which took place in 1803, and her claim for recognition in 1789. “The mutual agreement came to an end, having been in force from the day of the signing of the treaty on Nov. 26, 1762, to the signing of the same treaty on Dec. 10, 1763.”—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 15, 1762.

For the vestry resolution to buy a new organ, see Jan. 2, 1765.

1767
George Hopkins, “on the New-lock,” exhibits, at sixpence each person, “a surprising calf, having 7 legs,” etc.—N. T. Merc., Nov. 15, 1762. Hopkins was a tavern-keeper. A year later (see June 20, 1763) his tavern stood on William St. and bore the sign of the Mason’s Arms.

Trinity vestry resolves that “all the Church Lands that are to be let for the future be leased for any Term not exceeding Sixty two,” or less than Twenty years.”—Trin. Min. (MS.)

1768
Mr. Banyan Day, Esq., of New York, writes from his Excellency the Governor, Accounts of Repairs to the Governor’s House, &c. in the Fort; amounting in the whole, to the Sum of £323:15s. 6d.—Assemb. Jour., II: 711.

His Majesty has granted a Royal Bounty of £600, for the joint Benefit of the Colleges lately established in the Cities of New York and Philadelphia, and has authorized the making a Collection for the same laudable Purpose throughout the Kingdom.”—N. T.
Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 6, 1761; cf. Aug. 19. See May 9, 1763.

Gov. Monckton having earnestly recommended the settlement of the boundary line between New York and New Jersey (Assemb.
Jour., II: 714), a legislative act was passed “for submitting the property of the Lands which are held or Claimed by Grants under the Great Seal of this Colony [New York] and are affected by the Controversy about the boundary or Partition Line between this Colony and the Colony of New Jersey to such a Method of division as the most Gracious Majesty the King of Great Britain by his Royal Commissary or otherwise to appoint and for defraying the Expe curse to accrue on this part of the Colony on the final settlement of the said Line.”—N. T. Col. Doc., IV: 640; See July 18, 1768.

A provincial act is passed to “improve and Enable the Mayor Regent and Aldermen of the City of Philadelphia” to “Receive for a sum of £800 in order to raise the” (ibid., Jan. 14, 1765), but by June 20, 1765 (q. v.), John Elin was in occupation.

On this day also another act is passed, which provides that 30 shillings shall be appointed in the city of New York, in addition to

Dec.

THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1762

the number already serving. According to a former act said number was not to exceed 1200. But in 1763, 6000 was raised by lottery, a part of which was to be used for finishing the light house on Sandy Hook (see May 19, 1761).—Ibid., IV: 667-68.

A committee of the common council is appointed "to treat with a person or persons to erect, maintain and repair the old City Hall."—M. C. C., VI: 314. The proceedings which followed are briefly stated in the following summary: On March 8, 1762 (p. v.), the board "having agreed this day with And Breasted to alter & repair the City Hall for the more Commodious Reception of the Several Branches of the Legislature, and for the Holding of Courts and other public uses," he was allowed, "as being the principal Carpenter or master workman," the sum of 16 shillings a day for every day in actual service, but he "is to Receive no benefit from those who he shall employ under him," and he shall "keep the acct.1 which Immediately Relate to his Business."—Ibid., VII: 323. On April 12 (p. v.), the "Committee appointed to order the Repairing and ornamenting the City Hall" submitted to the board "the draft or plan of Such Alteration or Amendment;" this was approved, and it was ordered "that the Said Committee Cause the same to be repaired and ornamented in such Manner accordingly." At the same time, the "mourners of the City hall appointed in and by an Act entitled an Act for Raising the Sum of three Thousand pounds by way of Lottery towards repairing the City Hall" (Assem. Jour. II: 701), "exhibited their accounts of the Lottery Monties by them severally-received," and it was ordered that they be annua paid to Philip Livingston, chairman of the committee.—Ibid., VII: 316. On April 20 (p. v.), it was ordered that the committee "write to Bristol for so much Thatch of Copper as is Necessary to Cover" the city hall (p. 357); on June 16 (p. v.), that they "have power to Raise the same a Story higher" (p. 331); and on July 15 (p. v.), that the Cannopys of the City hall be brought forward so far into the Street, as to be upon a Range with the two wings thereof" (p. 333). On Nov. 9 (p. v.), the mayor was required to write to Bristol "for so much Thatch of Copper as will be found Necessary for Finishing the same."—Ibid., VII: 357. On Dec. 5 (p. v.), it was ordered that the committee have liberty to borrow £500 upon interest "for the use of this Corporation" (p. 360). On May 11, 1764 (p. v.), payment of £500 was made to Whitehead Hicks, alderman of the East Ward, by the city treasurer, "out of the monies paid into his hands by the Church Wardens of this City . . . to be by him applied towards Rebuilding the City Hall," the board agreeing to return the sum "to the said Treasurer or Chamberlain as Soon as the Same shall be by him required."—Ibid., VII: 375-76. On Aug. 29, Alderman Hicks received £500 from the treasurer out of the same fund (p. 386-87). On Nov. 9 (p. v), it was ordered that the City treasurers pay £500 to the Cannopys of the City hall (p. 400); and on May 3, 1765 (p. v.), be received £500 from the treasurer (p. 417). On the same day it was ordered that Andrew Breasted for the present do finish the Library Room in the City Hall in the most plain and Cheap manner that can be, and Repair the Stairs as well from below to the Assembly Chamber, as that Leading to the Common Council Room in the Like manner" (p. 418). A number of payments were made on Nov. 20, 1765 (p. v.), for the materials and work done on the repairs.—Ibid., VII: 99-92. The total expense from Dec. 5, 1763, to this date, is estimated to be about £2615.

John Zucrucker is paid £1545 "for the Cutting of Twelve Cornishes and five Arches for the old City Hall."—M. C. C., VII: 313.

It is ordered by the common council that the firmen "appear in leather Caps at any fire which may happen within this City."—M. C. C., VII: 315.

The common council orders payment for repairs to the Broadway Market.—M. C. C., VII: 313. For the origin of this market, see April 13, 1738. It was also called the Oswego Market.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 935. Dee Voe, Market Book. 272.

27 On March 27 (p. v.), the letter was intended to leave New York, offers for sale besides his hardware shop at the "Cross Keys and Crown," near the Fly Market, a "new riding chair and single day, and a negro man, about 20 years old." Elbersen may be seen "at the Whitehall Coffee-house, from the hours of 10 to 12."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 27, 1763.

A "good new dwelling-house, and 4 lots of ground, wherein Benjamin Keats now lives, situated in the West-end of the city of New York" are offered for sale. Applications are to be made to Dec. Phillip Kischke, of New York, "vintner."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 27, 1762. This was a tavern at the present 255-254 Broadway, later Montague's. See April 5, 1754.

1763

Probably in this year were drawn, by Capt. Thomas Howell, R. A., two views of New York, one from the south-west and one from the south-east. These views, which were engraved by P. Canot, are reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pls. 37 and 38.

Two separate copies of a map formerly made by Mr. Maersebalck in this year are on file in Vol. II of "Bayard Deeds" (1760-1845) in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. The original was "either lost or misplaced during the present troubles," a record to this effect appearing on the copy, made by S. Gale on May 6, 1780. The original is described as: "A Map of a Parcel of Land Situate in the Hospital in the City of New York—Part of the Estate of the late Reverend Henry Barclay Deceased. Scale Forty Feet in an Inch . . . ." This survey shows the location of "The Negroes Burying Ground," "Ground Fronting the Hospital," "Ann St.," "Anthony St.," "Indian St.," "Katherine St," etc.

Work on the Atlantic Neptune, a collection of charts, plans, and views of the coast and harbours of North America, was begun in this year. The plates were made under the supervision of Limut-Col. Des Barres for the use of the British navy. The work extended from 1765 to 1784, and the printing began in 1774. Editions were priced in 1775, 1780, 1781, and 1784. For a detailed account and a description of the publication, see I: 349-52. Two of the Atlantic Neptune views of New York are reproduced as Pls. 44 and 458, Vol. I.

In this year, James Beeckman erected his mansion-house, "Mount Pleasant."—Libe Deeds, XL: 475 (New York). On the modern map it would stand at the north-west corner of First Ave. and 51st St. The house became the headquarters of Gen. Howe, in Revolutionary days, and it was here that Nathan Hale was condemned to death, as a spy (see Sept. 21, 1776). The house was demolished in 1787.—Libe Deeds, MCCCLXXXI: 288, 294 (New York). A marble mausoleum from one of its stately rooms is now in the possession of the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948; Pl. 176, Vol. III. For views of the mansion, both exterior and interior, see Man. Com. Cown. (1845), 542, 496, 498, 502. For an account of the Beeckman farm in relation to modern streets, see N. Y. Times, Dec. 6, 1914. John Brinner, "Cabinet and Chairmaker, from London, At the Sign of the Chair, opposite Flatten-Barrack Hill, in the Broad-Way, New York," offers "every article in the cabinet, chair-making carving, and gilding business." He "carves all sorts of chimney pieces, glass and picture frames, and all kinds of bookcases, &c. Desk and book cases, library books, writing and reading tables, commode and bureau dressing tables, commode and plain chests of drawers, all sorts of plain and ornamental chairs, sofa beds, settees, couches and easy chairs, . . . ."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 3, 1765.

The members of the Dutch Church who opposed the call of an English minister (see May 3, 1763) inform the consistory that they will agree "to the call of such a minister to preach in the New [Nassau St.] Church . . . , retaining one turn for the Dutch on Sunday." In six, eight, or ten years, they think, "another church shall be built on suitable grounds belonging to the church; and this Third Church shall be for the use of the English services; and to the building of which they promise for themselves and others to give liberally." John Hardenbrock is requested "to make a plan of a Gallery in the New Church, according to the eighth view [see May 3, 1764], and state how much the frame and external timber may be obtained for seasoning." A committee is appointed "to write to Holland, to such gentlemen as they deem suitable, to look out for such a minister."—Ecles. Rec., VII: 384-42. A blank call was sent to Holland on Jan. 18 (p. v.) for a minister to preach in English. The letter gives a review of all the communications which prompted the call. Among other things it stated that "as our New Church is a large edifice, being one hundred English feet long and seventy-five feet wide, it will require a man with a strong audible voice . . . ."—Ibid., VII: 383-56. Regarding the chosen minister, see July 16.

The common council orders that advertisements be published for leasing "the ferry Between this City and Nassau Island the 1763 Stalls and Standings in the Severall Marketts and the publick wharfs and Slips of this City," also "the Exchange House now in the possession of Mr Roper Dawson at the Lower End of Broad Street."

A newspaper advertisement reads: "To be sold at Public Vendue, At the Merchant's Coffee House, on the 26th Day of January Instant the House and Lot of Ground known by the Name of the Whitehall Coffee-House, with house adjoining, being Part of the Estate of the late Col. John Moore."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 10, 1762. The Whitehall Coffee-House had been opened on June 14, 1762, by Rogers and Humphrey, who notified the public that they had made arrangements to receive from London and Bristol "all the public Printts and Pamphlets, as soon as published," and to have on hand a "weekly Supply of New-York, Philadelphia, Boston, and other American Papers."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 8, 1762. The enterprise was, apparently, a failure.

A post-rider, James Mankler of Hartford, has for some time been regularly carrying the N. Y. Gaz.; or, the Weekly Post-Boy from New York to Hartford, by way of New Haven.—See a notice by John Holt in the Post-Boy of March 3, 1763.

Gen. Gage, in a letter to Col. Bradstreet, at Albany, thanks him "for Supplying Fort George with Flower," and informs him that carpenters are to start from New York on the 20th, "and, I hope will join those from Boston at Albany."—Gen. Gage's Letters (MS.), 1759-73, in Harvard College Library.

The Treaty of Paris.—Articles of a peace concluded by England, France, and Spain are signed. By this treaty Great Britain receives control of Canada and all the territory east of the Mississippi, except New Orleans. The French are to have the liberty of fishing and drying on the coast of Newfoundland, and of fishing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence three leagues from the coasts belonging to Great Britain. They are likewise ceded the islands of St. Pierre, and Miquelon.—N. Y. Merc., May 16 and 23, 1763. For the "Preliminaries for restoring peace," see Nov. 3, 1762.

After the news of the treaty of peace reached America, Benjamin Franklin, then postmaster-general, established a monthly postal service between Canada and New York.—Smith, Hist. of the Post-Office in British No. Am., 1, citing Gen. P. O. Treasury Letter-Book, 1760-1771, p. 95. See April 25, 1772.
CHAPTER III
THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD
1763-1776-1783

PART I
1763-1776
CHAPTER III

THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD

1763-1776-1783

PART I

1763-1776

A VERY brief summary of some of the principal events of the Revolutionary epoch in New York City's history, from this date (following the Treaty of Paris—see Feb. 10) through Nov. 25, 1783 (the date of the evacuation of the city by the British), is contained in Chapter III of Vol. I., pp. 301-34.

John Kingston, James Reade, and their respective wives, release to the corporation all their Right and Interest of and in Several Streets laid out through land "lying a little to the Northward of the fresh water."—M. C.C., VI: 321-32. This map of a land made by Francis Maerschalk, and dated Nov. 21, 1751, is known as the "Kingston Draught." The streets on this tract, above referred to, are the modern Mulberry, Baxter, and Park Sts., and Mission Pl. (See Aug. 15.)

William Walton, Jacobus Roosevelt, and others living in the easterly part of the city, petition the common council for leave to build a public market house at or near Peck Slip, at their own expense. They find they can more conveniently and cheaply buy produce from the country boats that bring such articles to this slip; but they are prevented from doing so by a city ordinance which requires that provisions shall be carried to and sold only at the public markets. From the original petition (MS.) in file No. 4, city clerk's record-room. Consideration of the subject being deferred (M. C. C., VI: 321), it was ordered, on March 8, that a certain committee "direct the Same to be made and Erected in such Convenient place thereabouts as they shall Judge most requisite for the public Good."—Ibid., VI: 324. The expense for finishing this market was paid on Oct. 28.—Ibid., VI: 352.

The Peck Slip Market was the first one built of brick in the city. It stood facing Water St., on the westerly side, at the head of Peck Slip, which derived its name from Benjamin Peck; and was in the neighbourhood of fashionable dwellings. For various newspaper references to it, see De Voe's Market Book, 393. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 495.

The "Hay Machine" (scales) erected by Isaac van Hooke (see July 1, 1756) "proved abortive," but he is paid £7,919:9:6 for the expense of erecting it.—M. C. C., VI: 352. On May 11, 1764, he was given permission to erect another "in that part of his ward directed by act of assembly."—Ibid., VI: 376-77. See also De Voe, Market Book, 273.

The members of St. Andrew's Society hold their quarterly meeting at the "Sign of the Province Arms."—N. Y. Genealogical, Weyman, Feb. 21, 1767. This was the City Tavern, at 115 Broadway, of which, at this time, John Crawley was proprietor. See May 25, 1754. On April 11, Crawley advertised a vendor, to be held on the 28th at his house, the "New-York Arms," of tavern furniture, which included "three complete Sets of Pyramid Glasses, with Sylabub, Jelly, and Sweetmeat ditto," and announced that he would leave very soon for England.—Ibid., Apr. 11, 1763. By May 16 (G.O.), George Burnes has become the new proprietor of the Province Arms. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 497.

The deacons of the French Protestant Church petition Monckton for a charter, incorporating them "by the name & style of the Minister, Elders & Deacons of the protestant French Church of the City of New York." They review the history of the church in the province.—Doc. Hist. N. Y., III: 255-96. See also June 19, 1703, and July 5, 1704. Regarding the probably unsuccessful outcome of this petition, see the rejection of similar petitions of the Lutherans, Presbyterians, etc., under March 24, and Aug. 26, 1767.

"This Board having agreed this day with Andr' Breastead to alter & repair the City Hall for the more Commodious Reception of the Several Branches of the Legislature, and for the Holding of Courts, and other publick uses [see Dec. 21, 1762], and for that purpose have allowed him, as being the principal Carpenter or master workman, the Sum of Sixteen Shillings per Day, for every Day he Shall be in actual Service, he the said Andrew Breastead is to Receive no benefit from those who he shall Employ under him, and to keep the acct[?] which Immediately Relate to his Business &c."—M. C. C., VII: 323. See April 24.

A committee of the common council is appointed to superintend an addition to the Counties Market.—M. C. C., VII: 324. This was the fish market at Counties Slip and Pearl St. See Nov. 16, 1720; Aug. 22, 1771; May 7, 1775; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 958.

Three petitions are presented to the common council regarding new markets on the North River. The first is from a group of inhabitants of the West Ward, "Residing near the slip at the Lower end of Cortlandt Street," who ask "leave to Erect a public market House there at their own expense." The second is from another group in the same ward, "Residing at the Lower End of Deys Street," who ask "leave to Erect a Market House also there at their own Expense." The third is from certain inhabitants in this ward, "residing at or near the Oswego Market in the Broadway Street," who petition "against Granting the prayer of the above said two Petitions" until they also can be heard.—M. C. C., VII: 325.

The originals of the three petitions, still preserved in the city clerk's record-room (file No. 4), reveal several interesting features of the market conditions of that day. The first two groups of petitioners complain of the distance from the North River of "the Crown Market [more commonly called the Oswego Market] in the Broadway" (at the centre of Broadway at the present Liberty St.) because "the Country Produce brought down and across the said River to supply the markets of this City must be carried in Carts from the different slips and wharfs on the North River to the said Crown Market, by which means (together with the Expanse of sometimes Storing the same at or near the said wharfs till it can be carted) the Price of the said produce is very much enhanced to your Petitioners and other Purchasers." It is explained by those petitioners who are in favour of Cortlandt St. that "the Produce in general supply'd by the People residing on both sides of the North River, is brought down by Boatmen, who likewise in a great degree officiate as Factors, but being paid only for the bare Freight of the same, to shun the danger of leaving their Boats exposed in the different Slips with the property of others on board, and the Expanse of Cartage, do very frequently dispose of the Produce at the Riverside, in contravention of the Law established by the Worshipful Board to the Contrary, and to the great disappointment of those who daily attend the Public Markets to purchase Necessaries for the immediate use of their Families; That some Boatmen, fearful of transgressing the good Institution forbidding any Persons to dispose of Country Produce but at the Public Markets, for want of a Proper Market Place, often refuse to take in charge or bring such effectual supplies as they otherwise might do, which must needs occasion a scarcity of the same, and consequently cause that which is brought, to be kept up at an extravagant Price; That the hardship attending the Farmers themselves who attend the Market, is very obvious, on Account of the carrying their produce (beside that Expanse as by attending the first Load, what remains in the Boat or on the Dock, is liable to be pilfer'd, and many other Casualties, for which reason above they dread bringing at one time to Market more Produce than can be contained in a single Cart, which is another bad tendency towards the supply of the City."

The petitioners in favour of Deys St. say that "the said Deys Street from the Broadway to the said slip, having lately been dug out and paved by an order of this worshipful Board, is wide and spacious, and has a very gradual, easy and equal ascent in all parts of it, which is the best street leading from the Broadway to the North River as well for Carts Wagoons and other Carriages as for persons to walk on foot."

The opposition group desire particularly to be heard against the proposal to build a market "at the North River, April 19th, 1763," by the dwelling house of Peter Messier" (see July 16, 1754). Although the two proposals are not again specifically referred to in the records (that for a market at Cortlandt St. was previously rejected—see M. C. C., V: 56), both appear to have been denied.—See ibid., VII: 331–32.

Daniel Horsemann is appointed chief-justice of the supreme court by Gov. Montresor.—Col. Coun. Min., 461; N. Y. Col. Hist., VII: 525. For the controversy in regard to the appointment of judges, their tenure of office, and salary, see Aug. 12, 1764.

Trinity Church offers for lease 200 lots of ground, "joining the Stodcockes, and along the North-River," for the terms of 21, 45, or 63 years.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 31, 1763. The stockades or palisades which were built in 1746 (see July 6, 1745) are shown on the Holland Map, Pl. 16b, Vol. I. See also Sept. 17, 1757, and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 945.

Loderick Bamper, "near the New-English Church, in Bedell's-street," offers for sale rum, molasses, and other commodities, including "waffle-irons," "German flutes," and "large Dutch Bibles with copper plates."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 21, 1763. In May, 1775, Edward Bardini, who had been proprietor of Hamden Hall, at Broadway and Warren St., "removed to the house and large garden in ..."—ibid., April 3, 1775, closely occupied by Mr. Bamper, and now called Kenningto.-—Rivington's Gazette, May 18, 1775.

Martin Prendergast advertises the sale on this day of a "Good new commodious Dwelling House and Lot of Ground, together with another Lot adjoining, both Lots in 65 acres and ..."—Col. Coun. Min., 178; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 949. It has the advantages for a Tavern, is now kept as such ... at the Sign of the Hurlers; has a very fine Tennis-Court, or Fire-Alley, and lies between the New-Gaol and Fresh Water Hill ...”—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 4, 1763. On June 20, 1763, Prendergast again advertised his two houses to lease. He described each house as having "three good Fireplaces, a good Cellar, and renting now £21 per annum."—Ibid., June 20, 1763. Again, on April 18, 1764, he announced the sale, on April 29, by public vendue of his tavern, the "Sign of the Hurlers."—N. Y. Merc., April 18, 1764. The location given of this tavern was "close by that of Benjamin Kiesaste's," which was taken over prior to March 22, 1765 (p. 7), by Luke Clarke.

Samuel Francis opens an ordinary at the "Sign of Queen Charlotte" (see July 26, 1765).—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 4, 1763.

"Ordered that Mr. Reale Mr. Marston Mr. Horsemann Mr. Hurd and Mr. Wilkin be ordered to Enquire and look out for a proper and Convenient Lot of Ground in this City whereon to Erect a New Church and report their Opinion to this Board with all Convenient Speed."—Trin. Min. (M.S.). These proceedings resulted in the erection by Trinity of the second chapel of ease, known as St. Paul's, and still standing, the sole surviving ecclesiastical building of the colonial period on Manhattan Island. The movement was probably encouraged by Trinity's accession of many English-speaking members of the Dutch congregation.—Dict. Hist. of Trin. Church, I: 592–3. See June 16.

A tavern, with the sign of Admiral Hawke, stood in this year "opposite the New-Market," in Peck Slip.—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 11, Aug. 15, 1763.

The committee "appointed to order the Repairing and ornamenting the City Hall" (see Dec. 21, 1762) submits to the common council "the draft or plan of such Alteration or Amendment." The plan and attached report of the committee is ordered to put it into effect. At the same meeting the managers appointed in accordance with the provisions of the act for raising by lottery the sum of £5,000 to repair the city hall (see May 6, 1762) make a report of their accounts. The board orders that the "Several Ballance, and sum before paid to Philip Livingstone, chairman of the committee,"—M. C. C., VI: 326. See April 20.

According to a notice published on April 4, the governors of King's College are desired to meet on this day in the college hall.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 4, 1763. It is the first date of record of their meeting there. They were announced to meet there again on Aug. 12.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Aug. 4, 1763. On Aug. 23, however, the Apr. 4 announcement was repeated in the "House of Peter Messier," near the Exchange.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 15, 1763.

The Rev. Myles Cooper, "a Gentleman recommended by his Grace the Arch-bishop of Canterbury for his distinguished Learning, firm Attachment to our happy Constitution, Probity and amiable Character," is unanimously elected president of King's College.—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 11, 1763.

Notice is given in the Mercury that "The first of May the 18th Printing-Office at the Bible & Crown, in Hanover-Square [see May 12, 1773], it is to be removed to Rotten-row, next Door to that Corner opposite the Merchants' Coffee House."—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 18, 1763. Ford, Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I: 9. Gaine moved once more on Oct. 1, 1763 (p. 70).

The committee appointed "to order the Repairing and ornamenting the City Hall" is directed to "write to Bristol for so much Thatch of Copper as is Necessary to Cover the same and place the Expense thereof to this Corporation."—M. C. C., VI: 575. See June 16 and Nov. 9.

Payment of £151515 is ordered by the common council for repairs to "Coenties peer."—M. C. C., VI: 329. This pier was constructed in 1750 (see April 26, 1750) and is designated as the "Albany Pier" first on the Maatschelck Plan of 1755 (PL 34, Vol. I). Further payment for repairs was ordered Jan. 12, 1764.—Ibid., VII: 563–64. For the extension of this pier, see March 7, 1765. It is sometimes alluded to simply as "the Corporations peer" (ibid., VII: 113) not to be confused with the later "Corporation Dock" (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 958) on the Hudson river.

John Wilkins was appointed and committed to the Tower of London for libelling the king in an article published in the North Briton.—Pol. Hist. of England, XI: 6.

It is ordered by the governors of King's College that the committee "for Building the College" (see May, 1760) be a committee "to incluse the College Ground with a Fence of Posts & Railings."—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 37. See also May, 1764.

Mrs. Sarah Steele, who had been for a short time proprietor of the "King's Arms" tavern, just north of the corner of Broad and Water Sts. (see Oct. 3, 1748), moves to Whitehall, talking with her this famous old tavern sign.—N. Y. Gaz., May 2, 1763. The large house into which she moved was on the present south-east corner of Whitehall and Bridge Sts., and had been erected as a private dwelling, in 1678, by Cornelis Stenewayck, and occupied by him until his death. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 953, 979; Pl. 174, Vol. III. Mrs. Steele remained here until shortly after Jan. 12, 1767 (p. 6), when she offered the house for sale or lease. On April 1, 1768, the premises, then occupied, probably as a private dwelling-house, by Col. Gabbet, were again offered for rent, "with or without Furniture, as may suit the Tenant." Apparently the house was not re-occupied as a tavern until 1770, when Edward Bardini advertised for a freehold, which he had bought from Mr. Bardin about May 13, 1771 (p. 9). Burns had succeeded Bardini, and the house was again advertised for rent. Burns was still here on June 24, 1771, when another advertisement offered the place for lease. It may be presumed, from the frequency with which the premises changed hands, that the old house had fallen into decay and was no longer desirable for tavern-keeping. No record exists to indicate that this site was a popular resort during the next few years. The house was burned during the great fire of Sept. 21, 1776. While Mrs. Steele and others were conducting the King's Arms tavern at Whitehall, another and more popular "King's Arms" was being kept at the upper end of Broadway, the later noted tavern of Montague, for a history of which, see March 21, 1754.

The "Post-Office is removed to Mr. Van Dam's House, where Capt. Fryce lately dwelt, opposite the North-West Corner of the New-Dutch Church."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 2, 1763. For the use of the church itself as a post-office later, see Jan. 27, 1845.

John Holt offers for sale certain acts of assembly "At the New Printing Office, at the House where Mrs. Steel has for some Years kept the King's Arms Tavern, opposite the Exchange in Broad Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 1763. Holt's former location was at Burling Slip (see April 29, 1762).

John Holt observes, in his newspaper, that it is much more necessary in New York than in London that names be put on doors, as the inhabitants here move every May Day and if, with the name of the inhabitant (which might be on a moveable board), the name of the street or place were also affixed to every house, it would en-
THE Pontiac's Conspiracy is initiated in an attempt to capture Detroit by treachery. —Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 690. See June 19.

It is said His Majesty has been pleased to give One Thousand Pounds towards the completing the Colleges erecting at New York and Philadelphia. —See Jan. 12, 1763.Cols.

George Burns, who lately kept the King's Head Tavern, at the Whitehall, near the Province Arms, in the Broad-Way, . . . He has two excellent Grooms to attend his Stables; and takes in Travellers and their Horses: And will Stable Town Horses by the Month, Quarter, or Year, on reasonable Terms. —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 16, 1765. Burns succeeded Crawley (see Feb. 28, 1765).

The following month John Graham, proprietor of the Duke of York's head, also at Whitehall, became tavern-keeper of the King's Head. —Ibid., June 13, 1765.

Richard Howard notifies the public that he has "open'd a House of Entertainment the noted and well frequented one wherein Mr. Philip Kuykendall formerly, and Mr. Benjamin Kestes lately lived, near the College, on the Church Ground; where he keeps the best of Wines. . . ." —N. Y. Gaz., May 16, 1765. This tavern stood at the present 253-54 Broadway. By March 12, 1764 (p. 496), it had been taken over by Edward Bardin, who later became one of the best-known tavern-keepers of New York. See April 5, 1764.

"Newfoundland, Most commonly known by the name of the Glass-House, Is now open'd for the Entertainment of the Company, where constant Attendance is given, and every thing that is genteel and agreeable provided."

N. B. Breakfasting attended from Seven o'Clock in the Morning to Tea, and in the Afternoon from 3 till 6 o'Clock, at 1 S. 6d, a Head, furnish'd with the best Green Tea, and hot Loaves.—Likewise any Gentleman or Lady that are indispos'd, and want to take the Benefit of the Country Air, may be accommodated with a genteel Apartment." —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 23, 1765. The "Glass House" had been erected about 1754 (see Oct. 7, 1764), on the North River near the present 55th St., and was, as its name implies, a glass manufactory. Its pleasant situation and popularity as a rural place of interest probably suggested the advantages of turning the house into a tavern. It continued thus for about a decade. Edward Agar, in advertising later for stolen goods, stated that he occupied this establishment, and described it as "near Greenwich." —Ibid., Aug. 29, 1765. See Feb. 8, 1757; Jan. 15, 1759; May 9, 1768.

St. Andrew's Society meets at the King's Arms Tavern near the fort. —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 30, Aug. 8, 1765. These meetings were at the house of Mrs. Sarah Steele, who had moved to Whitehall on May 1, 1765 (q. v.).

The 25th anniversary of the king's birthday is observed in New York "with great Demonstrations of Loyalty: His Excellency our Governor, gave a very grand Entertainment to the Gentlemen of the Army, and the principal Inhabitants with great Magnificence." —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 6, 1765. This was at the City Tavern, at the present 115 Broadway.

John Marshall, who had been for a few years proprietor of the tavern and garden at the Old Bowling Green (see Feb. 1, 1759), offers to let the "noted Sun Tavern, On the New-Dock." —N. Y. Merc., June 6, 1765. By Nov. 21 of this year, Marshall was advertising for sale "choice Green Hook in bottles" at "the Upper Corner of Nassau-Street." —Ibid., Nov. 21, 1765.

"Veridine Elsworth, Who formerly lived near Spring Garden, is removed to the House wherein Mr. John Strot lately lived, almost opposite the Hon. William Walton's, Esq; where Travellers will be entertained in the best Manner." . . ." —N. Y. Merc., June 6, 1765. The Walton house stood at the present 346 Pearl St., at Franklin Square.

On "behalf of the high Dutch Lutheran church in the Swamp," a petition is presented to the council "to compel John Philip Ley- dig and Joseph Hawer to give an accounting of moneys collected for the church in Europe." It is referred to the attorney-general. —Cal. Coun. Min., 461. The "Swamp" Church was completed and opened May 1, 1765 (p. 496).

Abraham Delany, Jr. "Just arrived from London, Takes this Opportunity to inform the Public, that he is now settled at Mr. Turner's in New Dutch-Church-street, near Colonel Robinson's, where he intends to carry on Portrait Painting. Ladies and Gentle- men that please to employ him, may depend on all the Justice in his Power." . . ." —N. Y. Merc., June 8, 1765.

This advertisement appears: "John Davis, Copper Plate Printer, lately from London; Nearly prints off Silver, Copper, Brass, or Pewter Plates; on Paper, Parchment, Vellum, Silk or Linen, in the nearest Manner at M' William Post's Painter, at Burling's Slip, New-York." —N. Y. Post-Boy, June 9, 1765.

"William Cobb, Inholder, living at the Sign of the Ship, near the Ship-Yards," notifies the public that he wishes a settlement of his accounts. This tavern was located in Metropolitan on the east side of Cherry St., and was owned by John Rivers, who mortgaged the house to John Lake on Oct. 5, 1764. It was described in the mortgage as "in the Possession and Occupation of Will Cobb Tavern Keeper as Tenant." —Liber Mortgages, II 456.

The drawings of the lottery, authorized May 19, 1764 (p. 496), for raising £3,000 to erect a lighthouse at Sandy Hook, begin to-day. They were advertised to be made "under the Inspection of the Members of the Corporation" at the city hall, but because that building was undergoing repair "Mr. Burns's Long-Room at the Province Arms" was designated. —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 13, 1765. For further reference to the lighthouse, see Dec. 20.

The New Dutch Church is struck and set on fire by lightning. The fire is soon extinguished. "It is remarkable that in the Course of a few Years, the same Accident has happened to this Church three or Four Times." —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 20, 1765. See July 29, 1761.

The council orders that the committee appointed to repair and alter the city hall "have power to raise the same a Story higher at the Expense of this Corporation." —M. C. C., VII: 331. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 973. A sketch by Du Simitière shows this additional storey.—See A. P. 4, Vol. III.

"Resolved that the Materials be purchased for Building a New Church [see April 1 on the Southern part of the Church lands unless a more Convenient place Can be purchased for that purpose." —Trin. Min. (MS.). The exact location of the church [St. Paul's] was decided upon Nov. 3 (p. 4).

"Several Companies of the Artillery Men" embark. They are said "to be ordered Upwards to reinforce the Garrison." —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 20, 1765. They appear to have been intended for protection against the Indians of Pontiac's confederacy (see May 6). Several frontier forts had already been compelled to surrender.—Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 691. See Aug. 1.

"Spring-Gardens, Near the College, lately belonging to Mr. John Marshall, Now kept by John Elkin, Is opened for Breakfast- ing, from 7 o'Clock 'till 9. Tea in the Afternoon from 3 till 6.—The best of Green Tea, " &c. Hot French Rules will be provided." —See Jan. 4, 1759. They burned down the Night Evening till 9, where Gentlemen and Ladies may depend on good Attendance; the best of Madeira, Mead, Cakes, &c." —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 20, 1765.

George and Edward Hopkins, "at the Sign of the Mason's Arms, on Golden Hill" (William St.), offer for sale "Good Cod
An advertisement reads: "Westward Stages, This is to inform the Publick, that a good Stage Boat is kept by JohnWatson, which on Monday's and Thursday's sets out from New York to Elizabeth Town; and September 11, upon which day Stage Waggon, kept by William Richards, and John Thomson, will be ready to receive Passengers, and proceed directly to NewBrunswick; where, a good Stage Waggon, kept by Daniel Barlow, will proceed on Tuesday's and Fryday's to Mr. Parker's, at Trenton Ferry; where it will be met by a Stage Waggon from Philadelphia, kept by Jonathan Bliss; which, after exchanging passengers, will on Wednesday's and Saturday's return for Philadelphia, as the said Carson's Waggon will return to New Brunswick; where it will be met by the said Richard's and Thomson's Waggon, which will set out for Elizabeth Town where a good Boat will be ready to proceed with Passengers to New York."

The common council orders the clerk "to prepare an advertisement to be inserted in the publick Gazetteers for letting to farm by Publick Out Cry (on the premises) part of the Common Lands, ... Known by Inklanbergh." (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 566). There are 31 lots of 5 acres each, a draft of which may be seen at the clerk's office, July 26 is the date fixed for the sale. —M. G. C., VI: 333.

"The common council orders the clerk to "prepare an advertisement to be inserted in the publick Gazetteers for letting to farm by Publick Out Cry (on the premises) part of the Common Lands, ... Known by Inklanbergh." (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 566). There are 31 lots of 5 acres each, a draft of which may be seen at the clerk's office, July 26 is the date fixed for the sale. —M. G. C., VI: 333.

The advertisement appeared in the Mercury of July 11. The length of lease at time of purchase was fixed at 21 years, but, on petition of the lessees "to be eased in their Rents," this was extended to 42 years. —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 29, 1753.

London, Aug. 8, 1753. London-Gentlemen have been ordered by the board Jan. 12, 1764, and ordered to be delivered to the lessees. —M. G. C., VI: 564. See March 12, 1771.

Domine Archibald Laidlie, of the English church at Vlissirigen in Zeeland, having been recommended by the Amsterdam correspondents of the New York consistory for the position of English minister at New York, the consistory decides to call him to officiate in the "new" Dutch Church (on Nassau St.).—Eccles. Rec. Rev. 1: 573. The call was dated July 20. He was offered $500, New York currency, $200 quarterly sums.—Ibid., 1: 578-80. The opponents of Laidlie wrote to the classis of Amsterdam on July 22, stating their opposition to an English preacher (ibid., VI: 388-91), but the classis maintained its position.—Ibid., VI: 389. It was recorded in the minutes of the classis of Amsterdam, on Oct. 3, that Rev. Mr. Laidlie had informed them he accepted the call.—Ibid., VI: 389. On the same day the classis wrote to the opponents of Laidlie in New York, pointing out that it was desirable to have an English-speaking minister to hold the allegiance of members of the Dutch Church who have been brought up to use English for prayer and so on. "The avenues to the Mormeles of the church might be better protected. —Ibid., VI: 389-90. Rev. Mr. Laidlie was installed by the classis at Amsterdam on Dec. 5, 1763, and signed the "Formulae of Concord." —Ibid., VI: 3907. For further action, see Dec. 7. He arrived in New York on March 29, 1764 (q. v.).

The king's proclamation for a general peace, dated Mar. 21, 1763, is published in New York. "The Militia was ordered out on the Occasion, in which a large number of school children are desired to be in the City Hall and the Peace being first proclaimed in the Fort, His Highness, the Lieutenant Governor, with his Majesty's Council, attended by all the principal Gentlemen of the Place ... preceded by the Company of Grenadiers ... walked in Procession to the Hall, where the Proclamation was repeated." Thursday, Aug. 11, was obtained as a Day of Fasting and Prayer."—The people were urged "to observe the same, by the Performance of such religious Duties as are or shall be appointed for this Solemnity." —N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), July 25, 1763; Col. Min., 462.

With the close of the war, France and Spain in 1761, began the period of greatest commercial activity in the Colonies.—Stevens, Progress of N. Y. in a Century (1876), 56.

Jonathan Watts writes to Gen. Monckton: "The Sale of your furniture [see June 26] is over & our Connoisseurs are of opinion has gone off very well, but I believe you will be of a different mind, owing they say to your paying like a Governor—I believe too there is something in that, tho' I could observe the peace has cheapened things & lessened peoples leesness, as well as made Money scarce."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II, 10 N. Y. Pub. Library.

"We hear the several Regiments just arrived and a great Number of other Troops at Trenton. The Earl of Loudon ordered Up See June 19 to endeavour to check the further Progress of the Savages."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 1, 1763.

The governors of King's College, recognizing the "want of a good and sufficient Grammar School, founded on a proper Plan, and subject to free and voluntary Contributions," announce that they have succeeded in "providing a Gentleman of Character, and known Abilities for the Employment, who propose to open the School, as soon as a convenient Room can be procured, which will be in a few days. ... The School is to be entirely under the direction of the College. ... Those Gentlemen that intend to send their Sons to the said School are desired to apply to Mr. Cushing, the Master, at the College."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Aug. 1, 1763. See also Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 59, 40, 41.

The Earl of Stirling, upon hearing of the appointment of the Earl of Shelburne "to preside at the Board which must have so great a share to the government of a country in which it is my lot to reside," asks permission to send "such hints as occur to me, of measures suitable to this part of the continent ... The making of pig and bar iron, and the cultivation of hemp, are two articles that want encouragement greatly. We are capable of supplying Great Britain with both on laden Ground, and have a large stock to begin with, people of moderate fortunes cannot engage in it; and those of large ones are as yet very few, and their attention is generally given to the pursuit of other objects." —N. J. Hist. Soc. Collections, II: 75-76.

Gen. Amherst writes to Mayor Cruger: "As I am Fitting out some Transports for Immediate Service, & that the Carpenters Employed on them will not Venture to Work without a License from You; I should be glad you would give them Permission, as it is of real Consequence to the King's Service, that those Vessels are got Ready with the utmost Expedition."—From facsimile reprint of the original letter (written in New York) pub'd in Man. Com. Counc. (1860), opp. p. 86.

The Earl of Egremont writes to Sir Jeffrey Amherst that "the King is pleased to grant your request to leave North America, and repair to England, at such time, and in such manner, as shall be most convenient to your Majesty and yourself; for the time being.

According to your Command in N° America, I am to inform you, that your Majesty does not judge proper to determine your commissions at present, but chuses that the powers with which you invest you, should be exercised by Major Genl Gage, on whom, as being the next Officer in the first rank, you, they, that he had course of course."—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 535. See Dec. 10, 1764.

Payment is made to John Holt (qto) "for Printing Twenty Books Containing the Laws of this Corporation on Fine Paper in Gilt Covers."—M. C. C., VI: 333. A copy of these laws, entitled "the Laws of the Corporation of the City of New York, 1698-1705," were established by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, of the City of New-York, Convened in Common-Council, for The good Rule and Government of the Inhabitants and Residents of the said City, and..."
A. LETTER THREATENING LIEUT.-GOV. COLDEN WITH DEATH UNLESS HE FORMALLY REPUDIATES THE STAMP ACT, NOV. 1, 1765. SEE P. 754.

B. LETTER OF WARNING ADDRESSED TO COLDEN ON NOV. 3, 1765, AND FOUND "IN AN OYSTER SHELL AT THE FORT GATE." SEE P. 754.
bearing the date 1763, is in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. The title-page states that they were "published from the City Hall" on Nov. 9, 1763.

This addition indicates that the custom of having the "law" publickly Read "after their enactment and before their being printed (M. C. C., I: 348) was still in force at this time. See also Feb. 11, 1693.

The common council appoints a committee "to Cause the Several Streets lately Relit by this Corporation by John Kingston and others [see Feb. 15], in the out ward of this City to be Regulated and paved."—M. C. C., VI: 356.

The high cost of food supplies is complained of in a petition bearing this date, signed by many of the leading citizens of New York. (See Jan. 18.) A Circulating Library—Consisting of several Thousand Volumes of choice Books in History, Divinity, Travels, Voyages, Novels, &c. is opened by Garrett Noel, a bookseller, next door to the Merchants Coffee House (Wall and Water Sts.)—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Aug. 29, 1763. On Sept. 11, a large addition to the library was announced and "Conditions for subscribing" were given as follows:

1. Each Subscriber to pay Five Dollars a Year, viz. Two Dollars on subscribing, and One Dollar at the Beginning of each Quarter afterwards.

2. No Subscriber to take above one Book at a Time out of the Library.

3. Any Subscriber losing or spoiling a Book shall pay the full Price of it, or the Set, taking the Remainder.

Note.—Books will be delivered out of the Library any Time, except Sundays, and after Store is Shuttered.—Ibid, Sept. 11, 1763.

Colden writes to the Earl of Egremont: «We have a Set of Lawyers in this Province as Insolent, Petulant, and at the same time so well skilled in all the chicanery of the Law as perhaps is to be found anywhere else.» They restrain the distressed judges of ability and skill in the law are required. But "the distinguished Families in so small a Country are so united by intermarriages & otherwise" that in few cases can a cause of any consequence be brought before a judge who "is free from connections with those interested either in the Case or in other Cases similar to it."—Colden Papers, 29, cit. 23.

The minister, elders, and deacons of the Lutheran Church petition Colden for a charter. Embodied in this petition is the narrative of an earlier one, of Feb. 9, 1759 (p. 450),—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), III: 297. See also ibid., III: 298-9. The petition was denied.—See July 13, 1764.

"Bull-beating" (or halting) is to be held in the Bowery Lane near the De Lancey Arms Tavern (kept by George Barr).—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Sept. 26, 1763.

Hugh Gaine Acquaints the Public, that this Day He removes his Shop from Roten Cousins [sic, April 18] to the House he formerly occupied in Hoauser Square.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 3, 1763; Jour. of Hugh Gaine, I, 9 (editorial note). Except for a few weeks (see Sept. 21, 1763), Gaine continued his office here until the publication of the Mercury ceased in 1773.

We are crediting meal, Cow. That the Merchants of this City expect in a few weeks from Ireland, about 6000 Firkins of best Irish Butter; on the arrival of which, 'tis not impossible the Country People who used to supply our Markets, may be obliged to purchase large Quantities of Salt.—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Oct. 3, 1764.

John, Gov. Cothen (see June 25) writes from New York to Gen. Monckton: "It may not be improper to observe to your Excellency, that it has been usual to send over a new Great Seal..."
The Iconography of Manhattan Island

Andrew Maerschalck was the son of Francis (N. Y. Merc., Dec. 22, 1763), who was first appointed city surveyor on June 8, 1733 (q. v.), and who died Sept. 6, 1776 (ibid., Sept. 9, 1776).

The assembly resolves that the corporation of New York City had no right or authority of conferring a "Law for repealing a Law, for assisting all kinds of Villious to be set to sale in the publick Markets of this City, and for establishing a new Assize for that Purpose."—Assembly, Jour., II: 729-30. A bill making void this repeal was passed by the assembly on Dec. 14.—Ibid., II: 737. There is no record of its receiving the royal assent.

The Gazette reports the death, in Jamaica, L. I., of a very old man, John Cockeer. He "often said he was a soldier in the Fort in Governor Leyser's [Leisler's] Time... and had often shot Squirlis, Quails, &c. on or near Pot Baker's Hill in this City, which was then a Wilderness."—N. Y. Gen. (Weymann), Nov. 28, 1763. Pot Baker's (Potters') Hill rose from the west shore of Little Collect Pond (see Pl. 58-5, Vol. I). The present hall of records is built on the levelled site of its crest.—See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 967. Patrick Henry argues the "Parsons Case" in Virginia.—Winsor, Dec., Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., III: 72.

The common council orders "That the Committee for Causing the City Hall to be Repaired, have Liberty To Borrow Upon Interest for the use of this Corporation the sum of Five Hundred Pounds."—M. C. VII, 360. See May 11, 1764.

The Grocers write to the lords of trade. "Without doubt much illicit Trade is carried on in this place, and, tho' more of it has been detected and punished in this Port, than any of the other Colonies, I am persuaded there is not less among them, in proportion to the Trade. That the officers of the Customs in this Port, are more careful than in the others, I believe from this observation, that the illicit Traders send their vessels to the nearest port to the Eastward or Westward of this Port, from whence they import their cargoes, with proper clearances & certificates that the goods are legally imported..."

The Merchants in this place complain, that there is not the same care taken to prevent illegal Trade in Delaware River, and to the Eastward that is in this Port, whereby the Merchants in those parts are able to undersell them, and they lose their Trade, and that this place will be impoverished, while the others grow Rich."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 88-89.

Anticipating the early arrival of Rev. Archibald Laidlie (see July 16), the consistory of the Dutch Church on Nassau St. decides that "the proposed gallery" (see May 3, 1762) shall be constructed. The work was entrusted to Messrs. Hardenbrook and Brestede, carpenters.—Isec. Eclett, Ref., III: 599. On Jan. 8, 1764, it was resolved "That the Opposers of this Gallery (see June 16) be builded on the Church Ground upon the Corner of Division Street."—Trin. Min. (Weymann), Oct. 11, 1763.

The New-York Gazette orders that "Newhit of the British forces, is in New York, urging the government of this province to raise 1,400 men for employment on the frontiers.—Assembly, Jour., II: 721.

At some period prior to this date, the Dove Tavern was established at what is now the north-west corner of Third Ave. and 66th St.—New-York (see, Oct. 15, 1763). Although it was a popular landmark for over thirty years, the names of only two proprietors are known to us,—those of Abraham Rice, who occupied the premises prior to 1771, and Alexander McCauley, who was there for a time prior to 1789 (see Nov. 6, 1789). Near here, Nathaniel Hale was executed on Sept. 22, 1776 (q. v.). This public house was kept here under the same name as late as 1798.—M. G. C. (MS.), XII: 284.

Electrical experiments are advertised to begin at 11 o'clock at the "Exchange." Tickets are sold at "the Gentleman's Coffee House," and by H. Gaine.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 11, 1763.

New-York Gazette orders that "Mr. Thach of Copper as will be found Necessary for Finishing the same and to remit to Mr. Henry Cruger in Bristol the Balance of his Account Against this Corporation for Copper Herefore purchased of him [see April 20] and Charge the said Remittance to this Corporation."—M. C. VII, 537. See Dec. 5, 1763.

Resolved Oct. 13, 1764, that the Cape Henry Light-House "shall be twenty-one feet deep, and not less than eleven feet high. The South gallery to be fifteen feet deep and of the same height." The supporting posts, as originally proposed, were to be of red cedar from Georgia. The committee and carpenters were to provide such posts for the gallery as they deemed best, and "the Board of the City" was instructed to "assign the same."—Ibid., III: 5909, 3912. In the records of March 8 and 14, a "newly approved plan" is mentioned on the basis of which the consistory was requested to proceed with the work. A committee of three also was appointed to "arrange the benches in the order they now are In relation to the pulpit," and this "improved plan" was presented on March 25.—Ibid., III: 3915, 3916. On May 1, 1764, the consistory resolved "That the pillars of the gallery be carried through to the roof of the church to support the same," a procedure that made it necessary "to take off the roof." The sum of £600 was borrowed from Gerardus W. Beckman "to complete the New Church."—Ibid., III: 3913 (Nov. 12, 1763) shall be twenty-one feet deep, and not less than eleven feet high. The South gallery to be fifteen feet deep and of the same height."—A Discourse delivered in the North Reformed Dutch Church (Collegiate), in Aug., 1862 (1857), 28-29.

In a letter to Gen. Monckton, in England, Daniel Hornsmanden says: "Our Assembly have been somewhat untoward as to Genl. Arnolds Rears in North-America,"—N. Y. Gen. (Weymann), Nov. 21, 1763; Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., IV: 703; VIII: 463.

The common council appoints Andrew Maerschalck and Gerard Baunier "public surveyors of this City."—M. G. C., V: 358.
Albany, Ulster & Dutchess as the Govt shall direct."—Chalmers Papers, IV, in N. Y. Pub. Library.

"We are passing many Bills but sadly puzzle to make a Council & after all to have a whole Branch of the Legislature trusted in the hands of three Men, the majority of five, is too much."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II.

A provincial act is passed "to Regulate the Pilots and Establish their Pilotage under Sandy Hook and the port of New York..." It provides for the appointment of a master and three or more wardens of this port.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 711. As early as June 10, 1758, a master and eight wardens of the port had been appointed.—Stevens, Chamber of Commerce Records, 1768-1784 (1867), 127.

There is presented, in the assembly, a bill entitled "An Act to prevent the Practice of Cock-fighting." It had a first and a second reading, but there is no record of its passage.—Assemb. Jour: II: 737.

The provincial council orders a proclamation to be issued assuring the right of New York province to consider the Connecticut River as its eastern boundary. It was issued on Dec. 28.—Col. Coun. Min., 463, 535. See, further, July 20, 1764.

Capt John Montresor reports: "This day arrived at New York in 26 days, by the Ship Dispatches from Col. Gladwin, command-er of the garrison thereof to the Commander in Chief."—Montresor's Jour. op. cit., 252-53. Gen. Gage, writing to Col. Bradford under date of Dec. 25, also gives the 16th as the date of Montresor's arrival.—Gen. Gage's Letters (MS.) op. cit.

William Livingston and William Smith, Jr. are paid £11711110 for revising the laws of this colony from 1725 to 1764.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 734. The revision was ordered on Nov. 8, 1760 (g.v.) and the laws were published in 1764 (g.v.).

A provincial act is passed providing for a lottery to raise £5,000 "to be laid out, in a Bounty on Hemp to be raised in this Colony." Elias de Gruuche and John Long are appointed "Inspectors of all Hemp on which a Bounty is to be allowed."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 737-39.

Anticipating the completion of the Sandy Hook lighthouse (see June 11, 1764), an act is passed "to lay a Duty of Tonnage on Vessels for Defraying the Expense of the Light-House on Sandy Hook," the money to be applied for buying oil, tallow, coal, etc., and for the services of a keeper.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 714-45.

An act is passed to prevent hunting with firearms in the city of New York. Any person "convicted before any member of His Majesty's Grand Jury" of shooting a man, woman, or other firearm without license "shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of Twenty Shillings."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 745, 749.

Coldea signs a bill passed by the assembly to punish more effectually idle and disorderly persons who make it a practice to rob and plunder in the orchards, gardens, cornfields, and inclosures, in the Out-Ward.—Assemb. Jour, II: 730, 738.

"At the Sign of the fry'd Oysters and Platter," opposite the Moravian Meeting House, in Fair (Fulton) St., fried and pickled oysters are "served in or out of the House."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 26, 1765. Ten years later this, or a similar sign, hung out from, a tavern at Whitehall. See Nov. 20, 1773.

1764

At this about time, Hargreaves invented the spinning-jenny.

Francis Bernard, in his Principles of Law and Polity applicable to the British Colonies in America, written in the spring of 1764, speaks of the advantage of unifying the administration of the colonies. Bernard presents 97 proposals, among which are these: Representatives should have been called to Westminster, and a convention parliament thus organized should have acted to define constitutional relations to a Colony and mother country; warnings heard in the colonies in 1764 should be heeded; under existing cir-cumstances the colonies consider that taxation has been sprung on them.—From Bernard's Select Letters on the Trade and Government of Am. (London, 1774).

The first volume of the Journal of the Votes and Proceedings of the General Assembly of the Colony of New York, covering the period from 1761 to 1734, inclusive, is published by order of the general assem-bly, by Hugh Gage at his own Expence and Printing Office at the Bible & Crown, in Hanover Square." The second volume, covering the years 1734 to 1765, was published by him in 1766. In an appendix to this Journal, it is stated: "Joanasmuch as a few of the Votes and Proceedings of the General Assembly, relative to the Affair of Capt. Jacob Leisler, are missing, and consequently the public not fully informed, as to the Justice or Injustice of his Suffering: It was therefore thought necessary, for the Satisfaction of the Public, and in Justice to the Family and Descendants of the said Capt. Leisler, to publish the following Act of Parliament, relating to that Catastrophe." Then follows the Act of 66 Wm. III (1695) for reversing the attainder of Jacob Leisler and others. Leisler was executed 73 years before this publication of the act.—See May 16, 1691.

By an order of the "Post-Masters General," issued by "James Parker, Comptroller," from the general post-office at Woodbridge, N. J., mail between New York and Philadelphia is to be delivered three times per week, weather permitting. A "Post Rider with the Mail for Philadelphia" will leave New York at one o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. "Letters will pass from one to the other in less than 24 Hours."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 2, 1764. See also N. J. Arch., 1st ser., Vol. XXIV (Newspaper Extracts, Vol. V), 291.

Thomas Brookes advertises for sale a house and lot in William St., "next Door to the Roe-Buck," evidently a tavern.—N. Y. Gaz (Weyman), Jan. 2, 1764. On Dec. 4, 1764, Mr. Le Gry, a fencing and dancing master, proposed to open a school in the house of John Elliott, at the upper end of Horse and Cart St.—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 4, 1764.

An attack on the jail by soldiers is thus described in the Post-Boy: "On Sunday night last, the City was alarm'd by the Ringing of the Bell, and the Cry of Fire, but it prov'd to be a Riot of a Party of Soldiers to Secure a Prisoner for [Major] Groger [Swanger] from the New Goal in this City. . . . In this Riot a few Persons were wounded or hurt, and One Serjeant was killed." According to the prisoners, Mr. Mills, the keeper (see Jan. 17, 1737), refused the soldiers' demand for the keys and struggled with them until he was cut and bruised. Then they broke "all the Locks from the Doors from the Cupola down to the Dungeons, not excepting those where Criminals for the most atrocious Offences were confin'd."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 19, 1764. On Jan. 25, five of the soldiers were found guilty by the general court of "breaking the goal and rescuing Major Rogers." They declared "the Major was privy to the Design."— Ibid., Jan. 26, 1764.

"We hear that one Company of the New-York Provincial march'd a fortnight ago, another last Sunday, and that the remainder will follow in a few Days. They are all clothed in the most complete manner for the Service."—N. Y. Gaz (Weyman), Jan. 17, 1764.

The Rev. George Whitefield left the city for Boston. He "has spent seven Weeks with us preaching twice a Week to more general Acceptance than ever; and been treated with great Respect by many of the Gentlemen, and Merchants of this Place."—N. Y. Gaz (Weyman), Jan. 21, 1764.

Jonathan Watts writes again to Monckton: "You have said nothing about the House at Greenwych of course it is supposed to remain with you—Gen' Gage is at a Loss for a House & I am sure would be glad of the use of it, till you want it your self."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II. On March 11 (g.v.), Watts again wrote to Monckton on this subject.

It is reported that "there are more Horses now to be let, in this City, than have been at any Time for 7 years past." The commerce of the continent is said to be "in a languishing condition; our Debt in Europe increases; our Power to pay it off decreases. To find out the Causes, and point out a Remedy for this great misfortune of the Object of the most Serious Consideration to every Friend to Great-Britain and North America; for which End, the Merchants of this City had publick Notice to assemble on Friday last, at Mr Burn's Long-Room where a very considerable Body of them met, and appointed a Committee to the utmost of this Province, representing the Decline of Trade, and the Dis-tresses of the Merchants and Traders of this City; praying its Inter-position with the Parliament of Great Britain; And as every Gentle-man who is a Friend to the Trade of our Mother Country, or has Property here in this Province, must exercise himself in the Success of this undertaking, it is hoped that they will contribute
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

Writing from New York to Sir William Johnson concerning Apr. the Indian troubles, Gen. Gage says: "The Provinces have been 1 very backward in affording that Assistance so much for their Interest to do. Connecticut however has agreed to raise 200 men, Jersey heard of the Number, and I only have 400 Tots for Colonel Bradstreet to begin his Campaign, And that he may now push on as fast as he pleases, I have put all the Forces from Albany Westward under his Command. The Number of Indians I shall desire of you for this Army, I will mention in my next, when I have settled with Colonel Bouquet, the operations to the Southward. But the Indians now have plaid their old Tricks, voted the men, & then quarrelled with the Governor about the Supplies."—Gen. Gage Letters (M.S.).

Rev. Archibald Laidle (see Mar. 29) produces his credentials before the consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church. "As the New Dutch Church was rendered unfit for service by Reason of Turning the pews on a new plan for building three Gal- laries, it was agreed to Refer Indicating MT Laidle into the Co- gregation until the Ground pews in the New Church were set in their proper place."—journals of the proceedings of the R. P. Dutch Church, in N.Y. Hist. Soc. He was inducted on Apr. 15 (9.5.). For the account of the remodelling of this church, see Dec. 7, 1763.

Mr. Huse, American born and educated in Boston, "has lately got a seat in the House of Commons; but instead of standing an Advocate for his injured country ... to the business of his seat, he has been in the House of Commons, to lay a Tax on the Colonies, which will amount to $5000 per Ann. Sterling." He says the colonists are well able to pay the money.—N.Y. Merc, April 2, 1764.

An advertisement reads: "To Be Let, The Play-House at the upper End of the Broad-Way, facing the Commons, has lately been improved, and lately Benjamin Russell (see April 24, 1765) has entered into the Publick, That he now offers to let for Public Entertainment of Company, where constant Attendance is given, and every Thing that is genteel and agreeable provided. . . . The best of Madeira Wine, Mead, Cakes, &c. Pies and Tarts will be drawn from Seven in the Evening till Nine at Night."—N.Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 14, 1765. For a history of this tavern, which later became famous as Montague's, see April 5, 1754.

The London Coffee House, on the new dock, is mentioned in an advertisement. This was probably at Wall and Water Sts. for, in 1768, when an auction of "New and Old Books" was announced to be held there, the house was described as "opposite the Merchants Coffee-House"—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 12, 1764; N.Y. Merc., Oct. 31, 1768. This was evidently the same tavern as the "Duke of Cumberland."—

Gen. Gage, writing from New York to Col. Bradstreet, says: "... new information from the Provinciaels is, that New-York promises to make up their Troops 500 complete, Jersey has voted four Companies of Sixty each, and I expect 500 from Canada ... I press the Governors to have all their People ready by the Time the Navigation is practicable, which I hope will be soon, if it can't posi- tively be done; I must incline an Answer is given by the Assembly of Pennsylvania, which must come shortly. The Assembly have pre- sented some Bills, which the Gov't has returned with Amendments. This is all we yet know ... I believe your Information is wrong about the Deagus of the Massachusetts Government. They do not chuse to assist, but to throw the Expense on the Governments who are concerned more than themselves, by being more exposed to the Enemy's Incursions."—Gen. Gage's Letters (M.S.).

Twenty-five of the "Indians lately taken by the Party sent out by Sir William Johnson" arrive at New York. They are "properly taken care of by being lodged and regularly confining in separate Apartments in our New-Gold, with Iron (instead of Leather) Moccasins at their Heels—at which they give a very snearing and insulting Cast of the Features."—N.Y. Gaz. (Weyman), March 26, 1764; Colonial Papers in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1878), XI: 319.

Rev. Archibald Laidle (see July 16, 1765) arrives at New York, to officiate as English-speaking minister in the Dutch Church on Nassau St. He produced his credentials before the consistory on Apr. 1 (q.v.)—Eccles. Reg., VI: 5947; Journal of the proceedings of the R. P. Dutch Church, ed. cit. He was inducted into the position on April 2 (q.v.). It was his intention occasionally in Dutch. The Dutch Psalms were being translated, "to enable both English and Dutch to sing together."—N.Y. Gaz. (Weyman), April 16, 1764. Regarding the English verification of the Psalms, then in Dutch, see Eccles. Reg., VI: 5921, 5922, 5931.

Ordered that the Church Wardens or one of them have power to take up upon Interest the sum of One thousand pounds towards building the New Church [see Nov. 3, 1765] upon the best Terms they Can not exceeding Six F£ Cent Interest [f£].—_Trin. Misc. (Apr. 30, 1766), this order was authorized to borrow for the same purpose a sum not exceeding £3,000.—Ibid. On June 7, 1765, the order was repeated for another £5,000, and on March 7, 1766, a similar one was passed, the sum this time being £2,150.—Ibid. The corner-stone of the church was laid on May 14, 1764. [p. 92.]

Rev. Laidij passes a measure modifying the Sugar Act of 1763 [see Feb. 21, 1773]. The duty "upon all molasses and syrups of the growth, product, or manufacture of any foreign American colony or plantation imported into the British colonies and plantations in America" is reduced from 6d. to 3d. per gallon, while the importation of all rum and spirits from the same source is prohibited. It was especially provided that the revenue accruing from the duties should be reserved and "from time to time disposed of by parliament, towards defraying the necessary expenses, of defending, protecting, and securing, the British colonies and plantations in America, and for the purpose to become effective on Sept. 29._Parliamentary Hist., XI: 1427-30. 13

Rev. Archibald Laidij's induction takes place this Sunday morning at the New Dutch Church (Nassau St.). In the afternoon he preached to an audience of "about four thousand souls."—_Jour. of the proceedings of the Rey. Prat, Dutch Church.

The king gives his assent to the bill "for preventing such paper bills of credit, as may hereafter be issued within any of his Majesty's colonies or plantations in America, from being made legal tender in payment of money."—_Ann. Reg. (1764), 65. For the action of the assembly, see April 19.

Having heard that Parliament intends to restrain the paper currency of all the colonies [see April 19], the assembly resolves "that if the said plan be carried into execution, it will not only highly reflect on the Credit, Honour, and Punctuality of this colony, but also reduce it to a State of Bankruptcy." The committee of correspondence is ordered to transmit to the colony's agent in Great Britain a "proper State of the Paper Currency of the present Colony."—_Jour. 1764, II: 735-36.

The merchants of the city present to the assembly a memorial which they have prepared to be forwarded to parliament. The memorial states: That the declining State of the Commerce of this and the other Northern Colonies, from the present rigorous Executions of the Statute of the sixth of his late Majesty George the Second, called the Sugar Act [see Feb. 21, 1773], is become an Object of such serious and universal Concern, that the Mercantile Part of the Community who are more immediately interested, would at so melancholy a Juncture, be lost to all Sense of Duty to their Country and themselves, were they to remain silent Spectators of the impending Ruin .... they have for many Year past carried on a very beneficial Traffick with several of the foreign Sugar Islands, as well before as since the Act, which by imposing Duties that amount to a Prohibition, would long since have deprived them of the Life and Support of their Commerce and Credit, had they been severely exacted; for your Memorialists conceive .... that the Suppression of their Trade with the foreign Sugar Islands, by whatsoever Means effected, must necessarily end not only in the utter impoverishment of his Majesty's Northern Colonies, and the Destruction of their Navigation, but in the greatest Detriment of the British Manufactures and Artificers, and the great Diminution of the Trade, Power, Wealth, and naval Strength of Great Britain." The merchants give a detailed account of the general commerce of the northern colonies, and then declare that if this "dreaded Law be revived or continued," it must be an "Act of Unreason" to the Trade of those Countries "not only prejudicial to Great Britain and ruinous to her Colonies .... The Incapacity of making good our Payments, already severely felt, must necessarily sink our Credit, and gradually decrease our Importance from Great Britain, the Members of Manufactures will remain without Employ, and be obliged to transport themselves .... to foreign Parts for a Subsistence."

"The Manufacturing Towns, those Springs of British Opulence, decay. The Rents of Lands, Iron Works, and Collieries, fall; and Trade, in general, languish and decline .... the Continuation of the Sugar Act will be productive of the destruction and ruin of the Subjects of Great-Britain and those of the several European States, who have dependent Plantations in the Islands of the West-India Seas." The assembly approves of the memorial and resolves to direct the colony's agent in Great Britain "to give all possible Opportunity of suggesting the Revocation of the said Act."—_Assembly Jour., II: 749-54. News of parliament's action, on April 6 (p. 6), had not yet reached New York. For the action of the merchants at the time of the Stamp Act, see Oct. 31, 1765.

The legislature passes an act for raising 180 men "to be Employed against the Enemy Indians and other purposes therein mentioned." This law regulates the enlistment of the men, their pay, their equipment, the length of service, and the penalty for desertion.—_Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 757-65.

It is resolved by Trinity vestry "that a Gallery be Erected on Each Side of the Organ above the present Galleries for the use of the Charity Scholars."—_Trin. Min. (M.S.).

All the medicines, instruments, and utensils "belonging to his Majesty's Hospital" at the Battery, are to be sold at auction on this day—_N. Y. Merc., April 2, 1764.

The Governors of King will appoint a committee "to inquire into the Grounds forming the South side of the College within a Board Fence."—_Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 37-38. See also May, 1763.

The governments of King's college order that "a condutor be fixed to the capsels of the college, as a safeguard against lightning."—_Moore, Historical Sketch of Columbia College, 46.

Colden pays "Blandell on Accr of Repairs to 9th Fort Colours," £5.—From Cadwallader Colden's Account Book (M.S.), kept by his son, now in the archives of the N. Y. Hist Soc. Christopher Blandell was the custodian of ammunition and stores at the fort whose salary ceased with the disbanding of the independent companies in 1761. He continued to serve, however, "in hopes of being some how provided for."—From a letter of Colden to Gen. Monkton in Aspinwall Papers, 98.

It is ordered by the council that all "Fifty Lamps and Lamp Posts" be purchased and "Erected in some of the most public Streets in This City, where its Conceited they will be most beneficial."—_M. C. C., IV: 377. Fifty pounds were paid for these on Aug. 21.—_Ibid., VII: 384. The following year (Jan. 4), 50 more were ordered.—_Ibid., VII: 403. See also Dec. 31, 1761.

The city treasurer is ordered to pay £2,000 to Whitehead Hicks, "out of the moneys paid into his hands by the Church Wardens of this City and raised and Collected by Virtue of an Act of the Governor Council and General Assembly of this Province Lately made and Published, Entituled an Act to Impover & Enable the Mayor Recorder and Aldermen of the City of New York to order the raising a Sum not Exceeding fourteen hundred pounds for the purposes within mentioned."—_Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 719-20. Alderman Hicks is to apply this money "towards Rebuilding the City Hall." The board agrees to return it "to the said Treasurer or Chamberlain as Soon as the Same shall be by him required,"_M. C. C., VII: 755-56. On Aug. 29, Hicks was commissioned to receive £2,150 more for the same purpose.—_Ibid., VII: 536-37. See Nov. 9, 1764, and May 3, 1765.

Cornelius P. Low, a merchant, petitions the common council for a water lot "fronting his Lot of Ground on the Southwesterly Corner of Burneys Key," in the East Ward. It is described as about 35 feet wide "in Front on said Key" and about 50 feet wide "on the Southwesterly Side of the said Key Fronting the Street on the East expecting the said Key, in the East Ward. It is described as about 35 feet wide "in Front on said Key" and about 50 feet wide "on the Southwesterly Side of the said Lott Fronting the Street on the Eastside of the Slip in Rotten Row" (Hunters Key—see Vol. I, Pl. 34). He proposes building a "Pier Fronting the said Street and a part of the Slip said Slip," after the lot's lying on the Westside of the said Pier will be Entirely Secure from Receiving any Damage from the Ice in Winter Season," and for which purpose the pier will have to be "Built In the most Substantial manner in order To Withstand The Great Quantities of Ice Which in Winter Seasons With The Tide of Ebb Takes It up. A fortnight was appointed to make inquiry."—_M. C. C., IV: 577-78. Full report by this council was made on Jan. 25, 1765, stating their approval. of the proposal, and advising that, to prevent the "filling up the May Docks on each side," he should leave "a Vancency of Forty Foot 11 Between the present Dock and the said Peer so be to Built for the Tides way which vacancy to be kept by the User the same," and that he should "Leave Forty one feet for the End of the said Peer and Lott Above mentioned For a Street to be Opened when therunto Required By this Corporation."—ibid., VI: 405-6. On Oct. 28, the clerk of the board produced "the Draft of a grant of a Water Lott to Cornelius P: Liddye living in the East River contiguous to his house and Ground front-Aging the present Coffee house," and it was approved for execution.—
In 1796, Mr. Low, stated in a petition that, "upon Calculating the Expense he shall be put to" in extending a pier into the East River, "and the Risque of having the same Over set or destroyed by the Ice Whileit Building," he found the terms of his grant
"very Inadequate to such Expanse and Risque." He asked for the
"Priviledge of the Wharage of one Vessel on the Southwestern side of the said pier as Long as the Soil on that Side shall Remain ungranted with such further Time for Completing the same pier as this Board shall think Reasonable."—ibid., VII: 15-
14. The action of the board on this petition does not appear in the Minutes; it was probably involved in their consideration of the petition of Robert Murray.—See July 24, 1766.
14 A stone monument of Charles Ward Apthorp is under construction.
T. N. Merc., May 21, 1764. "He called the Bloomingtondale property
"Elmwood," and here he dispensed lavish hospitality. He died in the mansion in 1797... The building was in its architecture. Its recessed portico with Corinthian columns and slender pillars, on either side of the entrance, demanded the admiration of architects
even to the time of its destruction" (in 1886, q.v.).—
Mott, The N.Y. of Yesterday, 8-15. During the Revolution Howe made his headquarters here.—Lamb, Hist. City of N.Y., II: 128-
29. "The plot containing the mansion was sold to William Jauney, an Englishman and rich merchant, in 1799, with a right of way in Apthorp Lane leading from the Road to the river. The Elmwood estate was bequeathed in 1828 to Herman Jauney Thorne."— Mott, op. cit., 15. See also March 20, 1780. It became "Elm Park,
"an inn and pleasure resort, in 1868. The location of the Apthorp house was south of 91st St. See Atlas of Columbus Ave. See 1868; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948; Pl. 177, Vol. III;
Mag. of Am. Hist. (1868), XIV: 225, 229; Mem. Hist. N.Y., III: 432.
The earliest organized action against colonial taxation by the crown is seen in the instructions given by the town of Bostoon to its representatives, on July 20, 1769. The Town of London, June The lighthouse at Sandy Hook (see March 13, 1761) has 11 been completed and is now lighted for the first time. "The House is of an Octagon Figure, having eight equal Sides; The Diameter at the Base, 23 Feet; and at the Top of the Wall 15 Feet. The Lantern is 9 Feet high; the Circumference 33 Feet. The whole Construction of the Lantern is Iron; the Top covered with Copper. There are 48 Oil Blazes. The Building from the Surface is Nine Stories; the whole from Bottom to Top, 107 Feet. This Structure, was undertaken by M: Isaac Conno, of this City; and was carried on with all the Expedition that the Difficulty attending it, and the Want of the Occasion could possibly admit of—and is judged to be masterly finished."—N. T. Merc., June 18, 1764. A duty of 3d. per ton was laid on the tonnage of ships to maintain it. This produced for the first year £800, and the expenses were £413:8:6d. for the second ed.), I: 480.
17 In a memorial to the common council, Robert Leake,
the "Commissary General of Stores and Provisions for His Majesty's Forces in North America," states that he purchased a lot belonging to Mr. Jenkinson on the North River on which to build a store-house, and it appears the work on the building is suspended. The surveyors have stated that "the New Dock is laid too far into the Slip," his remedy for this is "to incline farther to the northward.
From the original memorial (MS.), endorsed "filed June 28th 1764 not entered," in city clerk's record-room.
"We are informed that the New-York Independent Companies, June which have been reduced since the peace, are again to be put in commission on an entire new plan to garrison this Province in the settlement of Weyman, N. Diam., is a strong fortress for the End of the said Peer and Lott Above mentioned For a Street to be Opened when therunto Required By this Corporation."—ibid., VI: 405-6. On Oct. 28, the clerk of the board produced "the Draft of a grant of a Water Lott to Cornelius P: Liddye living in the East River contiguous to his house and Ground front-Aging the present Coffee house," and it was approved for execution.—
On Feb. 27, 1766, Mr. Low, stated in a petition that, "upon Calculating the Expense he shall be put to" in extending a pier into the East River, "and the Risque of having the same Over set or destroyed by the Ice Whileit Building," he found the terms of his grant
"very Inadequate to such Expanse and Risque." He asked for the
"Priviledge of the Wharage of one Vessel on the Southwestern side of the said pier as Long as the Soil on that Side shall Remain ungranted with such further Time for Completing the same pier as this Board shall think Reasonable."—ibid., VII: 15-
14. The action of the board on this petition does not appear in the Minutes; it was probably involved in their consideration of the petition of Robert Murray.—See July 24, 1766.
14 A stone monument of Charles Ward Apthorp is under construction.
T. N. Merc., May 21, 1764. "He called the Bloomingtondale property
"Elmwood," and here he dispensed lavish hospitality. He died in the mansion in 1797... The building was in its architecture. Its recessed portico with Corinthian columns and slender pillars, on either side of the entrance, demanded the admiration of architects
even to the time of its destruction" (in 1886, q.v.).—
Mott, The N.Y. of Yesterday, 8-15. During the Revolution Howe
made his headquarters here.—Lamb, Hist. City of N.Y., II: 128-
29. "The plot containing the mansion was sold to William Jauney, an Englishman and rich merchant, in 1799, with a right of way in Apthorp Lane leading from the Road to the river. The Elmwood estate was bequeathed in 1828 to Herman Jauney Thorne."— Mott, op. cit., 15. See also March 20, 1780. It became "Elm Park,
"an inn and pleasure resort, in 1868. The location of the Apthorp house was south of 91st St. See Atlas of Columbus Ave. See 1868; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 948; Pl. 177, Vol. III;
Mag. of Am. Hist. (1868), XIV: 225, 229; Mem. Hist. N.Y., III: 432.
The earliest organized action against colonial taxation by the crown is seen in the instructions given by the town of Bostoon to its representatives, on July 20, 1769. The Town of London, June The lighthouse at Sandy Hook (see March 13, 1761) has 11 been completed and is now lighted for the first time. "The House is of an Octagon Figure, having eight equal Sides; The Diameter at the Base, 23 Feet; and at the Top of the Wall 15 Feet. The Lantern is 9 Feet high; the Circumference 33 Feet. The whole Construction of the Lantern is Iron; the Top covered with Copper. There are 48 Oil Blazes. The Building from the Surface is Nine Stories; the whole from Bottom to Top, 107 Feet. This Structure, was undertaken by M: Isaac Conno, of this City; and was carried on with all the Expedition that the Difficulty attending it, and the Want of the Occasion could possibly admit of—and is judged to be masterly finished."—N. T. Merc., June 18, 1764. A duty of 3d. per ton was laid on the tonnage of ships to maintain it. This produced for the first year £800, and the expenses were £413:8:6d. for the second ed.), I: 480.
17 In a memorial to the common council, Robert Leake,
the "Commissary General of Stores and Provisions for His Majesty's Forces in North America," states that he purchased a lot belonging to Mr. Jenkinson on the North River on which to build a store-house, and it appears the work on the building is suspended. The surveyors have stated that "the New Dock is laid too far into the Slip," his remedy for this is "to incline farther to the northward.
From the original memorial (MS.), endorsed "filed June 28th 1764
not entered," in city clerk's record-room.
"We are informed that the New-York Independent Companies, June which have been reduced since the peace, are again to be put in commission on an entire new plan to garrison this Province in the settlement of Weyman, N. Diam., is a strong fortress for the End of the said Peer and Lott Above mentioned For a Street to be Opened when therunto Required By this Corporation."—ibid., VI: 405-6. On Oct. 28, the clerk of the board produced "the Draft of a grant of a Water Lott to Cornelius P: Liddye living in the East River contiguous to his house and Ground front-Aging the present Coffee house," and it was approved for execution.—
There are sold at public auction (see June 29) "in the New Dutch Church 58 pews in the Gallery and 12 pews below all for a Life." The accession of the English preachers, Laudie (see April 15), has been "of the utmost Consequence," and has brought together the "Scattered Congregation" (see Jan. 18, 1763), so that it has "grown so numerous that there was not half Vacant pews enough to Supply the people."—Jour. of the proceedings of the Ref. Pri. Dutch Church.

In a petition to the king, Sir James Jay, in behalf of the governors of King's College (see Aug. 19, 1764), presents a review of the origin, progress, and present condition of the college. He states sundry of its provisions concerning donations from the assembly, from the Soc. for Propagating the Gospel (£500), and from individuals, and to the necessity of making an appeal for funds in England, which has resulted in raising about £5,000, clear of expenses, including the king's own donation of £100. Still further assistance is necessary "to carry on the design even in its present confined manner much less to render it of more extensive and general utility." And, Mr. Jay continues, "considering that the Universities in Britain and Ireland were liberally endowed with lands, by your Majy's Illustrious Predecessors and relying on the recent success of the advancement of Religion and useful knowledge . . ." he is encouraged to petition that the king "will be pleased to grant twenty thousand Acres of land in the Province of New York, free of the conditions of cultivation and Quit Rents to the Govt of the College . . . for the use and behoof of the College, and that he will cause to locate the quantity of lands allowed the said College out of any of the Crown Lands in the said province before any person or persons who have obtained orders for lands in the said province, are permitted to locate the same . . ."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 643-45.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "That a balency be made on the New Church such as it is on the Old English Church."—Eccles. Rec., VII: 1941-42. See Dec. 7, 1763.

The king in council orders that the west bank of the river Connecticut shall be the boundary between New York and New Hampshire—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 754. This was announced by proclamation to New York City on April 10, 1765 (p. 9).—Col. Coun. Min., 512. On June 15, 1772, Gov. Tryon wrote to the governor of New Hampshire relative to the meeting of commissioners for settling the line.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 808.

The house of commons having passed a resolution to the effect that "it may be proper to charge certain staple duties in the . . . Colonies and Plantations," the Earl of Halifax orders the governors of America to send in England "a list of all instruments made use of in public transactions, law proceedings, Grants, conveyances, securities of Land or money within your Govr, with proper and sufficient indentures to a trade, to the same," so as to see fit to pass a law in accordance with the above resolution, it may be put into effect "in the most effectual and least burdensome manner."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 646. The Stamp Act was passed on March 22, 1765 (q. v.).

Inhabitants residing in and near Ferry St. in Montgomery Ward present a petition to the common council, stating "that they are and have frequently been overflowed with Water Occasioned from the Drain or Canal in said Street not Being Sufficient or Large Enough to discharge the Great Confluence of Waters that Descend to it from the Neighbouring Elevated Streets and Lanes." They ask for relief and a committee is appointed to investigate.—M. C. G., VII: 386. On Sept. 10, it was ordered that the city contribute £100 toward enlarging the drain.—Ibid., VI: 388.

The minutes of the consistory of the Dutch Church of New York state that on this day "A plan of the ground of the High Dutch Church at St. Mark's, opposite to which Dominie Kern was pastore was shown." By this, it was found that the German Reformed Church encroached several feet upon ground belonging to the Dutch Church. It was resolved "that these feet be leased to them for fifteen years for a compensation of a shilling a year."—Mem. Rec., VI: 1946. A German Reformed Church was converted to theatre, built in 1752, and sold to this congregation in 1758. It stood on the site of the present 64-66 Nassau St., on the east side of the street, between Maiden Lane and John St.—See 1758; and description of Pl. 30, II: 265.

M. de Genin old Rope Walk [see May 25, 1763], in the Fields, is now in the Possession of Neal Shaw, who carries on the Rope-making Business as usual."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 27, 1764.

A new pillory "with a large Wooden Cage behind it" is being erected "between the New Goal and the Work House" (see Feb. 10). The cage is said to be designed "for disorderly Boys, Negroes, &c, who publickly break the Sabbath."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 10, 1764.

William Adams, at the Sign of General Monckton, upon the New Docks, "in the House formerly occupied by Mr. Marshall," offers good entertainment. Adams "had lived two Years with General Monckton; also had been steward and Butler to the Hon. James Hamilton." Having lived in the "best Families," he feels that he knows how to "attend Gentlemen in a proper Manner."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 5. This house was formerly known as the Sun Tavern.

The subject of a private ferry or ferries to Jersey becomes a matter of official notice. The common council appoints a committee "to take into Consideration Whether those People Residing in that part of Jersey Called powelus's Hook have any Right to ferriage to and from this City."—M. C. G., VI: 388. See June 28, 1764; May 3, 1765.

The assembly sends an address to the lieutenant-governour, in reply to a message from him. One of the recommendations made by Colles was the law granting a bounty on hemp. This the assembly agrees to do," still hoping that a Step may be put to those Measures, which if carried into Execution, will oblige us to think, that nothing but extreme Poverty can preserve us from the most insupportable Bondage.

"We hope, your Honours will join with us, in an Endeavour to secure that great Badge of English Liberty, of being taxed only with our own Consent, to which we conceive, all his Majesty's Subjects at home and abroad equally invidious."—Assemb. Jour., II: 750. Colen, in answer to the address said: "The Method you now take in, is in my Opinion, improper; however I shall do nothing to prevent your making a Representation of the State of this Colony, which you think best: May your Proceedings tend to the Benefit of the People you represent."—Ibid., II: 752. See Sept. 20.

"We have received a Piece relating to the great Number of Publick Vendue Houses encouraged in this City,—the ill practices made use of at them.—We are assured there is a Remonstrance against them preparing to be presented to the General Assembly now setting here, already subscribed by Numbers; the good effects of which it is hoped will soon be found by the fair Traders, in having them put under proper Restrictions by our Superintendents."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Sept. 17, 1764. On the following day, merchants, shopkeepers and other inhabitants of New York complained in the assembly, of the "many Evils and Disadvantages," which arise from "the present Methods of selling dry Goods, and other Merchandizes, at publick Auction."—Assemb. Jour., II: 753.

Andrew Gauvin is allowed £528:17:18 for "sundry Repairs done to the House in the Fort; to the Battery, Hospital, and Red Stone House, in the Month of June and October 1763; and to the Year 1764." Wyant van Zant is allowed £18:18:8 "for Repairs to the Pumps and Wells in Fort George," from Sept. 4, 1753 to Dec. 14, 1756.—Assemb. Jour., II: 758.

"Sovereign Sybrandt, Takes this method of informing the Oct. the Public, that he has . . . fitted up . . . a new and graceful Stage Waggon, which is to perform two Stages in every Week, from Philadelphia to New York" (Pouwels Hook).—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 1, 1764. For a more frequent service, see May 28, 1767.

Obadiah Wells, of New York, in the interest of "a great Number of Creditors," petitioned on September 15th, "Money may be raised by a Lottery, or some other Way, to encourage spinning and weaving cloth, for home Wear."—Assemb. Jour., II: 765.

The Newmarket Races are to be run on this day "over the New Course, on Hamstead Plains."—N. Y. Merc., July 30, 1764. As early as 1668 (see German Recorder), Gov. Nicolls had established a race-course at Hemsted, L. I.—N. Y. Col. Doc., XIV: 620.

"At a Time, when by anew System of Regulations in Commerce, our Trade is oppressed and restrained, and our Spirits sunk to as low an Ebb, as by natural Consequences our Purses must be bye and bye Providence seems to make our Scares by sending Peter Hafencolver, a public and noble-spirited Stranger amongst us, who last Week introduced into this Province, at an immense Expenence, above 200 Germans (women included), consisting all of Artificers, as Miners, Founders, Forgers, Colliers, Wheelwrights, Carpenters, &c. There never was a time, I am a trader, for it was called "Wooddawn," and was sold by heirs of Jones—William Rogers and Ann, his wife—"to Sarah, wife of William Heywood, Oct. 31, 1816."—Mott, The N. Y. T. of Yesterday, 47. In the battle of Harlem Heights, this house, as the Nicholas Jones house, became somewhat famous—"Laudanum, Aph. Key, III: 98-3; Pl. 179, Vol. III. See April 10, 1874.

The assembly addresses a memorial to the king, in which it is stated that the members cannot, "without the strongest Demonstrations of Grief, express their Sentiments on the late Intimation of a Design, to impose Taxes on your Majesty's Colonists, by Laws to be passed in Great-Britain." The power of taxing themselves, they also say, is "fundamentally interwoven in their constitution. They have never abused the power, as their strenuous Exertions, upon every publick Emergency, demonstrate. They have "ever been a People, zealous for the Honor of their Sovereign, sanguine in the publick Cause, ready to strain every Nerve, upon every Occasion" they have "supported the whole Weight of Savage and Canadian Fury, for near a Century," and have been "as liberal of their Blood at their Treasure." They recommend to the king's consideration the "present ruinous State" of their commerce, and that which they have received the late act of parliament by which all commercial intercourse between the colonies and the West Indies is at an end. The prohibition laid on the exportation of rum to Ireland has resulted in the diminishing of importations of翻 from Ireland; this and other acts of trade have "deterred the publick Stream of Justice." The wisdom of their ancestors shone in nothing more bright, "than in the Institution of Juries, for the Decision of all Controversies, that concern the Lives, Liberties, and Property of the Subject." Lastly, the want of a paper currency is a great evil, "to which the Colonies, are unhappily made Subject, by an Act of Parliament lately passed for that Purpose." Summing up, they declare "that one of the principal Blessings they have to expect, from a Continuance of their exclusive Right to tax themselves, the Restoration and Extension of their Commerce, the Execution of Law, to the amiant and ordinary Method, and the Continuance of their Bills of Credit, will be, their Capacity to do the most faithful and ready Services, to their King and Country, upon every Occasion."—Assemb. Jour., II: 769-73. Similar memorials are sent to the two houses of parliament.—Assemb. Jour., II: 773-79.

It is an Assembly that the committee appointed to correspond with the agent (R. Charles) of the colony in England (see April 4, 1761) be also a committee, during the recess of the house, "to write to, and correspond with the several Assemblies, or Committees of Assemblies on this Continent, on the subject Matter of the Act, commonly called the Sugar Act; of the Act restraining Paper Bills of Credit in the Colonies from being a legal Tender; and of the several other Acts of Parliament lately passed, with Relation to the Trade of the Northern Colonies; and also on the Subject of the impending Dangers which threaten the Colonies of being taxed by Laws to be passed in Great-Britain."—Assemb. Jour., II: 780. Such "Committees of Correspondence," subsequently became an important instrument in effecting American independence. For full consideration of this subject, the history of colonial affairs leading up to it, and its subsequent developments, see The Sons of Liberty, by Henry B. Dawson (N. Y. Hist. Soc, 1859).

On Nov. 20, 1764, Justice Livingstone, in the assembly, reported on Oct. 17, 1764, reported that the committee had, with the "Committees from the several Governments on the Continent in Congress," come to sundry resolutions and drawn up "Representations to his Majesty and both Houses of Parliament."—Assemb. Jour., II: 731. Abraham Lott is allowed £160014 for "Chairs, Branches, Curtains, and other Necessaries, by him provided, for the Use of the General Assembly."—Assemb. Jour., II: 762.

A new "Act for Regulating the Militia of the Colony of New York," in which the fundamental law on the subject without several of the amendments which were temporarly in effect at various times in former years.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 767-77. Oct. Compare the acts and amendments in the Chronology under Nov. 20, 1741; Dec. 17, 1743; Sept. 24, 1744; Feb. 26, 1746; Dec. 7, 1754; Feb. 19, 1755. This act expired Jan. 1, 1769; but was provided for by a new Militia Act on March 24, 1772 (p. 56).

By an act of assembly "the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York and their successors in office, to be hereafter called "the Board of Police," are authorized to Regulate and keep in Repair the Present Highways and to Lay out and Regulate and keep in Repair such other Publick Roads or Highways in the said City and County as shall thereafter be laid out by Act or Acts to be Panted for that Purpose."—M. C. C., VI: 403; Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 857-49.

An act is passed to regulate the Publick Buildings in New York. It provides for the appointment of the keepers of the pouds and determines the fees that are to be charged.—N. Y. Col. Laws, IV: 825-826.

By an act "for paying and Discharging Several Sums of Money Claimed as Publick Debts of this Colony, and Other purposes therein mentioned," the treasurer is ordered to pay the following: £181218 for "for Repairs to the Pumps and Wells in Fort George" from Sept. 4, 1753 to Dec. 14, 1760. £146774 for "for Sundry Repairs done to the House in Fort George, to the Battery, Hospital, and Red Store House" in the months of June and October, 1765, and to the year 1764.

£1675 to pay the Several persons who were aiding and Assisting the Merchants of the City of New York in drawing up a Memorial in Order to be presented to the Parliament of Great Britain complaining of the Hardships the Trade of that Colony Lutters under (see April 24 ... for Making out several Copies thereof, and for Other Expenses attending the same.

£760 to Abraham Lott on account "to Enable him to carry on the useful work of Reprinting and Biulding up the Votes of the General Assembly of this Colony to the Number of Three Hundred Books of the first Volume of the said Votes" (see Jan. 8, 1762).

£600 to "to be employed and applied in providing Chairs, Branches, Curtains and other Necessaries for furnishing a Room for the use of the Council in the City Hall of the City of New York."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 795-94.

Capit. Montgomery arrives with dispatches for Gen. Gage from Col. Bradstreet at Sandusky. These inform him of the treachery and villany of the Senaca, Shawnees, and Delaware tribes of Indians. In a letter to Sir William Johnston, Gage says: "By their Conivrance we are disappointed in our Hopes of settling our Business at the Illicts, in the manner we wished. ... Pontiac has a Letter from the French to tell him that their Fathers are not crushed, as the English would make the Indians believe, and mention a large Fleet coming into the Mississippi. I have just received Letters from Home, that a Spanish Gov't & Lieut. Gov't were nominated for New Orleans, and have an order to inform me that the Spaniards were soon expected. This therefore must be the Trick of some Villains, to prevent our getting to the Illinois in order to keep the Trade in their hands as long as possible."—Gen. Gage's Letters (MS), under date of Oct. 23 and 26, 1764. Capt. Montgomery, named above, is probably not the famous Richard, of later days, but his brother Alexander, who was engaged at Quebec in command of a company of grenadiers.—J. Sparks, Richard Montgomery, in Biography Series, Vol. I.

A committee of the King's College governors is appointed to cause a porter's lodge to be erected, to level the college yard, and to plant trees around the college. Moore Hill Sketch of Columbia College, 50. The trees were carried to the college green by Robert Benson, John Jay, Robert R. Livingston, and also (as stated in 1786 by Hon. John Jay of the class of 1876) by Richard Harison, and were planted by them when students there.—Hist. of Columbia Univ. (1904), 15. Regarding the final removal of these trees (1920s), see 1877.

Charles Ward Aphthorpe and John Temple are sworn in as members of the council, the latter being surveyor-general of customs also.—Col. Coun. Min., 406.

Olive de Lancy writes to Gen. Monckton: "Last Week G. Gage left Greenwhich [see March 11] not in So Good order as when You went away owing to the Worst Sett of Servants that ever managed a Family I shall take it as a Great favour if You! let me know If You shall have any further Occassion for the House and farm which I Truly wish as Your Return to New York is more Wished for and Your Presence more Necessary Than I shall take the Liberty to Tell You in affairs of Government."—Chalmers

9 a committee of the common council is appointed to "Regulate and pave Roosevelt Street, Queen Street, St. Rutger's Street, and Rutger's Street in the out-ward."—M. C. C., VI, 400. Roosevelt Street is named in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 1006; Queen Street, modern Pearl St., at p. 1007; 1008; St. James' St., modern James St., at p. 1003; Rutgers St., at p. 1009. See Pl. 174, Vol. III.

10 Alderman Hicks (see May 11) is directed to "Borrow on Interest for the use of this Corporation the sum of five Hundred pounds towards the cost of the Expences for Enlarging the City Hall."—M. C. C., VI, 400. See May 3, 1765.

Jonathan Watts writes thus to Monckton: "The Colony is so exaschrin't at the Treatment of their paper Money [see April 18 and Oct. 18], considering how dutifully they have obey'd the requisitions of the Crown, that brought it all upon them, that they would not hear of so much as offering the forty Thousand pounds Act to the Lieut Gov', of Course it goes on sinking & the Government loses the Fund."—Chalmers Papers relating to N. Y., II.

23 Capt. John Montresor, a British engineer who had come to America with Braddock in 1754, and had served under a succession of commanders since, arrives in New York from Albany and reports to Gen. Amherst. Montresor kept a journal, which is printed in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections for the year 1881. The frontispiece of this printed journal is a portrait of Montresor. He became chief engineer in America in 1776. His Journal reflects his loyalty to the crown and his detestation of the Sons of Liberty. See Feb. 8, 1766, and Pl. 40, Vol. I, for the "Montresor Plan" of the city, made by order of Gen. Gage.

25 Gen. Gage and some of his officers have formed a scheme of taking a regiment of Indians into British pay; to be partly commanded by their own warriors and uniformed in the English manner. Several Indians, thus equipped, appeared very proud of their new dress; and it was proposed that the uniforms of their chiefs should be very magnificent, with a view to introducing the practice with greater facility.—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., II, 249.

3 The public is informed that, on account of the "present defensable State of our Trade," a "Society for the Promotion of Arts, Agriculture and Economy in the Province of New York" has been formed to promote "the true Interest of this Colony, both public and private." An invitation, mentioning "Mr. Van Der Spiegel, the Society's Treasurer," and signed by Benjamin Kissam, Secretary, is extended to "every real Friend . . . to become a Member thereof" and to meet the present members "at the House of Mr. Samuel Francis [see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III, 978] at Six o'clock in the Evening of this Day . . . where the Plan of the Society will be more fully explained."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 3, 1764. See Jan. 21, 1765.

3 Roger Morris is sworn in as a member of the council in the place of John Chambers, deceased.—Cal. Coun. Min., 466.

3 Samuel Francis "begs leave to observe that he has completely fitted up his House and long Room at Spring Gardens Vauxhall."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 6, 1764. This is the Old Bowling Green on the North River. See March 29, 1758.

3 The council orders that a proclamation be issued declaring peace with the Indians.—Cal. Coun. Min., 466.

9 "Orders this day Major General Gage appointed Commander in Chief, General Amherst resigned."—Montresor's Jour., 321. Cf. Golden Papers, 245.

17 Alexander McDougall, commander of the private sloop of war "Tyger," advertises that he will settle all demands for prize money "at Mr. Samuel Louden's on Hunter's Quay."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 7, 1764.

22 "A new Vice-Admiralty Court over all America, having jurisdiction of breaches of the revenue laws wherever the offence might occur in the British Colonies," is established by an act of the British parliament. The Earl of Northumberland was appointed vice-admiral by the King.—Mass. Hist. Soc. Proceedings, XVII: 29.

24 "To Be Sold Twelve Years Lease of Two good dwelling houses, and lots of grounds situate on the north corner of the Spring Garden, facing the New Goal, and Work House—the corner house, noted for a well accustomed Tavern, keeping the sign of General Wolfe, has a gallery, or lower floor, and is convenient for Lodgers above stairs.—The other is a new house joining the aforesaid . . . ." Inquiries are to be made of Michael Hansen, living in the "first above mentioned Promesse."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 24, 1764. This tavern stood on the present Spruce St. and Park Row. It was again offered for sale on June 8, 1767 (q.v.).

1765

Some time prior to this year, the residence of Nicholas W. Stuyvesant, known as "Fortress," was erected. —B. R. Winthrop in Man., Com. Coun. (1862), 663. It stood in the block bounded by 15th and 16th Sts., First Ave. and Avenue A. It was demolished between 1829 and 1832.—Cf. Map 210, register's office; Liber Rec. 281, CCLXXIX: 561. The dwelling was on the site of the "Trefflyff Hous," shown on the Manatus Maps, C. Pls. 41, 42, and 424, Vol. II; see description of Manatus Maps, II: 187–88. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 952; Pls. 103 and 41, Vol. I, and Pl. 175, Vol. III.

In this year, Division Street was laid out.—Libert Deeds, XLVIII: 364–67 (New York). It was surveyed and regulated in 1790.—

M. C. C. (MS.), 146.

"They write from New York, that two Breweries for pale and brown Beer are now carried on with great Briskness in that City; the former producing a Malt Liquor little inferior to the most-admir'd Ales imported from England; Several hundred Thousand Bottles of it have been exported to the neighbouring Islands and Colonies in America in the Course of last year."—Upcott Coll., II: 251.

22 In this year, William Greg, an American silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York. A description of a sugar bowl made by him may be found in Met. Museum of Art. Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J., and the South (1911), 27.

In this year, Cary Dunn, silversmith, was admitted as a freeman of New York, where he continued to work for thirty years. In 1786 he was a member of the Gold and Silver Smith's Society. Two pieces of his workmanship are described in Met. Museum of Art.

Cat. of Exhibition of Silver used in N. Y., N. J., and the South (1911), 22.

The wall of the High Dutch Church (Germans Reformed), on Jan. Nassau St. (see Aug. 20, 1764), having given way, so that service cannot be held there without extreme danger, the consistory of the Dutch Church permits Domine Kero to use the Dutch Church between the times of worship there.—Ecles. Rec., VI: 3971. The injury to the walls of the church (which was the converted theatre, built in 1773, and sold to this congregation in 1778, p. 5) was due to a heavy fall of snow, which caused the walls to spread.—Ibid., VI: 409–39. The corner-stone of a new church on the same site was laid on March 8, 1765 (q.v.).—Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 26.

A newspaper contributor states that "a Gentleman in this City appeared last Sunday Evening at the Parlor of his only Son, at 6 o'clock, without any other Kind of Mourning, than a Hat Band: and his Bearer without Scarfs." This is cited as a laudable example of economy to be imitated by persons of all ranks "in the present declining State of our Country."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Jan. 3, 1765. Cf. Man. Com. Coun. (1853), 460.

"A Very fine Dark Brown Mantle" is offered for sale at "Mr. Stout's Tavern-Keeper, at Fresh-Water."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 3, 1765. This tavern was later known as the Plow and Harrow. It stood at what is now the intersection of Doyers St. and the Bowery, where, as early as 1755, a "tavern" had been kept, as is indicated on the manuscript map, Pl. 50, Vol. I. Before July 9, 1772, John Fowler was proprietor. His house, which he called the "Farmer's Tavern," was the starting-point of the stage line between New York and Boston.—N. Y. Jour., July 9, 1772. After the Revolution, Gabriel Furman took the "noted house and stables in the Bowery-lane, before the war kept by John Fowler and of late by Baroey and Pell."—N. Y. Packet, Feb. 9, 1784. Furman, having hung out a sign of the "Free American," offered "Georct Boarding and lodging."—Ibid., Jan. 4, 1786. By 1792, James Myers was proprietor of the tavern which was once more designated as the "Plow and Harrow."—Daily Advertiser, Feb. 3, 1792. Hendrick Doyer, a distiller, purchased the property in 1793, and evidently demolished the old house, as he had the land surveyed and cut up into lots in 1797, and Doyers St. cut through the property as it is to-day.—Map 483, Register's Office; Pl. 70, Vol. I; Banker survey, in box E–F, Folder C, MSS. Div., N. Y. Pub. Library; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 898; Pl. 175, Vol. III.

It is ordered by the common council that £500 be raised for laying out, regulating, and repairing public roads in the city, the present year as provided by the act of Oct. 20, 1764 (p. v.)—M. C. VI: 404.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

C. VI, 7: 20.

on the "Mode of proof proper to be made by the Candidate for premiums" offered for manufacture. This is to be by affidavit of the maker before two justices of the peace in the county where the material has been made," specifying the quantity; that it was made in this province, and that no part of it had been before offered to them, or to others, with an intention to receive the premium; nor any part of the quantity inferior to the sample produced."—N. T. Merc., Jan. 28, 1765. For further activities of the society see Feb. 4.

24. The declining state of business in this city, together with the high Rates and Prices of the necessaries of Life, having reduced very many Families and poor People to great Distress, especially since the late severe Weather, contributions for their relief have been made by several humane Gentlemen."—N. T. Post-Bay, Jan. 24, 1765. See Feb. 4.

25. A newspaper advertisement reads: "Taken, by Mistakes, from Mr. Franc's, at Vauxhall, on Friday Evening last, a new Portuguese Cloak, of fine brown Camelot, lined with green Bays, remarkable for having 3 Capes. . . ."—N. T. Merc., Jan. 28, 1765. On the same occasion, and also "by Mistakes," was taken a white Satten Bowered Cloak, lined throughout with white Skin; and two Cloaks, "Gold Jac'd Hals," belonging to a servant. At this time, Major James resided in the "Broadway." Vauxhall was the old "Bowling Green" on the North River, See pls. 26 and 40, Vol. 1; and "Vauxhall Tavern and Garden," in Landmark Map Rep. Key, III: 98.

26. Capt. John Montresor records: "the Hudson's River was froze across so as to make it possible for Sleighs and people to pass to the opposite side from New York." He states that he is "Employed in assisting Capt. Henry Gordon Chief Engineer in making a plan of part of North America shewing the upper Lakes and Posts therewith together with the several passes, Portages, Ranges of Mountains, sources of Rivers, for the Marquis of Granby, Master General of the Ordnance."—Montresor's Jour., 322. The completed plan, "done by the Engineers at New York," was sent to England on March 17—ibid., 323.

Feb. 4. The Society of Arts, etc. (see Jan. 21) agrees that "several Sums of Money . . . be lent to encourge industrious Persons in the Linen Branch" and that "a honorary Gold Medal be given for each of the three first Flax-Mills that shall be erected in this Province." Competitors for the agricultural premiums are to give "particular Account of the Place, Soil, Condition, and Extent of the Ground; the Season, Steps of the Culture; and, as near as may be, an Estimate of the Value of the Labour."—N. T. Merc., Feb. 25, 1765.

27. The Society of Arts, etc. (see Jan. 21) agrees that "several Sums of Money . . . be lent to encourge industrious Persons in the Linen Branch" and that "a honorary Gold Medal be given for each of the three first Flax-Mills that shall be erected in this Province." Competitors for the agricultural premiums are to give "particular Account of the Place, Soil, Condition, and Extent of the Ground; the Season, Steps of the Culture; and, as near as may be, an Estimate of the Value of the Labour."—N. T. Merc., Feb. 25, 1765. On June 3 (p. v.), the members decided to establish a flaxspinning school.

28. The name "Sons of Liberty" is first used by Col. Isaac Barré "in his off-hand reply to Charles Townsend . . . when George Grenville proposed the Stamp Act in Parliament" on this day. Jared Ingersoll of Connecticut sat in the gallery of the house as Barré spoke and sent a sketch of his remarks to Gov. Fitch, who published it in the New London papers. "May had not shed its blossoms before the words of Barré were as household words in every New England town. Midsummer saw them circulate through Canada, in French; and the continent rung from end to end with the cheering name of the Sons of Liberty."—Bancroft, Hist. of U. S., III; 290; Thomson, Pulpit of 131; see also Dawson, The Sons of Liberty, 57 et seq. The name appears in a broadside of Feb. 3, 1770, "To the Sons of Liberty in this City," which is reproduced as Pl. 40, Vol. IV. See also Pl. 45, Vol. IV. "Dr. J. H. Trumbull, in a paper "Sons of Liberty in 1755" published in the Amer. Antiquary, Jan., XXVIII (1882), showed that the term had ten years earlier been applied in Connecticut to organizations to advance religious liberty. It is also sometimes said that the popular party at the time of the Zenger trial [see Aug. 1735] had adopted the name."—Winsor, Narr. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VII: 72.

Feb. 6. A house in the Bowery, "Known by the Name of the Sign of Thomas Koul Kan," is advertised to be let by Peter Van Zandt.—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 11, 1765.

29. The "Exchange House" is let to Thomas Jackson for one year, beginning May 1, at $60 yearly rentable, payable quarterly.—M. C. C., VII: 409.

30. After a decision of the common council (by an 8 to 7 vote) that water lots may be disposed of to certain petitioners at private sale rather than at "publick sale," Mayor Crop Vanderveen "that during such time as said presided, the Recorder could not as he conceived be Legally E titles to a Vote in this Common Council." A dispute arising on this point, it is ordered, for the governing of future votes, that Alderman Hicks Do Retain William Smith Jost and John Morine Scott Esq." and take their Opinion whether the Recorder has a Right by the Charter to this Corporation to Vote in common Council During such time as the Mayor presides.—M. C. C., VII: 408-9. Various petitions regarding water lots, docks, etc., were presented on March 7, but voting on them was deferred until this legal opinion was obtained (410-11). On April 12, it was ordered that Alderman Hicks form the two legal advisors that, should they disagree, "they have Liberty to Call in one other Gentleman of the law for his Opinion so as to make a Majority," and it was agreed that this majority opinion "shall Determine the same and be Carried into President for the future" (415). The decision was rendered on July 30. Smith's opinion was that the recorder "has no voice" when the mayor is present; Scott and William Livingston were of opinion that he bad, and their opinion therefore prevailed (423-26).

31. Cudde writes to the Earl of Halifax regarding what he calls the "dangerous influence" of the "t1aw of Liberty." He reviews the development of this influence since Gov. Clinton gave De Lancy the commission of chief-justice "during good behavior," at which time an association of lawyers was formed, which has strengthened the popular side of the government and deprecated the power of the crown.—N. T. Col. Doc., VII: 709-6.

32. Trinity Church leases to John Jones, a "Perukemaker," for 61 years, two lots on the south-west corner of Warren St. and Broadway.—Sanford, Chron. Rep., IV: 660. This was the Mason's Arms Tavern (see May 1). See also March 19, 1759.

A petition is presented to the common council "to extend Mar. Counties peer [Albany Peer—see April 29, 1765] Two hundred feet farther into the East River." The petitioners offer to advance to the corporation "for Carrying on and Completing the same $1,000 to be repaid in five years without interest.—M. C. C., VI: 410. While no record appears of the granting of this petition or of the acceptance of the loan without interest, it is known that the extention was undertaken and completed (or nearly so) in 1768, because several payments for the work are recorded: Aug. 13 and Sept. 29, 1767 (ibid., VII: 73, 53); May 12, 1768—three items (ibid., VII: 112, 113), all in connection with the "Corporations peer" or the "Corporation peer;" Sept. 28, 1768—two items (ibid., VII: 124, 125), both for "finishing the addition to the Albany peer." Subsequent payments in 1770, 1771, and 1774 (ibid., VII: 199, 222, 265; VIII: 14), for "work done to the Albany peer" and for the "addition to the Albany Peer" probably suggest finishing touches.

34. A committee of the common council is appointed to inspect "the Road Leading by John Morine Scott's Esq' Commonly Called the Tour Road;" and to inspect also the Bloomingdale Road and to report plans for widening and repairing them. Following the provisions of an act of the assembly of Oct. 20, 1764 (p. v.), (making the members of the common council "Commissioners to Regulate and keep in Repair the present highways," etc., with power to appoint surveyors, overseers and laborers), Adam Vandenbergh is made "a Surveyor or overseer of that Part of the publick Road or high way Leading from this City as far as the Extent of the Bowery Division which Terminates at a Run of Water on the East side of the Bowery Division Ends;" and so Running from thence as far as the Kings
Chronology: The Revolutionary Period: 1703-1776

1765 Bridge.—M. C. G., VI: 414, 414-15. The Tour Road is the Lake Mar. Tour Road.—See Pl., Vol. 3, Pl. 176, Vol. 11 (reference nos., 7 18-20).—Post, Old Streets, &c. See also M. C. G., VII: 10. 8

The first stone of a new German Reformed Church is laid, on the site of the former one at the present 64-66 Nassau St. The builders are Van Dalen and Hendricks. It was a town structure (ibid., VI: 4037), erected "at a cost of $7,000" (ibid., VI: 4037). The cost of construction was probably $5,000 rather than $7,000.—See ibid., VI: 3999. Regarding the location, see 1758. This church was sold in 1822 to the South Baptist Congregation.—Greenleaf, Hist. of the Churches, 246. It was later converted into an eating-house (cf. Greenleaf, op. cit., 27), but was demolished in 1847.—Smith, N. Y. in 1789, 138. See also Landmark Map Reg. Key, III: 935.

The creditors of Robert Evans, an abscinding debtor, are notified to meet on this day "at the House of Charles Gilmore, Tavernkeeper, on Cannon's Dock."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 17, 1764. Cannon's Dock was at Broome St., between Goerck and Tompkins Sts.

21 By a petition of this date and another of March 29, the consistory of the Dutch Church makes application to the common council for 12 lots in "the Vlakte" (an ancient name for the Commons, of which City Hall Park is a part). It was then, perhaps, "a small guard of the fort" consisting of May, 1765, the consistory resolved that the seal of our corporation be affixed to the instrument containing the agreement of the Church with this City, for the grounds bought by it in 1763.

The Stamp Act receives the royal assent by commission.

Ann. Reg. (1765), 71-72. It requires that, after Nov. 1, stamped paper be used for practically all legal documents and customs papers, for appointments to all offices carrying a salary of $20, save military and judicial offices, for all grants of privilege and franchises made by the colonial government, for licenses to retail liquors, for all pamphlets, advertisements, handbills, newspapers, almanacs, and calendars, and for packages of playing cards and dice. The paper is to be printed by the government and sold only by officers appointed for that purpose. No money save silver may be accepted in payment for the stamp. Heavy penalties are to be imposed for forging or counterfeiting stamps, and for using un-stamped paper in cases where it is forbidden by this law. The act is cited as Geo. III, C. 12. It was printed at London in a separate pamphlet, and reprinted by J. Parker in the province of New Jersey in 1769. In the N. Y. law of June 7, 1766, there are alluded to an essay that is to be found also in Pickering's Statutes at Large, XXVI: 179-2045 for an abridged text, see MacDonald, Documentary Source Book of Am. Hist. (1908), 122-31. The proceedings in parliament may be followed in the Parliamentary Hist., XV and XVI, and in the Ann. Reg. (1765). The fullest account of the debates is in Bancroft, United States (ed. 1852). V. Contrast English and American views are presented in Frothingham's Rise of the Republic, Chap. 5; Lecky's England in the Eighteenth Century (Amer. ed.), III: 333-75; Mahon's England, Chap. 43, 45. The best-known contemporary expression of American opinion, called out by the proposal of a stamp tax, is Oii's Rights of the British Colonies; for a more moderate statement, see Stephen Hopkins's Rights of the Colonies Examined (as R. I. Col. Records, VI). For the expression of the N. Y. press when the news reached America, see April 11. For subsequent events, see Dawson's The Park and its Vicinity.

28 A record is made in England of the "List of Works that will be necessary to be carried on, in the Engineers Department, to make the Passenger's Ferry tolerable and to keep it from perishing, but which are delayed till such time as His Majesty's Pleasure shall be signified thereon."—Stevens, Catalogue Index of MSS., 1757-1783, in Lib. of Congress, citing Public Record Office, War Office, XVI: 78.

11 News reaches America of "the Resolves of the House of Commons relating to a Stamp Duty [see March 21] on printed and written Paper, Parchment, etc. in the Colonies."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Apr. 11, 1765. The Mercury of April 15 reported "We hear that during the Debate in the House of Commons when the Resolves passed, not a man spoke who did not declare his Opinion that America ought to be taxed: Nor would any one introduce a Petition with such a sentiment as they were not even the most interested, and those who are of the Opposition, all refused to present such a Petition."

Colden writes to the Earl of Halifax: "I have the great pleasure to inform your Lordships, that this Government continues in perfect Tranquility, notwithstanding of the continued efforts of a Faction to raise discontent in the Minds of the People & disorder in consequence of it. The most effectual method in their opinion for obtaining their ends. A few of the Profession of the Law continue to publish most Licentious abusable weekly Papers. I have restrained every return or reply to them. They have produced the contrary effect to what the authors design'd, but what I expected. While by malicious Calumny the Authors endeavour'd to asperse the characters of others, they have sunk their own Reputation. No illicit Trade has been discovered of late."—N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections (1876), 2, 450; Wilson, Mem. Hist. N. Y., II: 330. Colden also sends the "small guard of the Fort" consisting of May, 1765, the consistory resolved "That the seal of our corporation be affixed to the instrument containing the agreement of the Church with this City, for the grounds bought by it in 1763."

The Stamp Act receives the royal assent by commission.

Ann. Reg. (1765), 71-72. It requires that, after Nov. 1, stamped paper be used for practically all legal documents and customs papers, for appointments to all offices carrying a salary of $20, save military and judicial offices, for all grants of privilege and franchises made by the colonial government, for licenses to retail liquors, for all pamphlets, advertisements, handbills, newspapers, almanacs, and calendars, and for packages of playing cards and dice. The paper is to be printed by the government and sold only by officers appointed for that purpose. No money save silver may be accepted in payment for the stamp. Heavy penalties are to be imposed for forging or counterfeiting stamps, and for using un-stamped paper in cases where it is forbidden by this law. The act is cited as Geo. III, C. 12. It was printed at London in a separate pamphlet, and reprinted by J. Parker in the province of New Jersey in 1769. In the N. Y. law of June 7, 1766, there are alluded to an essay that is to be found also in Pickering's Statutes at Large, XXVI: 179-2045 for an abridged text, see MacDonald, Documentary Source Book of Am. Hist. (1908), 122-31. The proceedings in parliament may be followed in the Parliamentary Hist., XV and XVI, and in the Ann. Reg. (1765). The fullest account of the debates is in Bancroft, United States (ed. 1852). V. Contrast English and American views are presented in Frothingham's Rise of the Republic, Chap. 5; Lecky's England in the Eighteenth Century (Amer. ed.), III: 333-75; Mahon's England, Chap. 43, 45. The best-known contemporary expression of American opinion, called out by the proposal of a stamp tax, is Oii's Rights of the British Colonies; for a more moderate statement, see Stephen Hopkins's Rights of the Colonies Examined (as R. I. Col. Records, VI). For the expression of the N. Y. press when the news reached America, see April 11. For subsequent events, see Dawson's The Park and its Vicinity.

Archibald Kennedy and William McAdams petition the common council for "an exclusive Grant of the Right of ferriage from this City, across Hudson River to the Jersey Shore" (see Sept. 10, 1761). Consideration is deferred.—M. C. G., VI: 417. On Oct. 14, Cornelius van Vorst, of Bergen Co., N. J., in a petition to the common council, states that he is the owner of Paulus Hook, in Bergen Co., opposite New York, and has recently set up a ferry there. He maintains a causeway nearly half a mile long, and a lane nearly a mile long, as well keeping open the public road, for the accommodation of travelers. To aid him in meeting the expense involved, he asks the Board to allow him for some time to "take the Benefit of both Sides of the said Ferry, . . . that and then the said Ferry be established and maintained by this Honourable Board, and the Petitioner jointly, the Corporation thereafter receiving all the Profits of Ferriages from, and your Petitioner of the Ferry to New York." He also asks "that the Landing in the City might be fixed at Messier's Wharf as being the most convenient Place for that Purpose."—From the original petition in the city clerk's record-room, endorsed "filed the 14th of October 1765."—M. C. G., VI: 436. Both petitions were considered on Jan. 31, 1766, and a committee was appointed to confer with the petitioners. The committee reported on Feb. 25, 1766 (p. e.), and the proposals of Van Vorost were agreed to.—M. C. G., VII: 2, 8.

The king assents to the bill for rendering more effectual in America the act for punishing mutiny and desertion.—Ann. Reg. (1765), 2, 45.
The house and farm, later famous as the seat of Roger Morris, whose mansion-house still remains, are offered for sale by James Carroll, a butcher, who had purchased the farm on Jan. 29, 1765, from Jacob Dyckman and others.—Libr. Deeds, XXVII: 4 et seq. The advertisement describes the place thus: "A Pleasant situated Farm, on the Road leading to King's-Bridge, in the Township of Harlem, on York Island, containing about 100 Acres, near 30 of which is Wood land, a fine Farm of Meadow Ground, and more may easily be made; and commands the finest Prospect in the whole Country: The Land runs from River to River ... there is on it a good House, a fine Barn 44 Feet long, and 42 Feet wide, or there- above."—Pub. in N. Y. Merc., from May 10 to June 16, 1765. Roger Morris, an Englishman, and a soldier in America under Gen. Braddock and later under Wolfe, married Mary Philipse of Yonkers, on Jan. 28, 1758. He retired from the army in June, 1764, in the following summer apparently settled upon the Carroll Farm, and built the existing house which still bears the name. His property was confiscated after the Revolution and sold by the commissioners of forfeiture to John Berrian and Isaac Ledyard. For the succeeding history of the Roger Morris Mansion, see July 9, 1783. See Shelton, The Jamaica Mansion; also Addenda. Samuel Francis advertises the New Vaax Hall.—N. Y. Post-Bay, May 16, 1765. See Jan. 28. A news item states: "we have certain Accounts that a Clause is added to the Mutiny [sic] and Desertion Bill [see May 10], whereby Justice of the Peace are empowered to billet Soldiers on the Inhabi- tants in America, at their Discretion."—N. Y. Merc., May 27, 1765.

In a communication to the press, a writer ("Publicola") states: "I observe, that many of our most worthy Citizens, and principal Gentlemen, are clad in Country Manufactures or turned clothes. 3dly, That Spinning gets daily more in Vogue, so that we rather want Materials than industrious Hands. 3dly, That the farmers are endeavouring to remedy this Difficiency by the large Quantity of Flax-Seed sown much more than usual, and their Intention of keeping more Sheep. 4thly, That little Lamb now comes to Market, as no true Lovers of their Country, or whose sympathetic Breasts feel for its Distresses will buy it. 5thly, That Sassafras, Balm and Sage are now in use instead of the more wholesome ... Lastly, The Fashion of Funerals and Moarning is in general much altered from the late troublesome, ridiculous, and expensive Methods; for what could be more absurd, than for a Person, when in Affliction for their dearest Relatives, to be treated about Dress and Ceremonial, and perhaps involved in a large Bill of Costs, when their Creditors are most apt to call upon them."—N. Y. Post-Bay, May 30, 1765.

June 1 Joris Brinckerhoff, in his will of above date, orders all his real estate in New York, including his dwelling-house, "with all the buildings thereon, and the house and lot in the rear of the same, and all buildings on the same ground" to be sold at public vendue. Referring to this Pelletrau says: "His dwelling house and lot are now No. 73 Pearl Street, and is the east part of the lot where the Old Stage House, or City Hall, stood in ancient days."—Abstracts of Bills, VI: 197.

3 As "there are a great Number of poor Children in Town, whose Parents are incapable, or not in a Situation to teach them Flax- Spinning," the Society of Arts, etc. (see Feb. 4) resolves "to erect a Flax-Spinning-School."—N. Y. Merc., June 10, 1765. Further resolutions in regard to this, were passed on Aug. 5 (p. 2).

5 July 1 John V. Lott, a new pleasure garden, called Kanelagh on the old homestead of Anthony Rutgers, on Broadway and Thomas St., which had been built about 1700 (see Feb. 5, 1725). His announce- ment states that there will be a "Concert of Musick" every Thursday evening, and afterwards "a small Fire-Work will be play'd off." As the first attempt at the birth of the Kanelagh was a failure, the Jones hopes for the patronage of ladies and gentlemen.—N. Y. Merc., June 3, 1765. The second performance, which took place on June 12 was interrupted by a "Number of disorderly Persons (in a riotous Manner) breaking into the Garden."—Ibid., June 17, 1765. Later, concerts were given every Monday and Thursday; the gardens were "illuminated every Night," and the "best Entertain- ment" provided by the proprietors, "notwithstanding the artful Jostillations of some ill-meaned People and the Contrary,"—Ibid., June 17, 1765; N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1765. Admission, at first cost two shillings, was later reduced to one shilling, owing to the "Scarcity of Cash."—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 28, 1766. Joes had given up the Gardens before Feb. 3, 1766 (p. v.), when Rutgers offered the place for rent, his advertisement stating that he would build in the spring a new house, "fit for any Gentleman." Samuel Francis had become the new proprietor by June 8, when he opened the Gardens, which he had "neely fitted up in a very genteel, pleasing Manner."—N. Y. Merc., June 8, 1766. Before the spring of 1774, a Mr. Vaneel was in possession of the house, and garden, and ondarch of Anthony Rutgers, which were again opened for rent — Ibid., Jan. 13, 1772. Although the place was known as Ranelagh for many years, its career as a pleasure-garden seems to have ended with its occupation by Francis. John Ireland purchased the property on Nov. 2, 1790 (p. v.), and Effingham Embree acquired it on March 20, 1795 (p. 121). Edward Hanby who has a tavern called the "Fortune of War" on Mary St., now Baxter, and near the Fresh Water Pond, adver- tises that a well dressed man, calling himself captain of a vessel, left at his house "A good body Coat, two laced Jackets, a Tye Wig, and a bay Mare," which he believes to have been stolen.—N. Y. Post-Boy, June 6, 1765.

"Mrs. Barclay's Old Pye-House, is now reviv'd by Catharine Speece, between the New Dutch Church and the Fly-Market, ... where may be had every Noon and Evening, Hot Chicken- Jyes, &c. Likewise all Sorts of Tarts, after the nearest and best Manner."—N. Y. Merc., June 10, 1765. This was on Crown (Liberty) St.

The New-York Gazette (Weyman) is temporarily suspend-ed after the issue of this date (No. 350), owing to the Stamp Act. The following occasional issues appeared July 5 (No. 347); July 22 (without a number); Sept. 16 (No. 342). With the issue of Nov. 25 (No. 343), regular publication was resumed. The last issue was that of Dec. 28, 1766 (No. 454), p. v.

"John Jones of the City of New York Peruke maker" mortgages to Roger Morris the Mansion's Arms Tavern (see March 19, 1759), the land being thus described: "two certain Lots of Ground Situate lying and being in the West Ward of the said City and known and Distinguished in a certain map or Chart of the part of the Church Farm which lies to the Southward of the Stockades by Lotts Number three hundred and Twenty two and three hundred and Twenty three are allowed of in Broadside Twenty five foot each the said Lott number three hundred and Twenty two containing in Length one hundred & ten foot three inches and the said Lott number three hundred and Twenty three containing in Length one hundred and Eleven foot bounded Easterly by the Broadway, Northerly by a Street in the said Map Called Warren Street, Westerly by Lott number three hundred and Twenty four and Southerly by Lott number three hundred and Twenty one Together with all and Singular" etc. The mortgage calls for the payment by Jones, before June 12, 1766, of "two thousand milled Spanish pieces of Eight or the Value thereof in good and Current money of New York."—Liber Mortages, I: 511-12.

The lords of trade submit to the king the draft of a commission constituting Sir Henry Moore governor of New York in place of Monckton.—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 745.

Payment (55s) is made for 2000 chair-stands made for the use of the common council by their order.—M. C. G., VI: 419. An investigation has failed to produce any further information regarding these chair-stands.

We hear that Mr. James M'Ever, Merchant, of this City is appointed Commissioner for collecting the Stamp Duties in this Government.—N. Y. Merc., June 13, 1765.

A poster or broadside, advertising Thomas More's "Genuine Country Almanack For the Year 1766," shows the location of the press of William Weyman, the printer of the Gazette, to be "Oppos- ite Synagogue Alley, in Broad-Street."—From an original in N. Y. Pub. Libr. Known in these years as "Alley," the first synagogue in New York has been built there. It was the Skyck July 1765 Steege of early Dutch days, the later Mill St. and the present South 1 William St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1003 (Jew’s Alley); 1006 (Mill St.); PL 174: 29.

...

The Exchange was designated on June 27 as the meeting-place on July 1, for the Society for Promoting Arts.—N. Y. Merc., June 27, 1765.

8 Col. Steegh writes to Gen. Gage: "As there is no Guard now in his Majesty’s Fort in this City, I think it my duty to apply to your Excellency for such a number of Men at least as may be sufficient to guard the Gold, Silver, or Merchandise of the houses. As the places are of small magnitude, the amount of Silver shall be under 200$, and perhaps less."—Comm. to Gen. Gage.

9 Colden writes to Gen. Gage: "I am very sorry to hear such repeated bad Accounts from America, but at the same Time, I have the pleasure to tell you, that it is generally believed, that the new Ministry will repeal the Stamp Act this next Session."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 7, 1765.

10 Thomas Jackson is appointed by the common council to have charge of the corporation library (see June 27, 1769); he is required to "attend at the Library Room in the City Hall on Mondays and Thursdays, from half after Eleven o’clock in the morning until one, to let out the Books," and "to keep an exact account of the Income therefrom and of the expenses of the same, and cause it to be printed forthwith." The books are to be let out at the following rates: "a dollar to two shillings, a Quarto one shilling, and an Octavo or Lesser Volume six pence per month; and if any Book be detained in the hands of a Borrower Longer than the time Limited, that he pays six pence for a folio, four pence for a Quarto, and two pence for an Octavo per day "till returned." Mr. Jackson is allowed "four pounds per annum for his Trouble."—M. C. G., VII: 427. On Sept. 16, the trustees of the "Society Library" also appointed him keeper of their "well chosen Collection of the most useful modern Books, with a considerable late addition, of which a Catalogue will be soon published..." The library in this Library is now worth £10 10s and is transferable by the Subscribers."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 16, 1765. Cf. Keep, Hist. of N. Y. Soc. Library, 176-77.

A committee, appointed "to Cause Robinson Street [the present Park Place] in the west ward to be Levelled," reports "that the same is to take its Beginning from the Lamp post in the middle of the Broad way one foot above the Ground," and is to be regulated in a specified manner to the middle of Church St., also that Church St. is to be regulated between Robinson and Barclay Sts. It is ordered that this plan be compiled with.—M. C. G., VII: 427. This is the first laying out or regulating of these streets. See Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1003.

11 Colden receives a letter from James McEvers, lately appointed (see July 1) "Distributor of Stamps" for this province, resigning the office. He says that "Since the late Riot at Boston, & the Inflammatory Papers lately printed in the Colonies, People of this City are so Insensible... that I find it will be attended with the greatest Risk of my Person and Fortune, to Attempt, & indeed impossible for me to execute the Office... and have accordingly wrote to the Commissioners Signifying that I cannot Submit to a Service that will be attended with very dangerous Consequences... if I had Attempted it, my House would have been Pillag’d, my Person Abused, and his Majestys Revenue Impair’d."—Colden MSS. in N. Y. Hist. Soc. See Sept. 2 and Oct. 28.

12 The steeple of the New Dutch Church is again struck by lightning (see June 15, 1765). The lightning is "led down by the Conductor Rod," so that the Church sustains "but little Damage."—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 2, 1765.

13 Colden informs Sir William Johnson of the resignation of James McEvers (see Aug. 30) who, he writes, has already "entered into hood before me for the due execution of his office" but is "terrified by the suffering & ill usage he has been subjected to by the public & the threats he has received at New York."—Colden Papers (187): 73.

14 Gage writes to Colden: "It must give every well-wisher to his Country the greatest Pain and Anxiety to see the Public Papers crammed with Treason, the Minds of the People disturbed, excited and encouraged to revolt against the Government, to subvert the Constitution, and transform the Laws. What greater evil can invent is propagated as Truths by these Enemies of their Country, to sow Dissention and create Animosities between Great-
1765
The general assembly for the province of Pennsylvania selects Sept. its committee "to join those from the other Provinces, at a Meeting scheduled for New York, the first day of October."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 19, 1765.

The distributor of stamps for Maryland, who is stopping at the 16
Kings Arms Tavern, is obliged to supply for lodging in the fort, having fled from a mob in Maryland.—Colored Papers, op. cit.

The general assembly of the colony of Rhode Island, in its last session, appoints "Commissioners for the intended Congress to be holden in New York in October next, in order to agree on the most probable method to obtain Redress for the injured and oppressed British Colonies on this Continent."—N. Y. Post-Boy,

Mr. Jackson, who has been appointed keeper of the New York Library and Society Library, both at the city hall, is "Master of the Academy at the Exchange."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Sept. 19, 1765.

Eliana Deane, the coach-maker, was doing business in New York at this time. The ledger of James Beekman contains an entry of this date: "To cash paid Eliana Deane for a new chaise, $100."—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1890), 15. The first advertisement of the Deanes, however, did not appear until Feb. 27, 1766 (p. v.).

The general assembly of the colony of Connecticut appoints commissioher's to meet those of the other Colonies, at the congress, to be holden at New York, the first of October next."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Lieu.-Gov. Colden writes to Sec. Conway: "Sooner after it was known that Stamp Duties were by Act of Parliament to be paid in the Colonies, virulent papers were published in the Weekly Newspapers, fill'd with every falsehood that malice could invent to serve their purpose of exciting the People to disobedience of the Laws and to sedition. At first they only denied the authority of Parliament to lay internal Taxes in the Colonies, but at last they have denied the Legislative Authority of the Parliament in the Colonies, and these Papers continue to be published." He adds that: "Mayor James of the Royal Regiment of artillery having observed the riotous disposition of the People in this place, after what had happen'd at Boston; and being informed that many of the guns were honey combd, and the carriages rotten, and that there was no powder in the Fort, he order'd in some Field Pieces and Helmetts, together with a sufficient quantity of ammunition and other stores. Part of the Relief for the Regiment of artillery arriving from England the Day I returned to the Fort, they were brought into it. The garrison now consists of 100 effective privates besides officers and it is secure against any attempt or insult that was appended through Precautions Necessary to be taken to put Fort George in a proper state of defence, sufficient to preserve it . . . against any intestine Insult, & without any very conspicuous appearance of rendering it more so, that [then] it is at present . . . . The Works of this Fort being entirely en barbette round, are placed in it from the front, to the Town Northw. . .

command it so as to enlobe the whole." The firewood piled up against the front polygon was to be removed and the cord wood in front of the works to be employed as "Merlions for the Guns . . . & constructed so high as to serve for an Epaulement to cover its Guns & Men & those from the Ebuliade . . . The Running Boarded Division . . . to be taken down being now a blind to the fire of the two Flankis. The Artillery to be planted, so as to rake the Avenues, and secure it's Defences . . . The unnecessary Sorties Blockaded, & those wanted examined, & Repair'd . . . Two Polygons to be so situated as to assure two entire Polygons of the Fort, the North one fronting the Broad Way, & the East one facing Stone Street forming nearly a right Angle, & where the Battery terminates at each end which are the given positions or stations. The intersecting fire will then be on the North East Salient, near the Secretary's Office. The two other faces of the Works are pointing the water especially on the West one.
One Frigate opposite to Turtle Bay and if requisite another at the Ordnance Store house on the North River."—Colored MSS.

The fort had no parapet and was commanded by the neighbouring houses.—Montresor's Jour., op. cit., 120.

The Frigate of War, sent from the Narrows and the Hawke to the Hook for the security of the Stamps hourly expected. The officers of Artillery very diligent in preparing the artillery and ammunition on the works of Fort George."—Montresor's Jour., 128.

Britain and the Colonies. All this is done with Impunity, and without any Notice taken of the Printers Publishers or authors of those seditionary Papers."—Colden MSS.

The King's Collection in the British Museum contains a water-colour sketch entitled a "View of Harlem from Mortanlia in the Province of New York, September 1765." This view, which is reproduced and described in Vol. I. Pl. 19, shows the Remon-
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1765
of America at this alarming Juncture, are come to Town, and the Oct. rest daily expected: We hear they have already begun their Con- feres (but see Oct. 7), which it is supposed will be continued a sufficient Time to answer the Purposes of their appointment."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 5, 1765.

7 The "Stamp Act Congress" meets at the city hall, New York. It is described as the time as "the most important that ever came under Consideration in America." There are 28 delegates from nine of the colonies; four of the colonies did not send delegates, though expressing their sympathy with the movement. The list of "interests" was passed, but was given a paper they would not accept. They came from Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, "the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex on Delaware," Maryland, and South Carolina.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 10, 1765. On Oct. 19, a "declarating of the rights and grievances of the colonists in America," originally drafted by John Dickinson, a delegate from Pennsyl- vania, was agreed to. It set forth, in 14 articles, their protest against any taxation by the British parliament in which they were not represented, their right to trial by jury, and the "manifest tendency" of the Stamp Act "to subvert the rights and liberties of the colonists." On Oct. 22, the congress approved an address to the king which reviewed the conditions under which the colonies had been established and the inherent liberties secured to them by the English constitution. It besought the king to take into con- sideration the distress of the people as was done by preceding congresses, to "pass the acts of parliament imposing duties and taxes on these colonies," and "to afford them such relief as in your royal wisdom their unhappy circumstances shall be judged to require." The memorial to the lords, passed the same day, claimed "one of the most essential rights of these colonies, of their trial by jury" and entered formal protest against taxation by the British parliament, especially against the Stamp Act. It entreated them "to pursue measures for restoring the just rights and liberties of the colonists and preserving them forever inviolate, for redressing their present and preventing future grievances." The petition to the house of commons, was rejected by him personally, and James Otis, who had enacted formal protest against taxation by the British parliament, especially against the Stamp Act. It entreated them "to pursue measures for restoring the just rights and liberties of the colonists and preserving them forever inviolate, for redressing their present and preventing future grievances." The petition to the house of commons, was rejected by him personally, and James Otis, who had been involved in the debate, wrote in his "History" that he had hoped, "that next Market Day, being Wednesday the 6th of November, the Country Makers will supply the great Demand."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Oct. 24, 1765. The market days were the first and third Wednesdays of each month. On Nov. 6, there was the same great demand. Everything was "immediately bought up," as all ranks of people took "a laudable Pride in wearing what is made among ourselves." It was hoped "to convince the most incredulous, that we are not so destitute of either Ingenuity, Materials, or public spirit, as has been alleged."—Ibid., Nov. 7, 1765 and see ibid., Dec. 19, 1765 Jan. 2, 1766.

The "Stamp Act Congress" at New York (see Oct. 7) adjourns. The clerk was directed to make a copy of the proceedings of the congress for the use of each one of the colonies. Two sets were sent to England in different villages.—See Authentic Account of the Proceedings of the Congress held at New York in MDCCCLXX (Cambridge, 1790), N. Y. Pub. Library. See also The Hist. of Political Parties in the Province of N. Y., 1760-1776, by Carl L. Becker, in Bulletin No. 286, Univ. of Wis., April 1909.

James McEvers, the "Distributor of Stamps" having resigned (see Aug. 30), and the care of the stamps having devolved upon the Lieutenant-governour and his officers, and the Manager of the stamp office, London, are informed by David Colden (son of the lieutenant-governour) regarding the situation in New York.—Colden Papers (1877), 50-52.

Colden writes to Sec. Conway that he now has "five packages of stamped Paper for this Province in the Governor's House in the Fort, and two for Connecticut, Three more for Rhode Island." He thus describes the circumstances of their arrival: "I desired the Captains of His Majesty's Ships of War, now in the River, to protect the ship in which they should come. For this purpose a sloop was placed at 29 Rev. Lambertus de Ronde writes to the classics of Amsterdam: "That the large 'New Dutch Church' is, inside and out, most sumptuously fitted up, while the old building [on Garret's], is left to decay, just for the purpose of having the upper hand."— Eccl. Rec., VI: 4031, Feb. 2, 1766.

30 Peter Rushton, after various bequests, leaves the rest of his estate to his grandson, Peter Rushton Maverick. Referring to this, Peter Maverick writes: "The house and lot of Peter Rushton was on the north side of Liberty street, 25 feet west of Liberty Place. In 1802 Peter Rushton Maverick sold it to the Quakers, and a meeting house was built. This was afterward sold to the noted Grant Thurstons."— Grants of Will's, VII: 83, and appendix, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Collections.

Oct. 26 Engaged in the service of the British Navy and on board, was brought to an anchor under the guns of the Fort and protection of His Majesty's Ships. . . . The night after the ship arrived, papers were pasted upon the doors of every public office, and at the corners of the streets, one [of] which I enclose. . . . The Lawyers who have raised the sedition spirit cannot be confided without proper judges."— N. Y. Col. Disc., VII: 768, 769. A facsimile of this paper is shown in Col. Disc., and reads as follows: "Pro Patria "The first Man that either distributes or makes use of Stamped Paper, let him take care of his House, Town, & Effects. "Vox Populi; "We dare"—Ibid., VII: 770.

A day or two later, "package of Stamped Papers were landed from His Majesty's Ship 'Garland' at noontide without a Guard or the least appearance of discontent among the people."— Ibid., VII: 771. Golden gave his reasons to Sec. Conway (March 28, 1766) for bringing the stamped papers into the fort instead of putting them on board the 'Coventry.' In his opinion they would not be safe on the 'Coventry' because "The Winter approached when the Ship must be brought to one of the Wharfs in the Town. her guns must be put on shore and the officers could not prevent the men from leaving the Ship."—Ibid., VII: 823.

The city grants to Augustus van Cortlandt, Oliver de Lancey, and Richard Stockeburgh, water lots in the rear of their properties, having a total frontage on the Hudson River of 688 ft. (between the present Rector St. and Battery Place) and extending to a line 200 ft. beyond low-water mark with the obligation that each of the grantees shall make and leave to the city three streets, each 40 ft. in width: First (later Greenwich St.), at high-water mark; Second (later Washington St.), 130 ft. farther westward, at or near low-water mark; and Third (later West St.), across the outer end of the lots.— City Grants, Lib. C, 297-318.

The new free bridge (see Jan. 2, 1759), which "has for some Time been out of Repair, and dangerous to pass . . . is in better Repair than ever, well founded upon Stone, so it is hopeful, the Publick will have a good Bridge for many Years, and will be free of paying that exorbitant Toll as before."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 28, 1765.

A news item in the Mercury describes the reception given to the ships in which the odious stamps were brought to New York. "All the Vessels in the Harbour lower'd their Colours, to signify Mourning Lamnentation and Woe." Mr. McEvers, who was asked by the governor to take care of the stamps, refused to have anything to do with them (see Oct. 23) it was reported that not one of the persons appointed would execute the office. "The stamps are now a destructive thing to the Country, and are more abominable, and dangerous to be meddled with, than if they were infected with the Pestilence."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 23, 1765.

In the same issue it is reported "that most of the Gentlemen in Town, have entered into a Resolution not to buy any European Manufactures till their Trade is more opened, the Sugar Act altered, and the Stamp Act is repealed: It is hoped this will animate the Country People to make plenty of Linens and Woolens, as they may be assured of quick Sale, and good Prices."— Ibid.

28 The law had been assented to by the towns of Gloversville, and Johnstown, by the adjourned Town Meeting of Canajoharie, on the 7th Inst. (see Notes of the 26th N. Y. Lib., 42, and 64, Vol. I. Ackland is mentioned in an advertisement as "at Crown Point, near New-York."—N. T. Merc., Feb. 1, 1768. James Ackland did not appear in the trade until after the 31st of January, 1766, when he entered the General Mercantile Establishment, and was known as the "Glover's Hook Tavern" of John Brandon.—N. T. Merc., April 27, 1766.

A plan of the city is made, "showing the Position of His Mas- jesty's ships" at this station. The original is now filed.
NEW YORK, July 7, 1769.

At this alarming Crisis when we are threatened with a Deprivation of those invaluable Rights, which our Ancestors purchased with their Blood—Rights, which as Men, we derive from Nature; as Englishmen, have conferred on us by our excellent Constitution; and which once torn from us, will in all Probability never be restored. At this important Time, when we are exerting every legal Effort to preserve our Selves and Property the complete and undisturbed Enjoyment of them, it is the last Consequence to act with Vigilance and Unanimity. It must appear obvious to every unprejudiced Mind, that Supineness would prove as fatal to us, as a Dilution; and therefore, the more effectually to guard against both—A Number of the Inhabitants of this City, have determined to drop all Party Distinction that may have originated from a Difference in Sentiments in other Matters—to form Ourselves into a Society, under the general and honourable Appellation, of the United Sons of Liberty, and strictly to adhere to the following RESOLUTIONS.

I. To hold a general Meeting on the first Monday Evening in every Month, at the House of Mr. De La Montagne.

II. To convene occasionally if Circumstances occur to render it necessary.

III. That we will support the constitutional Measures entered into by the Merchants, Traders, and other Inhabitants of this City.

IV. The grand Design of this Association being to Support the Measures entered into by the Merchants, Traders, and other Inhabitants of this City—That, with all Men in every Manner whatever contribute to the Execution of this Object, by all legal Means in our Power.

V. That we will not knowingly purchase from, nor sell to, any Persons or Persons who shall violate the Non-importation Agreement.

VI. That we will neither let Houses to, nor hire them from, that we will not employ, nor be employed by, nor in any way hold Connexion in Trade with, those who violate the Agreement, or with such as shall Condone their base Conduct, by dealing with them.

VII. That we do hereby and irrevocably refuse such Measures, and such only, as shall appear best calculated to promote the general Good of the Colonies. That the sole End of the United Sons of Liberty, is to secure their common Rights—That the Object we have principally in View, is to repeal the Acts imposing Duties on Paper, Glass, &c. and that we will not as a Society under the said Appellation, engage in any other Matter whatever.

N.B. The United Sons of Liberty, are to hold a Meeting on Monday Evening next, privately at Seven o’Clock, at the House of Mr. De La Montagne; and do hereby publicly invite every Lover of constitutional Freedom, to meet with them at the above-mentioned Time and Place.

Montresor writes that he was "sent for" by the Governor with Captain Sowers [or Sower] (aged 40) to ascertain the present situation of the Fort. We took down the boarded fences of the wood yard and part of the Garden that screened the fire of the Flank, also removed from the Works, the wood that was piled against them, divided the Crows foot in 4 parts for the Gates & Sorties, fixed the Chevaux des Fraîche [sic] within the Gate 4 deep. We saw those that in the Works cleared the pile-wood from the left face of the North Polygon to give a raking fire to the right Flank Guns—Made our report to the General. This by request of the Governor & direction from the General—Montresor’s Jour., op. cit., 355-37. The report to the governor in Montresor’s handwriting is preserved among the Golden Papers in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. It is endorsed—"and November 1765. Report of the Engineers for the most necessary and expeditious way of putting the Fort (George in N. Y.) in an immediate posture of Defence." Further orders concerning the fort were given to Montresor on Nov. 29 (v. o.).

In a long review of current events, published on Nov. 7 (v. o.) in a news letter to be sent abroad, the following account of the stirring occurrences of this day appeared:

"November 1, many Letters were sent and found, and Papers stuck up all over the Town, some of them in a good Stile, threatening, in general to every Person and his Property, who should apply for, deliver out, receive or use a Stamp... or should delay the Execution of any customary Public Business without them. About 7 o’Clock in the Evening two Companies appeared, one of them in the Fields, where a moveable Gallows was erected, on which was suspended the Liberty Man and a Man who has been honoured by his Country with an elevated Station, but whose public Conduct (supposed to aim at the Introduction of arbitrary Power, and especially in his officiously endeavouring to enforce the Stamp Act, universally held by his Majesty’s faithful and loyal Subjects) to be unexceptionable has unhappily drawn upon himself the general Resentment of his Country. The Figure was made much to resemble the Person it was intended to represent. In his Hand was a stamped Paper, which he seemed to court the People to receive... at his Back hung a Drum, on his Breast a Label, supposed to allude to some former Circumstances of his Life. By his Side hung, with a Boot in his Hand, the grand Deceiver of Mankind, seeming to urge him to Perseverance in the Cause of Slavery. While the Multitude gathered round these Figures, the other Party with another Figure representing the same Person, seated in a Chair, and carried by Men, proceeded, the Effigy upon the Top of it they proceeded with great Rapidity towards the Fields. About the same Time the other Party was preparing to move to the Fort, with the Gallows as it stood erect on its Frame, and Lanterns fix’d on various Parts of it. When the two Parties met, and every Thing was in order, a general Silence ensued, and Proclamation was made that no Stones should be thrown, no Windows broken, and no injury offered to any one... and all this was punctually [sic] observed. The whole Multitude then returned to the Fort, and though they knew the Guns were charged, and saw the Ramparts lined with Soldiers, they intrepidly marched with the Gallows, Coat, &c. up to the very Gates, where they knocked, and demanded Admission, and if they had not been restrained by some humane Persons, who had Influence over them, would doubtless have taken the Fort, as I hear there were 4 or 500 Seamen, and many others equally intrepid, and acquainted with military Affairs. But as it seems no such Extravagances were expected in the Fort, when they were left, the whole company to the Effigy, they retired from the Fort Gate to the Bowling Green, the Pallisadoes of which they instantly tore away, marched with the Gallows, &c. into the Middle of the Green, (still under the Muzzles of the Fort Guns) where with the Pallisades and Flanks of the Fort, made a grand display. In about two hours, the Lieutenant of the Coach House, they soon reared a large pile of Wood round the Whole, to which setting Fire, it soon kindled to a great Flame, and reduced the Coach, Gallows, Man, Devil, and all to Ashes.

It is probable the Conductors of this Expedition intended the whole Affair should have ended here; but while many of them were attending the Fire, a large Detachment of Volunteers making their Passage thro’ the other Side of the Palmades, went on another Expedition, & repaired to the House (lately known by the Name of Vaux-Hall,) and now in the Occupation of Mr. James, the Royal Regiment of Artillery:... This Gentleman was one of those who had unfortunately incurred the Resentment of the Public, by Expressions imputed to him. It is said he had taken a Lease of the House for three years, and had obliged himself to return it in the like good Order as he received it. But it has been fitted up in an elegant Manner, and had adjoining a large handsome Garden stored both with Necessaries and Curiosities,... and in it several Summer Houses; The House was genteelly furnish’d with good Furniture; contain’d a valuable Library of choice Books, Papers, Accounts, Mathematical Instruments, Draughts, rich Clothes, Linen, &c. and a considerable Quantity of Wine and other Liquors. The Multitude bursting open the Doors, proceeded to destroy every individual article the House contained... the Beds they cut open and threw the Feathers abroad, broke all the Glasses; Chins, Tables, Chairs, Desks, Trunks, Chests, and making a large Fire at a little Distance, threw in every Thing that would burn... Drank or destroy’d all the Liquor... and left not the least Article in the House which they did not entirely destroy... after which they also beat Pieces of wallpaper and other Articles in the House, leaving it a mere Shell; also destroyed the Summer Houses, and tore up and spoiled the Garden. All this Destruction was completed by about 11 o’Clock. The imagined Cause of Resentment, operated so powerfully, that every Act of Devastation on the Goods of the unhappy Gentleman was considered a Sacrifice to Liberty... Many Military Trophies, even the Colours of the Royal Regiment, were taken and carried off triumphantly.

"The Spirit, of the People, not only of this City and Colony, but of the Neighbouring Colonies, knowing how much depended upon our Behaviour, was highly raised; and great Numbers came from the Country, and Parts adjacent, to attend the important Crisis: Some returned Home satisfied with our Firmness, and determined to maintain their Freedom in their respective Places of Residence, and assist us, if their Assistance should be necessary. But many who came from distant Parts, chose to stay till our Affairs were settled into something of Calmness and Security..."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765. It was in this letter, also, that the phrase "The glorious Uncertainty of the Law," since then so often used, was brought into local prominence.

Colston’s account of this affair is as follows: "On the evening of the 1st day of the Mob began. When after it became dark, they came up to the Fort Gate with a great number of boys carrying Torches & a scaffold on which two images were placed: One to represent the Governor in his grey hairs, & the other the Devil by his side. The scaffold with the Imagines was brought up within the Fort, & the Mobs commenced with great Religious Zeal and Fervour, by beseeching the Seal of Liberty from the Mob. As they went from the Gate they broke open my coach house, took my chariot out of it, & carried it round the Town with the Imagines & return’d to the Fort Gate from whence they carried them to an open place, where they had erected a Jibbets within 100 yards of the Fort Gate, there hung up the Imagines. After hanging some time they were cut down, & burnt in a fire prepared for the purpose together with my Chariot, a single Horse chair & two sledges, our usual Carriages when Snow is on the Ground, which they took out of my Coach House. [For description of this next ‘chariots’ see May 12, 1766.]

While this was going on, a great Number of Gentlemen of the Town, if they can be called so, stood round to observe this outrage on their King’s Governor. The Garrison was at the same time on the Ramparts with preparation sufficient to have destroyed them but not a single return was made in words or otherwise from any Man, whose Instructions, or Orders were not known to the Mob. He says, further, that Maj. James, also, felt the wrath of the mob. They "broke open his house [Vauxhall—see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 931] burnt all his furniture, wearing cloaths & everything in it to a great value [see Dec. 19, 1766], at the same time that his life in the Geography Chamber was in danger."

—from a letter written by Colston to Sec’y Conway, Golden Papers (1877), 54-56. Cf. similar account in a letter to the lords of trade, Dec. 6, 1765, in ibid., 78-82. See, also, the letter dated Nov.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1765 Nov. 8, 1765, from R. R. Livingston to Gen. Monckton in Chalmers Papers (MS.), IV, in N. Y. Pub. Libr. For a subsequent demonstration, see March 1766. For the return of Sam. Francis to Vauxhall, see June 16, 1765.

"A letter addressed to Colen and signed "New York" is posted at the Coffee House and, after remaining there a good part of the day, is delivered " at the Fort Gate. . . . by an unknown hand." N. T. Col. Dun. VII: 77-75; Wilson. Mem. Hist. of N. T., II: 362. It is reproduced as Pl. 38, Vol. IV. Porteous, who is mentioned in this letter, is undoubtedly Capt. Porteous, of the Edinburgh city watch, who fell under the displeasure of the citizens, in 1736, and was hanged on one of the city gates.—Hid.

1 The following letter, dated "One O'clock" and signed by "John Hamden," is addressed to Holt: "As you have hitherto prov'd your self a Friend to Liberty, by publishing such Compositions as had a Tendency to promote the Cause, we are encouraged to hope you will not be deterred from continuing your useful Paper, by groundless Fear of the detestable Stamp Act. However, should you at this Critical Time, shut up the Press, and basely desert us, depend upon it, your House, Person and Effects, will be in imminent Danger: We shall therefore expect your Paper on Thursday as usual: if not, on Thursday Evening—take Care. Sign it the Name, and by Order of a Great Number of the Fre-emates in New-York."—N. T. Post-Bog, Nov. 7, 1765. For Holt's answer, in the form of an announcement, see Nov. 7.

"The Engineers all on Duty this night to fortify the Fort—its Garrison between 150 and 200 strong."—Montresor's Jour., 337.

1 A letter of warning to Colen is found, on this date, "in an Order at the Fort Gate."—Colen MSS. For a reproduction of the letter, see Fl. 38, Vol. IV.

Montresor records in his Journal: "Obliged to spike our Guns on the Battery & also the Ordnance Guns in the Artillery yard. The Engineers Roster settled Capt. Gordon for duty this night. Garrison 133 Rank & File and near 30 officers. Made lodgements in the Salients of the 4 Bastions with fire wood & picketed it. Barricaded the front gate with Cord wood being only the wicket. All the Officers in town were ordered from Head Quarters to attend at the Fort every afternoon at 4 o'clock and those for duty continued there 24 hours. Even the master of the vessel who brought the Stamps his life being threatened, was obliged to fly."—Montresor's Jour., 337-38.

Capt. Kennedy (vide infra) gives orders not to allow the stamps to be taken on board the men-of-war. "Many stragglers standing in with arms from several parts even Connecticut, for plunder &c. The Fort pretty well under cover this night. The Governors Family obliged to seek protection on board His Majesty's Ship the Coventry."—Montresor's Jour.. 388. Colen said that Kennedy refused to receive the stamps because he was aware of the design of the mob "to fortify the Fort by them by threatening to be possessor of the City, of which he had in his own & his wife's Right more than perhaps any one Man in it."—Colen Papers (1875), 80-81.

Gage writes to Colen "counselling circumspection with regard to firing at the mob at the Fort."—Colen MSS.

The common council records that: "This Board taking into Serious Consideration the Intimation that his Honor the Lieutenant Governor was willing to Deliver the Stamp'd paper now in Fort George to Captain Kennedy [Archibald Kennedy, Jun.] or any other of the Commanders of the Kings Ships in the Harbour, and that Captain Kennedy, in answer to the Earnest Request Signified to him Last night, Informes that he Cannot or will not Receive the Stamp'd paper; It is therefore Resolved that it appears to this Board absolutely Requisite to Remove the present Dissatisfaction and Save the City from the most Distressing Confusion, that a Committee immediately wait upon his Honor, and his most Requested manner acquaint him with this present dangerous State of things, and Request that for the peace of the City and the preventing of an Effusion of blood he would be pleased to direct that the Stamp'd paper be Delivered into the Care of the Corporation, to be Deposited in the City Hall, and Guarded by the City Watch: This Board do hereby Resolved and Request his Honor that his Honour agreed to the Same, and Returned for answer in the words following:

"Fort George November the 5th 1765 Nov. 5.

"Mr Mayor and Gentlemen of the Corporation.

"In Consequence of your Earnest Request and Engaging to Make Good all Such Sums of money as might be Raised by the distribution of Such of the Stamps, Sent over for the use of this province as shall be Lost destroy'd or Carry'd out of the province, and in Consequence of the unanimous advice of his Majesty's Counsell, and the Convincement of the Commander in Chief of the Kings forces, and to prevent the Effusion of blood and the Calamities of a Civil War, which might ensue by my withholding them from you, I now deliver to you the packages of Stamp'd paper and parchment, that were deposited in my hands, in this his Majesty's Fort, and I doubt not you will take the Charge and Care of them Comformable to your Engagement to me.

I am with Great Regard

Gentlemen your most Obedient humble Servant,

Cadwallader Colen.

"At which time his honour Requested that the mayor would give him a Receipt in the words following (which the mayor Executed accordingly in behalf of this Corporation) Vid. Received of the Honourable Cadwallader Colen Esq! his Majesty's Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief of the province of New York Seven Packages containing Stamp'd paper and parchment all marked No. 1 J M E [McEven] New York, which I promise in behalf of the Corporation of the City of New York to take Charge and Care of, and to be accountable in Case they shall be destroy'd or Carry'd out of the province, as particularly Set forth in the Minutes of the Common Council of the said Corporation of this day Witness my hand in the City of New York this first [fifth] day of November 1765.

"Witness

"John Cruger Mayor

"Li F: Carly Major to the 60th

"James Farquhar

Montresor writes that placards throughout the city threatened " the storming of the Fort this Night" unless the stamps were delivered. The seven boxes were taken "to the city Hall in Carts . . . attended by 5000 people." One hundred barrels of powder had been procured by the defendant. They had intended to "collect the Comm in Chief, also the friends to the Government and have marched them in front when they purposed the attempt of attacking the Fort."—Montresor's Jour., 338-39.

A New York letter says: "The people here are prodigiously discommoded, and their actions are but a little way from an open rebellion: They talk publicly of attacking Fort George, and burnning the stamps: there are 340 soldiers in the fort, and they are putting it in the best posture of defence in their power. The soldiers have spiked up about 90 pieces of cannon on the battery, to prevent their destroy the Houses on the fort. In short they are in a confusion here: and if the Mayor and Aldermen do not Succeed in their endeavours to restore peace and order, many lives must be lost, and great part of the city reduced to ashes."—Upton Coll., II: 307.

An undated broadside headed "[No Stamped Paper to be had]" is issued by Hugh Gaine in lieu of the regular issue of the Mercury for Nov. 4. The date of issue was probably Nov. 5; although given by Ford in The Journal of Hugh Gaine, I: 114, as Nov. 5 (cf. p. 43); while a copy of the broadside, sold at Anderson's Feb. 19-20, 1918, has written in ink at the top "November 7th, 1765." The broadside narrates the meeting of "last Friday Evening on the Commons" (see Nov. 1). It also contains news from Boston (Oct. 25) and from Philadelphia (Oct. 31).—From copy preserved in N. Y. Hist. Soc. There were two subsequent folios printed by Gaine with the same heading before the regular issues of the Mercury were resumed on Nov. 5. They doubtless were in lieu of the issues of Nov. 11 and Nov. 18; the earlier one is preserved in the Yale University Library; the later one in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. See also Aug. 3, 1753; and Early N. Y. Newspapers, II: 422.

"Perfect tranquility (as to appearances) this day."—Montresor's Jour., 339.

A manuscript notice addressed "To the Freeholders & Inhabitants of the City of New York[.]" is posted at the Coffee House, and after remaining there a good part of the day, it is taken down after night and brought to the governor.—Colen MSS. It is reproduced as Pl. 38, Vol. IV.

CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1765

11

Colden receives a memorial from Maj. James in regard to his dwelling-house, burned by "a Mob" (see Nov. 1), with a loss of 300 "chose Books, a great many of His Majesty's Papers & Plans, besides all his Manuscripts & Curiosities of Antiquity," etc.—Colden MSS. Cf. Montresor's Jour., 337. The assembly compensated Maj. James for his loss on Dec. 19, 1766 (q.v.).

7

And in a letter to be sent abroad, reviewing the recent events and the present situation in America and particularly in New York in regard to the rights of the colonies, is published in the Post-Boy. It mentions the meeting and activities of the "Stamp Act Congress" (see Oct. 7), the landing of the stamps (see Oct. 26), the general meeting of merchants on Oct. 31 (q.v.), the burning of the governor's effigy, and the attack on Maj. James's residence (see Nov. 1).—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765.

John Holt, printer of the Post-Boy, announces that he "has concluded to continue his weekly Publications, as usual, upon unstamp'd Paper; which as they have been hitherto, he intends ever shall be sacred to Liberty, and consequently to Virtue, and Religion, the Good of his Country and Mankind. And he hopes that Country which he has earnestly endeavoured to serve, and those constitutional Laws, which he has ever obey'd and endeavoured to maintain, will not abandon him in any Hazards to which he is exposed by his difficult Situation."—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765. This was probably in answer to the letter addressed to him on Nov. 2 (q.v.).

In a letter from New York "a young Lady in Town" writes "...I have removed the artillery from the Green, and resolved to reign the charms of dress and let a horrid homespun covering (which can become none but a country wreath) take place of the rich brocade, and graceful satina."—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 7, 1765.

Montresor states that the lawyers here are deemed by the people to be "Hornets and Firebrands of the Constitution. The Plunderers and Incendiaries of the present Ruin."—Montresor's Jour., 359.

Colden, who has received no instructions up to this time regarding what to do with the stamped paper, writes Soc. Conway: "Has not the Mayor and Corporation by taking the stamp'd papers voluntarily into their custody assumed the office of Distributor of Stamps? It evidently appears now who were the conductors of the Mob by its immediately ceasing in every appearance as soon as the Packages were delivered to the Mayor and Corporation. The leaders of the Mob issued their Edicts from time to time by affixing their Placarts in the Merchants Coffee House and at the corners of the streets where they remained whole days and nights, I transmit copies of two of the most remarkable of them, the one published in the Coffee-House of which I preserve them as an evidence of the handwriting, in both the same, may lead to a discovery. By the last which is a kind of Proclamation of Peace, they disown every Authority that is not derived from their Representatives. On this principle only was the Demand made of having the stamped papers deliver'd to the Corporation and by this they hope to preserve their influence... ."

"People in general are averse to Taxes of any kind. The Merchants in this place think they have a right to every freedom of Trade which the Subjects of Great Britain enjoy. But the Inhabitants of the Country are absolutely free of the seditious spirit which rages in this Town."—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 773-74.

One of the seditious papers referred to is an anonymous letter addressed to Colden, accusing him of having bound himself by oath "to be the Chief Murderer of their Rights and Privileges," etc. It threatens him with death if he fires upon the town. This paper was put up at the Coffee-House of New York, on Friday the 1st of November, 1765, and after remaining there good part of the day was deliver'd at the Fort Gate in the Evening by an unknown hand.—Ibid., VII: 774-75.

The recorder submits to the common council an "Address to his Excellency Sir Henry Moore Baronet, Captain General and Governor in Chief," etc.; it is approved and ordered to be engrossed. The address congratulates the new governor and his family on their safe arrival, and continues: "While we look back upon the Administration of your immediate Predecessor, General Montgomer, who governed the Colony with a Spirit of Dignity, Justice and Tenderness, never to be forgotten by the People of this Country, we esteem it a fresh Proof of his Majesties paternal Care over us, that he was pleased instantly upon his Reappointment to Berkeley to make Provision for our_Lives, by delivering the Charge of the Colony, to a Gentleman whose Fame promises us so happy a Succession... ."
1765
Nov. 14

"It is indeed unfortunate to your Excellency, that the Colonies in general, are now groaning under the Burthen of great Grievances, and filled with fearful apprehensions of the Loss of Some of their most valuable Priviledges: But in no small Allegiation of our Grief, that we can assure your Excellency we feel no Abatement of that gracious Protection, which has so gloriously distinguished the Princes of his Majesties illustrious House. And as we do with undismelled Sincerity, profess to this Most Noble Sovereign, that we are no less than most humbly wished for we rejoice in the confident Expectation of the Preservation & Establishment of the publick Peace and Felicity; and shall always be ready on your Parts, not only to contribute to the Maintenance of good order in this City, but to the Comfort and Ease of yourself and Family."—M. G. C., VII. 444-45. At the same time, "the Draft of a freedom to be preferred to his said Excellency" was approved. The same "Engrossed on Parchment and the Seal of this Corporation affixed thereto" was ordered "to be Enclosed in a Gold Box, with the City Arms engraved thereon." The "Draft of a freedom to be preferred to his Excellency the honourable Thomas Gage . . . was Likewise Read and agreed to."—Ibid., 445-46. The governor was presented with "the said address, as also with the freedom of this Corporation," on Nov. 21 (q.v.).

John Jones is removed from his House in the Fields, to that of Mr. Whitehead, formerly near the Free-Mason's Arms, near the Exchange: Where he will endeavour to give as elegant Entertainment, as can be had anywhere else, in America. . . . "—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 14, 1765.

The "Minerva" arrives with "stamped paper" (see Dec. 21). The amours of the government to put the Stamp Act into execution, but the council advises again it as impracticable.—Col. Coun. Min., 470.

Concerning this "secon Importation of Stamps," the "Sons of Liberty, ever vigilant for their Country," expressed alarm and were "indefatigable in their Endeavours to have them lodged in the First, in the City-Hall. A respectful Application was made to the Mayor and Corporation, who worthily exerting themselves, they were accordingly landed on Saturday Morning last, and deposited there. The Magistrates cannot be too much praised for their noble Endeavours to preserve Peace and quiet the Minds of the People, who can they do it without making any Sacrifice to our Liberties to Despoticism."—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 21, 1765.

Montresor records under this date: "Fort George was dismantled by order of the Governor."—Montresor's Jour., 339-40.

See Nov. 11.

Gov. Moore, in his first address to the council and assembly, says: "I flatter myself, that your Zeal for His Majestys Service, and the Good of your Country, will engage you to carry on your Session with the Unanimity becoming your Station, and the Purposes for which you are convened; Let these great Objects be ever present before you, and have such Influence on your Conduct, as not to be underserving of that Protection which has been extended by your Most Gracious Sovereign, to His most distant Subjects. My ready Concurrence shall never be wanting in every Measure consistent with the King's Instructions, which can tend to promote the Interests of this Province; and I shall be extremely happy to have it in my Power, as much as it is in my Inclination, to make it the most flourishing Part of His Majestys Dominions in America."—Assemb. Jour., II: 782. For the assembly's answer, see Nov. 22.

The Dutch Church presents an address of welcome to Sir Henry Moore, the new governor.—Exeter Rec., VII: 4021-24.

Gov. Moore is the recipient of the address and freedom voted for by the common council on Nov. 14 (q.v.), and makes reply as follows: "Gentlemen, I return to you my hearty thanks for this Address, and for your Expressions of Regard for myself and Family. It will be no small comfort to me, if my arrival here can, in any Shape, contribute to the Public Peace and Tranquility. Swathing on my part shall be wanting to establish them on a Lasting foundation, and from your assurances of Duty & Loyalty to His Majesty, as well as readiness to make the best Use of the Power and Privileges which he is pleased to bestow, I have no doubt of obtaining so desirous an End."—M. C. C., VII: 448. A manuscript draft of this answer appended to the address is in file no. 4 in city clerk's record-room.

The Post-Boy of this date expresses itself regarding the government thus: "the utility which appears in the present Behaviour of our new Governor, endears him to the People of this Colony: His ordering the hostile Preparations at the Fort, to be entirely stopt, and, above all, his declaring he had nothing to do with the Stamps, has rid the People of those Fears which Proceedings anterior to his Arrival, had justly suggested. For besides the Liberty, on Friday last, gave him the most expressive Marks of their Joy, by their meeting, in great Numbers, in the Fields, where they erected Pyramids and Inscriptions to his Honour, and one of the grandest Bonfires ever exhibited in this City. They had previously sent him a congratulatory Address on his Arrival, which being dictated by the most sincere Gratitude, was not the least pathetic for being destitute of the Pageantry which often attends those of more regular Bodies. His Excellency received it with the greatest Politeness, and made a complaisant Answer."—N. T. Post-Boy, Nov. 21, 1765.

The common council appoints a committee "to prepare the draft or plan of a Bridewell as also an estimate of the expense thereof and refer the same to this Board with all Convenient Speed for their approbation."—M. C. C., VII: 449. The Encyclopædia Britannica says that the name "Bridewell" is derived from that of a castle situated, formerly near the Fleet-Bridge, now the Chester, and long used as the occasional residence of the kings of England. This castle, named "from the well of St. Bride or St. Bridget close by," was, in 1555, made over to the city of London by Edward VI to be used as a penitentiary or reformatory. Since that time the term has become a synonym for reformatory.

The need of a "Bridewell" in New York was suggested as early as May 7, 1770 (q.v.), but nothing had been done. On Nov. 10, 1776, a second committee was appointed to see about its construction; and in the following year, on Oct. 14 (q.v.), it was decided "to fit up without delay" two rooms "in the New Goal House [see Dec. 1, 1776, and April 9, 1777] for the use & purpose of a Bridewell."—M. C. C., VII: 46, 87. On Nov. 20, 1776 (q.v.), an arrangement was made whereby William Dobbs, a mariner, was to be keeper of the place until "the first of May Next" in return for £35 and the "profits arising from the Labour thereof." He continued as keeper and was paid for his services and expenses from time to time.—Ibid., VII: 92, 213, 227, 243. Payments were also made for furniture, fuel, etc., for the use of the Bridewell.—Ibid., VII: 98, 99, 100, 102, 103, 112, 120, 123, 134, 135, 245, 267, 269, 282, 337.

On Apr. 7, 1773, a committee, which had been formed to Enquire into the State of the Bridewell, was kept in a fall upon ways and Means for putting the Same upon some better Regula- tions," reported that Dobbs would undertake its management for the next year for a salary of £50 and "his Usual Perquisites," and "render to the board every three months an account of all the profits arising therefrom. This was approved.—Ibid., VII: 444. But, soon after (July 13, 1773), Dobbs having signified his intention to resign, Alexander Montcrieff was appointed keeper, his services to begin Aug. 1 at a salary of £50 per annum.—Ibid., VII: 445.

In Nov. 1774, the first steps were taken for the erection of a bridewell, the last public building commenced by the city (but not finished) before the Revolution. See, further, Feb. 7, 1774.

In answer to the governor's address of Nov. 19 (q.v.), the assembly says: "We have great Reason to rejoice in the Continuance of his Majesty's paternal Care and Tenderness to us, who, when he thought, it was proper to exercise Privileges, (he) gave them to Monckton . . . was graciously pleased to appoint your Excellency to the chief Command . . . The Duties of our Stations, and the Purposes for which we are convened, have ever been the great Objects of our Pursuit; and will, we hope, invariably influence your Conduct in a Manner that may enhance the Renowne of his Majesty's unremitted Protection."—Assemb. Jour., II: 784-85.

Sir William Johnson writes to the lords of trade: "The late furious & audacious behaviour of the New Yorkers—excited & supported by several Persons of Consequence there are doubtless laid before the Lords by every faithful servant who dare write, and is not afraid that his House shall be burned, or himself massacred.
28 Zachariah Hood, stamp officer for Maryland, is known to have fled to this city. Several small parties seek "the Place of his Concealment." He is found at Blushing and induced to "sign a resignation from the office of Stamp Officer in Maryland." The company returns "carrying the Flag of Liberty, with the Words Liberty, Property and no Stamps." On Dec. 2, M'CV's (see Aug. 30) was compelled to sign a resignation which would supplement one he had already given to Lieut. Gov. Colden and the Council."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 5, 1765.

29 "Peter Parley," a native of America, having been appointed one of the inspectors of stamps for America, finds, on his arrival in New York from London, that the stamps are "extremely disagreeable and odious to all ranks and conditions" of his countrymen and therefore resigns.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Nov. 28, 1765. See also Dec. 14.

30 Montresor writes: "I received Orders from the General by his Aid de Camp to dismantle the Fort and erase its present temporary parapet."—Montresor's Jour., 340. This work was in process on Dec. 4.—Ibid., 341.

An anonymous letter was received on Nov. 26 by the clerk of assembly, with instructions on the envelope to open it in the assembly. On this day it is read, and found to be scandalous and seductive. The text is badly spelt and punctuated, is contained in the minutes.—Assem. Jour., II: 787. It was signed "Freedom." and the writer refers to himself as one of the "Sons of Liberty." A proclamation was issued, on Dec. 2, offering a reward for the discovery of the author or authors.—Cal. Hist. Misc., Eng., 1765.

Montresor writes: "A son of liberty stabbed with a Bayonet by one of the Royal Artillery."—Montresor's Jour., 341.

In a message to the assembly, Gov. Moore says: "The Expenditure of furnishing the King's Troops in America with Quarters, Carriages, and other Necessaries, being by an Act passed the last Session of Parliament, to be defrayed by the respective Colonies, the Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces hath in consequence thereof, demanded of this Province that Provision which the Act requires, for the Troops at any Time quartered within, or marching through this Province."

On Dec. 13 (q. v.), the assembly passed resolutions relating to this demand. Colden sends to England an account of the province. "The People of New York," he says, "are properly distinguished into different Ranks."

1 The Proprietors of the Large Tracts of Land who include within their claims from 100,000 to above one million of acres under one Grant . . .

2 "The Gentlemen of the Law make the second class in which properly are included both the Bench and the Bar Both of them act on the same principles and are of the most distinguished Rank in the Policy of the Province . . .

3 The Merchants make the third class many of them have suddenly rose from the lowest Rank of the People to considerable fortunes and chiefly in the last war, by illicit Trade . . .

4 In the last Rank may be placed the Farmers & Mechanics . . . This last Rank comprehends the bulk of the People and in them consists the strength of the Province. They are the most useful and the most moral, but alas! the Dupe of the former, and often are ignorantly made their Tools for the worst purposes . . .

Colden then goes on to describe the great power of the lawyers. They dominate the Assembly and put their own views of the Constitution into it, and "every man is afraid of offending them and is deterred from making any public opposition to their power and the dayly increase of it." The lieutenant-governor tells also about the controversy over the judges' commissions (see Aug. 12, 1761), the discussion caused by the Stamp Act (see Aug. 31), his correspondence with Gen. Gage in reference to the defence of the city (see July 8 and Sept. 2), the strengthening of the fort (see Sept. 25), and the events of Nov. 1 (q. v.). In conclusion, he says: "the authors of this Seditious Spirit in the Colonies have extended their views even to Great Britain, in hopes of raising a spirit of discontent among the Manufacturers there: They publish in the Newspapers that the importation of British Manufactures are greatly decreased since the duties on the American Trade and that the Colonies are under a necessity of setting up the Manufactures they which otherwise work would go to Great Britain . . . What has been published of the Manufactures lately set up, are absolute Falsehoods . . .

All the wool in America is not sufficient to make Stockens for the Inhabitants and the severe Winters in North America render the production of Wool, in great quantities impracticable.

The merchants of New York, and the other places, have entered into an Agreement, not to import any goods from England the next year, unless the stamp act is repealed; this scheme is calculated solely to influence the People in England and should it be executed the people in America will pay an extravagant Price for old Moth eaten Goods, and such as the Merchants could not other- wise sell."—N. Y. Col. Hist., VII: 795-800.

A number of the inhabitants, among them many of the Sons of
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1765 Dec.
Liberty,' hold a meeting "in the Green opposite the Work House" and choose a committee "to wait on the Gentlemen of the Law in this Place, and intreat them to follow Business as usual, without paying any Regard to the Stamp Act."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 9, 1765.
See Dec. 10.

Montresor writes: "The Governor proposed to the Assembly to furnish money for gaying this Harbour, Town Environs &c., surveyed &c."—Montresor's Jour., 342.

The assembly again prepares petitions to be presented to King George III and to parliament (see Oct. 18, 1764). These express their sentiments of love and loyalty for the king and the government but repeat the list of grievances. The colonists complain of the "internal Taxes and Duties on Merchandise for raising a Revenue in this Colony, by Authority of Parliament, the Extention of Admiralty Jurisdictions to causes only cognizable at Common Law, and the granting of Appeals from the Verdicts of Juries."
In addition, they declare that "the Restrictions lately laid on our Trade, necessarily tend as well to a most dangerous Monopoly in Favour of our West-India Islands, as to the Ruin of this Continent, by discouraging the Improvement of our Lands," and, in regard to the prohibition of a lawful tender in paper money, "humbly apprehended that the Statute making our Bills of Credit no legal tender for the future, will be found exceedingly detrimental both to

Dec. 13. The assembly passes the following resolutions: That where his Majesty's Forces are quartered in Barracks belonging to the King, they are always furnished with the necessaries required without any Expend to the Countries in which they are quartered.
That as there are barracks belonging to his Majesty, in this City, and in the City of Albany, sufficient to accommodate double the number of Forces contained in the Return laid before the General Assembly, an Application to them appears altogether unnecessary at present. That if any Expend should be necessary to quarter, they are to be furnished by the Governors themselves accordingly. Sir Jeffrey Amherst knows this place well and the People in it, ...

The Dependency or independency of the Colonies seems now to be the crisis whatever resolution be taken on the extraordinary events of this day, as it is certain that they have a strong reason to worry themselves accordingly. Sir Jeffrey Amherst knows this place well and the People in it, ...

It having been represented to the assembly "that an illegal Attempt has been made . . . to deprive the Inhabitants of this Colony of their ancient and undoubted Right of Trials by their Peers, by bringing an Appeal from the Verdict of a Jury," these resolutions are passed: "That the Trial by Jury, is the Right of the Subject, not only by the common Law, by Statute Law, and the Laws of this Colony, but essential to the Safety of their Lives, Liberty and Property. . . . That an Appeal from the Verdict of a Jury, is subservive of that Right, and that the Crown cannot legally constitute a Court to take Cognizance of any such Appeal.
. . . That Cadwaladder Colden, Esq., the Lieutenant Governor of this Colony, has, to the utmost of his Power, endeavoured to give Success to that dangerous Machination so naturally destructive of the Security, and Peace of the Subject. . . . That the Conduct of the Council of the Governor Colden has filled the Minds of his Majesty's Subjects in this Colony, with Jealousies and Distress, to the great Prejudice of the public Service, and the Repose of the Inhabitants. . . . That it is the Duty of this House immediately to represent Home, the Illegality and the dangerous Tendency of the late Innovation."
1765

The "Gentlemen of the Law" resolve "to carry on Business as Dec. usual, without paying any regard to the Stamp Act."—N. T.

20

Mere, Dec. 23, 1764. See Dec. 6.

21

Gow, Moore writes to Sec. Conway of the measures he has been compelled to take, "but the inconveniences which result in regard to the Stamp Act. "As it was not in my power to employ open force, I had no other remedy left but to let the People be sensible of the inconveniences which of course would attend the suspension they so much desired of the Stamp Act, and the beginning already to be very severely felt, for all kind of business has stood still since that time. I have absolutely refused the holding of any Courts of Administration or Chancery which together with the Courts of Common Law are now shut up, and as no vessel will be suffered to go out of the Harbour all their Commercehere must be inevitably ruined if they persevere in their obstinate manipulation more."—N. Y. Col. Hist., VII: 92a. See Jan. 16, 1766. The prevailing conditions are depicted in greater detail in the following extract of a letter from New York, appearing probably in a London newspaper of the same date: "Our port is shut; no vessels cleared out; no law and no money circulating; in short, all trade and trade seems to be at an end. The country people, that are willing to pay, being their produce to market to raise money, but can scarce sell any thing. Flax-seed, that other years sold at 12s. to 14s. per bushel, not to mention last year when it sold at 18s. to 20s. per bushel, is now no more than 5s. to 6s. per bushel, and but little sells at that. A great many Merchants that can pay now, in order to prevent remittances from being made to your part of the world. The people of the Province seem to have such an aversion to taking the Stamp-papers, that they will sooner die than take them. What the event will be is really to be dreaded."—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., III: 342.

22

"The Post-Boy states that on this night, between twelve and one o'clock, a large number of armed men went on board the Minerva [see Nov. 15, Capt. Tillet, lying at Rotten-Row, and demanded the Stamp'd Papers, supposed to be on board, belonging to the Colony of Georgia. They were sold, but the money was not instantly delivered into Fort George; notwithstanding which, they searched the Vessel in every Part, and finding there was none on board, returned without doing any Mischief."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 16, 1765.

23

Several prisoners (debtors) in the new gaol effect their escape by striking down the keepers when the latter are locking up the several wards, thus procuring the keys and unlocking the doors. The Post-boy explains: "It is said the Prisoners concerned in this Escape, have dropped Papers about Town, declaring that they should not have formed such a Design, had it not been that Business was at a Stand by reason of the Stamp Act, and they had no Prospect of a Discharge by the usual Methods of the Law."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 16, 1765.

24

Owing to the difficulty of obtaining slate, stone, etc., for building materials, the legislature suspends, until Jan. 1, 1768, the fire pre vention statute of Dec. 31, 1764 (st. c.), which required their use, after Jan. 1, 1766, for construction purposes south of Fresh Water.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 869. See Dec. 31, 1768.

25

26

Michel Guillaume St. Jean de Crevécoeur is naturalized as John Hector St. John by act of the legislature.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 899-900. Crevécoeur lived in New York at intervals between 1764 and 1790, and during that time took numerous jaunts through the colonies.—Crevécoeur, Letters from an American Farmer (1904), xiii-xx. For his description of New York City, see 1776.

27

Montresor states that a crowd collected to destroy Capt. Ken dey's house but was "suppressed by the Mayor." The mob is said to have been employed by Eliott to carry away the last day of this year."—Montresor's Jour, 343.

28

29

1766

30

Some time prior to this date, a wind-mill was erected on the Rutgers farm, near the corner of the present Fourth, Olive St. and New Bowery. It is shown on Pl. 40, Vol. I, which constitutes the only intimation found as to the time of its building. See Landmark Map Ref, Key, III: 964; Pl. 174.

In or about this year, Andrew Elliot, the collector and receiver-general, purchased 17 acres of land lying on the Bowery Road, and erected a handsome country-house (the modern site being on the north side of 9th St., 100 ft. west of Broadway), calling it "Milo," after an estate in Scotland belonging to a member of his family.—Liber Deeds, XXXVII: 808. This estate was later the property of Robert Richard Randall (see June 5, 1790), who, in 1801, devised it to establish the "Sailors' Snug Harbor."—Ibid., XLVI: 312. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1864), 639-40; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 341

31

In a letter to Dr. Abel Stevens, the birth of Methodism in New York City in 1766 is thus described by Dr. G. C. M. Roberts: "A few of them [the Irish Palatines] only were Wesleyans. Mrs. Barbara Heck, who had been residing in New York since 1763, visited them frequently. . . . It was when visiting them on one of these occasions that she found some of them engaged in a game of cards. . . . Her spirit was roused, and, doubtless emboldened by her long and intimate acquaintance with them in Ireland, she seized the cards, threw them into the fire, and then most solemnly warned them of their danger and duty. Leaving them, she went immediately to the dwelling of [Philip] Embury, who was her cousin. It was located upon Barrack-street, now Park Place. After narrating what she had seen and done . . . she appealed to him to be no longer silent, but to preach the word forthwith. She carried his excuses, and urged him to commence at once in his own house, and to his own people. He consented, and she went out and collected four persons, who, with herself, constituted his audience. After singing and prayer he preached to them and enrolled them in a class. He continued thereafter to meet them weekly."—Stevens, Hist. of Meth. Episc. Ch. in U. S., II: 94-95. Soon Embury's house could not hold all who desired to hear, and a larger room was not far from the quarters of the British troops hired. About Feb. 1767, Capt. Thomas Webb "of the King's service, and also a soldier of the cross and a spiritual son of John Wesley" began to help with the preaching.—Buckley, Hist. of Meth. in the U. S., I: 120-21. The next step was the renting of "the rigging loft," for which, see 1767.

32

In this year, a petition was presented to the consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church "praying that another Church might be Erected upon some of the Grounds belonging to the Church for Establishing Liesen on the Island of Manhattan, an English service in the Afternoon as also to Accommodate numbers of persons with seats who now had none" (see July 16, 1764). For "Carrying on said Building," they declare they will "Liberally subscribe."—Jour. of the proceedings of the Ref. Prot. Dutch Church, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Action on the petition was postponed until the beginning of the following year (see Jan. 1767).

In 1766-7, Lieut. Bernard Ratzer made very accurate surveys of the lower part of Manhattan Island, and portions of Long Island and New Jersey, which were embodied in two maps or plans issued shortly afterward; these are reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pls. 41, 42, and 43; a prospect of the Harbor, and a map of the new province of Gaine in the N. Y. Merc., Aug. 21, 1766 (st. c.); the second on Oct. 1770.

A company of the Sons of Liberty meet at the house of William Howard, and adopt resolutions asserting their determination to "go to the last Extremity," and auxiliaries, their "Lives and Fortunes, effectually to prevent the said Stamp-Act from ever taking Place in this City and Province," etc. They agree to meet at the same place once every fortnight, or more often if necessary.—N. Y. Post-Boy, Jan. 9, 1766.

A news item states that "about 12 o'Clock last Night, a Company of arm'd Men went on board Capt. Haviland's Brig, lying at or near Cruger's Dock, and after obliging the People to deliver up the Keys, and get Lights, they opened the Hatches, searched the Vessel from Stem to Stern, and seized the Stamped Papers for this Province and Connecticut, amounting to 10 Boxes, with which they loaded a large Boat, and proceeded with them to the River to Gaine in the N. Y. Merc., Aug. 21, 1766 (st. c.); the second on Oct. 1770.

A meeting of the council, it is decided to issue a proclamation offering a reward for the discovery of the persons who destroyed the stamped papers. The city magistrates are asked to declare whether the peace can be maintained by civil authority.—Cal. Cent. Min., 470.

Montresor says: "Advertisements placarded throughout the General approbation from the Sons of Liberty to those sons that burnt the Stamps the other night."—Montresor's Jour, 345.
1766 "The mayor and magistrates are of opinion they can for the Jao. future preserve the peace of the city; the people in general disap- pear the representation of the stamps."—G. Col. Min., 470. Cf. Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 752.

13 "We have now in our Harbour, 18 ships, 17 snows, 19 brigs, 13 schooners, and 44 sloops; in all 111 sea vessels."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 13, 1766. See Dec. 21, 1765.

11 A course of experiments and lectures on electricity, and another on magnetism, are advertised to be held this week at the City Arms—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 13, 1766. See also Oct. 26, 1765.

10 A proclamation by Gov. Moore is published, in which, after reciting the recent seizure and destruction of the ten boxes of "stamps, paper and parchments" (see Jan. 6), he promises a reward of $100 for the discovery of the perpetrators. "All Magistrates, Justices, Sheriffs, and other Peace Officers, within this Province, are strictly charged and commanded, diligently to proceed in their Duty, and to do their utmost for the Discovery of, and apprehending the offenders aforesaid, that they may be dealt with according to Law."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 13, 1766.

9 "We are desired to give Notice, That the Society for promoting Arts, etc. are to hold an extraordinary Meeting precisely at Six o'Clock in the Evening Of This Day; when, besides other Business, Persons are to be appointed to adjudge the Premiums [see Dec. 10, 1764] to the several Claimants, who are to produce their Proof on Wednesday for Arts, and the Friday following for Agriculture.—As the Premiums for the Year ensuing will be under the Consideration of the Society at their next stated Meeting, such Persons, as cannot attend on this day, are requested to send their Propositions or Hints in Writing to the Secretary Benjamin Kissam Esq.

14 Montresor records that "Children nightly trample the Streets with lanterns upon Poles & bawling ... the Magistracy either approve of it, or do not dare to suppress it."—Montresor's Jour., 326.

13 Colden writes to Secretary Conway describing the domination of the "Faction" in the province, "composed of the Lawyers, & men of enormous Landed Estates who have obtained an absolute influence in the Assembly."—N. T. Col. Dacs., VII: 824-5.

12 Colden asks for a pension, being near 78 years of age and having been over 40 years in the council.—N. T. Col. Dacs., VII: 825.

11 He says he "can not go to town in this cold Season," without danger to his health.—Ibid., VIII: 812.

16 Gov. Moore, in a communication to Sec. Conway, says: "In my former letters [see Dec. 21, 1765] I have had the honor of informing you that all business was at a stand, and that no courts were sitting as this observer of Parliament was made."—N. T. Coll. Dacs., VII: 806. In another letter of the same date, Moore writes to Dartmouth that a ship from England has been forcibly entered, and the stamped papers taken from on board and destroyed. He adds: "the disorders have become so general that the magistracy are afraid of exerting the powers they have [been] vested with, and dread nothing so much as being called upon in these troublesome times for their assistance."—Ibid., VII: 807.

The "Weighhawk Ferry house," the corner-house at the lower end of Division St. (Greenwich), is kept by Joseph Fitch.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 16, 1766. This was a great resort for country people.

13 "In Testimony of the sincere Regret of every patriotic American for the most interesting Death of the Duke of Cumberland, it is recommended that Gentlemen wear Crapes in their Hats, and the Ladies black Ribbons and Handkerchiefs, as suitable to the present American Spirit."—Suppl. to N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 17, 1766.

12 Montresor states that "The Sons of Liberty assembled at night in the Fields & bespoke a very large supper, but upon some disagreement (which is generally the case) they broke up and dispersed as so many Masts on a Table."—Montresor's Jour., 347.

10 Jonathan Watts, writing from New York to Gen. Monckton, says: "We are just come from Council. The Gov' beaves sensibly and coolly, he lets the stamps sleep till he can hear from home. Secretary Conway by his majesty's order has wrote a most excellent letter to the confusions of America, wise, mild, and just."—Aspin- wall Papers, in Manhattan Soc. Col., 52. In a letter to the Society of the Journeys of America, wise, mild, and just."—Aspin- wall Papers, in Manhattan Soc. Col., 52.

14 Letters from New York say that if the Stamp Act should be repealed, the American Colonies will cheerfully give up to Executive the late Resolution of Council, for fitting out a certain Number of armed Vessels, at their own Expense, to act in the nature of Guardia Contas."—London Chron., Jan. 20, 1766.

13 "We can assure the Publick from good Authority, that Lord Colvill has lately declared, that he would not interrupt any Vessel within its Limits, until he'd receive Orders from England for that Purpose."—N. T. Merc., Jan. 20, 1766.

Charles Oliver Bruff, "Goldsmith and Jeweller, at the Sign of the Tea-pot, Tankard, and Ear-ring, the Corner of King-street, near the Fly-market," advertises that he "makes and mends all Manner of stone Buckles, stone rings, ear-rings, brooches, etc. to a rea of reward of $100 for the discovery of the perpetrators."—"All Magistrates, Justices, Sheriffs, and other Peace Officers, within this Province, are strictly charged and commanded, diligently to proceed in their Duty, and to do their utmost for the Discovery of, and apprehending the offenders aforesaid, that they may be dealt with according to Law."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 13, 1766.

23 "We are desired to give Notice, That the Society for promoting Arts, etc. are to hold an extraordinary Meeting precisely at Six o'Clock in the Evening Of This Day; when, besides other Business, Persons are to be appointed to adjudge the Premiums [see Dec. 10, 1764] to the several Claimants, who are to produce their Proof on Wednesday for Arts, and the Friday following for Agriculture.—As the Premiums for the Year ensuing will be under the Consideration of the Society at their next stated Meeting, such Persons, as cannot attend on this day, are requested to send their Propositions or Hints in Writing to the Secretary Benjamin Kissam Esq.

14 Montresor records that "Children nightly trample the Streets with lanterns upon Poles & bawling ... the Magistracy either approve of it, or do not dare to suppress it."—Montresor's Jour., 326.

13 Colden writes to Secretary Conway describing the domination of the "Faction" in the province, "composed of the Lawyers, & men of enormous Landed Estates who have obtained an absolute influence in the Assembly."—N. T. Col. Dacs., VII: 824-5.

12 Colden asks for a pension, being near 78 years of age and having been over 40 years in the council.—N. T. Col. Dacs., VII: 825.

11 He says he "can not go to town in this cold Season," without danger to his health.—Ibid., VIII: 812.

16 Gov. Moore, in a communication to Sec. Conway, says: "In my former letters [see Dec. 21, 1765] I have had the honor of informing you that all business was at a stand, and that no courts were sitting as this observer of Parliament was made."—N. T. Coll. Dacs., VII: 806. In another letter of the same date, Moore writes to Dartmouth that a ship from England has been forcibly entered, and the stamped papers taken from on board and destroyed. He adds: "the disorders have become so general that the magistracy are afraid of exerting the powers they have [been] vested with, and dread nothing so much as being called upon in these troublesome times for their assistance."—Ibid., VII: 807.

The "Weighhawk Ferry house," the corner-house at the lower end of Division St. (Greenwich), is kept by Joseph Fitch.—N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 16, 1766. This was a great resort for country people.

13 "In Testimony of the sincere Regret of every patriotic American for the most interesting Death of the Duke of Cumberland, it is recommended that Gentlemen wear Crapes in their Hats, and the Ladies black Ribbons and Handkerchiefs, as suitable to the present American Spirit."—Suppl. to N. T. Post-Boy, Jan. 17, 1766.

12 Montresor states that "The Sons of Liberty assembled at night in the Fields & bespoke a very large supper, but upon some disagreement (which is generally the case) they broke up and dispersed as so many Masts on a Table."—Montresor's Jour., 347.

10 Jonathan Watts, writing from New York to Gen. Monckton, says: "We are just come from Council. The Gov' beaves sensibly and coolly, he lets the stamps sleep till he can hear from home. Secretary Conway by his majesty's order has wrote a most excellent letter to the confusions of America, wise, mild, and just."—Aspin- wall Papers, in Manhattan Soc. Col., 52. In a letter to the Society of the Journeys of America, wise, mild, and just."—Aspin- wall Papers, in Manhattan Soc. Col., 52.

14 Letters from New York say that if the Stamp Act should be repealed, the American Colonies will cheerfully give up to Executive the late Resolution of Council, for fitting out a certain Number of armed Vessels, at their own Expense, to act in the nature of Guardia Contas."—London Chron., Jan. 20, 1766.

13 "We can assure the Publick from good Authority, that Lord Colvill has lately declared, that he would not interrupt any Vessel within its Limits, until he'd receive Orders from England for that Purpose."—N. T. Merc., Jan. 20, 1766.

Charles Oliver Bruff, "Goldsmith and Jeweller, at the Sign of the Tea-pot, Tankard, and Ear-ring, the Corner of King-street, near the Fly-market," advertises that he "makes and mends all Manner of stone Buckles, stone rings, ear-rings, brooches, etc. to a reward of $100 for the discovery of the perpetrators."—"All Magistrates, Justices, Sheriffs, and other Peace Officers, within this Province, are strictly charged and commanded, diligently to proceed in their Duty, and to do their utmost for the Discovery of, and apprehending the offenders aforesaid, that they may be dealt with according to Law."—N. Y. Gen. (Weyman), Jan. 13, 1766.
Montresor records that he began "reducing the large Plan [see Feb. 8] to the scale."—Montresor's Jour., 349.

The " Sons of Liberty" are notified to meet on this day "at the House of Richard Howard, in the Fields."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 17, 1766. This was the old Mason's Arms Tavern at Warren St. and Broadway.

At their present building is " Altogether Incapable of Containing the Congregation and the Cemetery too Small for the decent Interment of them," the ministers, elders, and other members of the English Presbyterian Church petition the common council to grant to them "the Angular Lott Adjoining to the Ground lately Called the Green for The Use of the said Church with an Additional Lott Suitable for a Cemetery Subject to such an Annual rent to be rendered for Ever to this Corporation as they in their Great Wisdom and Justice Shall think Reasonable." A committee was appointed "to Enquire into the Allegations," and report.—M. C. C., VII: 6. The original of this petition is in the city clerk's record-room. For the report of the committee, see Feb. 25.

In a petition to the common council, William Walton and other inhabitants of Montgomery Ward state that "at present there is no Hemp Ferry Established by this Corporation, nor any competing Ferry," and that the increase in population delays traffic. They ask that the board "will for the Future Either Add or Order two Boats to Land at Ferry or Pecks Slip Being Nearly Opposite the Landing place on Nassau Side," but the petition is rejected.—M. C. C., VII: 5. The location of the one ferry thus far established to Nassau Island was at Pecks' Slip.—Ibid., VII: 427. For an earlier petition, see May 23, 1765.

Gov. Moore informs Sec. Conway that, because of "some out-rages," he has been forced to make "a private Application to Gen'l Gage for some military Assistance (our present Force here [New York] not exceeding 150 men)."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 811.

A newspaper clipping, apparently from a London paper, reads: "Very large Orders in the Stationery Branch have this Week been countermanded from North America, where, we hear, one Paper Manufactory has lately been established at New York [see July 14, 1768], and another at Philadelphia, which will soon be able to supply most of the neighbouring Colonies."—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., 417.

Colcold is of the opinion, he writes to Conway, "that no great Force will be requisite to reduce the City of New York to obedience. After the Fort shall be restored to the state it was in when I left it, I believe a thousand men may be sufficient. However it will be best to have such a Force as may destroy all hopes of Resistance. After such Force arrives, I am humbly of opinion, if Proclamation be made that all riotous assemblies, or open disobedience of the Laws shall be treated as Rebellion, the People will submit without opposition and the whole Province will follow the example of the City."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 813.

The committee appointed to consider the petition of the ministers, elders, and other members of the English Presbyterian Church (see Feb. 19), reports that £40 per annum has been offered for the land applied for, which, upon survey, was found to comprise about nine lots, 25 by 100 ft. The members agreed that this ground was the most convenient place to build a church. Annexed to the report was a statement, by the church committee, of their reasons for choosing this site. The only other ground worthy, in their opinion, of consideration was "that opposite to the Old Wind Mill Spot," but that location was rejected by them because, among other reasons, it was inconveniently situated. A church erected there would be endangered by fire from the many wooden buildings in the vicinity, and its nearness to the Dutch Church might cause hindrance to both sects. The petitioners hoped that the rental of £40 per annum would be considered sufficient, inasmuch as Trinity Church had received its land free, and the Dutch Church had paid only about half as much, and because they, having never received a grant from the city, were "proper Subjects for the Bounty and favour of the worshipfull Board." The common council, on hearing the committee's report and the Church's estimated statement, unanimously agreed to grant the land at the proposed rental, and ordered a draft thereof to be prepared.—M. C. C., VII: 8-12; City Grants, Libr C: 372. The land was that bounded by the present Nassau and Beekman Sts. and Park Row. The church was opened Jan. 1, 1768 (c. c.). Four years after its erection it was known as "The New Church," but in 1798, when the next Presbyterian Church was erected (on Rutgers St.), the name was changed to "The Brick Church."—Knapp, Hist. of the Brick Presbyterian, Ch. of Feb. 1766, V. 1, 1795. The first ferry to the Jersey shore under municipal regulation is established (for an earlier private ferry, see June 28, 1764). A common council committee, appointed to confer with petitioners for this ferry privilege (see May 3, 1765), reports that Cornelius van Voorst offers to the corporation $490 per year for seven years, "they to appoint the rates of ferriage in crossing... after the said term of 7 years be expired he would give the Corporation a free landing on his side, they making the most they can from New York there, provided the Corporation would grant him the same privilege from Jersey side to New York for the sum of $35 large and small boats for the use of ferriage, which should always be in repair for that purpose; that the Corporation might settle the place of landing on New York side, though he would recommend to have it at the same place he now lands at." The proposals were agreed to, and it was ordered "that the landing place be fixed at the ground or peer of Nicholas Roosevelt Esq at the lower end of Thomas [Thames] street."—M. C. C., VII: 8. See Feb. 20, 1767. See also "Paulus Hook Ferry," in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 914.

There appears in the Gazette an extract from a letter from "a Gentleman in London who is well acquainted with America" to the effect that "the Stamp Act is in the Way to be repealed,... tho' every possible Endeavour is used that Satanic Malice, Chicane, Obstinacy, or Fraud can invent, yet I apprehend it will be carried through both Houses. Mr. Benjamin Franklin has sent some papers to me which I hope will be examined by the Bar of the House. Hans Haske, Solicitor General, and Commons [see Feb. 3], and gave such clear and explicit Answers to the Questions proposed, and mentioned his own Sentiments with so much firmness and Resolution, as at once did him great Credit, and served your Cause not a little."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), M. 766.

Elkanah and William Deane, brothers [see Sept. 20, 1765], "Coach-maker's from Dublin," advertise their partnership. They "have now done to as great Perfection, all Branches of the Coach-making Trade, as can be imported; such as wood Work, in all its Branches; Carving, Painting, Gilding, and japanning; Trimming, Harness and Saddler's Work; Likewise Smiths Work of all Sorts, relative to said Trade, even Axles, and Steel springs, equal in Quality, if not superior, to any imported from England." The advertisement continues: "As we can now make and finish, (without the Assistance of any out of our own Shop) in the genteelst and best Manner, all Kinds of Coaches, Chariots, Landaus, Phaetons, Post-Chaises, Curricles, Chairs, Sedans, and Sleighs. We can afford to make any of them on more reasonable Terms than has yet been done by any Person in this City, and as we are determined to contribute as much as in our Power, to the Prosperity of this Country, and the happiness of the people of America, to make Coach-making the most convenient and cheapest, as any of the above Carriages, Five per Cent. cheaper than they can be imported from England." They further say: "we likewise will warrant and engage all our Work for one Year, (accidents excepted) being the most that any Coach-maker in Great-Britain or Ireland do. The advertisement closes: "Said Deanes have two Curricile Chairs, one Chaise, and a Kitteren-Chair, one Double Hors Sleigh,... and one Pair of Curricile Harness, with a Steel sliding Bar. Their shop was "in Broad-Street."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 27, 1766. Their business became an important factor in New York trade at this time—Houghton, Coaches of Colonial N. Y. (1890), 15-16. Their rivals were James Hallett (see Jan. 22, 1750) and Samuel Lawrence (see Oct. 5, 1765). For the meaning and description of the various vehicles mentioned in this advertisement, see Houghton, op. cit., 19. On June 11, 1767, James Beeck said Dean's had a "Gallery Furniture, for $911.5.9. in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. collection, see ibid., 21.

Beeck states that Gov. Moore has bought and wears "two Homespun Coats made in the Coloniies for the Encouragement of the Arts in the Colonies as an Example for others."—Monstros. Jour., 351.

Mar. 6 Upon a supposition that the cannon upon the battery were spiked (see April 6 and 18) by order of Lieut.-Gov. Colles, his effigy is exhibited "sitting upon a piece of ordnance, (properly mounted) with a drill, constructed in such manner as to be continually working." A newspaper account of the affair says that "at his back hang a drum, as a badge of his former profession: On Mar. his breast was fixed a paper, on which were the following lines, 6 "I'm dec'd by real Kuy. Kuy. and so. And am forced to do penance, tho' not in the church. "After it had appear'd in the principal streets of the city, attended by many thousand spectators, (alb'to) it rain'd great part of the time) it was carried to the common, where a fire was immedi-ately made, and the effigy consumed. Among the sentiments of the multitude, who dispersed directly after."—N. Y. Post-Boy, March 13, 1766; Penn. Gaz., March 20, 1766. Colden had been burned in effigy once before (see Nov. 1, 1765).

It was represented to this board that Alderman Roosevelt intended to purchase and carry from New York and New Jersey, a grant and convey to them two Water Lots belonging to him adjoining the Water Lots of this Corporation upon Condition that the Ferry across Hudsens River between this City and Powles hook should be established and fixed from his said Lots but in as much as the said two Lots will not be sufficient to accommodate the said Ferry without the addition of so much of the water Lots belonging to this Corporation adjoining the said two Lots and of Equal demensions therewith And this Board Considering the Con- veniency and advantage arising to the Publick from the said Ferry shore-2-up order that the said Grant and Convey to the said City Corporation two of their Lots belonging to this Corporation adjoining the said two Water Lots of Alderman Roosevelt and of Equal Dimensions for the use of the said Ferry but for no other use or purpose whatsoever upon Condition that the said Ferry is to be established and fixed there for ever but if then the said Water Lots so granted by this Corporation for the use aforesaid shall again Revert and be in this Corporation."—Trin. Min. (M.S.).

Montresor states that there are 1,700 barrels of gunpowder at Turtle Bay and 500 at Prevost's on the East River "lodged in a Powder Magazine," also, that 3,000 tons of ordnance stores are "lodged in a Stone house on the North River exposed, as being without Guard or Defence."—Montresor's Jour., 352. See March 29.

The king gives his assent to the repeal of the Stamp Act, but it is not to go into effect until May 1.—Ann. Reg. (1766), 77. According to a letter from Bristol, the bill passed the house of commons on March 4, and was sent to the lords on March 5.—N. Y. Gaz., April 28, 1766. Montresor, therefore, must have been misinformed when he wrote in his Journal: "the 29th of January, the Stamp act was Repealed. Upon receiving the accounts 3 or 400 boys tore through the several Streets with the shouts of the Stamp act's Repealed."— Montes. Jour., 353.

Furthermore, on this day, the king gives his assent to the bill for securing the dependency of the colonies on the British crown. —Ann. Reg. (1766), 77. This act (generally known as the "Declaratory Act") declared that the "Colonies and Plantations in America, are, and shall be, under our coyness, and under our sole dominion and right, and shall remain under our coyness, and under our sole dominion and right, and shall remain in all Cases whatsoever."—Stat. of Gt. Brit., VII: 571.

Montresor writes that the Sons of Liberty are preparing to have a procession and burn, in effigy, Sir Jeffry Amberst. They say "he proposed to augment the military forces in America, towards the more effectual forcing the Stamp act." They further propose "erecting a Statue to Mr. Pitt (as a friend) in the Bowling Green on the Identical Spot where the Lieu' Governor's Chariot was burned [see Nov. 1, 1765] and to name that Green—Liberty Green for ever."—Montes. Jour., April 27, 1766.

The docking facilities of the city at this time were inadequate to meet commercial needs. A petition to the common council of inhabitants living near Burling Ship states that this slip is frequented by New England and Long Island trading Boats, that usually bring their Country Produce and Spices, and that the petitioners wish the common council to prohibit sea-going vessels from occupying the slip. "The there is no Publick Dock Provided for laying up Sea Vessels," they say, "yet there are many Places about the Wharfs and Keys of this City and in Particular Rotten Row, Sufficient to Contain the Sea Vessels belonging to this City without injury to the Country Trade; That therefore we conceive..." 1766 it to be unreasonable That Sea Vessels should be laid up in said Mar. Slip. Another petition to the same effect, endorsed "filed yld 18th 18 of March 1766," states that Jeronimus Remsen, the proprietor of the water lot on the east side of Burling Slip, "is now docking out the same, by which means the said Slip is much contracted." The same day, trading vessels "ran aground and shivered" through the sea-going vessels, and the petitioners ask that the latter ships may be prohibited from coming into the slip.—From the original petitions (MS.) in File 4, city clerk's record-room. Neither the petitioners nor the action upon them, if any was taken by the commonalty, is recorded. See "Alarm, for security—the Ministers of the Colonies on the Mother Country; the second for the repeal of the Act of last session, granting certain stamp duties in America." He explains that "A Revision of the late American Trade Laws is going to be the immediate object of Parliament."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VII: 217-24. The two laws which Conway transmits were passed on March 18 (p.v.).

Montresor states that "Five Ruffians or Sons of Liberty fell on one officer of the Royal Americans on the Common about Dunk, behind his Back and beat him unmercifully and broke his sword, which he had drawn in his Defence."—Montresor's Jour., 356-57.

"The Sons or Spawas of Liberty and Inquisition," as Montresor chooses to call them, are "still venting threats and Insulting the Crown & Officers under it." Lieut.-Gov. Coldeo, in particular, are they threatening, "In Case the Stamp act is not repealed."—Montresor's Jour., 356, 357.

Announcement is made that "The Twin Rivals" will be presented at the "Theatre in Chapel-Street" (see April 2, 1764) on April 9—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 3, 1766. See April 4.

A Grand meeting of the Sons of Liberty to settle matters of moment, amongst the many whether they shall admit the strollers arrived here to act (see April 5), the General has given them permission. These Heroes of Liberty keep an office and enter minutes and record them & all their correspondence to their licentious fraternity throughout the different Provinces. . . . Some Stamps are to be destroyed, and the supply sent to the Coffee-house, together with some play bills, all to prevent Their Spirits to flag."—Montresor's Jour., 357-58. See May 1.

Some of the inhabitants begin work on the spiked cannon at the Battery (see March 6 and April 18), hoping to make them useful again. Montresor thinks their efforts will be unavailing, because the guns "are mostly old and honeycomb, the carriages rotten as to scarce be able to support the weight of metal, the Platforms so totally out of order as to admit the Trucks of the Carriages nearly to their axles. And the checks of the Embrasures choose 'em on every explosion as the Log work is decayed and ill tired."—Montresor's Jour., 355, 356.

"Last Week a sloop from Egg-Harbour, brought up to town, a small bundle of stamped paper, that had been found in the wreck of the ship Ellin. . . . As soon as it was known, they were seized by the sons of liberty, and purified at the Coffee-house last Friday (April 4), before a thousand spectators."—N. Y. Merc., April 7, 1766.

A sale is advertised to be held on this day at the Merchants Coffee House of a "Very pleasant Farm, lying on the North River, about four Miles from this City, Known by the Name of Newfoundland, or the Glass-House, now in the Possession of Matthew Ernest, it contains Thirty Acres and a Half of Land, in good Order—There is no the place A good Dwelling-House with five Rooms, two Cellars, a large convenient Kitchen; also a large new Barn, Chaise-House, Stables, and several Out-Houses;—also two good Springs on the Place."—N. Y. Gen. (Wayman), March 30, 1766.

The Glass-House, a glass manufactory, had been erected about 1754 (see Oct. 7, 1754), and had been turned into a tavern in 1767.

Gerrard G. Beeckman and other inhabitants of Montgomery Ward living at or near Beeckman's Slip state, in a petition to the common council, that the street fouling their houses, Beeckman's Slip, and down to Cannon's Wharf, is so narrow that two carts cannot conveniently pass each other; and they offer to widen the street at their own expense by wharfing out five feet or more. Consideration of the petition is deferred, and no further action on it is recorded in the Minutes; but, at the same time, a committee is appointed "to Superintend Order and direct the Surveyors of the present high ways in Stratton's Mill to the best of their ability by the new or old ways in such manner as they shall Judge Proper."—M. C. G., VII: 15.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1766

Benjamin Baker is tried in the supreme court "for spiking up the Great Guns of the Fort and Barracks some time ago" (see March 16). He and his associates were found guilty. He is sentenced to a year's imprisonment and a fine of £200 besides being compelled to furnish securities to the amount of £1,000 for "his good behavior for two years to come."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Apr. 21, 1766.

24

Obadiah Wells, who lived "in Mulberry-Street, near Fresh Water," advertises that "A Large Quantity of good well drast spinning Flax is wanted for the Factory in New-York." The spinners are notified that this flax will be given out by him on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, and that he will receive yarn in return. Any person who has not delivered an order to the city continuously since May last will not be admitted as a spinner in the factory. Wells continues as commission agent at the market in the exchange to sell articles of home manufacture.—N. Y. Post-Boy, April 21, 1766.

26

"At 9 o'clock this morning All the Bells of this place rung and made a most loudly Din." Montresor says this was because of a report received the day before that the Stamp Act was repealed. About 8 A. M. the packet boat with the mail arrived and the Sons of Liberty demanded of the captain, when he came ashore, "whether the Stamp Act was repealed—he answered in the affirmative, and in reality. Upon which they fixed him in a chair and carried him and the mail to the Post Office with great acclamations of joy, cheering him all the way." After examining the letters of latest date from London, however, it was found that as yet "the Repeal had not undergone the 18th reading in the House of Commons. . . . The Bells were immediately silenced and great discontent ensued, owing to their having been so premature in their rejoicings."—Montresor's Jour., 362. For a similar account, see Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., 111: 79.

28

The act of Parliament relating to vessels delivering their letters to the post office are like others held here. The letters are left at the coffee house and are distributed by the news carrier who keeps the advantage.—Montresor's Jour., 363.

29

Montresor states that the city is "alarmed from the approach of the Country levellers, called, the West Chester men," and that the militia is ordered "to hold themselves in readiness." Two days later, "Six men (a Committee from West Chester people being 500 men now lying at King's Bridge) came into town to explain matters. . . . The military applied to on account of the Levellers on which they dispersed. Sons of Liberty great opposers to these Rioters as they are of opinion no one is entitled to Riot but themselves."—Montresor's Jour., 367.

30

Gov. Moore writes to Sec. Conway of the spread of discontent. There has been a threat "to set the City on Fire in several different Places at the same time. . . . The Regular Troops as well as the militia are to be in readiness on the Alarm Bell being rung and every other precaution taken which common Prudence would suggest on such an occasion." Hostile inhabitants of other counties (see April 30—"West Chester men") came "within the limits of this Corporation," and "proceeded with an intent of making their Entry into the City last night." The governor offered a reward for apprehending the one in command, and they dispersed.—N. Y. Col. Doc's, VII: 826.

Montresor writes: "Arrived a French vessel, a ship from S S Domingo bound to old France put in stress of weather. She was safely conducted through the Channel by the Pilot and safe within the Narrows into the Bay."—Montresor's Jour., 367. On May 3, he said: "In my opinion the arrival of this French vessel is a mere Finesse. . . . In arriving here they have in all probability gained their point, to know the navigation from Sandy Hook to this place, to know the strength, situation and present position of Defence of this place, and to be thoroughly informed of the minds and pulses of the Inhabitants."—ibid., 364.

May

An advertisement informs the public that, "By Permission of His Excellency the Governor," the comedy called "The Twin Rivals" will be presented at the theatre in Chapel St. on May 3 (p. 1). The "Song in Praise of Liberty." The advertisement contains also the following: "N. B. As the Packet is arrived, and has been the Messenger of good News, relative to the Repeals, it is hoped the Public has no Objection to the above Performance."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 1, 1766. See p. 1.

John Vogel advertises the sale "for 16 Years to come from August next" of a "Very good commodious House and 8 Lots of Ground, situated in the Bowry, and almost opposite the Wind Mill, being very convenient for a Tavern or Shop Keeper."—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 1, 1766.

"Public Notice is hereby given, That the Custom House is removed from the Broad-Way to Wall-street, opposite the House where Mr. Nicholas Bayard lately lived, near the City-Hall."—N. Y. Merc., May 5, 1766.

The advertisement that a play would be presented on this day in the Chapel Street Theatre (see May 1) having given offence to "many of the Inhabitants of this City, who thought it highly improper that such entertainments should be exhibited at this time of public business," then the Multitude immediately demolished the House, and carried the Pieces to the Common, where they consumed them in a Bonfire.—N. Y. Post-Boy, May 8, 1766. Another report states that "those were best off who got out first, either by jumping out of Windows, or making their way through the Doors, as the Lights were soon extinguished, and both Inside and Outside soon torn to Pieces and burnt by Persons unknown about Ten and Eleven a Clock at Night."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), May 12, 1766. Montresor ascribes the riot to the Sons of Liberty, who, he says, "without any Reason given pulled down the playhouse the beginning of the 3d act, put out all the lights, then began picking of pockets stealing watches throwing Brick Bats, sticks and Bottles and Glasses, crying out Liberty, Liberty then proceeded to the Fields or Common and burnt the materials. One boy Killed and many people hurt in this Licentious affair."—Montresor's Jour., 364.

"The Post-Office is removed from its former Place, to the House where Beverly Robinson, Esq lately lived, in Stonestreet, opposite the Fort."—N. Y. Merc., May 12, 1766. See May 2, 1767.

Lient-Gov. Colden's "chariot" is shipped from London by his friend and correspondent, Peter Collinson, on board the ship "Hope" (Benjamin Davis, master). The original bill-of-lading, an engraved form filled in, is preserved with the Colden Papers in the archives of the N. Y. Hist. Soc. With it is preserved the original bill for the purchase by Collinson of the "chariot" of Elliott & Jacob, London. The statement reads: "May 9 To a New Post Office at the weeke-end, the Alarm Bell being rung and every other precaution taken which common Prudence would suggest on such an occasion." Hostile inhabitants of other counties (see April 30—"West Chester men") came "within the limits of this Corporation," and "proceeded with an intent of making their Entry into the City last night." The governor offered a reward for apprehending the one in command, and they dispersed.

"CC" MayT: No. 1 To Packing the Charf & Harness in a Deal Case & matt the Carriage all over . . . 21.80

"Deducted 35\% prompt payment . . . 8.71.80

$9.0.18

"Rec'd of 16 May 1766 the Contents in full for Self & Co . . .

Jos: Jacob"

This "chariot" was evidently intended to replace the one burned by a mob on the night of Nov. 1, 1765 (p. 9.).

An announcement by William Clayon (see Jan. 26, 1761): reads: 19
“The Minister and Elders of the French Church, desirous to encourage a French-School, have granted me Leave to teach in their Consistory-Room, situated in the Yard of that Church, where I purpose to open a public School, on Monday the 26th inst. . . . My terms are as follows, viz. For the French, Latin, and Greek Languages, besides English Grammar, &c. . . . 36s. entrance, and 36s. per Quarter. As I do not presume to teach English Pronunciation, I will not take Children who cannot read English fluently. After public school hours, I will teach at the same place for 24s. per Month, and 24s. entrance, those of riper years, whose French have not been so well set as to suit the learner’s views, 29s. &c. taking care to give but few rules properly exemplified.”—N. Y. Merc., May 19, 1766.

The news reaches New York that the repeal of the Stamp Act obtained the king’s assent on March 18 (p. n.). Although such tidings had been expected (see April 26), “a sudden Joy was immediately diffused thro’ all Ranks of People in the whole City. Neighbors ran to congratulate each other, and all the Bells in the City were set to ringing, which continued till late at Night, and began again early next morning.”—N. Y. T. Gaz., May 23, 1766. The news is published in a broadside which reads: “Joy to America! At this Day arrived here [New York] an Express from Boston with the most glorious and most pleasing News, on which H. Gaine congratulates the Friends of America.”

“Westminster, March 18. This day his Majesty came to the house of Peers, and being in his royal robes, seated on the throne, with the usual solemnity, Sir Francis Molineaux, Gentleman usher of the black rod was sent with a Message from his Majesty to the house of Commons, commanding their attention in the house of peers. The Commons being come thither accordingly, his Majesty was pleased to give his Royal Assent to "An Act to Repeal an Act . . . entitled an Act for granting and applying certain stamp Duties, and other Duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, towards further defraying the Expences of defending, protecting, and securing the same." When his Majesty went to the House he was accompanied by greater Numbers of People than ever was known on the like Occasion; many Copies of the Repeal were sent to Falmouth, to be forwarded to America; and all the Vessels in the River Thames being sent out, had Orders to sail. 7 o’clock, P. M. Since composing the Above an Express arrived from Philadelphia with a Confirmation of the Repeal, and that a printed Copy of it by the King’s Printer lay in the Coffee-House for the Purpos of the Publick.”—From an original preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Sac.

The first “Flag Staff,” later known as the “Liberty Pole,” the scene of heated contention between citizens and soldiers, is noted on this date as being on the Common while the celebration of the repeal of the stamp act was being observed. It was probably erected on this or the preceding day. Montresor says there was “a large Board fixed” on the pole with the inscription “George 3rd, Pitt— and Liberty.”—Montresor’s Jour., 368. He refers to the same again under date of June 4.—Ibid., 321. The N. Y. Jour. of March 26, 1767, refers to “the mast erected on the Common, inscribed in the line of Piety and Liberty, on the occasion of the Repeal” (see Mar. 18), neglecting to state, however, that the original pole had since been cut down twice (see Aug. 10 and Sept. 23, 1766) and replaced. Contemporary references to this flag staff as a “pine post” or “mast” (see Aug. 11 and Sept. 23) suggest that some old vessel may have been dismantled for this festive purpose. The earliest report of this event is in the Advertiser (May 27), and other secondary authorities (also repeated recently in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Quarterly Bulletin, Jan., 1920, p. 109) in ascribing this first flag staff to June 4 may possibly be traced to a misstatement in the Post-Boy of Aug. 14, where its erection is connected with the “patriotic spirit on his Majesty’s Birthday” (June 4), instead of with the earlier rejoicing on May 21.

The aridour of the “Sons of Liberty” on this day was further evidenced in handbills reading: “This Day. On the glorious Occasion, of a total Repeal of the Stamp Act, there will be a general Meeting, and Rejoicing at the House of Mr. R. Howard. The Lovers of their Country, loyal Subjects to his Majesty George the Third King of Great-Britain, and real Sons of Liberty, of all Denominations, are hereby cordially invited to partake of the essential & long look’d for Celebration. The City will be illuminated, and every decent Measure will be observed, in demonstrating a sensible Acknowledgement of Gratitude to our glorious Sovereign to be Pg. 22 for 24s. per Quarter. As I do not presume to teach English Pronunciation, I will not take Children who cannot read English fluently. After public school hours, I will teach at the same place for 24s. per Month, and 24s. entrance, those of riper years, whose French have not been so well set as to suit the learner’s views, 29s. &c. taking care to give but few rules properly exemplified.”—N. Y. Merc., May 19, 1766.

The provincial council severs legal opinion respecting Gen. Gage’s requisition of quarters for the royal troops coming from the outports.—Cal. Coun. Min., 471.

John Holt begins publication of The New-York Journal, or General Advertiser. Issued sporadically at first, it became a weekly, and during its varied career, until finally discontinued on March 8, 1800, it bore various titles under successive owners. Its career was broken by the Revolution, when it was printed intermittently at Kingston and Poughkeepsie. For these many changes, see Early Newspapers, II: 414; Am. Antiquarian Soc. Proceedings (1917), XXXVII (N.S.): 445; N. Y. Pub. Library Bull., Sept., 1920.

A meeting of St. Andrew’s Society is announced, to be held “at the House of Peter Taylor, Vintner, near the Merchant’s Coffee-House.”—N. Y. Merc., May 17, 1766.

The common council orders that a warrant for $1,749.00 issue to June Thoeliphus Hardenbrook for the expense of a bonfire May 24, on the receipt of news of the repeal of the Stamp Act.—M. G. C., VII: 18. See May 20.

The king’s birthday and “Rejoicings for the Authentic arrival of the Repeal of the Stamp Act” are “blended in one Festival.” The men-of-war in the harbour and “some guns placed on Skids in the Fields” fire salutes. Two oxen are roasted whole there and an “Artillery park” is formed. “Beer and Grog for the populace, and an Entertainment or Dinner provided at the City Arms for the General, Governor, officers military, naval and civil, at the expense of the inhabitants and cannon fired at each Toast, accompanied with Hurrahs. The Town entirely illuminated.”—Montresor’s Jour., 371. Cf. N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 2, 1766.

The Walms house “was deemed the nonpareil of the city in 1766 [error for 1767] when seen, was greatly illuminated in celebration of the Stamp Act repealed.”—Watson’s Annals, 350.

The Gazette reports that the repeal of the Stamp Act “has produced a universal jubilee throughout the continent of America; every Province, Town & Parish emulating each other in testifying their joy on this grand event; or from any ostentation or triumphant principle that they have gained an ascendancy over the British Parliament, but in gratitude to that august legislature, for condescending to re-consider the operation of that most destructive Act, from a consciousness that it had a tendency to alienate the affections of many loyal subjects, & eventually destroy that trust of these colonies to the British empire.”—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), June 9, 1766.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1766

The mayor informs the common council "that William Davis of this City Marinier hath lately Delivered to him to be Presented to the House of Lords a Portrait of William, Mr. Sat in an Elegant & Genteel frame, and this Board in order to Demonstrate the Great value and esteem they have for the person of so great a Patriot & friend to America as the said William Pitt, hereby in return for the Compliment of the said William Davis, order that the Freedom of this Corporation be prepared & presented to him, & that the Clerk prepare one accordingly & deliver the same to Mr Mayor who is desired to present it to the said William Davis with the thanks of this Board." — M. G. C. VII: 20.

It is ordered that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer "to pay out of the publick funds the sum of £10 for the Painting of his present Majesty [George III] which he presented to this Corporation." — Ibid, VII: 20.

Goldsbrow Yarner, by the governor's command, orders the corporation to have the "barracks on the common" cleaned and prepared "for the reception of the troops." — Cal. Hist. MSS, Eng., 762.

Gov. Moore, in an address to the council and the assembly, says: "The General satisfaction which has been diffused throughout the Colonies, on the . . . Repeal of the Stamp Acts and the Impressions made on the minds of the People, on receiving such distinguishing marks of his Majesty's favor and Protection, have induced me to give you the earliest Opportunity of making those acknowledgments of Duty and Submission, which on such an Occasion must arise in the Breasts of every Individual . . . Let it be your concern to undeceive the Deluded, and by the powerful Exemplary of your Conduct, bring back to a Sense of Duty, those who have been misled." In addition he recommends to the attention of the general assembly "the Case of those unfortunate Persons, who from the Licenciousness of the Populace, have suffered for their deference to the Acts of the British Legislature . . . it will be no ungrateful Task for this Province to take the lead . . . and by making a full and ample compensation to the sufferers for their Goods and Effects destroyed, shew to the neighbouring Provinces . . . the sense which is here entertain'd of the benefits lately received." — Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1587-88.

"We have the Pleasure to assure the Public, that Mr. Nicholas Ray, of London, has given One Hundred Pounds to the Society for Encouragement of Arts, Agriculture, &c. of this City and Province [see Dec. 3, 1764]. Such Benefactions promise Stability to our Infant Undertaking." — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 12, 1766.

After thanking him for the receipt of the news, the council adds: "To undeceive the deluded, and to bring back to a sense of their Duty, the Misguided and Prejudiced, have been the fixed objects in all our Measures. And that nothing shall be wanting on our Part, to inculcate in the minds of the People, a thorough sense of the Obligence they owe, the Dependence they stand in, and the Benefits they receive from their most gracious Sovereign, and their Guardians, the British Parliament." The address was delivered to Gov. Moore on June 16, at which time he answered "I return you my thanks for this Address, as the Sentiments you express therein must so manifestly tend to the Establishment of the Happiness and Prosperity of our Country." — Jour. Leg. Coun., II: 1589.

The "46th Regiment of Foot" arrives from Albany, and "are now quartered in our Barracks." — N. Y. Merc., June 23, 1766.

"MERCHANTS refusing to take out 'let pass' [clearance papers] for vessels outward bound the governor proposes to apply to the men-of-war in the harbor to stop all vessels going to sea without the paper; council needs time to give advice." — Cal. Coun., Minn., 471. The opinion of the council concerning the taking out of these clearance papers was indicated in a letter which Gov. Moore wrote to the lords of trade on Jan. 14, 1767. He said: "I did apprehend that upon the Repeal of the Stamp Act, all-kind of business would have returned into its former channel, but in this I have been disappointed, for, as I released any on the ground of the new law, to issue any papers from my Office which were not stamp'd agreeable to the Act of Parliament, I was obliged amongst other things to refuse the granting of Let passes to the Ships clearing out from this Port; they ventured to sail without them and from the indulgence they had in the past not being seized, the effect of the Stamp Act, constantly gone to sea without Let passes. I laid this matter before the Council, and on examination we found that no law had been passed in this Province to compel Ships to take out Let passes [ibid., VII: 31, 32]." The Custom was founded on a Proclamation of a very old date of the then Gov. and issued by advice of the Council before the third branch of the Legislature was established here, which then carried with it the authority of a Law. I apprehended that at this time, it ought to have had its weight, as it never has been contradicted by any Law since made, but the opinions of the Gentlemen of the Law are so far from being unanimous on this occasion, that I have not been sufficiently encouraged to try the determination of a Court of Judicature by prosecuting the Offenders. I afterwards resolved to apply for a Proclamation, in order to get a Law passed for that purpose, but upon private enquiry in what manner a Message from me on this head was likely to be received, I found that it would not be attended with the success I desired." — N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 891.

The assembly sends a message to the council, asking the latter to join in an address of thanks to the king (see June 12) for the repeal of the Stamp Act. — Cal. Coun., Minn., 471.

Following a notice in the Post-Boy of June 19, many citizens meet at the Coffee-House to consider the idea of erecting a statue to William Pitt "in Testimony of the grateful sense they entertain of his Services to the American Colonies." They instruct their representatives to urge the assembly "to make Provision for an elegant Statue of Brass." — N. Y. Post-Boy, June 29 and 16, 1766. See also Montresor's jour., 374.

Montresor writes in his Journal: "Marched out of town and encamped at Turtle Bay near the Powder Magazine the Detach-

The lighthouse at Sandy Hook is struck by lightning. Twenty "Panes of the Glass Lanthorn" are broken and the "Chimney and Peach [oven] belonging to the Kitchen" knocked down. The people in the house receive slight injuries. — N. Y. Merc., June 30, 1766.

Certain Frenchmen, on this Sunday, take possession of the French church by force, before the time for service, opposing the officers of the church, and refusing the minister, Rev. J. P. Tetrard, admission to them. They then break the locks, and set fire to their own to every door. A petition by Tetrard to Gov. Moore on Oct. 17, 1767 (p. 50), states that they have "kept possession of the same to the inexpressible Detriment of this Pious Institution, and to the great Scandal of Civil Society as well as Religion." — Doc. Hist., N. Y. (4th ed.), III: 315.

The general assembly has agreed to these resolutions: "That an Equestrian Statue of his present Majesty, be erected in the City of New York, to perpetuate to the latest Posterity, the deep Sense this Colony has of the eminent and singular Blessings received from him during his most auspicious Reign. That for the many eminent and essential Services done the Northern Colonies by the Right Honourable William Pitt, Esq., but in particular in promoting the Repeal of the Stamp-Act, and to perpetuate to the latest Posterity the grateful Sense this Colony entertains on that Account; Provision might be made for erecting an elegant Statue of him in Brass. That the Lords of Trade have a right to the pieces of Plate, value £100 Sterling, to be presented to John Sargent, Esq; of the City of London, with the Thanks of the House, for his having cheerfully undertaken, at their request, and to their great Satisfaction, faithfully discharged the Trust of special Agent, and liberally declined the sacrifice of £500 for his Trouble." — N. Y. Merc., June 30, 1766. See Feb. 6, 1768.

The common council pays £100 "towards carrying on a building now propos'd in addition to the poor house" (almshouse). — M. C. G., VII: 21. Further payments were made as follows: Sept. 10, £170 (ibid., VII: 20); Oct. 12, £100 (p. 452); Nov. 27, £118 (p. 495); and Aug. 13, 1767, £25 "towards Compleating it" (p. 755).
A committee of the common council is appointed "to regulate the Offences ... (July 24) that the full text compiled with newly stated or revised, was entered in the Minutes of the common council (M. C. C., VII: 25-26), and, on July 28, published in Weyman's Gazette. This law was altered June 13, 1771 (q.v.).

The Common Council being informed of an Encroachment made by Robert Murray, "to remove such & so great a part of the wharf or pier which he hath lately sunk upon the ground or soil belonging to this Corporation, to the westward of the range prescribed & limited by this Corporation in a grant to Cornelius P Low," etc., expresses the opinion that "the said encroachment would be more convenient to the publick than if the same had not been made," and they propose the board to permit Mr. Murray "to go on in building the said pier or wharf, on the same range it was when sunk," etc. It is ordered that the wharf remain "where it now is and that a bevel line be run from the south west corner of the present wharf or pier so far into the said East River as the extent of his present grant or right gives him, so that the same there terminates to a front on the said river at the next succeeding point."

The lords of trade direct the governors in America to prepare as soon as possible a more particular and exact Account of the several Manufactures which have been set up and carried on within the Colony" under their government since the year 1734, and of the Public Encouragement which have been given thereto." They are to make also an annual report on the same subject.—N. T. Col. Docs., VII: 847. Gov. Moore supplied with a copy of this law, he describes "a small Manufactury of Linen in this City under the Conduct of one Wells, and supported chiefly by the subscriptions of a set of men who call themselves the Society of Arts and Agriculture" (see Dec. 3, and Dec. 10, 1764); also "a general Manufactury of Woolen," one product of which was "Limey Woolsey," "a Manufactory of Hats;" and a bankrupt "Glass-house." There is, he adds, also a "little Foundry lately set up near this Town for making small Iron Potts," and "valuable manufactures of Iron and Pot Ash" have been set up by a Mr. Hanselmeiller in "different parts of this Country."—Ibid., VIII: 889-89. On May 7, 1765, Gov. Moore wrote of "great quantities of leather being tanned in this Country" (location not stated); and of "the paper-mill begun to be erected within these few days, at a small distance from the town."—Ibid., VIII: 66.

The common council of the Dutch Church appropriates §500 from its treasury "for the building of the Old Church" (on Garden St.).—Eccles. Recs., VII: 4967. A further appropriation of £500 was made on Oct. 21 (q.v.).

Jacob Dyckman makes the following appeal to the public: "Whereas the Builder of ... King's-Bridge, from near the Town of its Erection, 5 Years since, and every Passage of any Person over the said Bridge ... and whereas this was justly considered as a grievous Imposition upon the Inhabitants in and near the Island of New-York, and upon the Public ... I was ... encouraged to undertake the Build-

Although a permit was granted to Nicholas Bayard on Sept. 17, 1759 (q.v.), to build a slaughter-house near the Fresh Water, and a law was published on Feb. 6, 1752 (q.v.), it was not until 1773 that a full text compiled with newly stated or revised, was entered in the Minutes of the common council (M. C. C., VII: 25-26), and, on July 28, published in Weyman's Gazette. This law was altered June 13, 1771 (q.v.).
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1766

ing of a Free-Bridge near the same Place with the Promises of . . . my obtaining a Reimbursement of my Expenes . . . And about this time, as stated in my Book by my Brother-in-Law, Vermilye, build the said Free-Bridge, which is now, and ever has been kept in good Order, and was lately repair'd at our Expense, which has cost us a clear Charge of £400 each. Wherefore . . . I take this Method, humbly and earnestly to request all those Gentlemen who encouraged my building the said Bridge . . . take our Case Into Consideration, and grant us that Relief and Assistance we have Reason to expect from their Promises . . . by warmly recommending us to the General Assembly, and solicit- ing in our Favour for public or private Assistance."—N.T. Post-Boy, Aug. 21, 1766. Dyckman and his associates had made earlier requests for reimbursement (see March 21, 1760). For a probable result of this appeal, see March 5, 1767.

Shelburne writes to Gov. Moore: "I have His Majesty's Com- mands to acquaint you of the satisfaction he feels in the happiness of His subjects arising from the tender care and consideration of Parliament but I am ordered to signify to you at the same time that as it is the indispensable duty of his subjects in America to obey the acts of the Legislature of Great Britain, The King both expects & requires a due and cheerful obedience to the same and it can not be doubted that His Majesty Province of New York after the Leasity of Great Britain so recently extended to America will not fail duly to carry into execution the Act of Parliament past last Session for quartering His Majesty's Troops in the full extent and meaning of the Act without referring to the usage of other parts of His Dominions where the Legislature has thought fit to prescribe different Regulations, and which cannot be exceeded any more than in N° America except upon a respectful and well- grounded Representation of the Hardship or inconvenience . . . "—N.T. Col. Doc., 8 & 9. See Nov. 17.

10. The flagstaff on the Common (see May 21) is cut down "by some of the Soldiers, belonging to the 8th Regiment, quartered in the Barracks." As it appeared to have been done "by Way of Insult to the Town, it gave great Unaeasiness, and next Day occasioned two Frays between the Town People and the Soldiers."—N.T. Post-Boy, Aug. 14, 1766. See Aug. 11.

The first blood of the Revolution is shed, due to the friction between the Sons of Liberty and the English regiment of soldiers encamped in the barracks. Describing the incident, Montresor says: "A considerable mob assembled on the Common consisting of 2 or 300 chiefly Sons of Liberty, headed by Scares in order to come to an Explanation with the Officers and Soldiers for Cutting down a pine post where they daily exercised, called by them the Tree of Liberty. These Sons of Liberty used the most scurrilous and abusive language against the officers and soldiers present who never seemed to resent it, till a volley of Brick Batts enu’d and wounded occasioned which they destroyed the Bayonets until an answer could arrive from the General. . . . The Governor Sir H Moore never Interfered."—Montresor's Jour., 382. In this last statement, Montresor shows his usual contempt for what he deems the apathy of the governor. The Post-Boy views the fight from the opposite standpoint, and states that "two or three were wounded, and several hurt, by the Soldiers," and that the soldiers were "entirely the Agressers."—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 14, 1766. On Aug. 12, in a deposition made before the common council, Theophilus Hardenbrook put the blame upon the soldiers and described the conduct of a drummer who was particularly offensive.—Ibid., Aug. 21, 1766.

Montresor states "The Sons of Liberty erected another high post in lieu of the other [see May 21] with 'George, Pitt and Liberty' and hoisted a large ensign thereon."—Montresor's Jour., 382-83. This was the second "Liberty Pole" erected on the Common.

Montresor writes that the commander-in-chief reviewed on this day the 28th regiment (see July 17). "A party of the Artillery formed the Square for the Service with fixed Bayonets, notwithstanding the mob were for pushing through the Line, saying that the Grounds were no longer their. . . ."—Montresor's Jour., 387.

Montresor writes in his Journal: "Proposals handed about for the Inholders & inhabitants not to have any Intercourse with the military or even to admit them to their houses."—Montresor's Jour., 387. See Aug. 16.

Montresor says that the "Sons of Liberty propose that the Market people should not sell any provisions to any officers or Soldiers. . . ."—Ibid., Aug. 20. The Mayor insulted in his own Court by the Sons of Liberty for partiality. . . . The next day he adds that they intend to petition the commander-in-chief that "the soldiers shall not be admitted to carry their side arms when off duty."—Montresor's Jour., 383-84.

Montresor records: "This morning at 5 o'clock the Royal Artillery were reviewed together with their Exercise of Great Guns on a plain a mile beyond Turtle Bay."—Montresor's Jour., 384.

Certain inhabitants of Harlem, in a petition to the common council, state "That the Ground along Harlem River between the North Corner of Cutten's Court and his line of enclosure belonging to the Estate of Lewis Morris Esq'f deceased, to a certain small creek running into a Peice of Meadow Ground belonging to John Bogert Jun'f Esq'f has always been Left by the said Town as common Ground for a Land- ing Place for all Persons crossing the said River between the two Stations aforesaid, and that there is no other proper Place in the said Town for a Landing." They ask to be heard in opposition to a grant of a water lot into the Harlem River adjoining this ground, as it will deprive the public of the benefit of the common landing. From the original petition (MS.), in file No. 4, in city clerk's record- room. See Sept. 10.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "That the wall of the Old Church [on Garden St.] along the street, which is too weak to stand and must be taken down, should be extended eight feet farther toward the street; and the opportunity thus given should be used to put the standard under the outside of the Tower, and not within."—Eccles. Rec., VI. 4068.

A contributor to the Post-Boy writes that, on this day, "Two old Maids, to wit Anneke and Hester Van Deursen . . . privately entered the New Dutch Church . . . both with long Cloaks on, under which they concealed a Hatchet." They were hacking, cutting and slashing one pillar of the pew set apart for the accommo- dation of the corporation when they were discovered by Isaac van Hook. Upon being asked by him what they were about "those Vizens replied, if the Rascals or Scoundrels (meaning the Min- isters, Elders and Deacons) had done this, they would have saved us the Trouble." Hester then began to attack the other pillar and "perhaps would have cut it down, had she not been prevented by the said Van Hook."—N.T. Post-Boy, Aug. 21, 1766.

In the next issue of the paper, the editor states that by a paper "subscribed with the names of the two persons mentioned in our last, it appears we have inadvertently mentioned a matter that leads to a long train of dispute, very unfit to be decided in a newspa- per. . . . But in order to do what we apprehend impartial justice requires . . . we shall just mention the general purport of the paper signed aforesaid—which sets forth, That part of the accout that publish that the themselves were unjustly treated, and that after duly considering the circumstances of the case, as they relate it—they are entirely justifiable for all they have done.—As we have . . . acted impartially on both sides, we beg to be excused from publishing anything more upon the subject."—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 28, 1766.

The Post-Boy reports that, "respecting the late Disturbances, between some of the Citizens and a Party of Soldiers" (see Aug. 11), the corporal and drum major of the regiment, who appeared to be the "chief Authors of the Disturbances, were bound over to the Quarter Session."—N. T. Post-Boy, Aug. 21, 1766. The court records do not indicate that they were ever brought before the court.

In a letter to the Duke of Richmond, Gov. Moore says that, "since the arrival of the 28th and 46th Regiments in this Town (where their presence was much wanted), no means has been left untried by the populace to make them the instruments to excite them to commit some Action, for which public censure might be drawn of [on] them . . . . The great objection here is that of having any Troops at all for while they continue in this Town, those licentious Assemblies of the People (who call them- selves the Sons of Liberty) and frequently coming to the Greatest irreregularities) must be suppress'd and the hands of the Magistrates so far strengthened that the Laws of the Country must again take Place; nor is it to be wondered that a Mob, which once had so much sway in a Town so as to strike terror into the greatest part of the Inholders should with regret see a period put to the power they had usurped and abused, and order and regular-
To the Sons of Liberty in this City.

Gentlemen,

It's well known, that it has been the Custom of all Nations to erect Monuments to perpetuate the Remembrance of grand Events. Experience has proved, that they have had a good Effect on the Purity of those who raised them, especially such as were made sacred to Liberty. Influenced by these Considerations, a Number of the Friends to Liberty in this City, erected a Pole in the Fields, on Ground belonging to the Corporation, as a temporary Memorial of the unanimous Opposition to the detestable Stamp-Acts, which having been destroyed by some dissatisfied Persons, a Number of the Inhabitants determined to erect another, made several Applications to the Mayor, as the principal Member of the Corporation, for Leave to erect the new Pole in the Place where the old One stood. The Committee that waited on him the last Time, disposed to remove every Objection, apprehensive that some of the Corporation might be opposed to the Erection of the Pole, from a Supposition that those Citizens who were for its being raised, were actuated solely by a Party Spirit, offered when the Pole was finished to make it a Present to the Corporation, provided they would order it to be erected either where the other stood or near Mr. Van De Birk's, where the two Roads meet. But even this, shewing as it may seem to Englishmen, was rejected by the Majority of the Corporation, and the other Requisitions denied. We question whether this Conduct can be paralleled by an Act of any Corporation in the British Dominions, chosen by the Suffrages of a free People.

And now, Gentlemen, being we are debarring the Privilege of public Ground to erect the Pole on, we have purchased a Place for it near where the other stood, which is full as public as any of the Corporation Ground. Your Attendance and Countenance are desired at Nine o'Clock on Tuesday Morning the 6th Instant, at Mr. Grammell's Wharf, in order to carry it up to be raised.

New-York, February 3, 1770.

By Order of the Committee.

A. Broadside issued by the Sons of Liberty, regarding the purchase of land for the erection of the Fifth Liberty Pole, Feb. 3, 1770. See p. 825.

B. "A Plan of the Ground contiguous to the Poor House, surveyed the 22d June 1774. By Gerard Bancker, C.S.," and showing the position of the Fifth Liberty Pole. See pp. 855, 858.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

769

1766

Whitehead Hicks is appointed mayor by Gov. Morris, who is at Albany. He was installed on Oct. 14, with the usual ceremony.

Cal. Com. Min., 472; M. G. C., VII: 40. He was continued in office, some years without reappointment, until Feb. 14, 1776 (q.v.), when he resigned.—Ibid., VII: 85, 131, 183, 231, 318, 318-82, 448; VIII: 57, 110.

Payment of £111:10s. is ordered by the common council for paving in front of the city hall.—M. G. C., VII: 39.

“Alexander Smith, From the Coffee-House: Has opened the Tavern lately kept by Mr. Howard, in the Fields, for the Reception and Entertainment of those Gentlemen, &c. who may please to favour him with their Company, on the certainty of being served with neat Wines, Punch, Beer, and all other the best of Liquors.—Coffee at any Hour of the Day, and, large and small Entertainments, provided in the most genteel Manner, on the shortest Notice . . .” He also advertises “Mead and Cakes as usual”—N. Y. Jour., Oct. 30, 1766 (incorrectly dated Oct. 23). A similar advertisement is contained in M. G. C. for Oct. 13, 1766. The tavern referred to is the old Mason’s Arms, at Warren St. and Broadway. See March 19, 1759.

On this night between 10 and 12, says the Journal, “a Number of Soldiers with Bayonets, went to several Houses in the Fields, where they were very properly, and almost upon the water from high to low water mark beginning 30 links to the North east of his dwelling house, there and so extending south or south west to the end of his land according to a plann thereof made by Mr. Francis Marshalls [see Jao. 9, 1750] one of our City surveyors. He accordingly sold right to the town to build a wharf of the breadth of 20 feet for a publick street at the extent of low water mark if it shall ever be wanted by this Corporation;” and that “he may have the sail from high to low water mark as far to the north of his house as his Land extends there binding up to the said rivers.”—M. G. C., VII: 29.

21

whitehead hicks is appointed mayor by gov. morris, who is at albany. he was installed on oct. 14, with the usual ceremony.

22

cal. com. min., 472; m. g. c., vii: 40. he was continued in office, some years without reappointment, until feb. 14, 1776 (q.v.), when he resigned.—ibid., vii: 85, 131, 183, 231, 318, 318-82, 448; viii: 57, 110.

23

payment of £111:10s. is ordered by the common council for paving in front of the city hall.—m. g. c., vii: 39.

24

“alexander smith, from the coffee-house: has opened the tavern lately kept by mr. howard, in the fields, for the reception and entertainment of those gentlemen, &c. who may please to favour him with their company, on the certainty of being served with neat wines, punch, beer, and all other the best of liquors.—coffee at any hour of the day, and, large and small entertainments, provided in the most genteel manner, on the shortest notice . . .” he also advertises “mead and cakes as usual”—n. y. jour., oct. 30, 1766 (incorrectly dated oct. 23). a similar advertisement is contained in m. g. c. for oct. 13, 1766. the tavern referred to is the old mason’s arms, at warren st. and broadway. see march 19, 1759.

on this night between 10 and 12, says the journal, “a number of soldiers with bayonets, went to several houses in the fields, where they were very properly, and almost upon the water from high to low water mark beginning 30 links to the north east of his dwelling house, there and so extending south or south west to the end of his land according to a plann thereof made by mr. francis marshalls [see jao. 9, 1750] one of our city surveyors. he accordingly sold right to the town to build a wharf of the breadth of 20 feet for a publick street at the extent of low water mark if it shall ever be wanted by this corporation;” and that “he may have the sail from high to low water mark as far to the north of his house as his land extends there binding up to the said rivers.”—m. g. c., vii: 29.

the objections of bushes and other inhabitants of harlem to the application of john bogert, jr., for a water lot in harlem river (see sept. 10) are heard by the common council. bogert is given until oct. 10 to present his answer.—m. g. c., vii: 31. nothing further on this subject appears in the minutes; but, in 1771, it is recorded that a public road runs through bogert’s land east to the harlem river. a petition of bogert to change the course of this road was denied by the board.—m. g. c., 253, 261, 262, 263, 265-66.

31

thirty inhabitants of the city, in a petition to the common council, state “that the proprietors of the houses & lots of ground fronting rotten row” (hunter’s key—see vol. iii, p. 990) have presented a petition for a grant of the water lots fronting their houses; but the present petitioners ask that, if the water lots are so granted, a part may be reserved by the city “for a publick edifice, as to this Worshipful Board shall seem meet.” they express the hope that such a wharf would be a great benefit to the town; they are of the opinion “that a publick edifice erected there will contribute greatly to the ornament of the city as well as to the convenience of its inhabitants.” if such reservation is not made, “there will be no place left on the east river near the center of the city,” whereon to erect an exchange, market or other public building.—from original petition (ms.), in city clerk’s record-room, endorsed “filed sept. 25, 1766.”

25

“the mast or flag staff on the common, which was lately cut down and occasion’d a good deal of disturbance” (see aug. 10 and 11), says the post-bye, is cut down again. “the authors of this insult are not yet certainly known, but some particular persons are suspected.”—n. y. post-bye, sept. 25, 1766.

4 a third “liberty pole” is erected on the common in place of the one that was cut down yesterday.—n. y. post-bye, sept. 25, 1766. see may 21 and aug. 12, for the first two poles.

26

“covenent, always existing in this city” petition the common council to build “a good, strong and substantial dock wharf or pier of two hundred feet to be joined to the south end of the present city pier, rampag with the south west side thereof.” alderman brinkhoff proposes that in case the city advances $1,000 “for extending the said city pier two hundred feet farther into the said east river,” the city might agree to pay $500 as five years’ interest on the $1,000; and that as soon as the pier is finished he will pay, for dockage or wharfage at the additional pier, the sum of $500 annually for five years. the board agrees to the proposal, and a committee is appointed to employ workmen, and buy materials for building the pier at an expense not to exceed $1,000.—m. g. c., vii: 32-33.
1766 charges Mr. Parker, printer, and "Comptroller of the Post Office," Oct. 30 New York, and substituting his own—a "stretch of arbitrary Power, that," he believes, "was never ventured in England—where even the Papers that treat the Ministry with the greatest Freedom, are allowed free Passage by the Post. . . ." Holt suggests, if Parker continues to stop his papers, and some other method of conveyance be not adopted than the Post.—"N. Y. Jour., Oct. 30, 1766 (incorrectly dated Oct. 25). Holt had published a paper for six years called the New-York Gazette or Weekly Post-Boy, but on Oct. 16, having learned that Parker, who originally published the Gazette or Weekly Post-Boy, was about to begin the publication of a paper with this name, he decided to change the name of his paper to the N. Y. Journal or General Advertiser.

"A Dancing Assembly" is advertised for this evening and fortnightly thereafter during the season, at Burns's long room.—"N. Y. Jour., Oct. 30 (incorrectly dated Oct. 23), 1766. This was at the City Tavern, situated at the present 315 Broadway.

Nov. 3 "The season of the year now approaches that requires warm clothing, it is therefore hoped that the humane and considerate, will remember their own industrious poor; the clothing they have made for us is warm, and tho' not so fine, will last better, and reflect more honour on the wearer but should we despise their labour, to what despondency shall we reduce those that depend on supporting their craving families with their honest industry, and our humanity, if they should see us deck'd out in foreign finery."—"N. Y. Jour., Nov. 3, 1766.

17 "Another declares that "no manufactures have been set up within this Colony . . . or received any public encouragement" since 1714. It also states that "the Manufacture of Wool or Woolen Cloth" is principally "confined to private families, for their own particular Consumption."—"Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), I, Nov. 7, 1766, and Oct. 17.

Gov. Moore lays before the assembly Shelburne's letter of Aug. 9 (p. v). Moore adds: "I flatter myself that on a due Consideration of this Letter No Difficulties can possibly arise, or the least Objecion be made to the Provision for the Troops as required by the Act of Parliament."—"N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Nov. 24, 1766.

For the assembly's answer, see Dec. 15.

The Gazette, in printing the address of the assembly to Gov. Moore, makes two "egregious blunders." In the twelfth line, "never" is substituted for "ever," making the passage read: "We are confident we shall never be ready to make such returns of Duty and Submission, as may be expected from the most loyal Subjects." The fourth line from the end reads: "your Excellency has done us more than strict Justice," but "no" should have been inserted before "more."—"N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Nov. 17, 1766. Once the blunder was made, the printer went to the assembly and asked why he had in his . . . Paper, Number 397, reprinted the Address . . . in a Manner very injurious to the Honour and Dignity of this House," answered that he was "innocent of the Alteration made in the said Address, till a Number of it had been made, had discovered the Mistake he immediately corrected the Press and endeavoured to get back all the erroneous Copies." After considering the facts of the case, the assembly finally discharged Weyman. The latter, in the next issue of his paper, apologized for the "egregious blunders" (traceable to a journeyman, he suspected), and printed the minutes of the assembly proceedings in regard to the affair.—"Ibid., Nov. 21, 1766.

Dec. 8 the consistency of the Dutch Church agrees with Mr. Breestede that he shall "finish the inside work of the Old Church [on Garden St.] to the satisfaction of the Consistory for the sum of $600."—Eudes, Rec., VI: 4976. The subject is not again found in the records of the church until April 29, 1771 (p. v); there is no record to show what work was done in and after 1766, with the large appropriations made on Aug. 5 (3 Gaz.) and Oct. 21 (p. v).

15 The assembly sends this address to Gov. Moore: "We . . . have examined Mr. Shelburne's Message of the 11th of November last (p. v), into our most serious Consideration; and beg Leave to assure your Excellency, that nothing would give us greater Pleasure than to find it in our Power to comply with every Requisition, tender'd in any Manner, to promote His Majesty's Service [see Aug. 9, 1766, p. v], and that upon a just and genuine Consideration, that we find it impossible to comply with what is now demanded, consistent with our Obligations to our Constituents . . ."

"We hope it will be considered, that we are chosen to make such a Provision for the Support of His Majesty's Government in this Colony . . . as is most suitable to the Circumstances of the People we represent; and that we should be guilty of a Breach of that most sacred Trust, if we should load them with Burthen they are incapable of supporting."

"In the Provision we made last Session, for quartering Two Battalions and one Company of Artillery, we loaded ourselves with a Burthen much greater than any of the Neighbouring Governments lie under for that Service . . ."

We beg Leave, further to represent to your Excellency, that by the Act of March 22, 1765, it appears to be the Intention of the Legislature, to provide for the quartering Soldiers, only on a March, but according to the Construction put on it here, it is required that all the Forces which shall at any Time enter this Colony, shall be quartered during the whole Year, in a very unusual and expensive Manner; That by the Marching several Regiments into this Colony, this Expanse would become ruinous and insupportable; and therefore, we cannot, consider with our Duty to our Constituents, put it in the Power of any Person . . . to lay such a Burthen on them . . . we humbly entreat your Excellency, to set our Conduct in a more favourable, that is, to its true Light, by representing that our Noncompliance on this Occasion, proceeds entirely from a just Sense of what our Duty requires."—"N. Y. Post-Boy, Dec. 25, 1766. See Dec. 19.

An announcement of this date appears in the Mercury stating that the Bill was passed in New York, and commissions to run out straight public roads through that province between New York and Philadelphia, and empowering them to raise therefore a sum of money by a public lottery not exceeding $1000. Soon after a lottery was set on foot, but from the troubled state of affairs at that time occasioned by the Stamp Act, the proceedings were delayed. "But as it is apprehended that the salutary purpose might now be effected, the managers therein appointed have thought fit for that end to revive the . . . scheme of a lottery, to consist of 2201 tickets, at $4 dollars each; 662 of which are to be fortunate."—"N. Y. Merc., Jan. 26, 1767.

Gov. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelburne: "The letter which I had the Honor of receiving from your Lordship dated the 9th of August [p.v.], was laid before the House of Assembly the 17th of last month [p.v.], accompanied by a Message and it is with no small mortification that I am now to give your Lordship an account so unsatisfactory of the Proceedings of the House on this occasion. Yesterday the enclosed address [see Dec. 15] was presented to me in answer to my message by which your Lordship will see that I had but too much foundation for the opinion I ventured in my letter of the 20th of June, and could wish that the behaviour of those Gentlemen had been called before the Assembly and asked why he had in his . . . Paper, Number 397, reprinted the Address . . . in a Manner very injurious to the Honour and Dignity of this House," answered that he was "innocent of the Alteration made in the said Address, till a Number of it had been made, had discovered the Mistake he immediately corrected the Press and endeavoured to get back all the erroneous Copies." After considering the facts of the case, the assembly finally discharged Weyman. The latter, in the next issue of his paper, apologized for the "egregious blunders" (traceable to a journeyman, he suspected), and printed the minutes of the assembly proceedings in regard to the affair.—"Ibid., Nov. 21, 1766.

The consistency of the Dutch Church agrees with Mr. Breestede that he shall "finish the inside work of the Old Church [on Garden St.] to the satisfaction of the Consistory for the sum of $600."—Eudes, Rec., VI: 4976. The subject is not again found in the records of the church until April 29, 1771 (p. v); there is no record to show what work was done in and after 1766, with the large appropriations made on Aug. 5 (3 Gaz.) and Oct. 21 (p. v).

15 The assembly sends this address to Gov. Moore: "We . . . have examined Mr. Shelburne's Message of the 11th of November last (p. v), into our most serious Consideration; and beg Leave to assure your Excellency, that nothing would give us greater Pleasure than to find it in our Power to comply with every Requisition, tendered in any Manner, to promote His Majesty's Service [see Aug. 9, 1766, p. v], and that upon a just and genuine Consideration, that we find it impossible to comply with what is now demanded, consistent with our Obligations to our Constituents . . ."

Sec. A. ibid., Nov. 21, 1766.

Dec. 8 the consistency of the Dutch Church agrees with Mr. Breestede that he shall "finish the inside work of the Old Church [on Garden St.] to the satisfaction of the Consistory for the sum of $600."—Eudes, Rec., VI: 4976. The subject is not again found in the records of the church until April 29, 1771 (p. v); there is no record to show what work was done in and after 1766, with the large appropriations made on Aug. 5 (3 Gaz.) and Oct. 21 (p. v).

15 The assembly sends this address to Gov. Moore: "We . . . have examined Mr. Shelburne's Message of the 11th of November last (p. v), into our most serious Consideration; and beg Leave to assure your Excellency, that nothing would give us greater Pleasure than to find it in our Power to comply with every Requisition, tendered in any Manner, to promote His Majesty's Service [see Aug. 9, 1766, p. v], and that upon a just and genuine Consideration, that we find it impossible to comply with what is now demanded, consistent with our Obligations to our Constituents . . ."
1763 - 1767

CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1766

"the Secretary office under the fort Wall going down from the broad Way toward Wall Street".

"Other buildings included in his list are the city hall, jail, and the barracks behind the same, work house, college, "A Play house," the free school, and the exchange. There are four public squares, he says, Bowling Green, Hanover Squ --, "St. George's Square the upper end of Queen Street," and "the commons or fields before the New Goal, Workhouse etc." From vol, lettered "Papers relating to N. England, N. York etc formerly belonging to Du Simitiere," now in Ridgeway Branch of the Library Co. of Philadelphia. Du Simitiere was an artist, antiquary, and naturalist, from Geoeva, and an extensive traveller. He arrived in New York in 1764 or 1765, and became a naturalized citizen in 1764. Penn Mag. (1809), VIII: 341 see also plate description, III: 865-86. It is apparent that his notes on New York City were made between 1767 and 1772. Some information he gives about the city streets at that time is worth quoting in extenso.

"William Street is commonly called Cort St Horse Street from an old beer house in that Street with Such Sign "Princess Street commonly call Lam Street "Duke Street commonly call Bayard Street "Crown Street--New Dutch church Street "Dyer Street--Bateau Street "Bridge Street--Wyckhopp Street "Carlton Street--Lerry Street "Ann Street commonly Scott Street "Beekmans Street--Chapell Street "Hunter's Key--Rutten Street "Rolman Slip in the charter is "Lyons Slip in the plan now Burling Slip "Kings Street Vesey Street from a minister of that name living "that part of Smith Street from Kingsstreet to Maiden lane is commonly know[n] by the name of Pet Boker hill."

"Vesey Street next to St Paul was formerly called Moord Kayl Street from a hollow at the bottom of the Street near the North River where a murder once was committed."

"flatten Barrack a Street so call'd from Farleth's Bergh varleth was a man So called that lived upon that hill" See Smith's hist. of New York p. 7.

"the white hall a Street So called now in N York took its Name from a large house so called built Soon after the English Government took place Some Suppose by Govr Dongan [Noteby Du Simitiere:]--"it was built by one [blank] he went of [null] & never was heard of Some Say he turn'd Pirate on the coast of Guinea, upon which having left no heir Govr Dongan appropriated that estate to himself as Derelict Some person in New York since have made great inquiries to find an heir but it vain.""

As the ground belong to Some of the Same family & name to this day, it Stood as appear by part of the Side walls that are Standing to this day on the West Side of the Street. Near the water Side & flowing the east its front was about 45 foot the depth not easily ascertained as most of the walls are pull'd down but what remain is built of rough Stones about two feet thick to the height of ten feet above the ground the interval between the walls in front of the Street is filled with a couple of mean wooden buildings & behind was a large Garden that Reached from behind that house to the Southside of Pearl Street and all the way to the water Side where the battery now is it was called the Vineyard from the grapes growing in it. Some of the family of Govr Dongan ownd that house & the people that live upon that ground pay a quit rent to them they own a great part of Staten Island, the first that came over was called Myland Dongan for his large possession Some Says he was a Son to the Governer others a younger brother his grand Son is now living."

Included among these papers, is a "Sketch [by Du Simitiere] of the State House at New York," which is reproduced and described in A. Pl. 4-a, and plate description, III: 865-86. It is the only known representation of the city hall after the third story was added, in 1765.--Du Simitiere Papers, op. cit. For another description of city, in 1765, see N. Y. City, 1719.
1767—Eccles. Rec., VI: 4080. Two lots on William St. were leased on May 11.—Ibid., VI: 4089. Regarding the disposal of the remaining one, the proper Judges of the Peace were asked to consult:

The Gentlemen Officers of the Army give a grand entertainment and ball to the Ladies and Gentlemen of this City, at George Burns’ York Arms. At this reception, there is the most numerous and brilliant Appearance of both Sexes that ever was known.—Gent. Weyman Jan. 19, 1767.

To be let, or Sold, and entered upon the first Day of May next; The House and Lot belonging to Sarah Steel, known by the Name of the King’s Arms; it has been a noted Tavern for many Years in this City. The House and Fixtures is every way Compleat. Likewise furnished with Carriages, Sacks and Wagons.—Mr. Steele Jan. 19, 1767.

Francis Moore, Frederick van Cortlandt, and others proprietors of houses and lots of Ground fronting the docks Commonly Called the Great Dock and Mrs. Moore’s Dock, petition the common council for grants of water lots, and a committee is appointed to Examine and receive such Proposals.—*M. C. C. VII: 35. Water lots were granted to Frederick van Cortlandt, and others on July 10, 1772 (M. C. C. VII: 3667). The minutes of Trinity vestry show that “Doctor Achnaymo” had been appointed to the board that his Excellency St. Henry Moore had made him an offer that if this Corporation would Petition him for a Tract of Land to Erect a Township he would do all in his Power that it should be granted. Whereupon it is resolved that a Petition be Prepared Praying a Grant for a Tract of Land for that Purpose and that the Rector with Mr. David Clarkson and Mr. Kissam be a Committee.—Soc. Rec., Sept. 22, 1767.

The common council ordered payment of $73 for an Iron Cast Stove furnished for the use of the Alms House.—M. C. C. VII: 55.

As they have been informed that their petition (see March 18, 1766) to the king has been referred to Gov. Moore and the council (see July 25, 1766), the ministers, elders, deacons and trustees of the Presbyterian Church and their Vestry, did send a request to the Committee of the Bills and Accounts, that they would be pleased to refer it to the Committee of the Docks, and that they would be pleased to refer it to the Committee of the Produce House and the Council of the City,—S. Rec., VI: 350; 451. Hist. MSS., Eng. 167, See March 24.

The Bishop of Llandaff, in a sermon before the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and afterwards at the Assembly of American Bishops, died (see May 3, 1767). The last subject, and printed as an appendix to the debates, is surrounded by the Dissenters against any establishment of one form of religion. They feared the system in all its developments, titles, spiritual courts, canon law, as in England. Yet they did not object Feb. to Bishops unattended by any temporal powers or dignities. Wil- liam Livingston addressed a letter to the Bishop of Llandaff, taking Jan. exception to his charges against the morals and culture of the colonists. Rec. VII: 4946, citing Sedgewick's Life of Rm Livingston, 128.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1767

5 The common council orders the clerk to "prepare an advertisement to be put in all the publick or weekly Gazettees," to "lease by publick Out Cry to the highest bidder the ferry between this City and paulow's Hook." For the term of four years from May 2—M. C. C., VII: 57-58. For some reason, not revealed by the records, the seven year agreement with Van Voorst, of Feb. 25, 1766 (q.v.), had terminated. Prior to the day appointed for the Out Cry, a petition was presented to the common council, March 6 (q.v.), by several citizens residing near the Hudson, and it was ordered that a public hearing be held on March 10 (q.v.). The ferry was leased to Jacob van Vorhis on March 23 (q.v.), for four years at £310 per year.

The common council pays Walter Brock £229 for "wine & punch, had of him at the Sale of the Docks, Stalls & ferry."—M. C. C., VII: 57. Brock's Tavern was directly opposite the First Presbyterian Church on Wall St. It was in earlier years generally referred to as the "Sign of Admiral Warren."—See 1758.

Gov. Moore informs Shelburne that Wm. Smith, Sr., "as he is far advanced in years," is willing to resign his seat was promoted by his friend of Feb. 25, 1766. —M. C. C. Moore recommends young Smith in these words: "He is now at the head of the Profession of the Law, and will be of great Service in the Council as his opinions may always be depended on, not only from his knowledge of the Law but his integrity. He is connected with the best families in this Province, is of unblemished Character & high in the estimation of every one here."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 909-10.

A committee of the governors of King's College reports that they have petitioned Gov. Moore for 24,000 acres of land, and that the council has advised that the petition be granted. Letters patent making this grant was issued Wm. Tryon, which Peter Van Cortlandt, who is now on the bench, issued in favour of his friend. J. M. Van Cortlandt and M. C. Moore recommend young Smith with these words: "He is now at the head of the Profession of the Law, and will be of great Service in the Council as his opinions may always be depended on, not only from his knowledge of the Law but his integrity. He is connected with the best families in this Province, is of unblemished Character & high in the estimation of every one here."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 909-10.

On March 20, 1770, the committee of the college governors reported that the lands were in the new county of Gloucester (which had been set off from the county of Albany). After the Revolution, in the settlement of the boundary dispute between New York and New Hampshire, New York State, for 350,000 of which the college received nothing), surrendered this tract, and also one of 15,000 acres granted to the college by Gov. Tryon in the spring of 1772, which Peter Van Cortlandt, who is now on the bench, issued in favour of his friend. J. M. Van Cortlandt and M. C. Moore recommend young Smith with these words: "He is now at the head of the Profession of the Law, and will be of great Service in the Council as his opinions may always be depended on, not only from his knowledge of the Law but his integrity. He is connected with the best families in this Province, is of unblemished Character & high in the estimation of every one here."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 909-10.

Murray and Smith, having "entered into partnership, for carrying on the business of Vintners, and Victuallers, at the Masons-Arms-Tavern, in the Fields, lately kept by said Smith alone, which is now called, "Smith's," have written to "the utmost endeavours to give general satisfaction, and keep the said house with the same good reputation, as in the time of their predecessor Mr. John Jones."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 26, 1767. See March 19, 1759.

Mar. 5 A meeting is announced for March 5 of the "Hand in Hand Fire Company." The clerk will give notice of the place of meeting, and "inspect the Buckets, Bags, Belts, Hand-Barrows, Baskets, &c., belonging to each Member, if in good order and in Readiness for Service."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weymen), March 2, 1766. Cotteril, in Our Foremen, 49, says that a "Hand-in-Hand Fire Company" was organized in New York on Nov. 1, 1790, without mentioning this earlier organization.

Capt. Thomas Randell (Randell or Wrandell) requests that the common council Indulge him with Six feet four Inches of the Street Contiguous to the Easterly Side of his dwelling house in the Sound ward of the city for a place of business. The corporation accedes to his request.—M. C. C., VII: 59. Capt. Randell's house stood at the north-west corner of Pearl and Whitehall Sts., being No. 28 Whitehall St.—See Will of Thomas Randell, dated March 6, 1757, in Liker Wills, XLIII: 218; cf. N. Y. Directories, 1762, also cf. Liber Deeds, CXIV: 216.

Jacob Dyckman (see Aug. 6, 1766), Benjamin Palmer, and John Vermiele have presented a petition to the assembly stating that they have expended more than £1,000 in erecting and re- pairing the free bridge and have received only about £300 in pay- ment therefor, and asking that the members of the house "grant them such Relief in the Premises, as they in their great Wisdom shall think fit." Attached to this was a recommendation signed by about 100 of the inhabitants of New York, about members of the House of Assembly, and about 50 from the other Assembly. These were attested to the "Truth of the Facts" mentioned in the petition, "the great public Benefit of the said Bridge," and the "Reasonableness of the Peti- tion," and recommended that Dyckman, Palmer, and Vermiele "be allowed such Compensation, Relief and Assistance, as the General Assembly should think proper," and that a statement of property, with its accompanying signatures, is now printed in the Journal, because someone has started a rumour that names of people who have not signed the recommendation have been added without their knowledge. The list of subscribers includes the names of the most influential people in the city.—N. Y. Jour., March 5, 1767; See April 18, 1769.

Inhabitants of the city living near the North River petition the common council (see Feb. 20) "that the Purchaser of the Ferry from this City to Powlas Hook may be at Liberty to land at & set off from any Place he shall choose between the Southernmost Part of Roosevelt's Dock, and the Northernmost Part of Day's Dock." They explain that the landing-place on the New York side has been at Mesier's Dock (at foot of Cortlandt St.—see Vol. I, p. 990—and designated in Pls. 41 and 42, Vol. I, as Paulus Hook Ferry) ever since the ferry was chartered to Cortlandt in 1789. They own the lands at Powlas Hook; that the newspapers now announce that the ferry is to be sold on public vendue on March 23; and that they are informed application has been made to fix the ferry at Roosevelt's Dock (at "lower end of Thames St."—See M. C. C., VII: 8). They prefer Mesier's Dock, because it "is more convenient than Roosevelt's Dock, both to the Person who may hire the said Ferry, and to those who may have Occasion to cross the same, particularly for Travellers, since the Street leading to Mesier's Dock runs directly through the City to the Ferry at the East River, and is, from the Broad-Way to that Dock, very wide and a Brisk Passage, leading from the Broad-Way to Roosevelt's Dock, is a mere Lane or Alley, and so very narrow that in many Parts of it two Carriages cannot pass each other without Danger, which must make it very inconvenient."—See M. C. C., VII: 5.

Peter Mesier offers to convey to the city a water lot fronting his docks, 75 ft. wide and 100 ft. long, and to give £1000 towards filling up and docking this lot. The petitioners desire to purchase the ferry, but cannot afford to give anything for it if it is fixed at Roose- velt's Dock.—From the original petition (MS.) in file No. 4, in city clerk's record-room. The common council designated March 10 (q.v.), for a lease. M. C. C., VII: 60. On March 10 the common council holds a hearing on the question of the New York terminal of the ferry to Poulus Hook (see Feb. 25, 1766). The petitioners of March 6 (q.v.), as well as Nicholas Roosevelt, are represented by counsel. By a vote of nine to four, the board decides for the petitioners.—M. C. C., VII: 60. This meant that Mesier's Dock (M. C. C., IX: 47-48) continued to be the Manhattan terminal (see Pl. 64, Vol. I). The ferry was leased on March 23 (q.v.).

That trade organizations were in existence at this period is attested by the "Articles and Regulations of the Friendly Society of Tradesmen, House Carpenters, In the City of New York," bearing this date. The members who subscribe to these regulations "Do, out of Christian Love and true Friendship, promise to assist each other as far as in us lies." Every one who desires to join the society "must profess himself a House-Carpenter, free from all being Distempers, and between the Age of Forty and Twenty-one Years." The twenty articles provide for the annual election of a president, a secretary, a clerk, and two stewards; the recording of the minutes of the society in a "Book of Transactions"; the holding of monthly meetings; the imposition of fines for non-attendance; the advertisement of new members; the admission of old members; and the payment of members' funeral expenses.

Besides these, we find the following provisions: "If any Member calls Liquor without the Approbation of the Stewards, he shall pay for the same himself," and "If any Member presume to curse or swear, or cometh disguised in Liquor and does not leave it or promoteth others drinking at Club House, he or they so offending, shall pay to the common Stock, for every such Default, Sixpence."—From a broadside in the N. Y. Pub. Library (and Evans, 24366). For an earlier record of concerted action by tradesmen, see April 2, 1747.
The consistency of the Dutch Church passes a resolution to build, on the grounds of Mr. Harpending, a third church. The minutes of this meeting are not printed in the chronological sequence following, but are referred ordinarily in the minutes of June 12 (q.v.—ibid., VI: 493). The "grounds of Mr. Harpending" consisted of his interest in the "Shoemakers' Field," left to the Dutch Church by his will, which was proved Feb. 7, 1724 (q.v.).

A great Number of Gentlemen, who chose publicly to celebrate the Anniversary of the Repeal of the Stamp Act met at the House of Edward Bardin, where an elegant Entertainment was prepar'd.' After dinner, "loyal and patriotic Toasts were drank." —N. Y. Merc., March 23, 1767.

The Pole erected as a signal to Liberty on the City Parade" is found cut down this morning. (This was the third one so treated; for the other two, see Aug. 10 and Sept. 23, 1766.) A fourth is "immediately erected in its Stead and cas'd below with Iron to prevent such another Action."—N. Y. Gm. (Weyman), March 22, 1767. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 967. "The same Night attempts were made both to cut it down, and to undermine and dig it down—but without Effect. On Saturday Night, the 21st, there was an attempt to destroy it by Gunpowder, by boring a hole, and charging it with Powder, but this also failed." Next Sunday—a strong Watch was set by the Citizens, at an adjacent House; a small Company of Soldiers in the Night appeared with their Coats turn'd, arm'd with Bayonets & Sticks, but no Guns.—Some of the Watch went out, asked who they were and their Business? But received no satisfactory Answer: They informed them that before the Doors were kept, but after a few Words thought proper to retire. On Monday about 6 in the Evening, a party of Soldiers march'd by the Post, and as they passed by Mr. Bardin's Tavern 'tis'd their Musquets, two of which were pointed at the House; next Morning it was found that a Ball had been fired at the House, and another into one of the Timbers. On Tuesday about 1 o'Clock in the Afternoon, the same party as it is supposed, took a Ladder from a new Building, which they carried to the Barracks, and were from thence proceeding towards the post—but being seen by an Officer he stop'd and turn'd them back—and notice of this Behaviour of the Soldiers, getting to the Governor and General and the Magistrates of the City,—we hear strict Orders were immediately given and effectual Measures taken to prevent Disturbance, or any the like future Occasion of it; since which all has been quiet, and we hope this Matter, in itself trivial, and only consider'd as of Importance by the Citizens, as it sh'd an intention to offend & insult them,—will occasion no farther Disturbance."—N. Y. Journ., Mar. 26, 1767. See Jan. 13, 1770.

The Paulus Hook ferry (see March 10) is "Struck off to Jacob Van Verlin of this City Merchant" for four years at a yearly rental of $30, on condition that he have the "draft of a L. House, and another into one of the Timbers." The ferry fee was $1.50 per boat, $2.00 per horse, and $3.00 per coach. The ferry was operated by the city from 1764 to 1770, providing a means of transportation across the Kill van Kull to Jersey City.

The committee of the legislative council reports on the petition of the Presbyterian Church (see July 29, 1766). They state that since 1759 petitions for charters have been made by various churches, of which were submitted, in 1764, to the lords of trade, who answered: "it does not appear to us from anything set forth in their Petition, that such an Incorporation is at present Necessary or Expedient." The committee adds that "Except the Charters granted to the Church of England, all the Instances of such Incorporations within this Province, (four only in Number) are confined to the Dutch, whose Claims to this Distinction, are ... grounded on one of the Articles of Capitalization on the Surrender of the Colony in the year 1664, by which it is declared 'that the Dutch here, shall enjoy the Liberty of their Consciences in the Free Worship and Church Discipline.'" Also, they can discover "no other material Circumstances of the Petitioners [the Presbyterians] and the other Protestant Congregations, not of the Communion of the Church of England, whereon to ground any Preference."—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), 366-367, N. Y. Hist. Soc., Hist. Misc., 1866, 371. See Aug. 26.

Bardin's tavern (later Montague's), at the present 253 Broadway, is fired upon by several members of a company of soldiers as they pass by.—See Supplement Extraordinary to the N. Y. Journ., Mar. 26, 1767. This happened during the clashes between soldiers and citizens over the liberty pole. Bardin had been proprietor of this tavern since March 12, 1764 (q.v.), when he had hung out the sign of the King's Arms, replacing the sign of the King of Prussia. See April 5, 1774.

The Mercury prints an "Account of Goods exported from the Port of New-York" between July 5, 1765, and July 6, 1766. The list mentions:

- 5187 Hundred Weight of Naval Stores.
- 1032 Tons of Pig and Barr Iron.
- 102 Tons of Pot and Pearl-saltes.
- 172 Casks, Barrels, &c. of Furs and Skins.
- 80 Tons of Copper Ore.
- 221 Pound Weight of Indigo.
- 27787 Hundred Weight of Logwood, Fustick and Nicoraga Wood.
- 5519 Tons of Bread and Flour.
- 2941 Barrels of Beef and Pork.
- 1198 Firkins of Butter.
- 3710 Casks of Fish.
- 109666 Bushels of Grain.
- 55 Casks of Cheese.
- 2598 Boxes of Soap and Candles.
- 617 Casks of Lard.
- 1136 Casks of Rice.
- 11057 Hogheads of Fluxed.

"N. B. Besides what is contained in this list, vessels are frequently filled up with different sorts of lumber, and a great variety of other articles, such as Tallow, Bees-wax, Sarasarilla, Gammons, Ginseng, Beer, Starch, &c."—N. Y. Merc., March 30, 1767.

A meeting of the creditors of Phillip Smith, an abscinding deponent, is announced to be held on this day at the "House of David Grim, known by the Sign of the Three Tons, in Chapel-Street."—N. Y. Journ., Jan. 29, 1767. Edward Bardin announced, on May 31, 1770, that he had removed from the King's Arms Tavern in the Fields (Montagne's) and would open a "complaisant Victualing-House, the Sign of the Golden Ton, in Chapel-Street."—N. Y. Merc., June 4, 1770. Evidently this was the same house in which David Grim had conducted the "Three Tons." Some time prior to 1774, David Grim had removed to a site at 138 William St., and was keeping a tavern known as the Hessian's Coffee House. See March 18, 1774.

"From private Advices by the last Vessels, we are informed that there was the greatest Reason to hope the Restrictions upon the Governors of the several English American Colonies, against passing Money Bills of Paper Currency would be wholly taken off, without any Conditions inconsistent with English Liberty, soon after the setting of the Parliament, which was to meet the 16th of January."—N. Y. Journ., Apr. 10, 1767.

A court martial is held at the Navy Yard on July 3, 1766 (q.v.), "to furnish the barracks, in the cities of New-York and Albany with firewood and candles, and the other necessaries therein mentioned, for his Majesty's forces." The news of this recall was transmitted to the New York assembly on Dec. 3.—Assem. Journ. (1767-68), 38, 40.

"The Noted Henry Hynse, Lately from Sadler's Wells," will perform every other evening, excepting Sunday, at the house of Mr. Miller, near the Oswego Market. Hynse was evidently an acrobat and juggler.—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 15, 1767.

A benefit concert for "the Royal American Band of Musick," is advertised to be held April 20 at Burns' assembly-room.—N. Y. Journ., April 16, 1767. See also Nov. 16, 1769.

An advertisement reads: "Thereas it has been the Custom for several Years past, for the Inhabitants of North America to import Fire Engines from foreign Parts; this is to inform the Public, that they are made in the City of New York, as cheap and as good as any imported from England, by David Hunn."—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 20, 1767. David Hunn advertised his Fire Engines July 31, 1764. His advertisement of July 31, 1767 shows that he "makes, mends and repairs all kinds of fire-engines," and that "this is a branch of the business that has never been carried on here before." At that time, he had "a very good fire engine for sale."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 31, 1769.

The city bought one of Hunn's fire engines in 1772 (July 16, p. 2). Flattenbarack Hill is a name now applied to Verlettenberg.
1767. A notice in the Mercury states that John C. Knapp has moved from Rotten Row to the garden of Flatlands House near the Broad Street. —"N. Y. Merc., Apr. 27, 1767.

For the location of this house, see Pls. 27, 27A and 34, Vol. I. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 999, 1000.

A list of subscriptions, amounting to over £3,600, for the building of a third Dutch Church (see Jan. 1767) is presented to the congregation appointed on Thursday, and the estimated cost. It consists of Pieter Marschak, Theodorus van Wyck, Isaac Roosevelt, Andrew Marschak, and Garret Abeel. —Eccl. Rec., VI: 498–58.

30. We are sorry to note that articles, as the Assembly of New York have not only been lackadaisical, but as the troops quartered in that City, agreeable to an act [see May 10, 1755] passed for that purpose last year by the parliament of Great Britain. —Ann. Reg. (1767), 57. See July 2.

May

The new Lutheran church is "opened and solemnly inaugurated." —N. Y. Jour., Apr. 30, 1767. The congregation having outgrown the old building on Cliff St. (see Mar. 21, 1767), this new stone church, 34 ft. by 60 ft., was built on the north-east corner of Frankfort and William Sts. It was called Christ Church, but, because of its location, was popularly known as "the Swamp Church."—The Oldest Lutheran Church in Am. (1914), 17. The building was low, without a steeple; it had an entrance on King George (later William) St., and a peculiar arrangement of windows of various sizes. —See view in ibid., opp. 28. Rev. Frederick Augustus Conrad Muhlenberg, afterwards speaker of the Pennsylvania assembly and of the national house of representatives, was pastor from 1762 to 1769. —Ibid., 28. For its later history, see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 929.

Trinity Church leases to Abraham Mortier, for the term of 99 years, "part of the Land commonly called and known by the Name of Old John's Land... containing 26 Acres... Three Roofs & 67 perches of Land under the yearly Rent of Ten pounds current money of New York aforesaid for each acre thereof." For the second period of 33 years he is to pay £3 per acre annually, and for the third period £6. —From a paper marked "Bounds of Farm—Richmond Hill/Trinity Church—Commenced May 1," among the Bancroft surveys (Box R-W, Folder 18) in N. Y. Pub. Library. It was on this property that Major Mortier built his house (see July 1), one of the finest residences of the period, later known as Richmond Hill. The site overlooked the North River near the present Charlton and Varick Sts. In 1776, the house was occupied by Washington, later by Vice President Adams, and still later by Aaron Burr. It is reproduced and described in Vol. I, Pl. 55A. For an interesting description of the estate, written by Mrs. Adams, see Sept. 27, 1789. See also Stone, Hist. of N. Y. City, Appendix II. Pelleterius, in Abstracts of Wills, VIII: 284, erroneously gives the date of this lease as 1766.

11. It is ordered by this board that Messrs. Francis Marschak and Gerrardus Bancker Do Lay down in the plan (Now Exhibited to this board) of the Several Water Lots Lying between the Conestee peer and MTs Moores Dock, the breadth of the petitioners Lots fronting the said Water Lots, as they shall appear by their Several Conveyances for the same and that the breadth of Each Respective Lot be laid down at the Extent of the Grants prayed for, pointing out the Loss which Shall Sustain on Each Lott to the westward of the Exchange." —M. G. C., VII: 68–69.

An advertisement in the Mercury reads: "A Public School was opened the First Day of this Instant May, at the East-End of Horse and Cart-Street [now William St], the Second Door from the Corner, near the New High Dutch Lutheran Church: Where the Public may depend upon having their Children taught after a most concise Method, applicable to Business; in Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, &c, with the utmost Care and Diligence."—By Peter Sparrling. —N. Y. Merc., May 14, 1767. At this time a "public" school meant merely one which any child might attend; fees were charged for the tuition. See Feb. 27, 1807, for the first grant of money by the state for a free school, and May 1, 1787, for its establishment.

15. In a letter to Maj. Gates, John Maunsell (see May 4, 1775) says: "Never was a Country so embarrassed as this, our paper Curet allmost exhausted; all the Gold and Silver sent home, & trade quite dead, the difficulty to live here is inconceivable, then the mode of living here is hired Labour at all rates as expensive, & every article in the Same Way.... I have retired to a place at Harlem where one Launcere lived, on the top of the Hill as you go from Harlem May 15th, 1767. For the road to the Landing at Turkey Hill near the South Street." —Gates MSSs, in box 2, N. Y. Hist. Soc. Investigation shows "one Launcere" to have been Lawrence Low, who died in 1757. The estate was then the later Fort Washington, and a portion of it, inherited by Marinus Low, was sold in 1776 to John Maunsell Esq., afterward Lieut.-General in the British Army. —Rice, Hist. of Harlem (1st ed.), 601.

Two plans for building the third Dutch Church are presented to the Consistory. That of Mr. Brestele is chosen, "with some reservations, that the breadth should be 74 instead of 73, and the pillars should run all the way up so as to support the roof." The Consistory directs the committee on plans to "obtain a close estimate of the cost of such a church built of clifstone," so that they may know "what ground there is to go upon in completing it." —Eccl. Rec., VII: 498–90. Further resolutions were passed on June 18 (g. v.) regarding the plans of the new church.

An advertisement in the Post-Boy informs the public that the "Stage-Wagons, kept by John Barnull, in Elm Street, in Philadelphia, and John Merecan, at the New-Blighting Star, near New-York, continue their Stages in Two Days, from Powles-Hack Ferry, opposite New York, to Philadelphia; returns from Philadelphia to Powles-Hack in Two Days also... The Price for each Passenger is Ten Shillings to Prince-Town and from thence to Philadelphia, Ten Shillings more, Ferriage free. Persons may now go from New York to Philadelphia, and back again in Five Days, and remain in Philadelphia two Nights and one Day to do their Business in." —N. Y. Post-Boy, May 28, 1767. For the earlier, probably the first, stage to Philadelphia, see Oct. 1, 1761.

The common council orders that "either Abraham De Peyster June 30th by the permission of Mr. de Peyster, an inhabitant of the East Ward and of Contiguous to the dwelling house of Samuel Verplank in Wall Street, or Thomas Grigg the Tenant in possession, Do forthwith Enclose the same Lott (It being Deemed by this board a publick nuisance whilst open) or that this board will proceed to remove the said Nuisance." —M. G. C., VII: 161. The house of Samuel Verplanck was on the north side of Wall St., 101 feet east of Nassau St. With its grounds, it had a frontage of 75 ft. on Wall St. Samuel Verplanck inherited it from his father, Guylene Verplanck. —See the latter's will, dated July 5, 1759, in Liber Wills, XVIII: 68. Samuel's executor sold it, March 27, 1824, to the Bank of the United States. —Liber Deeds, CLXXI: 315. It stood upon the site of what was later the United States' Army Office. —See also Vol. I, p. 450. Abraham de Peyster's land was west of the above property, extending to Nassau St. —See Liber Deeds, XXXII: 235; ibid., XL: 417. This was the site of the present United States Sub-Treasury. See description of the De Peyster Garden, 1: 238–39.

A celebration is held in honour of the king's birthday. It began at 11 o'clock, when "the Detachment of the Train, with the 17th and 46th Regiments were paraded on the Battery, and marched in Order by, and saluted his Excellency General Gage." At about the same time, Gov. Moore and the members of the common council assembled in Fort George, "where his Majesty's, and many other loyal Healths were drank, under the Discharge of a Royal Salute from the Fort, which was immediately followed by a Salute of 21 Guns from the Liberty Ship, on which was suspended a Union." The vessels in the harbour, with their colours displayed, made a "very grand, and beautiful Appearance." In the evening "the most magnificent Fire-Works ever seen in America, were played off before a very great Number of Spectators." There was a general illumination throughout the city, the gate of the fort and the Whitehall's headquarters being particularly lighted with clusters of lamps placed so as to form a "Regal Crown... and... the Royal Arms." —N. Y. Jour., June 11, 1767. Cf. N. Y. Gaz. (Weymann), June 8, 1767. See also announcement of the celebration in N. T. Merc., June 1, 1767.

An Act granting to His Majesty the Sum of Three thousand Pounds for furnishing necessary for the Troops quartered in this Colony is passed by the colonial legislature. —Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 947–48; N. T. Merc., June 8, 1767. See June 18.

This is to notify the Public, That the Stage-Wagons, kept by John Rapalje, in Jamaica, formerly placed in the Streets, on the 5th and 6th of every Month, viz. from the 8th of June to the 8th of December. The Wagon will be kept in good Order, and good
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

Horses with Sober Drivers,” Trips from Jamaica to Brooklyn
June
Ferry will be made Monday and Saturday mornings, returning at three o’clock in the afternoon of these days. “The said Rapalje keeps a civil House of Entertainment for civil Gentlemen and Ladies.”—N. Y. Merc., June 8, 1767.

The tavern kept for the Sign of General Wolfe,” at the present Spuyten Duyvil and Park Row, is again offered for sale (see Dec. 24, 1764). The advertisement well describes a tavern of this period.

“To be sold at public Vendue, at the Merchant’s Coffee-House, on Tuesday the 14th Day of July next; Ten Years Lease, from the first of May Instant, of two Houses and Lot of Ground, situated on the North Corner of the Vineyard, facing, and directly opposite the new Presbyterian Church, the Corner House osted for a well acclimated Tavern, keeping the Sign of General Wolfe; has four Rooms on the lower Floor, and is convenient for Lodgers Up-stairs.
The owner is a new House adjoining the aforementioned, excepting a large Gang-Way between the two, designed for the Use of both; it is two Stories high, has a commodious Room on the lower Floor of 21 Feet long, designed for Dancing, three Rooms above Stairs, and a large Garret; there is a very suitable Stable in the Yard, that will hold four Horses comfortably, and three Loads of Hay in the Loft; also large Gang or Cart-way, from the Post Office in Province- Yard, subject to the East Side of the Corner-House. . .”—N. Y. Merc., June 8, 1767.
Michael Hansen is proprietor of the tavern, which is owned by John Aslop. See Dec. 4, 1764.

The “yearly interest of the seven lots still remaining” (see Jaa.
15, 1797), Arch. Church’s “had formerly bought in the ground of Mr. Harpenden, is to ‘be given for a perpetual income for the ground on which the church is to be built, so that thus the object of Mr. Harpenden’s will [see Feb. 7, 1724] may be obtained.”
The church referred to is the third Dutch Church, afterwards known as the North Dutch Church, on the west side of William St., midway between Fulton and Ann Sts.

See June 18.

The Earl of Shelburne receives a letter from Gov. Moore stating that the assembly has “declared their intention of making that Presbyterian plan a reality, as the church would have every reason to believe” (see May 10, 1765).—N. Y. Col. Dees., VII: 945. But see Aug. 21.

The “consistory of the Dutch Church “having further con-considered the length and breadth of the Third Church,” resolves “That it should be according to Mr. Brested’s plans: 100 feet long and 70 broad, within,” that the committee should agree with the masons and stone-cutters for the masons work, provide materials, “at least so far that the foundation may be laid this year, buy thick and thin planks, and lay them up to dry.” The commitee is to pay for these materials out of the subscription list moneys, which Isaac Roosevelt is to receive. The consistory also resolved that the plans of the parish church be laid on the foot “shall be set to feet back from Horse and Cart street, and the breadth of the church or foundation stand in the middle of the designated grounds between the two side streets” (i.e., Fulton and Ann Sts.).—Eccles.
Rec., VII: 4097. See, further, July 2.

The king gives his assent to the Bill for restraining the assembly of the Dutch Act under the Act for the Peace of the Dutch, in with the act of parliament for furnishing the king’s troops with certain necessities.—Ann. Reg. (1767), 166; N. Y. Merc., Sept. 3, 1767 (extraordinary supplement): See Apr. 30. The Earl of Shelburne, in a letter of July 18, informed Gov. Moore of the passage of this act, adding; “This Law was enacted for the purpose of enforcing the obedience of the Assembly of New York to the Terms of the Mutiny Act, but at the same time framed with that singular Temper and lenity as to offer that Assembly an opportunity of recditing their conduct, and this without involving them in any Disabilities only as the consequence of further disobedience; nor would the king himself subject to increased taxes thereby without leaving it in the Power of the People by a proper conduct, and a due exertion of their Privileges, to avoid or remove them.”—N. Y.
Col. Dees., VII: 945. See Oct. 3 and Oct. 5. When the news of the passage of this act reached America, it aroused much unfavourable sentiment in the newspapers, and was more likely to ather more affect the Liberty of the Colonies than any such a step, but a compliance with the act itself. If our legislative authority can be suspended whenever we refuse obedience to laws we never consented to, we may as well send home our representatives, and acknowledge ourselves slaves.” A boycott of English goods was suggested as one means of denouncing this bill.—Boston Gaz., Aug. 31, 1767. Also The “first foundation stone” of the North Dutch Church is laid at the north-west corner of William and Fulton sts. The building plans are given which is prescribed by the Mutiny act” (see May

At the September meeting of the Townshend Act placing a duty upon glass, red and white lead, painter’s colours, paper, and tea (1d. per pound) shipped to America.—Ann. Reg. (1767), 104. See

July
Nicholas Bayard leases to Abraham Mortier a small parcel of land adjoining the latter’s large leasehold from Trinity Church (see May 1), and in this lease mentions “the House now erecting by the said Abraham Mortier,” on his land. See Landmark Map Red. Key, III: 951.

The situation of Mortier’s house was at “Zant Berg” or Saal Hill (see p. 187, Vol. II), which is described by Valentine as “an enlarged range of hills traversing a part of the city through the Eighth and Fifteenth Wards.” He says; further; “There were several prominent points on the Zant Berg. The residence of Abraham Mortier, Commissary in the British Army, was erected, about the year 1766 [error for 1767], on the extremity of this range. This building was subsequently called the Richmond Hill House.
The position of this house was near the present corner of Varick and Chatham streets. Andrew Elliott, Esq., erected a country seat near the other extremity of the range. His garden was laid out upon a road, having a carriage-way winding its summit. The last named place was near the present junction of Eighth and Greene streets. To the north of the Zant Berg hills lay a valley, through which ran the brook called, by the Indians, Minetta, and by the whites Bestvrea’s Killetsje, or Grandfather’s Brook, which in 1767 traced its course, through meadow lands, from the springy maraes occupying the present locality of Washington square; thence wending in a course nearly west, and emptying in the North river, near the present Hamersley street. On the south lay the Zant Berg hills, covered by a growth of forest, a building ground which, at the north, the cultivated fields, which an hundred years ago were a part of the farm of Admi-(1860), 475. See Feb. 11, 1768.

The church was extended and added in 1767. The building was erected in 1768. The foundation stone was laid on June 20, 1767. The cornerstone is laid on July 9, 1767. The dedication was on September 26, 1767. The church is dedicated to St. Mary’s, patron of the English Navy. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767.

The church was built of brick and was designed by the architect James F. C. Lenox. The church was designed in the Georgian style and was built in the form of a Greek cross. The church was completed in 1767 and was dedicated on September 26, 1767. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767.

The church was built of brick and was designed by the architect James F. C. Lenox. The church was designed in the Georgian style and was built in the form of a Greek cross. The church was completed in 1767 and was dedicated on September 26, 1767. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767. The church was consecrated by Bishop White on October 11, 1767.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1762-1776

1762  Protestant Dutch Church in the City of New York for English July 3 Survivors, under the Inspection of a Committee.
2 Elders: Desacons.
Peter Marschalk
Peter Lott Cornell
Theodore Van Wyck
Andrew Breasted Jr
John Staats Master Mason and Alex Bates.
"The first stone was laid July 1, 1762, by Mr Iacobus Roseuclet, an elder.
The walls were built to receive the Roof, June 7, 1768.
These Pillars Reared June 21, 1768.
The first English Minister for the Dutch Congregation, the Rev. Archibald Laidle 1764.
Peace be within this sacred Place.
And holy Gifts and heavenly grace,
Tobias van Zantoel Clerk, G Abell facit.
An earlier publication of the text on this plate was given in the New Amsterdam Gazette, Vol. I, No. 7 (Jan. 31, 1881), 7. For the next record in the progress of the work of construction, see A.

Nov. 9, 1767.
6 A remonstrance is addressed to Gov. Moore and the council against English preaching in the Dutch Reformed Church.—Doc.
Hist. N. Y. (4to ed.), III: 598-9. On Sept. 23, other members of this church answered this in a representation to the governor, explaining at length "respecting the Call of a Minister to preach in English, which has occasioned an "unhappy dispute" in that congregation. This was read in council on Nov. 7, 1767, and an order made dismissing the remonstrance.—Ibid., III: 510-11; Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 769. English preaching was first proposed May 3, 1762 (q.v.), and first regularly introduced April 15, 1764 (see Aug. 9, 1764).

11 The armed schooners "Earl of Chatham" and "Hawke" leave New York for Jamaica. "They mount 6 Guns each, were built here together by Messrs. Totten and Crossfield, launched together in one Day, off one Set of Wows, now sail together, and belong to one Owner; and are so much alike as hardly to be known apart, and are by good Judges esteemed comparable Vessels."—N. Y. Merc., July 13, 1767.

19 Jacob van Voorhis (see March 27) and others, in a petition to the common council, state that "the Road across the meadow Between Poulshes Hook in New Jersey, and the upland is at some times Rendered impassable for foot passengers on account of Spring tides overflowing the same to the Great Inconvenience of Travelers," etc. They complain that, as tenants (or lessors) of the ferry, their revenue is lessened, and "they Conceive half a year Rent of said ferry properly applied towards Repairs the Road there would be of great Public Utility. A Committee is appointed to investigate. —M. G. C., VII: 74. See also original petition in File No. 4, city clerk's record-room. No report of this committee appears in the Minutes; but see March 23, 1769.

We are informed, that sundry Persons in this City have of late bought Regimental Chits belonging to his Majesty of several Soldiers in this Place, contrary to the Act of Parliament in Case made, for which they were carried before Whitehead Hicks, Esq; our Mayor, and fined $5 Sterling for each Offence." We hear that several People in this Place, were lately fined for selling Liquors by retail, not having Licence nor Excise; and we are told, that the Magistrates are determined to put the Laws against such Offenders rigorously into Execution."—N. Y. Merc., July 20, 1767.

Andrew Elliot and other residents of the Out Ward, in a petition to the common council, state that Elliot "hath lately purchased 400 pruns, belonging to the Piaros adjoining to the Swamp in the possession of Collonell De Lanissy & others," and that they are "desirous that there be a Good Sufficient & Compleat Road in & through the same. . . ." This is referred to the committee on public roads.—M. G. C., VII: 73. See Feb. 11 and 23, 1768.

The conspiracy of the Dutch Church passes a resolution that "no one person belonging to the Piaros adjoining to the Swamp in the possession of Collonell De Lan梅西 & others," and that they are "desirous that there be a Good Sufficient & Compleat Road in and through the same. . . ." This is referred to the committee on public roads.—M. G. C., VII: 73. See Feb. 11 and 23, 1768.

21 The consistory of the Dutch Church passes a resolution that "no one person belonging to the Piaros adjoining to the Swamp in the possession of Collonell De Lan梅西 & others," and that they are "desirous that there be a Good Sufficient & Compleat Road in and through the same. . . ." This is referred to the committee on public roads.—M. G. C., VII: 73. See Feb. 11 and 23, 1768.

22 A gentleman in London writes to a member of the Society of Arts etc. in New York: "The People of New York, seem to me, to be too infatuated with a foreign trade, ever to make any great Progress in Manufactures; and unless you sell your Linnen, at least as cheap as it can be, to Russia, Austria, Bolivins, and Russia, thro' England, Holland or Hamburg, I fear it will not establish an extensive Manufactury.—You live in as plentiful a Country as any, and your People might work as cheap: I don't mean in the City of New York; Cities are not calculated for Manufactures, since its always dearer living in them than in the Country."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 19, 1767.

"The 17th and 46th Regiments are now embarked on board the Transports destined for England; and the 28th embarks at Ambobly: They have been more than 10 Years in America; and the 17th carries home no more than 46 Men, out of 700, than [that] came to America in it."—N. Y. Merc., July 27, 1767. The transports set sail on Aug. 1st.—Ibid., Aug. 5, 1767.

The provincial council of New York orders that a proclamation be issued announcing the appointment of John Wentworth as governor of New Hampshire and surveyor-general of the woods in America.—Col. Coun. Min., 474. See also July 3, Addenda.

In this month a medical school was instituted in King's College by the college governors.—Hist. of Columbia Univ., 43. An account of the opening is given by Dr. Cooper in the N. T. Merc., Nov. 9, 1767, which is referred to in an editorial on "How we Abuse Swim," in the Pub. Adh. of May 25, 1811.

During the July term of the supreme court, which ended Aug.
1, William Johnson was convicted of felony for stealing books out of St. Paul's Church, and ordered to be executed on Aug. 17. Under the name of William Herring, this man had been found guilty, in the October term, of stealing the records of the Court for grand larceny, and had been allowed his "clergy" and burned in the bower.—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 6, 1767. On August 14 he was pardoned by the governor on condition that he leave the province.—Col. Coun. Min., 475; cf. N. T. Jour., Aug. 20, 1767, and N. T. Merc., Aug. 17, 1767.

Montresor embarks at Falmouth on board the "Lord Hyde Packet boat bound to New York."—Montresor's Jour., 397.

The common council orders that the mayor issue his warrant to the treasurer to pay Dirck Brickerhoof or order £300, "to be by him laid out in Extending the Albany pier."—M. G. C., VII: 77. The Albany Pier was situated on the west side of Coenties Slip, at about Front St. It was constructed in 1750 (see April 26, 1750), and is shown on the Maerschalk Plan (pl. 14, Vol. I). This extension is shown on the Ratter Map, pl. 41, Vol. I, and has now (1947) become Pier 6, East River (Landmark Map Ref. Key. III: 983; pl. 174, Vol. III). Additional payments for this extension brought the total cost to $50,471.62.—M. G. C., VII: 83, 112, 113, 124, 125. For a further addition, see Feb. 12, 1771.

An advertisement in the Journal reads: "The New York Air Furnace Company have lately erected an Air Furnace near the City, which after a considerable Ex pense, they have now got in proper Order, for casting in the nearest Manner, the under-mentioned Goods, which are equal to any imported from England, Scotland, Ireland, or even Holland, either for Shape, Lightness, boiling white, or standing Fire: They therefore hope the Public will encourage the Works, by giving the Preference to what is American-made, especially when the Price is full as low as can be afforded for, that are imported from Europe." The list of articles includes pots, kettles, skillets, forge hammers and anvils, stoves, weights, and chafing dishes. The advertisement is signed by Peter T. Curtenius, Gilbert Forbes, Richard Sharpe, and Thomas Randall.—N. Y. Jour., Aug. 20, 1767. This furnace caught fire on Nov. 20, 1771 (q.p.).

Gov. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelbourne: "At the time I had the honor of forwarding to your Lordship; the address of the Assembly [see June 18] in answer to my speech at the opening of the Session I could not entertain the least doubt but that the Provision made for his Majesty's Forces imported from England, Scotland, Ireland, or even Holland, either for Shape, Lightness, boiling white, or standing Fire: They therefore hope the Public will encourage the Works, by giving the Preference to what is American-made, especially when the Price is full as low as can be afforded for, that are imported from Europe." The list of articles includes pots, kettles, skillets, forge hammers and anvils, stoves, weights, and chafing dishes. The advertisement is signed by Peter T. Curtenius, Gilbert Forbes, Richard Sharpe, and Thomas Randall.—N. Y. Jour., Nov. 20, 1767 (q.p.).

"The People of New York, seem to me, to be too infatuated with a foreign trade, ever to make any great Progress in Manufactures; and unless you sell your Linnen, at least as cheap as it can be, to Russia, Austria, Bolivia, and Russia, thro' England, Holland or Hamburg, I fear it will not establish an extensive Manufactury.—You live in as plentiful a Country as any, and your People might work as cheap: I don't mean in the City of New York; Cities are not calculated for Manufactures, since its always dearer living in them than in the Country."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 19, 1767.
1767. Part of the town Can Conveniently be laded." Beckman's Slip Aug. has become filled with sand that boats "Can't come up by Considerable Distance to Where they formerly used to do."—

M. G. C., VII: 78. Both slips were ordered filled up in 1772.

[Jan. 7 and July 10, 1772; also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 988, 990.]

24. On the advice of the lords of trade, the king dismisses the petition of the Presbyterian Church for a charter (see March 18, 1766), because, first, there is doubt whether the king, consistent with his coronation oath (which is founded on "the Act of the 5th of Queen Anne Cap 5, intituled 'An Act for securing the Church of England as by Law established,' can create such an establishment in favour of the Presbyterian Church, as is now requested.) Second, "it is not expedient upon Principles of General Policy to comply with the Prayer of this Petition, or to give the Presbyterian Church of New York, any other Privileges and Immunities than it is entitled to by the Laws of Toleration."—Doc. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), III: 306-7. The manuscript of this refusal is now in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. among "N. Y. MSS. (1761-1800)." For the later history of the Presbyterian Church, see Jan. 1, 1768.

26. The regiment "now quartered in this City commanded by Col. Gabbot" is reviewed by Gen. Gage "in a Field near Greenwitch." The soldiers go through their exercises "in the Satisfaction of all present, and 'its generally thought nothing of the like Nature was ever better performed in America.'"—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 31, 1767.

"It is very sickly here; the bloody-flux rages, attended with little or no fever, and carries off, in six days time, both old and young."

Be Cit. Coll., III: 182.

9. The common council agrees "to Grant to the proprietors of Hunters Quay [Key], the water lots fronting their Respective wharfs . . . Saving and Reserving so Much of the Ground & Soil prayed for, fronting the Houses of Doctor Brownhall, as this board will think necessary & Convenient, for a public Slip there." The rental to be six shillings per foot.—M. G. C., VII: 80-81. See Pl. 42, and p. 143, Vol. I.

11. Abraham de Peyster, Jr., who in 1721 succeeded his father as treasurer of the province, dies. On Sept. 19, he was buried in the family vault in Trinity churchyard. —N. Y. Gaz. (Wayman), Sept. 21, 1767; N. Y. Merc., Sept. 21, 1767. For his obituary, and the list of persons invited to his funeral, see Man. Com. Coun. (1861), 567-69. For description of his residence, see April 1, 1700.

10. Trinity vestry plans "to borrow . . . the further sum of $600 in order to finish the Porico and Fences of St. Paul's Church . . . 'Trin. Min. (Mo.)' St. Paul's had been opened on Oct. 30, 1766 (p. 9)."

Oct.

14. The provincial council of New York receives an act of parliament granting certain duties in the British colonies, etc; and another prohibiting the governor from passing acts until necessary for the public peace, to be provided by the assembly.—Col. Coun. Min., 475. See Oct. 5.

20. Gov. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelburne acknowledging the receipt of an act of parliament prohibiting the governor, council, and assembly from passing any acts until provision shall be made for the king's troops (see July 2). He adds: "I have already in a former letter had the honor of informing your Lordship, that the Bill which was brought in for making the provision required had not been so filled as the expectations I had conceived of it [see Aug. 21] . . . & gave my reasons for passing it . . . and can only add at present that the troops are supplied with all the articles mentioned in the act of Parliament in as full as ample a manner as if they had been particularly specified in the Bill. Whatever inclination the People of this Colony may have to submit to government and return to their duty they will always be encouraged in a different way of think'k by the Provinces to the Eastward of us."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VII: 980. For a further provision by the legislature, see Dec. 21.

23. An itemized statement of certain branches of the city's revenue is October 2. The taxes are:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dock rent</td>
<td>$1,313.17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Water lot rent</td>
<td>$53.78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ferry rent</td>
<td>$50.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Land rent</td>
<td>$4,983.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Stall rent</td>
<td>$2,157.74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>House rent</td>
<td>$2,900.00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

"Jour. of City Chamberlain, IV: 4."

14. Henry Hornblower, who has lately leased the city lots, Nos. 101, 102, and 103, on the Bowery "Lying on the East Side of the Road or high way that Leads from Bowery Garden to the City, namely opposite the House of William Crelland," applies to the common council for permission to mortgage this land to borrow about $1,000. Oct. 10. To enable him to carry on and Complete a new Dwelling House Lately Erected on said Lots, or Some of them." Consent is given. —M. G. C., VII: 88. The permit was renewed March 25, 1769. —Ibid., VII: 155. The lot numbers in this record refer to numbered lots of the common lands of the city, on a "Map of the Corporation and Contiguous to the New Goal," compiled from different surveys made by Gerard Baockker, C. S., March 22, 1773 (q. v.) in the comptroller's office. The three lots mentioned were on the present Park Row, south of Thomas St., and are now covered by Nos. 97 to 107 Park Row.

26. Two rooms in the new goal are appropriated by the common council for a bride-well.—M. G. C., VII: 87. For account of the establishment of this institution, see Nov. 21, 1765; for the construction of the building called the bride-well, see 1774; and, for its demolition, see 1815.

"An item of New York news states: "Notwithstanding the great complaints of the distressing times, we have here no less than four coachways which were brought hither from London in the last ships."—London Chron., Dec. 10-12, 1767; and Upcott Coll., III: 189.

1768. The large, new House and Lot of Ground, on Golden-Hill, owned and occupied by George Hopkins, Tavern-keeper, and known by the sign of the Dove, the House is newly repaired, is, in good Order, and an excellent Place for Business, being only 4 Miles from this City on the Road to King's Bridge. For farther Particulars, enquire of James Mills."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 19, 1767. See Oct. 31, 1763. Mills again advertised the house for sale in 1770 and 1771. —Ibid., Feb. 19, 1770; July 29, 1771. In March, 1773, when an announcement was made that the property would be sold at public vendue on April 1, the place was described as "Late the Property of Abraham Rice."—N. Y. Jur., March 5, 1773.

"The large, new House, and Lot of Ground, on Golden-Hill, is now inhabited by the late David Hopkins, Tavern-keeper, whose widow is the present occupant, and known by the sign of the Orange Tree," is to be sold on this day.—N. Y. Merc., Sept. 28, 1767. On June 13, 1768, Thomas Steele opened a school here.—Ibid., June 6, 1768. Hopkins again offered the house for sale in March, 1769. He then described it as "situate on Golden-hill, next door to Mr. M'Ginnis, tavern keeper. A free-mason's lodge was formerly held in the said house."—N. Y. Jur., March 2, 1769.

30. There is advertised for sale "a large Corner Lot, with three Houses on it, two fronting the Bowery Lane, very convenient, just on the Rising of Fresh Water Street."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 19, 1767. Robert Lewis, "who has, for many Years, kept a Tavern in New-York, known by the Sign of the Spread-Eagle and Three Tus, has open'd House in the Old Fort at Crown-Point, with the former Sign."—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 26, 1767. The "Three Tus, shorn of the Spread Eagle," continued to be maintained in New York. The tavern stood on "Chappel" (Beckman St.—See Nov. 27, 1767. David Grim was the new proprietor as early as Jan. 29, 1767. Lewis evidently having sold out his interest in the tavern in 1766.—N. Y. Jur., Jan. 29, 1769.

"They write from New-York, that a resolution has been taken to establish public companies of artisans, who were to be endowed with certain privileges, for the benefit of trade and increase of manufactures; and it was said the [that] Boston and Philadelphia would follow the example."—From London news published in the Boston Chron., Janmary and February, 1768.

The provincial council receives a royal mandamus to swear Nov. William Smith, Jr., as a council member, in place of William Smith, Sr., resigned; he is sworn in and takes his seat.—Col. Coun. Min., 475. See 1767.

28. The Mercury announces the passage of a law to raise money for building a new bride-well (see Nov. 21, 1765). The writer states that, until the erection tiered, all "Roques, Stragglers and Idle and suspicious Persons will be apprehended" and sent to the rooms temporarily fitted up in the new goal (see Oct. 14). He reminds the people of the laws requiring that the names of all strangers, entertained in the Bowery boarding-houses, be reported to the mayor or justice of the peace.—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 9, 1767.
The consistory of the Dutch Church passes a resolution "That the roof of the New Church shall be so made that it will bear to be laid with tiles, if the law should require us so to lay it."—Examiner, Feb. 15, 1766. Hereafter, the "New Church," has meant the Middle Dutch Church, and possibly does so in this instance; but as the last record of alterations in that church was in 1764, it is much more likely that the North Dutch Church, places for which were completed in June, 1767, is the one here referred to. See also Feb. 24, 1768.

The provincial council, in obedience to a royal mandamus received on this day, swears in Henry Cruger, Sr., as one of its members, and he takes his seat.—Cal. Coun. Min. 475.

In an address to the assembly, Gov. Moore says: "In laying before you the last report of the committee to the legislature of this province [see July 31] . . . I cannot bear the least doubt, but that the prudent conduct of this house will render the provisions contained in it unnecessary; and that their zeal for his majesty's service, and attachment to his government, will always engage them to entertain a due sense of the blessings which they enjoy under his protection, and the influence of the British constitution."—Assem. Jour. (1767-8), 4.

Final payments are made for the alterations in the hall.—G. C.G. VII. 90-92. See Dec. 21, 1767.

The first overseer or keeper of the bridewell (see Nov. 21, 1765) is appointed by the common council. The "Committee of the Bridewell" had been ordered to consider proposals for this office on Nov. 9 (M. C. G., VII: 89). William Dobbs is engaged until May 1, 1768, on the following conditions: The board shall allow him $55 salary to that date, plus "the profits arising from the labour thereof," the incumbent "finding the tools and Implements Necessary for Carrying on the Business of a Bridewell," and "promising to Render a Just & True Account to this Corporation quarterly of all the profits that Shall arise."—Ibid., VIII: 92.

Very many of Dobbs's itemized accounts are preserved during the years of his incumbency (1767-73), some in the city clerk's office, some in the comptroller's office. The common council was convened, on May 7, 1772 (q.v.), to start an inquiry "into the State of the Bridewell," which resulted (see April 7, 1773) in a new agreement with Dobbs, one clause of which called for a decided reduction in salary.

The first of the "Farmer's Letters" of John Dickinson appears in the issue of the Penn. Chronicle and Universal Advertiser of this date. They were continued in subsequent issues to Feb. 15, 1768.

The first performance at the new John Street Theatre is announced by a newspaper advertisement, which reads: "By Permission of the Governors Company At the Theatre, in John-street, this present Evening, being the 7th Instant December; will be presented, A Comedy, call'd the Strategem . . . To which will be added, a Dramatic Satire call'd Lethe . . . To begin exactly at Six O'clock. Vivant Rex and Freedom. The scene is laid in the province of Pennsylvania, on the site of 15-21 John St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 982. In answer to a query concerning its exact location, a reader of the Mag. Am. Hist. wrote that it "stood on lots Nos. 70, 71, and 72, of the divisional map of the Shoemakers' pasture [PL 24, Vol. I], as laid out in 1646."—Mag. Am. Hist., XXVII: 396, 476-77. The theatre is shown for the first time on the Ratter Map, PL 41, Vol. I.

"The building was an unsightly object, principally of wood painted red, and stood about sixty feet back from the street, having a covered way of rough wooden material from the pavement to the doors. The stage was of good dimensions, and the dressing room and greentobacco rooms were originally under it, but after the fire, they were removed to a wing added for the purpose, on the west side. The auditorium was fitted up with a pit, two rows of boxes, and a gallery, and when full at usual prices would contain 8000."—Ireland, Recs. of the N. T. Stage, 1: 442 Sellhamer, Hist. of Am. Theatre (1950). "Morning drive from the theatre, attacks upon plays and theatres appeared in the newspapers. See Dec. 24.

"On Friday Night, the 27th ultimo, the Lamp was taken from the Lampion-post, at the Sign of the Three-Tons, in Chappell-Street, perhaps by some Persons out of a Joke; if so, they are requested to return the Lamp to the Lampion-post, whereby it covers the Person or Persons guilty of the same, if brought to Justice, shall receive Three Dollars Reward, by applying at the Sign of the Three-Tons."—N. Y. Merc., Dec. 7, 1767.

The petition of Nicholas Bayard, read in the common council and filed on this day, asks for an extension of the lease to the slaughter-house which was granted Sept. 12, 1750 (q.v.), for the term of 21 years, to the late Nicholas Bayard, his father, who deeded the slaughter-house to this petitioner. He states that the former grant from the city gave his father power to erect upon his own land in the Bowery Division of the Out Ward, "about elecra or twelve Chains to the westward of the high road or Bowery lane And three Chains to the Eastward of the Fresh Water Pond, three or more good substantial and convenient slaughter houses, and one or more good and sufficient Penn and Pinfold." He states that his father erected "the said Slaughter houses" and equipped them with necessary tackle. The present petitioner desires to make additions and improvements, and seeks another 21 years lease to his grant, or such other term as the common council thinks proper, beginning on the termination of the first term, March 25, 1771, and under the same regulations.—From the original petition (MS.), endorsed "Read & filed ye 10th of December 1767," in city clerk's record-room. The lease was renewed March 24, 1768 (8. 6).

Several Cherokee chiefs and warriors arrive from South Carolina. At an audience with Gen. Gates the next day, they "implor'd his Interposition of good Offices in directing Sir William Johnson . . . to mediate a Peace between their Nation . . . and the Six Nations of Iroquois: They being deputed hi'tier on an Embassy for that Purpose." The general promised "his Protection in the Business they are emmoyed in, having obtained from their Sovereigns in the necessary Orders for their proceeding in a Sleep for Albany." While in this city, the chiefs, desiring to see a play, attended the theatre (see Dec. 7), where "King Richard III" was staged. They were also "surprised and diverted at the tricks of Harlequin."—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 17, 1767; Penn. Gaz., Dec. 24, 1767. See Apr. 8, 1768.

A letter to the printer of the Journal states: "Though I am a Tradesman, and depend upon my daily Labour for the Support of myself and Family, Yet, I commonly read your Paper; and my Neighbours and I have been much amused by the useful Pieces in it, than with the Articles about the Poles or Corsicans: But I cannot help observing that you have lately had fewer Pieces than formerly on our distressed Situation.—Are our Circumstances altered? Is Money grown more plenty? Have our Tradesmen full Employment? Are we more Frugal? Is Grain cheaper? Are our Importations less?—not to mention the Play-House and Equipages, which is hoped none but People of Fortune frequent, or use.—I am afraid every one of these Queries are against us; and yet of these we seem to take no thought, tho' our Neighbours at Boston make such a stir about these! . . . About three [1768] a Society there have been upon an Idea which promised much, and indeed was encouraged by all the most eminent and best Friends to their Country: and you can scarce believe how it cheer'd us in our Distress; but alas! its youthful Vigour is over, and many have relaxed or broke thro' some of the links of its Institution . . . We must actuate a passive Signal Service among us, by introducing not only Spinning, weaving, and raising Flax, but encouraged many other useful Manufactories, and Growth among us. Notwithstanding their Endeavours, what a dismal Prospect is before us! a long Winter, and no Work; many unprovided with Fire-wood or Money to buy it; House-Rent, and Taxes high; our Neighbours daily breaking their Furniture at Veneue in every Corner. Surely it is high Time for the meddling People to abstain from every Superfluity, in Dress, Furniture, and Living . . . If by good Management we can save a little, How haully will the Distresses of our Neighbours Call for it?—N. Y. Jour., Dec. 17, 1767. See Feb. 2, 1768.

The advertisement of the John St. Theatre, announcing the play of "King Richard III" for this evening, advises: "To prevent Accidents by Carriages meeting it is requested that those coming to the House may enter John-Street from the Broad-Way, and not the usual way down John Street into Nassau Street, or forwards to that known by the Name of Cart and Horse Street."—N. Y. Gaz. (Weyman), Dec. 14, 1767.

A committee of seven is ordered "to Regulate Crown [Liberty] street, in the west ward of this City . . . and make Report thereof to this board, whose names are: . . . -Newspaper Society 973. The committee, on Jan. 14, 1760, submitted its report, but the corporation decided to take the latter into consideration "at some future Common Council, as a Petition of Sundry of the freeholders of said Street was this Day preferred against Regulating the same."
Dec. 1876. —Ibid., VII: 97-98. The original remonstrance against the com- Dec. mittee's report is preserved in the city clerk's record-room. On June 8, 1769, another committee was appointed for the purpose. —Ibid., IV: 46. This committee presented its report on July 12, 1769 (p. 97).

21 The legislature passes "An Act for making a further Provision of fifteen hundred Pounds for furnishing his Majesty's Troops quartered in this Colony with Necessaries" (see Oct. 5). —Cal. Laws, N. Y., IV: 450-51.

Gov. Moore issues a proclamation against the Sons of Liberty, whom he declares guilty of sedition in issuing a paper signed "Pro Patria," which expresses resentment against stamp officers and which urges "every Votary of that celestial Goddess Liberty" to "give them a proper Welcome." The proclamation offers a reward of £50 to any one who shall discover the authors, and promises both the reward and pardon to any accomplice who shall reveal them. —Doc. Hist. N. Y. (1846), III: 316; Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 7701, cf. Uppcot Coll., III: 213.

Philander," a contributor to the N. Y. Journal, writes urging the inhabitants to be charitable to the poor who are in need of food and clothing. In this connection he add "The subject I am upon, naturally leads [me] to take notice of the Play-house [see Dec. 7], which I suspect must become an obstacle to the charity I am recommending. A fondness for the entertainments of the stage, cannot be gratified without considerable expense. The money throws away in one night at a play, would purchase wood, provisions and other necessary, sufficient for a number of poor, to make them pass thro' the winter with tolerable comfort . . . I have known them as often to have crystallized out a box in the Play-house during the season. The fact is hardly creditable, but if it is true, it affords the strongest argument than can be urged to prove the mischievous tendency of a Theatre." —N. Y. Jour., Jan. 7, 1768. He continued his opposition to the theatre in later issues of the paper. —Ibid., Jan. 21 and 25, Feb. 4 and 11, 1768. See Jan. 25, 1768.

An act to prevent the imprisonment of poor debtors is passed by the legislative council and sent to the general assembly for the concurrence of that body. —Jour. Leg. Coun., 1760. In the assembly it was read twice and, on Dec. 30, referred to a committee of the whole house, but there is no record of its becoming a law. —Assem. Jour., (1767-8) 60-61. Though laws for the relief of imprisoned debtors, and others, by shortening their terms, were passed continu- ally at this period, no enactments for prohibiting such imprisonment were made (Cal. Laws N. Y., Vol. IV and V). It seems that as yet no evidence has been on record to have crystallized on this matter. Protests against the inhumane treatment of debtors, how- ever, did increase in number and in force, so that the legislature was compelled, in 1817, to pass a law forbidding imprisonment for a debt of less than twenty-five dollars, and, in 1831, to abolish it outright. —McMaster, Hist. of People of U. S., IV: 512-34; VI: 99-100.

The joint committee of the legislature appointed to inquire into a pamphlet entitled "The Conduct of Cadwallader Colden Esq." Lieutenant Governor of New York relating to the Judge Commissions—Appeals to the King; and the Stamp Duty," which had been published anonymously (see 1767), makes its report. The members are of the opinion "that it not only highly reflects upon the Honour, Justice and Dignity of his Majesty's Councils, the General Assembly and the Judges of the Supreme Court, but contains the most malignant aspersions upon the Inhabitants of this Colony in General. That it tends to destroy the Confidence of the People in the Government odious and Con- temptible, to abate that due Respect to Authority so necessary to peace and good order, to excite disadvantageous Suspicions and Jealousies in the minds of the People of Great Britain against his Majesty's Subjects in this Colony, and to expose the Colony in General to the Reputations of the Crown and both Houses of Parliament. That immediate and effectual measures ought to be taken, to defeat the malicious designs of the Author and Publisher of the Pamphlet, by a Detection of its Falsehoods and Misrepresen- tations, and a full Clear and Just Vindication of the Colony and Government from the injurious Calumnies therein contained."

They advise that the assembly appoint a committee "to examine Dec. and report the unjust Charges, with an ample and satisfactory 30 Refutation, to do justice to the dignity of the Crown and Parliament, in what they conceive to be the most prudent and effectual measures for applying a suitable Punishment, and deterring others from so iniquitous and dangerous an offence." —Jour. Leg. Coun., 1760-81; Assem. Jour. (1767-8), 84. The pamphlet is preserved in the N. Y. Pub. Library. During Jan. and Feb. 1769, a number of unidenti- fied people were summoned before the assembly and examined, but no definite information was received. On Feb. 6, 1768, the author not having been discovered, the governor was requested, in case the author should be found, to order a prosecution issued against him, "that such punishment may be inflicted on him as an offender in this case as the law directs." —Assem. Jour. (1767-8), 69-71; 73-74, 91. 1768

Presenting a picture of the city at this time, Mrs. Lamb says: "It was then that money commenced to flow in all sorts of channels, and riches, long hoarded, came into prominent view. Houses were built with the rapidity of magic, so to speak, industries bristled with new life, merchants patched extensions upon their warehouses or built new ones, every thing old was mended, and fresh paint took a mad race through the length and breadth of the town . . . She includes in her picture: the principal streets and roads; the important men of the period and their residences; the customs and dress of the people in general; Columbia College and its commence- ment; the governing officials, their election and authority; and the chief churches of the city. —The Golden Age of Colonial New York" in Aug., XXVII, fifty pages, 1836.

"Among the noteworthy features of New York, in 1768, are its legal holidays . . . It is interesting to note that the custom- house and public offices are closed by direction of the British authorities on New Year's Day, the Queen's birthday, anniversary of King Charles' martyrdom, Shrove Tuesday, Ash Wednesday, Lady Day, Good Friday, Easter Monday and Tuesday, Ascension Day, St. George's Day, King Charles' Restoration, the King's birthday, Whitsun Monday and Tuesday, Prince of Wales' birthday, King George first and 2d landed in Great Britain, Coronation Day, All Saints, Gunpowder Plot, Christmas Day, and three Christmas holidays following. Added to these are the provincial days—General Fast, Thanksgiving, General Election, and Com- mencement of the College—twenty-seven holidays in one year!"—Ibid., XXVII: 16. After British rule ended there was an opportu- nity to begin all over again in holiday observance, and for some time the only ones celebrated were "New Year's Day," "Fridays," "Christmas, Independence Day," "Evacuation Day" (the British troops left New York Nov. 25, 1783, p. 9), and "Election Day." In this year, the Scotch Presbyterians replaced their wooden building (see 1756), on the south side of Cedar between Broadway and Prince Street. The church was built over an old warehouse and 55 ft. wide. During the Revolution it was occupied by Hessian troops, and these mercenaries greatly damaged the edifice. On Nov. 10, 1783, an appeal was made for funds with which to repair the broken down sanctuary. In answer to this appeal, £9673:6 were subscribed, and the building was repaired. In 1794, the gallery was lighted; in 1801, six fire-buckets were provided; and in the same year it was agreed "that the church be whitewashed and well cleaned." It contained a pew for the governor, and a "gallery for persons of color." On Oct. 13, 1836, the building was sold for $9910. The site is now occupied by the Equitable Life Assurance building.—Wylie, Our Jubilee. The 150th Anniversary of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, New York 1736-1906, 14-15; Smith, N. Y. City in 1789, 153-54; Dihosaw, Earliest Churches in N. Y., 164. The congregation moved from Cedar St. in 1856 (p. 9). The Scotch Presbyterians own the lot on the Green and erected a small church there Jan. 4, 1841, and held their services. It was finally erected on the Green (see Feb. 19 and 25, 1766). The Rev. Mr. Rogers 1 conducted the worship and preached the sermon. There was a large audience; and, "by the Solemnity of the Occasion and the Address of the Preacher, the whole Assembly seem'd to be impressed with a Mixture of Seriousness, Gratitude and Joy, more equal and composed than could be expected in the con- sideration of a House to the Worship of Almighty God."—N. Y. Post- Boy, Jan. 4, 1768; N. Y. Jour., Dec. 31, 1767. For its final demol- ition, see May 9, 1857. A sesquicentennial celebration of the Brick Church was held Jan. 6 and 10, 1918. See 2d Ann. Rep., Am. Scenic & Hist. Res. Soc. (1918), 575-606.
Peter Haseconover writes from New York to Sir William Johnson: "The great rodomontades which the Boston people have made and the factious plots for the furniture of the landed interest. The country people must resort to towns and the land will lie waste and in cult. Fabrics should not be established, then in countries where there are not more people than what can be employed in agriculture, and therefore I think the present zeal to establish manufactures is preposterous."—Clarendon, History of Manufactures in the U.S., 7, 1607-1660, 217, citing Johnson Papers, X: 69. However, the same observer thought that manufactures of linen might get a foothold in New York during the political disturbances, and that scarcity of money might lower wages so that it would be possible to make other things.—Ibid., 218, citing Johnson Papers, XII: 215.

13 The treasurer of the colony is ordered to pay Barnett Rattey £100 "for making an actual Survey and Map of the City of New York and it's environs."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 965. "The Katzer Map" is reproduced in Pls. 44, 45, Vol. 1. S. Siminaire, in his notes, calls it "the largest and the most correct which has ever been made of New York."—Clayton, History of Manufactures in the U.S., 8, 1607-1860, 217, citing Johnson Papers, X: 69. However, the same observer thought that manufactures of linen might get a foothold in New York during the political disturbances, and that scarcity of money might lower wages so that it would be possible to make other things.—Ibid., 218, citing Johnson Papers, XII: 215.

14 The assembly orders that Hugh Gaine be appointed public printer in place of William Weyman, resigned.—Assem. Jour., 74.

21 A notice appears: "That the Committee appointed at a meeting of the inhabitants of the city of New-York [probably on Dec. 29, 1767, to employ a committee] to promote frugality, industry, and employing our tradesmen and necessitous poor [see Dec. 14, 1767], will make their report on Monday evening next the 23d instant, at six o'clock, at Bolton and Sigel's: And the inhabitants are requested to attend, in order to remove completely the name of "cheapskate", and to have a full meeting, that the intentions of the town may be well known, on matters of such great importance to the community."—N. Y.
Jour., Jan. 21, 1768. On account of bad weather the meeting did not occur until Feb. 2 (p. v.)—Ibid., Jan. 28, 1768.

Ship bread bakers complain that "the corn for making of ship bread, brought to this city for sale, is generally coarse and of a very bad quality, so that the bread baked therewith, will not fetch near the same price at foreign markets, as the ship bread of the other colonies doth." They ask for the passage of a law to regulate the inspection of corn similar to that for inspecting flour.—Assem.
Jour. (1767-8), 50. See Feb. 6.

22 Colden writes to the Earl of Shelburne: "I gave your Lordship an account of the extraordinary Proceedings of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature in this Province, in a Pamphlet which was published in England last Spring, in my vindication, and I have been authorized by the Ministry's direction to give of Parliament, for their information; and to clear my character from the malicious aspersions, which I was informed had been industriously propagated there. This Pamphlet was reprinted in this Place [see 1767] without my priuity, or of any of my friends, as I am now well assured it is certain the Sentiments of disinterested people, have altered greatly with regard to my conduct, since the publishing of the Pamphlet here. The notorious truth of the Facts is every Day mentioned by many People."— N. Y. Col. Dec., VIII: 45. On April 25, he sent Hillsborough an account of this matter.—Ibid., VIII: 60-63.

25 A concert is given at Burn's "Long Room" for the benefit of poor debtors in gaol.—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 14, 1768. This was at the City Tavern, the present 115 Broadway.

26 A survey and report on a new road, later called Art St. (now Artus Place), leading from Bowery Lane through the bill toward Greene Avenue, were approved by R. S., inspector of the road, the most sober and respectable inhabitants and the wholesome admonitions you have published [see Dec. 24, 1767]; what an eccorsious tax do we burthen ourselves with? it is computed at least £300 a week .... Some pretend that good moral instructions are to be learned at a play,—I wish they would give us a list of these plays, for our actors don't seem to hit upon them . . .
Jao. I shall conclude with summing up some of the evils that this predilection for playhouse is productive of among us.—Ibid., 55. Cash for a play ticket.

28, 29, 30. Expenses in dressing,—yd. The modest ear is familiarized to obscene discourse,—4th, Promotes a taste for dissipation, or gad-ing, already too prevalent among the young folks,—5th, It is a revenue for many people to adorn to the tavern,—6th, The mind, with all these accumulated expenses, is turned from serious and reasonable purposes."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 28, 1768. In spite of this opposition to theatrical performances, the American Company played in New York from Dec. 7, 1767 (p. v.) until June 2, 1768. They returned in 1769, being here from Jan. 16 to June 29.—Seilhamer, Hist. of Am. Theatre, I: 249-50. After June 29, 1769, the John Street Theatre was closed until April 14, 1773 (see April 12, 1773). A sale at public vendue is announced to be held on this day at the Merchants Coffee House of the noted Tavern, having the Sign of the Free-Masons' Arms, on the East Side of the Broadway, fronting the Great Square. The House has 12 Fire-places, two Dancing Rooms, and eight other good Rooms, with every Convenience for the Receipt of Company. It was formerly kept by Samuel Francis, and since by the Subscriber, and has rented for Eighty Pounds per Annum, besides Taxes. Any Person inclining to purchase at a Private Sale, may, in the meantime, enquire of John Jones."—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 11, 1768. By March 21, 1768 (p. v.), Roger Morris had acquired the property.

An advertisement offers to let the "House wherein John Marshall now lives, opposite the late Mr. Benson's Brew-House: It is well calculated for a Mercantile or Manufacturing Business, because it fronts the House of Sir Matthew and Sir Charles, whose Kitchens and Cellar, no less than 8 Rooms and 7 Fire Places, one of which Rooms is the whole Width and Depth of the House. There is also a very good Pump of excellent Tea Water, in the Yard.
1768. Benson's Brewery was on Perry St. at Franklin Place. For location, see Grim's Plan, depicting the city in 1742-4 (Pl. 32-a, Vol. I). This is probably the tavern of which Verdisch Elsworth was once proprietor (see June 6, 1765). John Bridgewater, whose claim to recognition was evidently based on the fact that he was "Lately married to the Widow Bramson," announced on June 6, 1768, that he had "removed from Cruger's Wharf, to the House wherein John Marshall lately lived, almost opposite Mr. Benson's Brewery, where he keeps a House of Entertainment."—N. Y. Merc., June 6, 1768.

A news report states that one John Clayton Morris, convicted last week of sheep stealing, "had the benefit of the clergy granted him; was burnt in the bade, and discharged."—N. Y. Merc., Jan.
25, 1768.

The provincial council receives the king's order in council dismissing the petition of the minister, etc., of the Presbyterian Church for a charter of incorporation.—Col. Coun. Min., 475.

A writer in the "New-York Evening Post", in a letter "to several Ministers of State"... (text continues, not printed), repeatedly clamorous, that we can't justly expect to come into the Use of Clothes of our Own Manufacture till they come to be cheaper than imported," gives this account of a "Web of Homespun":

"Sometime ago I bought 30 lb Sheep's Wool, and paid for it
1/6 per lb which amounted to £2 5 0
Two Ib of Indigo to die it,
For dyeing and spinning 2a. per Ib
For Weaving, 4d. per Yard, 30 Yards Ellwilde, Clothier's Bill for Fulling, Shearing and Pressing

Total £8 1 0

So that I have 20 Yards of Cloth, three-quarters wide, at 8s. 1d. per Yard. It is equal in Beauty to Broad-Cloth of 16s. twice as wide; and will wear, at least, twice as long."—N. Y. Jour., Jan. 28, 1768.

26 Baron de Kalb arrives in New York. He had been deputized by the Duc de Choiseul, the French premier, to report on the condition of affairs in America, as well as in Holland and England.
His observations were general rather than local, and are presented in a letter written from New York, on Feb. 24,—Vindicte de Calle-and was killed in the battle of Camden, in 1780.

Hugh Gaine changes the name of The New-York Mercury to The New-York Gazetteer and the Weekly Mercury.—See Aug. 3, 1752; and Early N. Y. Newspapers, II: 432.
At that promoting.

Writing subscription-roll,.

1768

Linen Paper

Scarfs Saddles, Shovels, Poor, Channing, Government.

general in

LaxvsN. 4,

and Ware, to encourage the Principal same of therefor

Gloves, on

June

20

Interest

the Corporation

fully pay

the Credit ought

XVII:

dress’d

the

in

the

the

Ware, in

the

the

the

Gaz.,

the

and

the

the

of

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the

the
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1762–1776

1768
Feb. 11
Philipse, Peter Jay, and Frederick van Cortlandt, who are proprietors, of "all the houses to the east ward of the Exchange, as far as the Corporation Pier" (see March 7, 1763), being desirous of improving the water lots fronting their houses, for grants of these lots on the same terms as those recently allowed to the proprietors of Hunter's Key.—From the original petition (MS.), in city clerk's record-room. See Jan. 29, 1767.

15
The common council authorizes the payment to Thomas Sherrill, coowner, of the sum of $75.25 "for Survey of Body of Water" between Jan. 1, 1764 and Jan. 1, 1767.—M. C. C., VII: 103.

17
Fifteen acres of land in the township of Harlem, adjoining the East River, are offered for sale, also 8 acres of good wood land, "lying above the Blue-Bell, adjoining the King's road, and north river, and bounded on the south side by the farm of Walsh, senior, and on the north side by that of John Nagle."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 15, 1768.

20
The following card appears: "Jack Bowling and Tom Hatchway send their Service (damn Compliments) to the Freeholders and Freemen of the City and New York, and beg they would in order to try how the Land lies, take an Observation, and they will find, "1st. That the good people of this City are supported by Trade and the Merchants.

"2d. That the Lawyers are supported by the People.

The Difference here given will plainly point out the Course they should pursue to give them the Ship (of Peace)."

—From an original in the N. Y. Pub. Library. See Feb. 29.

29
The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "that the roof of the Third Church should be laid with tile, as there is now a good opportunity to obtain them."—Eccles. Rec., VI: 4111. See also Nov. 15, 1767.

The common council adopts a plan or survey by Francis Maerschelack, city surveyor, for a road to run "from the Old House fronting the Bowery Lane, North Seventy three degrees, thirty minutes, west Six Chains and Eighty five Links, thence North Sixty Four degrees, four minutes, west twenty two Chains and Thirty Links to the Brook Called by the Indian name, Minnetta Water."—M. C. C., VII: 104-5. This was the Sand Hill Road and existed for many years before this date, lying in about the same general direction, following an early Indian trail. The old house mentioned in the minutes as "Rebecca's House" was a tavern (see Landmark Ref. Key, III: 990); and from there (the present intersection of Astor Pl. and Fourth Ave.) this road ran to the Minetta Brook, the course of which is shown on Ratterer's Map (Pl. 44, Vol. I), being there called Bestater's Rivulet, crossing the stream on a bridge. The road on the other side of the bridge is designated by Ratter as Mounting Lane; ran to the obelisk erected on the Delancey property to the memory of General Wolfe and others, which stood near what is now the north-west corner of Eighth Ave. and West 14th St. (see Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 994).

A public vendue is advertised to take place on this day of the "avenue between the five minutes, west twenty two Chains and Thirty Links to the Brook Called by the Indian name, Minnetta Water."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 1, 1768. Evidently no sale was made at this time, or if sold, Kerby still continued in occupation, for, on March 12, 1770, the house, still in his possession, was again advertised for sale. It was described as "very convenient for a Shop, or Tavern-keeper, and has been occupied as such many years."—Ibid., March 12, 1770. This was presumably the old Dower tavern on the south-east corner of Spring Garden.—See Feb. 6, 1758.

In a letter to Gov. Moore, the Earl of Hillsborough says: "His Majesty trusted that the ill consequence flowing from a want of Respect to himself and Authority in the Civil Magistrate, so manifestly manifested during the late Disorders on account of the Stamp Act, would have induced all men of Rank & Consideration in the Colony to co-operate with you in every Measure that could possibly tend to secure the Peace, and promote the Happiness of the Commonwealth, and the Strength and Safety of the Nation, by which alone it can be supported and therefore it was a great concern to His Majesty to find . . . that you had failed in your Expectation of Assistance in this great work from the better sort of People, and more so that their Backwardness should proceed from the way in which the Card is to be advertised for grants of lands from the Rank they hold in the Community, to make it's welfare & happiness the objects of their Care & Attention . . . His Majesty trusts that the flagitious & inflammatory Publications inserted in printed New-Papers, with the avowed Design to keep up those Anomolies & Divisions between the Mother Country & it's Colonies, which have operated so prejudicially to Both, will be treated, by all wise and sober People, with the contempt they deserve, which will conduct the most effectual Distrust of the Disposition of the Authors. . . ."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VIII: 10-11.

At about this time, a broadside, addressed "To the Freeholders and Freemen of the City and County of New York," and signed "Philanthropos," is published as a supplement to the Journal. The author argues against the election of lawyers to the assembly. He says: "As a Maritime City, our chief Dependance is upon Trade, for which Reason Merchants (who are well acquainted with the commercial Interest of the Colony) are the properest Persons to represent us in the Assembly; not Lawyers, whose sole Study is to - increase the Wealth of the State, but to divide the Gain of the industrious Merchant and Mechanick if possible among themselves; and to rise from the Ruin, and Distresses of the rest of the Community; by extorting from them . . . the Price of their Labour, Sweat and Toil." On the reverse appears an address "To the Freeholders and Freemen of the City of New York." This is dated "New Jersey, Feb. 19, 1768," and signed "William Johnas Von Dore Manadus." Manadus tells the New Yorkers that he has heard "that a Dram-shop is opened in your City, and that the Freeholders and Freemen of New-York assembly there to sell their Votes for a Dram." He assails this practice and condemns the behaviour of the lawyers in their friendly society, and advises the inhabitants not to be "cajoled out of your Senses by a seeming friendly Shake by the Hand, a courtey Bow, or a decoying Look," but to vote "like Men of Firmness and Honour."—From an original in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

A card, dated from "Tradesman's Hall," is issued, reading: "Mr. Axe and Mr. Hammer being solicited by a Number of their Brother Freeholders and Freemen of the City of New-York, to return their hearty Thanks to their good Friends, Mr. Hatchway and Mr. Bowline [see Feb. 20], have consented,—and think proper to do it in this public Manner,—and to assure them, that the Leather-Aporns (a very respectable Body) are clearly of their Opinion, That it's Trade, and not Law supports our Families . . . So that with many Thanks for your sensible good Card—we all say, as you say,—No Lawyer in the Assembly."—From an original in the N. Y. Pub. Library. See Jan. 14, 1769.

"Wanted, by a Society of Gentlemen in the City of New-York from 2 to 500 Yards of American made Broad Cloth, of blue, grey, and brown Colours, with lining if possible, for the same. Any Person that will engage for the like Quantity, will meet with a Market for it, by applying to H. Gaines, if at a reasonable Price, and proper Care will be allowed to the Manufacturer."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 20, 1768.

The "King's stores" are referred to in an advertisement for the sale of a house and lots "opposite the King's stores, on the North River side, between Learay's-street and Batteaux-street.—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 29, 1768. The ground where these lots are situate, if it be not for sale, is fenced in by a brick wall. By a sale of Feb. 25, the heirs of Philip Schuyler, now deceased, have sold or arsenaled, are shown between Dey and Cortlandt Sts. Batteaux St. was Dey St. (Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 993); and Learay's-street was probably Cortlandt St.

A broadside entitled "The Voter's New Catechism" is issued. Mar. 1768 is directed against New York lawyers in general (see Feb. 20) and against the lawyer candidate for representative (Scott) in particular. The series of questions and answers aims to prove that the lawyers have always opposed the colonists' struggle against Great Britain, and that they have never been in sympathy with the measures taken against the Stamp Act and other oppressive laws. The broadside argues that a lawyer should not be treated as a representative, because "for the same Person to be both a Maker and Interpreter of the Law, gives him too much Influence. And because in framing the Laws he would be too apt to have an Eye to the Advantage of his own Practice."—From an original in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

The common council agrees to make extensive grants of the water lots at the prominent East River locality called Hunter's Key, between Wall St. and Old Slip (see May 23, 1761), and orders that the clerk prepare drafts to the several petitioners.—M. C. C, VII: 106. On Aug. 11, 1766, the Board of Wardens, of which the corporation was a member, confirmed the seal of this Corporation and witnessed by the Mayor and Senior Alderman present in Common Council." The grant of a water lot to Jacob Sarly, the draft of which had been submitted on June 28, was the first one made under this ordinance.—Ibid., VIII: 116.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1768 119, 121. Regarding the grants to the rest of the petitioners, and Mar.
to others later, of water lots at Hunter’s Key, from this time until to 1775, see M. C. C., VII: 137, 142-45, 150, 175-76, 179, 181, 211, 212, 237, 239, 274, 351-53, 372; VII: 2-3, 7, 85. For the beginnings of the long controversy which culminated in these grants, see April 20, 1775, May 24, 1754; May 22, 1761. See also the MS. of the case in regard to the rights and title to Hunter’s Key, originally given by letters patent to Robert Heaxter, on March 27, in the fourth year of George’s reign; it shows the extent of the grant and history of the case and opinion in 1768.—Filed with N. Y. MSS., 1761-1800, in N. Y. Hist. Soc.

GOV. Moore writes to the Earl of Shelburne concerning a claim made by the commander-in-chief of the army to supremacy over the governors in America on all occasions. He adds that the council has decided that for the civil power to be subordinate to the military would be contrary to the British constitution. In justification of this decision, the governor says, “in many instances the minds of the people here would be so much affected with a Claim of this kind as to make them lose all that respect now shew’d to His Majesty’s Civil Government here.” He then describes the ceremony that is customary on the king’s birthday [see, for example, June 4, 1769], and adds “A ceremony of this kind . . . would drain at the Assemblies of the Ministers in the General Assembly.”—N. T. Col. Lect., VIII: 14-19. On Aug. 19, Moore wrote again on this subject.—Ibid., VIII: 97-99. Hillsborough, on Oct. 12, answered: “the subject of the Diaptus between yourself and General Gage, concerning Rank and Precedence is under Consideration, and I trust such Orders will be given therupon as may be equally satisfactory to both in the mean time I am commanded by His Majesty to desire you will continue to act with the same spirit of Prudence and Moderation by which your conduct upon this occasion appears to have been hitherto governed, & which His Majesty does very much approve.”—Ibid., VIII: 101. No further record appears; therefore, the presumption is that the claim of Gen. Gage was not sustained.

9 “Wanted, A Person to provide Victuals, and to cook, for the College,—Inquire at the President’s Chambers. King’s College, March 9, 1768.”—N. T. Jour., March 17, 1768.

14 William Sloe offers for sale his lease of the house at the North River ferry, of which 11 years are still unexpired.—N. T. Merc., March 14, 1768.

17 The order of St. Patrick is to meet “at the House of John Marshall, at the ancient Mason’s Arms, near the Hon. William Walton’s.”—N. T. Merc., March 7, 1768. The Walton house was at the present 326 Pearl St.—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 953. Marshall turned this tavern over to John Bridgewater before May 23.—N. T. Merc., May 23, 1768. In 1789, it was the starting-place of the Boston and Albany stages, and was being conducted by Isaac Carter, at “No. 166, Queen-street, opposite Mr. Walton’s.”—N. T. Jour., Oct. 3, 1789.

18 A New Yorker, writing on March 24 to a friend in London, says that on this day, the anniversary of the repeal of the Stamp Act, “a numerous company of the principal merchants, and other respectable inhabitants of this city, friends to constitutional liberty and trade, assembled at Mr. John’s and Mr. Bardin’s taverns, nearly adjoining, where union flags were displayed, and elegant entertainments provided. When the company had dined, by common consent, the remains of the entertainment were sent to the poor prisoners in the goal, with a suitable quantity of liquor. Also dinner many loyal and patriotic healths were drank.”—London Chron., May 26-28, 1768; Upcott Coll., III: 239.

21 “The noted Tavern, at the Sign of the Freemason’s Arms, on the West Side of the Broadway, fronting the great Square late the Property of John Jones, but now belongs to the Hon. Roger Morris, is for sale by Henry J. Adams, for $2000.—N. T. Merc., March 7, 1768. The common council acts favourably on the petition of Nicholas Bayard (see Dec. 19, 1767) and orders the clerk to prepare a lease to him of “the publick Slaughter house” for 18 years, commencing Sept. 2, 1771.—M. C. C., VII: 107-8. See, further, April 27, 1769.

25 The corporation of the County has been incorporated by the provisions of the Act of March 11, 1768, which appears to have expressed the intention that a convenient dwelling-house should be erected for the residence of the rector. This “has not hitherto been done.” With a desire to comply with the charter, and believing that such building would “greatly redound to the Credit and Honour of the said Corporation,” the vestry orders “that the present Charity School House be altered and made into a neat and convenient Dwelling House, and set apart for the use of the Church and its Successors forever, free from the payment of any rent for the same And that a New School House be erected on Some other part of the Lands belonging to this Corporation.”—Trin. Min. (M.S.).

In this and subsequent issues of the Post-Boy, articles appear concerning the Corporation of the County. The Church and England—its origin, its formation, and influence at home and in America. One writer remarks that there are many “civil and religious appendages and annexations, the undoubted rights of the Church of England in England, which Episcopalians in America, cannot, as friends to this country, wish to be ignored. According to this destination, I am in principle opposed to titles, bishops, baronies, and a thousand other powers and peculiarities, occasioned by the liberty of popes and princes, and the superstition of the vulgar . . . With the bishops we shall naturally have the introduction or establishment of spiritual or ecclesiastical courts.” The bishop’s right to open his court being . . . secured by the common law, and that being universally acknowledged to be the law of the colonies, his lordship will find no difficulty, after his diocese is established, to erect a tribunal, for good reasons long dissatisfying to the people of England; and which Americans dread to almost the same degree of horror, which is the iniquity itself.”—N. T. Post-Boy, March 28, April 4 et seq.

“A Letter having lately been received from a Committee of the Merchants of Boston, to be communicated to the Merchants of New York; they are desired to meet this Evening at Six o’clock, at Messrs. Bolton & Bolton’s Tavern.”—N. T. Jour., March 31, 1768. See April 7 and 14.

Because of a “late Reduction of the Wages of journeymen Tailors in New York, twenty tailors decide to “strike,” and advertise that they will work in families at “Three Shillings and Six Pence per Day,” with “Diet.” Their “House of Call” is at the “Sign of the Fox and Hounds,” in Moravian (Fulton) St.—N. T. Jour., April 7, 1768.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves to borrow $1,900 at 6 per cent., which is all that is judged necessary for this year for use in completing the “Third Church” (on Horse and Cart St.).—Eccles. Recs., VI: 411. Regarding further loans for this purpose, see Nov. 4. The next record concerning progress in the building construction is dated June 17 (q.v.).

Alexander Ogg revives James Johnson’s ferry between Whitehall Slip and Staten Island.—N. T. Post-Boy, April 4, 1768.

The New York Chamber of Commerce is organized. Twenty prominent merchants meet and pass the following resolution: “Whereas mercantile societies have been found very useful in trading cities for promoting and encouraging commerce, support of industry, adjusting disputes, and redressing injuries suffered in proceedings and procuring such laws and regulations as may be found necessary for the benefit of trade in general; “For which purpose, and to establish such a society in the city of New York, the following persons convened on the first Tuesday in, and being the 5th day of April, 1768, . . . Who agreed that the said Society of Merchants should consist of A President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, And such a number of merchants as already, or hereafter may become members thereof, to be called and known by the name of The New York Chamber of Commerce.” The officers elected are John Cruger, president; Hugh Wallace, vice-president; Elias Beckwith, treasurer; and Anthony van Horn, secretary.—Cal. Records of N. Y. Chamber of Commerce, 1768-1784 (Stevens), 3-7. The members held their meetings at Bolton & Sigel’s (Fraun’s) Tavern until they hired a room in the Exchange (see Feb. 15, 1769).—Ibid., 9, 307-8. See also N. T. Merc., Dec. 12, 1768.
To the Public.

This long expected Tea Ship arrived last night at Sandy-Hook, but the pilot would not bring up the Captain till the Factory of the city was known. The committee were immediately informed of her arrival, and that the Captain solicits for liberty to come up to provide necessaries for his return. The ship to remain at Sandy-Hook. The committee conceiving it to be the Factory of the city that should have such liberty, signified it to the Gentleman who is to supply him with provisions, and other necessaries. Advice of this was immediately dispatched to the Captain; and whenever he comes up, care will be taken that he does not enter at the custom-house, and that no time be lost in dispatching him.

New-York, April 19, 1774.

Proceedings of the Committee of Correspondence in New-York.

Committee-Chamber, July 13, 1774.

Present:

Mr. C. Colton, Mr. Thorne, Mr. Husband, Mr. J. G. F. Findlay, Mr. D. Smith, Mr. R. W. Tyler, Mr. Williamson. [Meeting adjourned to the next day.]

Ordered:

That the following three Gentlemen be a Committee for this purpose, viz. Mr. Thorne, Mr. Colton, Mr. Williamius, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Bicknell, and they are hereby instructed to send the following petitions:

To the Committee of Correspondence, from the People of New-York, who have been much sufferers by the recent violence of the inhabitants thereof, and desire to be heard in their grievances.

To the Governor, &c.

To the President, &c.

Ordered. That the petitioners be heard on the first day of the next month, and the Committee report the result of their inquiries to the next meeting of the Committee.

B. BROADSIDE RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE COMMITTEE OF CORRESPONDENCE ON JULY 13, 1774. SEE P. 860.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1768

James Durand, "having from his infancy endeavoured to qualify himself in the art of historical painting, humbly hopes for that encouragement which is essential for the promotion of the fine arts in this City and province, that so elegant and entertaining an art has always obtained from people of the most improved minds and best taste and judgment, in all polite nations of every age. And tho' he is sensible that to excel, (in this branch of painting especially) requires a most profound knowledge of the true principles of perspective and anatomy, and how to pretend to, in geometry geography, perspective, anatomy, description of the passions, antient and modern history, &c. yet he hopes, from the good nature and indulgence of the gentlemen and ladies who employ him, that his humble attempts, in which his best endeavours will be as usual, will merit their acceptance, and give satisfaction; and he prospers to work at as cheap rates as any person in America..."

His office is "Near the city-hall, broad-street." — N. Y. Jour, April 7, 1768.

Another advertisement of his may be found in the N. Y. Jour., Nov. 26, 1767. For further information, see Dunlap's Arts of Design, I: 169.

"To be let from the first of May next, with or without Furniture, as may suit the Tenant; The large Corner House, wherein Mrs. Steel lately kept the King's Arms Tavern, near the Fort, now in the Possession of Col. Gahbette: Inquire of Francis Paxton, Hair Dresser, in Broad-Street, near the Exchange." — N. Y. Jour., Apr. 7, 1768. See May 1, 1769.

John Bingham, a cordwainer, becomes lessee of the "Stalls and Standings" in the several city markets at $410 for the term of one year commencing May 1st. — M. C. C., VII: 109. For previous lessees, see ibid., VIII: 349 (title, "Markets, public") and "New York — Greenpoint, works, in the city of New York."

18 George Hopkins advertises the sale on this day of the "House on Golden Hill" where he lives. "Tis very convenient, having seven Rooms with Fire Places in each, an excellent Cistern and a good Yard, with a small Stable therein." — N. Y. Merc, Apr. 4, 1768. George and Edward Hopkins were proprietors, in 1763 (see June 20), of the Mason's Arms Tavern on William St.

A letter of this date to the Journal proposes an introduction to the agreement of the merchants to suspend and stop orders for goods imported from Great Britain. A note follows the letter: "Since the above was fitted for the Press, we find that most of the Merchants and Importers of Goods, have already subscribed a voluntary Agreement, which they will not call on their own Accounts or on Commissions, nor buy or sell for any Person whosoever, any Goods, (save a few enumerated Articles) which shall be shipped from Great-Britain after the first Day of October next, until the Act of Parliament imposing Duties on Paper, Glass &c. be repealed: Provided Boston and Phila-delphia adopt similar Measures by the first of June next. The Gentlemen of the Committee of Merchants, appointed at their last Meeting, have found the Inhabitants so very unanimous, that it is thought there is hardly an Importer in the City, but what have subscribed or will subscribe." — N. Y. Jour, April 4, 1768. See Aug. 27.

"A very beneficial Branch of Trade has been long neglected in this Province, that is, Whaling; but we now have some Hopes of seeing it revived, as Mr. Robert Murray, and Messrs. Franklin's have at present a Expedition fitted for that Purpose, which sailed Yesterday." — N. Y. Merc, April 18, 1768.

Inasmuch as the "Ground fronting the Communs" on which it was proposed to build the "New School" (see March 25) is not at present available, Obadiah Wells's (see Jan. 23, 1766) lease for the same not yet having expired, it is ordered by the Trinity Vestry "that the said lease is recorded to each gentleman and lady that they will not, if they remove from the same, build on the same;

The Earl of Hillsborough transmits to the governors in America a "copy of a letter from the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, addressed by order of that House, to the Speaker of the Assembly of each Colony" (see Feb. 21 Hillsborough letter: "his Majesty is pleased to be a most dangerous & factious tendency calculated to inflame the minds of his good Subjects in the Colonies, to promote an unwarrantable combination and to excite and encourage an open opposition to and Denial of the Authority of Parliament, & to subvert the true principles of constitutional Government; it is His Majesty's pleasure that you should immediately upon the Receipt hereof exert your utmost influence to defeat this flagitious attempt to disturb the Public Peace by prevailing upon the Assembly of your Province to take no notice of it, which will be treating it with the contempt it deserves, and give satisfaction; and he proposes to work at as cheap rates as any person in America...

The Mercury says that a New Yorker has written in one of his letters: "Let People talk what they will of the Americans establishing Manufactories among them, I do assure you, nothing can be carried into Execution (at least for the present) for the want of Money, which greatly affects all Ranks." — N. Y. Merc, April 25, 1768.

Gov. Moore, in a letter to Lord Hillsborough, states that "great quantities of Leather" are being tanned in this country, and that the business has been carried on for many years (see June 7, 1768). The leather, he says, is "very inferior in quality to that made in Europe; and they are not yet arrived to the perfection of making Sole-leather." — Dis. Hist. N. Y. (40 ed.), I: 499.

John Taylor (formerly an upholsterer, at Cow-Foot Hill) now occupies the "Glass-House, at Newfoundland" [see Feb. 5, 1777], in the Out-Ward, and advertises to carry on there the business of "a Tavern, and Place of Publick Entertainment." — N. Y. Merc, May 9, 1768. The place had become a tavern five years before. — See May 23, 1763. How long it remained so does not appear in the records. As a farm, the place was advertised for sale during the Revolution by one "William W'Adams, Hanover-Square" — Royal Gan, April 7, 1779. In 1803, nine acres of the property, called the "old Glass House," were advertised for rent. — Conn. Adv, Feb. 25, 1803. In another advertisement of about the same time, it was described as half a mile above the state prison. — N. Y. Gen. & Gen. Adv., March 31, 1803.

An advertisement reads: "Charles Shipman, Ivory and Hardwood Turner, Removed from the Corner near the Old-Slip, to the White-Hall, near the Battery, and next Door to Mr. Seward's..." This takes his opportunity of returning his Friends his most grateful Thanks for their kind Favourites, and hopes for a Continuance of the same, as he intends carrying on the Turning Business in all the various undermentioned Articles, with the utmost Dispatch, and peculiarly of the most reasonable Terms that can be offered, to each other, that they will not call on their own Accounts or on Commissions, nor buy or sell for any Person whosoever, any Goods, (save a few enumerated Articles) which shall be shipped from Great-Britain after the first Day of October next, until the Act of Parliament imposing Duties on Paper, Glass &c. be repealed: Provided Boston and Phila-delphia adopt similar Measures by the first of June next. The Gentlemen of the Committee of Merchants, appointed at their last Meeting, have found the Inhabitants so very unanimous, that it is thought there is hardly an Importer in the City, but what have subscribed or will subscribe." — N. Y. Jour, April 4, 1768. See Aug. 27.

Mr. Monticello, who is "very solicitous" to have the philosopher's "farewell" to be printed, states that he will pay the necessary expenses if the "articles" are printed at his own expense. — N. Y. Jour, April 26, 1768.

At the King's College commencement, the degree of M.D. is conferred upon four candidates. — N. Y. Jour, May 24, 1768. Mrs. Lamb mentions this in her article, "The Golden Age of Colonial Painting," in "The Life of William H. Powell, Old N. Y., II: 183, in error when he says that the first medical degree was conferred in New York on Samuel Child, to be surrogate. — Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 773.

The common council orders that the alderman and councilmen of the South and Dock Wards "Cause the Spurr, fronting the Great Dock in the south ward of this City, to be repaired, and to be of the breadth of forty five feet Rainging with the Street Leading from the White hall, easterly so far as the present Spurr now Runs." — M. C. C., VII: 112. On June 25, they resolved that they had entered into an agreement to have the dock made 160 ft. long.
1768

11 ft. wide, and 10 ft. deep, for £500, and this was approved.—

JUNE

Ibid., VII: 115-16. Payment of this amount was made Sept. 28;

also about £50 for repairs for the dock. The board ordered that the total amount, £239, “shall be Repaid by the proprietors of the Lots fronting the said 477. ppt. by the grantee for the said West Dock and ground without the said, as the spur now built is laid in such a manner as to serve for a street whenever this board shall think proper to give Grants for said West great Dock.”—Ibid., VII: 125. Such grants were not made until Sept. 17, 1773 (p. c.). Payments were made on June 8, 1767, for “finishing the Spur at the Great Dock.”—Ibid., VII: 165, 169.

6 The house at the upper end of French Church (Pine) St. “lately occupied by Captain Montresour” is advertised to be let.—N. T. Merc., Suppl. to June 6, 1768. Montresor was author of the plan of New York City, made for military uses, in 1766, during the Stamp Act riots.—See Dec. 16, 1765 and Vol. I, Pl. 40; also plate description, 339-40.

10 John Hancock’s shop “Liberty” is seated at Boston by the customs officers and stationed “under the Guns of the “Romney” man-o’-war. This conduct angers the populace and, in the dispute which follows, the collector, the comptroller of the customs, and the collector’s son are “roughly used, and pelted with Stones.” Later, “a mix’d Multitude” broke some of the windows of the comptroller’s house, attacked the inspector of exports and imports, and “in their wrath, burned ’t o’ and about a large pleasure-boat belonging to the collector.—N. T. Jour., June 23, 1768. See also Winsor, Nat. Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 43, 79.

16 Samuel Francis advertises the opening of Vauxhall Garden, which, during “his Absence from this City,” has been “occupied by Messrs. H., M., & C.—N. T., June 16, 1768.

17 The walls of the North Dutch Church under construction (see July 2, 1767) are “finish’d to receive the Roof.”—Jour. of the proceedings of the Ref. Prot. Dutch Church, op. cit. See June 21.

21 Columns to support the gallery in the North Dutch Church and are put to the present, July 3, 1767. Here is described beneath its capital the inscriptions of the donor.—Chamberl. The Noon Prayer Meeting (1858), 25. For other facts in connection with the building of this church, see July 4 and Aug. 3, 1768; March 20 and May 2, 1769.

23 A committee of the common council is appointed to determine “the Expanse of Laying a peer on the west side of pecks Slip.”—M. C. C., VII: 116. A year later, on June 8, 1769, the board agreed “that the water Lott fronting the Ground of this Corporation, on the west side of pecks Slip be filled up and Docked out,” and a committee was appointed to prepare a plan and estimate.—Ibid., VII: 164. On June 15, 1769, the board decreed “the breadth of 18 feet be laid out of said Ground to be filled up adjoining said Slip upon a Raige laid down in a plan now Exhibited to this Board.”—Ibid., VII: 169-70, 179. On Dec. 1, payment of £500 was made on account of this wharf, and £44177 for “building a new pecks Slip” (Ibid., VII: 1792); and on Feb. 15, £25 more for building the wharf (Ibid., VII: 206).

In response to a petition of “Sundry Inhabitants Living and Residing in and near Murray Streets, in the westward ward of this City,” the corporation orders “that the same Street be Regulated.”—M. C. C., VII: 116. The first regulation of Murray St. is recorded under date of May 20, 1773 (p. v.).

25 John Clopper is appointed “a wharfinger of this Corporation to Collect in the wharfe arising from the two Sides of the Corporations additional per only” (Albany Pier—see Aug. 13, 1769) for one year, beginning July 1, 1768. The common council decrees to allow him “the usual Commission, which is Received by Francis Marschalk as wharfinger for some of the proprietors of water Lots in the Dock yard.”—M. C. C., VII: 116.

July

The following observation was made by Du Simitière, when in New York at this time seeking data for a history of the colonies; it appears in his MSS., Book No. 1422 Y1 (Library Company, Phila.): “Paintings in New York July 1768 At Mr. Gérardus Stuyvesantes grand Son to Pieter Stuyvesante governor of New Netherland when the place Surrendered to the English in 1604. there is a great buste of the Said Pieter in Oil with a falling band & Tossels [sic] armour & Sabb [see June 12, 1663]. Two pictures of his mother & father on board in oil & a conversation piece in a landscape on board also in oil. two figures Some of his family a Woman Setting with a large ruff about the neck & a man Standing all tolerably well done the decay’d Specially the last in the Windows of the house (which is built in the old Dutch taste) are many Small joints of glass painted representing coat of arms of Several of the inhabitantss New Amsterdam in those days about 1662. 45 out of the Seventeen which is Scene to be Seen from which She has taken very authentic pieces to prove the Antiquities of the rank of those families, the present proprietor was born in the year 1692. the church that stood there of which some part of the wall is Still to I[e] Seen but by the ignorance of the glazier misplaced & rever’sd most of all the Name of Tonneman Schout of Amsterdam in N. Nederï 1663 the names of De Peyerster, Van Brug, Backer, &c. &c. with some of their Coat of Armes are still to be Seen from which She has taken very authentic pieces to prove the Antiquities of the rank of those families, the present proprietor was born in the year 1692. the church that stood there had been built by Goverô Stuyvesantes but the town people finding it too far, they built one in town which is now the old Dutch Church & the pulpit that now Stands in it is the Same that was in the former church as the above old gentleman informed me. the place above mentioned is a farm Situated about a Short mile from the tow[r] to the right hand Side going out of town in the main Road ‘twas called the Belvery which name all the road has retaill’d to this day it being the Dutch word [to] farm at that place the treaty was Sign’d betwixt the commissioners of Charle[s] the 24 & Gov’ Stuyvesante there is a vault upon the Place where the old Governor is Buried as well as Goverô Slaughter.— Regarding the painted glass, see Oct. 9, 1660, and March 18, 1662; for the burial of Gov. Stuyvesant, see Feb., 1667, and July 23, 1669. For the burning of this residence ("Peterfeld"), see Oct. 4, 1778. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 932.

The Roof of said Church [North Dutch] was Raised the 4th day of July 1768. being one year & two days from the Laying the first foundation stone” (see July 2, 1767);—Jour. of the proceedings of the Ref. Prot. Dutch Church, op. cit. See Aug. 23.

In answer to Hillsborough’s letter of April 21 (p. v.), Gov. Moore says: “The circular letter wrote by the Speaker of the Massachusetts’s Assembly . . . did not arrive here before an end was put to the Session by a dissolution. It is impossible formally to say at present what would have been the effect, if the letter had been receiv’d during the Session, but . . . I do not imagine this Province would have shew’d that forwardness which many others have done on this occasion.

The apprehensions which every Person of property was under during our late Commotions from the Liceitousness of the Populare are not yet forgotten, and I believe they would not willingly see those scenes of disorder renew’d.”—N. T. Col. Docs., VIII: 80.

Trinity vestry gives power to its committee to borrow funds “to Complent the Building of the New School House and altering the House int’o a School room for the Rector” (see March 25). The staircase of the school is to be “Carried up out of the Outside of the Building.”—Trin. Min. (MS.)

The “New York Paper Manufactory,” between Fly Market and Burling Slip, is completed. “All those who have the Welfare of the Country at Heart, are desired seriously to consider the Importance of a Paper Manufactory to this Government, and how much Good they may do it, by preserving the Linen Rags, particularly the fine ones . . . by manufacturing of it here. Numbers of poor People are daily employ’d and the Money still remains in a circulating State.” People who desire paper are to send their orders to John Kears council.”—N. T. Merc. July 14, 1768. In 1776, the proprietor of the Post-Ray complained of the stamp duty, saying that the “Philadelphia has greatly the advantage of us, they have paper-mills among them” (see N. T. Post-Ray, Oct. 4, 1756).

The paper mill above established, if the first, must have supplied a real need in the City of New York, as is indicated by the, 1756 petition to the lord Burgesses for a charter. The new mill “would be a great encouragement to the manufacturers of this city.”—N. T. Jour., July 21, 1768.

William Weyman, “for many Years past a Printer of Note in this City,” dies “of a lingering Illness.”—N. T. Merc., Aug. 1, 1768.
John Taylor, for the convenience of the public, will this day begin to run a regular stage "punctually at 3 o'clock in the After-noon, from the House of Mr. Vandenburgh, Stable-keeper, in the Fields, near St. Paul's, to the Glass-house," at Newfounland, (see May 9.)—N. T. Merc., Aug. 1, 1768.

Abraham van Dyck advertises that a leopard and several other animals may be seen at his house "in the Broad Way," near St. Peter's Church.—N. T. Merc., Aug. 1, 1768. This may have been Van Denberg's house, or one near it. On May 1 of this same year, Israel Waters announced that he had taken over Van Denberg's stable.—Ibid., May 2, 1768. Garret van Denberg, probably a son of Adam van Denberg, was exhibiting, in the spring of 1769, a "Cock and Hen, an Ox that cost £100 this Currency."—Ibid., March 6, 1769. Van Dyck continued to keep tavern, probably in the same place, as late as 1775, when the Military Club met here. See June 3, 1775. Cornelius, another member of the Van Denberg family, was at this time proprietor of the Bull's Head in the Berry. 12

It is ordered by the common council "for the future that all Grants Issued by this board for Lands be under the seal of this Corporation, and witnessed by the Mayor and Senior Alderman present in Common Council." The first grant under this regulation is for buildings upon a lot on Hunter's Key, to Jacob Sarly, on this day.—M. C. C., VII: 119, 121.

The common council orders that Joseph Fairly be paid £50, "in part what this board agreed to Give him for Compleating the Road on Inklawabanber."—M. C. C., VII: 121. On Sept. 28, £50 more were paid on this account.—Ibid., VII: 125. The last instalment, £20, was paid on Oct. 12—Ibid., VII: 128. This road appears to be that subsequently known as the "Middle Road." It is shown without name, as early as 1767, on the "Ratter Map" (Pl. 41, Vol. I), but finished only as far as the Mary Farm. It was evidently continued, in 1768 (as the above cited entries would indicate), about as far south as the present 31st St. Payment was ordered by the common council, on Oct. 12, "for Carpenters work and plask found for the Bridge that Leads across Inklawabanber."—Ibid., VII: 125. This bridge is shown on A. Pl. 9-a, Vol. III, also on the "Map of the Common Lands," surveyed by Liddam, to be found in Spedman and Bruith's maps (1881), 156. It spanned the western outlet of Sun Fish Pond near the present corner of Fourth Ave. and 31st St.—See Pl. 176, Vol. III, and Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 1005, under "Middle Road."

The common council orders "that a small addition be made to the Kitchen of the poor House in order to fit an Iron pot, for the Dressing of Victuals."—M. C. C., VII: 121. Further a committee is appointed to "Cause the Room above the assembly Chamber in the City hall to be fitted up for the use of the Council."—M. C. C., VII: 125. On Sept. 27, 1769 (p. v), payment of £14119 9s. was made for "Rope to finish the "Council Room in the City Hall."—Ibid., VII: 182.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves "that a vault be made in the Third Church [the North Dutch Church] for a burying place for the ministers, their wives and children."—Eccles. REC., VII: 4130.

The merchants of the city adopt the following resolutions:

1. That we will not send for from Great-Britain either upon our own Account or on Commission this Fall, any other Goods than what we have already ordered.

2. That we will not import any kind of Merchandize from Great-Britain, either upon our own Account or on Commission, or any otherwise, nor purchase from any Factor or others, any kind of Goods imported from Great-Britain directly, or by Way of any of the other Colonies, or by Way of the West-Indies, that shall be shipped from Great-Britain after the First Day of November, 1768, the forementioned Acts of Parliament imposing Duties on Paper, Glass, &c. be repealed; except only the Articles of Coals, Salt, Salt-Cloths, Wool-Cards, and Card-Wire, Glass-houses, Chalk, Lead, Tin, Sheet Copper and German Steet.

3. We further agree, not to import any kind of Merchandise fromboard, the streets very remove from thence, or by any other Way whatever, more than what we have already ordered (except Tiles and Bricks.).

4. We also promise to countermand all Orders given from Great-Britain, on or since the 6th Inst. by the first Convoyage, ordering those Goods not to be sent unless the forementioned Duties are taken off.

"V. And we further agree, that if any Person or Persons, Subscribers hereof, shall take any Advantages of importing any kind of Goods that are herein restricted, directly or indirectly con- trary to the true Intent and Meaning of this Agreement; such Person or Persons shall by us be deemed Enemies to their Country.

VI. Lastly, we agree, that if any Goods shall be consigned or consigned over to us, or made by any Agreement in this subscription; such Goods so imported, shall be lodged in some public Warehouse there to be kept under Confisication until the forementioned Acts are repealed.

Subscribed by nearly all the Merchants and Traders in Town."—N. T. Jour., Sept. 9, 1768. See Apr. 14.

A great number of the trades and mechanics of New York, Sept. 5. Reflecting on the salutary measures entered into by the merchants in Boston, and this city, to restrict the importation of goods from Great-Britain, until the acts of Parliament laying duties on paper, glass, &c. were repealed: and being animated with the spirit of liberty," agree to the following resolutions:

1. That, First, we do not, ourselves, purchase . . . any goods . . . imported from Europe, by any merchant, directly or indirectly, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this agreement of the merchants of this city; on the 27th of August last [p. v].

2. Secondly. That we will not, . . . buy any kind of goods from any merchant, . . . who shall refuse to join with their brethren in signing the said agreement; but that we will use every lawful means in our power to prevent our acquaintance from deal- ing with them.

3. Thirdly, That if any merchant in or from Europe, should import any goods, in order to sell them in this province . . . that we ourselves, will by no means deal with such importers.

4. Fourthly, That we will endeavour to fall upon some Expedition to make known such Importers or Retailers as shall refuse to unite in maintaining and obtaining the liberties of our country.

5. Fifthly, That we his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal sub- jects. . . being filled with love and gratitude to our present most gracious Sovereign, and the highest veneration for the British constitution; which we now unite to plead as our birth-right . . . give it as our opinion, and are determined to do them, who shall refuse to unite in the common cause, as acting the part of an enemy to the true interest of Great Britain and her colonies, and consequently not deserving the patronage of merchants, or mech- anics.—N. T. Post-Boy, Sept. 12, 1768. There is a similar account in the N. T. Jour., Sept. 15, 1768.

An advertisement states that "Journeymen Nail-Makers are wanted immediately, such properly qualified will meet with good Encouragement, by applying to William Utrick, at the Sign of the Lock and Key, between Burling's and Beekman's Slip."—N. T. Post-Boy, Sept. 5, 1768. The nailery was erected by Nov. 17.—N. T. Jour., Nov. 17, 1768.

A letter of this date from Philadelphia states that, a few days earlier, Major Moncrief arrived in New York with dispatches for Gen. Gage from the king. "Immediately on the receipt of them, orders were given to hire transports, as they said, to carry troops to St. Augustine." The merchants of New York, on being applied to, refused to supply any vessels, for they felt sure they would be sent against "their brethren at Boston to enslave them." Notice (see Sept. 28) were posted at the Coffee House and at the corners of every street to the effect that "if any man dared to hire them a vessel, destruction would ensue." As a result, the military author- ities could get only one strange ship that lay in the North River.—Boston Chron., Nov. 14, 1768.

G. Taylor, of Sheffield, Eng., arrives in New York by "a single horse chair" (chaise) from New Haven, and stops at "the King's arms near the Oswego market." Of New York he writes, in part, that it "contains upwards of three thousand houses, and above eighteen thousand inhabitants." It is pretty well built, extending a mile in length, and about half that in breadth; and makes a beautiful prospect from the sea. The houses in general are built of brick, most of them in the Dutch method, the streets very firmly laid out, and are of any other way whatever, more than what we have already ordered (except Tiles and Bricks.)."
The Governor's Palace in Fort George, City-Hall, Exchange, Sept. New Gaol, Hospital, Secretary's Office, Barracks, Alms-House; 20 besides five markets, viz. Counties, Old Ship, Fly, Oswego, and New-Market." He describes a trip to Flushing, L.I., by going up East River, taking passage in the "Flushing stage-boat." On East River, he says, "...are beautiful plantations; and all along are the country-houses of the City Merchants. The'... The generality of the land be rocky, it has a fertile soil. . . ."

The Dutch, who inhabit the greater part of this shore, come to market some twenty, some thirty miles down this river in small boats to New-York. The wives generally row the boat, while the husbands sit in an idle posture smoking . . . "—A Voyage to N. Am. (Nottmington), 171.

Sir William Johnson's conference with the Indians at Fort Stanwix begins, in the drawing of a boundary line between the English colonists and the Indians.—Winson, Nar. Crit. Hist. of Am., VI. Ch. 8. See map showing the line in ibid., VI. 609.

The following proclamation is published by order of Gov. Moore: "Whereas sundry Papers [see Sept. 3] have lately been published, and fixed up in divers Parts of this City, of a seditionary Tendency, calculated to obstruct, oppose and impeke His Majesty's Service, and containing Menaces and Threats of inevitable Destruction to such Owners or Masters of Vessels, or other Persons as shall engage or charter any Vessels in the Service of His Majesty. In Order therefore to prevent the Authors or Editors of such seditious Papers to condign Punishment, I have thought fit, by the Advice of His Majesty's Council to issue this Proclamation hereby, in His Majesty's Name, offering a Reward of Fifty Pounds, to any Person or Persons who shall discover the Author or Authors of the seditionous Papers so published, or the Editors of such seditious Papers so published as aforesaid."—N. Y. Merc. Oct. 19, 1768; Col. Hist. 1767-8, p. 220.

A committee reports to the common council that it has caused "Van de Water" St. to be regulated and levelled.—M. C. C., VII: 124. A further regulation of "Van de Water" St. was ordered, Aug. 14, 1771.—Ibid., VII: 707-8. The street was laid out prior to 1767.—See Pl. 41, Vol. I.

Oct. 20. The constancy of the Dutch Church passes the following resolution: "Since the condition of the Third Church, now named the North [Church], demands particular care above what is common with the Elders, Deacons and Church Masters hitherto in use (in office) it is resolved that "Two persons be chosen under the name of Deacons to assist the clergyman in the church." That care over the church . . . "—J. R. J. M. M., 116-22 Wakeley, op. cit., p. 67. The church stood "some distance from the street. Its length was sixty feet, its breadth forty-two, and the walls were built of stone, the face covered over with a blue plaster, exhibiting an appearance of durability, simplicity and plainness. . . . The interior was equally plain, and remained many years in an unfinished state. There were at first no stair or workroom to the galleries, and the hearers ascended by a ladder and listened to the preacher from the platform. For a long while, even the seats on the lower floor had no backs."—Wakeley, op. cit., p. 108. "A House occupied as the parsonage stood partly before the church, of the produce of the Dutch Church, it also contained the methodist library, and was founded years before the church. . . . To screen the congregation from the passing multitudes in the street, a wooden partition or fence, having a gateway and a small door on one side was put up, and thus formed an area paved with brick, about 50 feet wide."—A Short Hist. Account of the Early Soc. of Meth. in City of N. Y. (1824), 6. See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 930, and Vol. I. Oct. pp. 344-46. For a view of the church, see Fl. 45, Vol. I.

Nov. 20. A second loan of £500 is secured by the Dutch Church to go on the building of the "North Church."—Eccles. Rec., VI: 413; the first was on March 31 (q.v.).

The Trinity vestry orders that "the Street Door leading into the Vestry Room of the New School House be taken away and a Window be placed in the Staid of it."—Trin. Min. (M.), 158.

The assembly orders that a drawing be made of a "fertile, duteous and loyal petition to his Majesty, a memorial to the lords and a remonstrance to the commons of Great Britain; praying relief from the grievances his Majesty's subjects within this colony labor under, from the acts of Parliament passed in the sixth session of the last parliament, impressing the necessity of raising revenue, and of the several other acts passed by that Parliament relative to the colonies."—Assembly, Jour. (1768-9), 16. See Dec. 12.

Gover. Moore sends the following message to the assembly: "The sums granted by an act of the legislature, passed the 21st day of December, 1767 (q.v.), for furnishing his Majesty's troops quartered in this Colony with necessaries, having been expended, as directed by the said act, I now recommend to the House of Assembly, to make a further provision for that service."—Assembly, Jour. (1768-9), 18. The effigies of Governor Greenleaf of Boston are to be exhibited in New York, armed troops patrol the streets near the lower barracks in order "to intimidate the inhabitants." However, the effigies "made their appearance in the streets, hanging on a gallows, between eight and nine o'clock, attended by a vast number of spectators who saluted them with loud hurrahs, at the corner of every street they passed; and after having been exposed some time at the Coffee house, they were publicly burnt amidst the acclamations of the populace."—Boston Chron., Nov. 28, 1768; N. Y. Merc., Nov. 21, 1768; N. Y. Jour., Nov. 17, 1768. See Nov. 19.

Smith records in his diary: "I made a visit to S. H. Moore upon the Subject of Holt's Representation yesterday of the Riot of last Monday [see Nov. 14]—I told him upon the Mayor's Intimation of the Design last Friday Mr. Watts & I met the Magistrates and remonstrated agt it as injurious to the Country & so ill Timed as to deserve the Cause the Rioters meant to promote—that it would induce the government to turn a deaf ear to our Petitions and prevent our Friends from urging Relief upon the Inexpediency of the late Duty Act—I added that we advised the Magistrates to patrol the Ward next Day with two or three respectable Citizens and propagate there sentiments to render Riots unpopular by prevailing the Voice of the discreet Inhabitants—That this was done with Success by the Magistrates for that at a Meeting with 80 Firemen and others on Saturday Evening the Mayor spoke to them and they in general promised to stand by him in preserving the Peace of the City. That this thing I was informed the Merchants were to have been to the Assembly & ask what was became of the Boston Letters whence I concluded that the Neglect of the late Riot imbibed[ed] some designing Persons to awe the Assembly who in the Main have sentiments friendly to the Governor Government and the true Interest of the Province. That there was now a Necessity for animadverting upon the late Riot and that Measures ought to be taken to prevent this Spirit from spreading.—The Govr heard me for half an Hour and said that the Mayor let him as he came into speak with me—that he had sent for him to request a Counter Repreent[ed] in Gaine's Paper to show that the Riot was promoted by a contemptible Few & ought not to be charged upon the City in General—I told him that as the three Branches were now all together more was necessary—An Order that the Magistrates make Enquiry for the Contervers & Chief Promoters & that some of the Council be directed to assist them in their operations, & that the Priests should be issued promising a Reward for Discouries & that a message should be sent to the assembly for a Provision of money to answer the Promises."—Wm. Smith's Diary (M.), IV.

Gover. Moore issues a proclamation offering a reward of £50 for the discovery of the authors of the late riots; and if any person, on or about the 23rd of October, began a Riot at the Northeastern End of Queen-Street, and, eluding the Vigilance of the Magistrates then assembled in the Out-Skirts of the City, proceeded hastily, with great Noise and Tumult, as far as the Merchant's Coffee-House, and there burnt certain Figures or Effigies, in the Presence of a Rabb[le] of Negroes and Children."—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 28, 1768. There is a copy of
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1768

21

Gov. Moore, in a message to the assembly, states that some intimations having been given to the mayor and magistrates of New York "of a design to disturb the public peace, by a riot," he hoped, by the appointment of the magistrate of the locality, "the public peace of the city." However, a few ill-disposed persons, having eluded the vigilance of the magistrates, and attempted to start a riot (see Nov. 14), he had issued a proclamation (see Nov. 19) offering a reward for the conviction of the "contenders and chief promoters of this outrage." He now asked the assembly to come to counter a request he had "in the necessary steps to prevent the colony from suffering any detriment." —Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 28. On Nov. 23, the assembly replied that though they felt, in common with the rest of the colonies, "the distresses occasioned by the new duties imposed by the parliament of Great Britain, and the ill-policed state of the American commerce," yet they were "far from conceiving, that violent and tumultuous proceedings" would have any tendency "to promote suitable redress." They assured the governor that the disorders previously were "disapproved by the inhabitants in general and are imputable only to the few partizans of the lowest class." —Ibid. (1768-9), 30-31. See Jan. 4, 1769.

"In speaking of the opposition in the assembly to the proclamation against the rioters, of Nov. 14 (q.v.), Smith says: "Never did the De Lanecys act with less Craft.--They lost Credit with the Governor, whose opinion of his workmanship Mr. Moore of their wishing to Head the Mob, to disturb his administration of which he had given the Council a broad Hint which De Lanecy & Watts denied, & affected not to believe.--They lost Credit also with the Weighty Citizens who all disapproved of the Riot.--State was now stung & People to disturb the public Repose out all. If they had acted cunningly they should know the sense of the House the Night before have abstained themselves & not exposed their Weakness but as if infatuated throughout it was at the Request of the Minority that the House divided & the Names were set down in the Journal."—James De Lanecy was cried up as an oracle before by his Friends who wanted him Chief Justice—This Conduct brought him into utter Contempt in and out of Doors."—Wm. Smith's Diary (MS.), IV.

25

Twenty-five thousand dollars are shipped from New York harbour; "they are to be landed at Providence, and from thence to be forwarded by Land for Boston, for the Use of his Majesty's Troops now quartered in that City."—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 28, 1768.

The "dollars" here referred to are "Spanish dollars" or "pieces of eight," coined in common use throughout the American colonies during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. A Spanish dollar was regarded as a coin of compliment to the English and was esteemed as paying money.—Adler, Money and Money Units of the Am. Colonies, 1-2.

Separate petitions to the king, lords, and commons, are read in the assembly (see Nov. 8) and approved.—Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 48. The text of the petitions appears in the journal of the next session of the assembly (see April 7, 1769); petitions are made against taxation without representation, and against "suspending the legislative power of this colony, until they shall have made the provisions required for quartering his Majesty's troops" (see July 2, 1767). In one paragraph it is stated that "ever since the fatal act for imposing the stamp duties, our confidence in the tenderness of Great Britain seems to have suffered a very sensible abatement; for though the prostrate powers of government revived on its repeal, and we were recovered from the wild distractions occasioned by that destructive law, yet our former general tranquility has never been fully restored; and there is too great reason to fear, that many ill effects of this Constitution have arisen from which we have so lately escaped." —Ibid. (1768-9), 11-17.

19

Samuel Francis applies to Trinity vestry for an extension of his lease of Vauxhall Garden (see June 16, 1768) on certain conditions, and a committee is appointed to treat with him.—Trin. Min. (MS.); Landscape Map Ref. Key, III: 581. See March 25, 1768.

28

The assembly decides to allow Golden, "for administering the government, from the first day of September, 1765, to the thirteenth day of November following, at the rate of two thousand pounds per annum, the sum of £5000."—Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 61, 65. Jonathan Watts wrote to Gen. Monckton, on Feb. 4, 1769, that this payment, "which before had been refused," was finally ordered, but "they could not be prevailed on to pay the burst charge" (see Nov. 1, 1765).—Ibid. (1768-9), 61.

William Peartree Smith conveys to the city a square of land, measuring 248 ft. on each side, adjoining the garden of the poor-house, "to the Northward of the Common field of this City near the fresh water, bounded on the west by the Broad way and on the east by North and South sides by Land belonging to this Corporation," for which the city is agreed to pay him £4,713,179.2. —M. C. C., VII: 141-42.

The colonial treasurer is ordered to pay Elizabeth Vaughan £581,660, "for a Flag for Fort George," and Joseph Powell £49,000, "for making two Bookcases and a large Table for the use of the General Assembly."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 1027; Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 60.

The general assembly agrees to these resolutions: "As it is not only the common birthright of all his Majesty's subjects, but it is also essential to the preservation of the peace, strength and prosperity of the British empire; that an exact equality of constitutional rights, among all his Majesty's subjects in the several parts of the empire, be uniformly and invariably maintained and supported; and as it would be inconsistent with the constitutional rights of his Majesty's subjects in Great Britain, to tax them either in person or estate, without the consent of their representatives in parliament assembled. It is therefore, "Resolved, Namine Contradistincte, "That . . . as his most gracious Majesty is the common father of all his good subjects, dispersed throughout the various parts of the realm; and as the commons of Great Britain, in parliament assembled, do enjoy a constitutional right of humbly petitioning his Majesty, as the common father of his people there, for constitutional benefits and the redress of grievances. The representatives of this colony, in general assembly convened, lawfully may, and ought to exercise the same constitutional right, when, and so often as to them shall seem meet."—Resolved, Namine Contradistincte, "That . . . this house has an undoubted right, to correspond and consult with any of the neighboring colonies, or with any of his Majesty's subjects out of this colony, or belonging to any part of his Majesty's realm or dominions, either individually or collectively on any matter, nay, and with any officer, or person, whatever, whereby they shall conceive the rights, liberties, interests or privileges of this house, or of its constituents, are, or may be affected."—Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 70-71. These resolutions led Gov. Moore to dissolve the assembly (see Jan. 2, 1769).

Philip Livingston, speaker of the assembly, communicates to that body the circular letter (of Feb. 11) from the Massachusetts colony. An answer is immediately drawn up, which he is ordered to transmit to the Massachusetts house of representatives.—Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 72. In his reply, Livingston says: "By order of the General-Assembly of this Colony, I am to acknowledge the Receipt of your Letter of the 11th of February last [p.1]; and am directed to assure you that they are much obliged to your House of Representatives for freely communicating their Sentiments on a Subject so Interestino to all the Colonies; and are so far from considering it as a desire of dictating to the other Assemblies, that they highly approve it, and give the most decided attention to American Liberty; and hope the Measures they have taken on this important Occasion, will fully convince them that the General-Assembly of the Colony of New-York harmonizes with those of the other Colonies in their Representations for Reform; They perfectly agree with your House in their opinion of the fatal consequences which must inevitably attend the Operation of the several Acts of Parliament imposing Taxes and Duties in the American Colonies; and have therefore prepared Petitions to his Majesty and the Lord's Spiritual and Temporal and a Representation to the Commons of Great-Britain [see Dec. 12] praying Relief from the said Acts, which they labour under: They entertain with your House the Firmest 1768 Confidence in his Majesty's known Clemency and tender regard for all his Subjects, and the Candour and Justice of the British Parliament, and are not without Hopes that the united Supplications of all the Colonies will prevail on our Most Gracious Sovereign and the Parliament to grant effectual Redress, and put a stop to the future Measures so directly repugnant to the true Interest of the Mother Country and the Colonies... P. S. Robert Charles, Esq: Agent of this Colony at the Court of Great-Britain is instructed to co-operate with the Judges of the Council in their Applications for Redress."—Boston Gaz. Jan. 16, 1769.
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

The legislature passes a law to relieve the hardships caused by the fire prevention act effective Jan. 1, 1768 (see Dec. 23, 1765), which is now suspended until Jan. 1, 1774. The scarcity of fire-proof building materials is the reason for making non-effectual use of this (see Dec. 31, 1761), and for granting exemption of penalties to offenders during the year that the law has been in operation.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 1046. See Oct. 14, 1773.

The legislature also passes "An Act further to encrease the Number of Firemen in the City of New York." It provides that the common council "elect nominate and appoint forty nine more able honest sober discreet Men."—Ibid., VI: 1038-49. The enlarged list of firemen, totaling 119, appears in M. C. VI: 114-46.

1769

During this year the Indian Charity School at Lebanon, Connecticut, is removed to Hanover, New Hampshire, and becomes Dartmouth College.—Winsor, Nat. & Crit. Hist. of Am., VI: 322.

Probably in this year, John McClain, Jr., made drawings of the front and side elevations, and a plan, of the North Dutch Church, the first of which drawings is reproduced in A. Pl. 11-a, Vol. III.

During the heated election campaign of this year, a broadside giving some "Reasons Against any of His Majesty's Council Voting, or using their Influence in the ensuing Election" appeared.

The broadside offered were:

1. The members of the corresponding body of the British parliament, the peers, were not permitted to vote for candidates to the house of commons.

2. The council already had too much power. It was a legislative body, no appointments to civil and military offices could be made and no pardons granted without its consent, its members were both judges and jury in trials for felonies perpetrated on the high seas, and they were the ultimate judges of all cases under £500 which were brought before them.

3. There was no check on these powers because the council was dependent solely on the crown.

4. If members of the council were allowed to vote, there would be no valid reason for excepting the governor, and his participation in the election would be "a dangerous Invasion upon the Rights of the People."—From a photostat in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 145).

A sugar-house is built by Henry Cuyler, Jr. (for his heir, Barnet Ryners Cuyler).—Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 965. It stood on the corner of the present Rose and Duane Sts., a four-story building with cellar and loft. John Austin Stevens states from personal recollection that he saw the date 1769 high upon the brick wall in iron figures.—Progress of N. T. in a Century (1876), 27; The Sun, May 27, 1903. Another authority, who had equal opportunity to observe, placed the date at 1765.—Smith, N. T. in 1789, 57. See May. It has been supposed (Wilson, Mem. Hist. of N. Y.: 301) that the building was used as a prison during the Revolution, but this is denied by Stevens and others, who have presented testimony to disprove it.—The Sun, May 27, 1903; Mag. Am. Hist. (1880), V: 222-23; Ibid., (1881), VI: 63; Thorburn, Reminiscences (1845), 165-66, 170, 176. After the peace of 1783 (The Sun, op. cit.), it was known as the Rhinelander sugar-house, being owned by William Rhinelander, whose dwelling-house was next door, at 21 King George St. (as the upper end of William St. was then called), on the block above Frankfort St.—Smith, op. cit., 57.

The site is now (1912) marked by a tablet and barred window on the Rhinelander building, the window having been taken from the sugar-house when it was demolished in 1892. Another window from the old sugar-house has been set up in Van Cortlandt Park, back of the mansion.—Kelley, Hist. Guide to N. Y. City (1913), 65, 183; Wilson, op. cit., III: 301.

Jan.

At a meeting having been made by an honorable Member of our Assembly, for leave to going in a bill to chase our Representatives for the future by ballot, it was carried in the affirmative by 18 against 5. And as a law of that nature has been long desired by all the judicious friends to liberty in this City, they were induced to publish a number of advertisements to bring the inhabitants together, to obtain their sentiments on the best means to manifest their approbation of that salutary motion, and to make the Representatives of the city acquainted therewith, in order that they should concur in getting the vote passed into a law. In consequence thereof, a number of the citizens, on Thursday, the 11th of January, ascertained, but they were not so considerable as might have been expected. Therefore... it was postponed until the next day. They appointed a Gentleman to propound questions to the people, to know their approbation of the said vote, which was declared by a vast majority. A committee was then appointed to communicate their approbation to the City Members, which was done in writing last Saturday, and delivered to . . . Representatives in General Assembly for New York; wherein they mentioned the above request and appointment, and strongly solicit their utmost endeavours to get the aforesaid bill to pass this House."—Upcott Coll., in N. Y. Hist. Soc., III: 397.

Gov. Moore dissolves the assembly and, in an address of explanation, says: "The extraordinary nature of certain resolves lately entered on your journals [see Dec. 31, 1768]; some flatly repugnant to the laws of Great Britain, and others, with an apparent tendency to give offence where none deserved it, have put it out of my power to continue this assembly any longer. I observe by your journals that you have prepared representations of the state of the colony, to be presented to his majesty; claims that respect the supremacy of Great Britain, are of so important and delicate a nature, that every motive of duty and interest, urge you, at this critical juncture, to avoid offence, and conciliate a favorable appetite to your petitions... I have steadily aimed at, and shall still continue my endeavors to promote the prosperity of the colony; and I cannot help lamenting, that you have suffered an intermittent heat so far to prevail in your house, that my duty forbids me to countenance your present conduct; for after you had once resolved to lay your case before his majesty, it must evidently appear, that the measures you have since pursued, were not only unnecessary, but in the present exigency of affairs, dangerous to the colony... I now, in his majesty's name, dissolve this assembly."—Assem. Jour. (1768-9), 75-76.

At a meeting of the freemen and freeholders of the city, in "order to consult on the Propriety of re-electing the late Members for this City, for their spirited Conduct in assuring and supporting the Rights of their Constituents," John Cruger is nominated in the place of Philip Livingston, who has declined to serve again. The three other former members, De Lancy, Walton, and Jauncey, are also nominated. A motion "that Thanks should be returned the late Members for their spirited Conduct in the late Assembly" is seconded and the "publice thanks" to the "Nathan Hale's".—N. Y. Merc., Jan. 9, 1769. These four candidates were elected on Jan. 27, the voting having started on the 25th (p.9).

Gov. Moore reports to the Earl of Hillsborough "that the remains of that licentious Rabble who during our late disorders called themselves the Sons of Liberty, had formed a design soon after the meeting of the Assembly to disturb the tranquility of the City by carrying the effigies of certain persons thru' the Town in procession, and afterwards burning them publicly."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 145. See Nov. 14, 1768.

The following notice is issued in a broadside: "Whereas a great Handle is made against Messrs. De Lancy and Walton, for not agreeing to the Proposal made to them by sundry Persons, who sign Themselves a Committee of Non Episcopalian Denominations in this City.—Of their appointing two Members for the City and County of New-York; and of the Episcopalians appointing the other Two.

"It is necessary the Public should know, that previous to such Proposal, They found it to be the general Sense of their Constituents, that the Four late Members should be re-elected; and that therefore they could not agree to their being highly improper and ungrateful in Them to consent to any other Junction."—From the reprint in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11376).

There are two political parties in the city, who violently oppose each other;—one consisting of the new members chosen into the late Assembly, and the other supposed to be favoured by the Govt.—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 146.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1769 Philip Livingston, in an address "To the Freeholders and Freemen Of the City and County of New York," says that he had intended to offer himself as a candidate for the assembly, "if there was a Probability of a peaceable Election." Finding that "no Junction was likely to be formed by the two Parties, and apprehending great Heats would arise," he has told the members of both parties that he would not be a candidate (see Jan. 7). He now gives his reasons of his conduct, and the necessity for the suppression of any Inconsistency in my Conduct, that might in those heated Times, be insinuated to my Disadvantage."—From a photostat in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11311).

9 As Philip Livingston has refused to be a candidate for the assembly (see Jan. 7), John Gilpin has addressed him in his place (see Jan. 4). A broadside of this date, addressed "To the Freeholders and Freemen, of the City and County of New-York," publishes Cruger's acceptance of the nomination, and solicits the inhabitants' votes for him, and for James de Lancy, Jacob Walton, and James Jauncey, who have been nominated for the election. Another broadside with the same date and same caption urges the election of these four.—From photostats in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

11 John Morin Scott issues a broadside printed in German and addressed to the High Germans of the city. Some one has accused him of calling the Germans "feur brenden," and, while denying this accusing him of an intention to lose the opportunity for Philip Livingston, Peter van Brugh Livingston, Theodorus van Wyck, and himself, as representatives in the assembly. The broadside is grossly misspelled and ungrammatical.—From one of the Bancker broadsides (lot 101), sold by Henkel's, Phila., March 25, 1809. The Bancker on the 20th has issued the broadside entitled "Nutzliche Nachricht, an die samtliche Hoch-Teutsche in der Stadt New-York, von zwey Wohnmehnen Lands Leuteen," for this was an answer to Scott's address. It set forth, in German, that Scott and his party were hostile to the German and, that, because some cannot be "men of character and honour," they must have "burned and hanged" his party, in open assembly, had characterized the Germans as a stubborn, obstinate people. It urged the writers' countrymen to unite against Scott and his colleagues, and to vote, in the coming election, for De Lancy, Walton, Jauncey, and Cruger, because these cannot be "men of character and honour." A parting shot, the "Zwey Hoch Teutsche" suggested that, as there was neither German nor sense in Scott's address, he must have "burned his laundryman, who could neither read nor spell," to translate something from English into German.—From the photostat (without date) in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11790).

12 A "reasonable Advertisement to the Freeholders and Free- men of the City of New-York, and all the real Friends to Liberty, and Lovers of their Country" is issued as a broadside. It reads: "As Nothing can be more essential to the Safety of the Country than the conducting of Elections free from Corruption on the one Hand, and from any Ill-natured Ideas on the other, resolute Freeholders and Freemen of easy Circumstances, who utterly abhor and detest such scandalous Practices, are credibly informed, that such Artifices are made use of, to destroy the Freedom of the ensuing Election, they do hereby give Notice to all whom any Attempts of that Kind have been, or may be made, that as soon as the Election is over, they will devise a Mode, for laying the Proofs before the Publicke, and bringing the Delinquents to due Punishment, for the double Purpose of exposing those atrocious Invaders of the Rights of the People, and to do Honour to those who shall nobly stand to their Integrity. . . . And all Persons are particularly desired to take Notice, whether any, and who of his Majesty's Council of this Province, are concerned in influencing the ensuing Election."—From the reprint in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11459).

14 The following "card" is issued at "New-York, Tradesman's Hall": "To the Freeholders and Freemen, of this City and County, From Messrs. Axe and Hammer [see Feb. 29, 1768], and a number of the respectable body of Leather Aprons, give their Compliments to their Old Friends who have not yet joined them; and beg they will not forsake them, but will be present, in the least, in seeing this Commercial City. And beg likewise they would remember . . . That it is trade, and not Law, that supports our Families, as many a Man can testify . . . From an original in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

16 The Friends are requested to meet at Burns' coffee-house. —N. Y. Merc. Jan. 16, 1769.

In answer to the "card" of Jan. 14 (p.7), the following is published: "Jack Hatchway and Tom Bowling, return their Service to Messrs. Axe and Hammer, and the respective owners of Leather Aprons, acquitting them, that they keep a good lookout, and hope (with the assistance of their Old Friends, the Men of Straw) to run clear of the Shoals and Mudbanks . . . As also avoid the Reed of Combination, on which feeds a very furious animal, known by the Name of Custom. Candidly and Lawyer-like, that watches to overset them; but being experienced Seamen, hope to divert him by throwing over a few empty Water-Casals, 'till they Weather every Difficulty, and get safe into Port." The "Card" emanates from the "Ship Liberty."—From an original broadside in the N. Y. ornulate edition.

The assembly elections "are now carrying on with great warmth."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 147.

In recommending Robert R. Livingston, who is one of the judges of the supreme court, to a place in the council, Gov. Moore states that on the death of Livingston's father-in-law he "must very shortly be the greatest Landholder, without exception, in this province," as he will also soon inherit from his father "a very great landed Estate."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 148. He was the father of Robert R. Livingston, who became chancellor of New-York.—Ibid., VIII: 192 (footnote); Delafeld, Chancellor Robert R. Liv- ington of N. Y. and his Family, (footnote); but Tho., Moore, John Jan. 30 and Feb. 6, 1769. See David Grim's mention of the vote, filed with package (1759-1767) in box "New-York, 1700-1760," at N. Y. Hist. Soc.; see also Alden. A broadside headed "Liberty" contains the following sworn affidavit: "Andrew Marshall declares, That on the Morning of this Instant, Isaac Sears, came to his Father's House, and in his Hearing told his Father, that if he voted against Mr. Scott, that the Board of Commerce would give him the Inspection of all the Flour they ship'd; and that if the ensuing Assembly did not appoint him sole Inspector, they the Board of Commerce would; but if he voted for Mr. Scott, they would not employ him at all, or Words to that Effect." The broadside continues: "From the Facts set forth in the above Affidavit, every impartial Man must be convinced of the scandalous Practices made Use of by the Board of Commerce as a Nuisance to the Trade of the Country, to the Freedom of Elections and tending to debase the Electors to the most abject State of Slavery and Dependence. And such a Conduct in Capt. Sears is utterly inconsistent with his high Profession as a Friend to Liberty, and the constitutional Rights of his Countrymen, and must necessarily confirm our Suspicion, that his great Zeal in the present Elections, is rather to be ascribed to his Party-spirit, than to a real Affectation to his Country."—From photostat (original in the Library Co. of Phila.) in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 1132). Sears answered on Jan. 24 (p.6). Isaac Sears issues as answer to Andrew Marshall's accusation (see Jan. 23). He denies having promised anything in the name of the board of commerce, and gives this explanation of his visit to Maeschalck's house: "I do confess, that I did go to the House of Mr. Marshall, as a Friend, by way of giving him a Caution, how he was voted at the ensuing Election; that most of the Men of the Chamber of Commerce, were in the opposite Interest to Mr. Scott, and therefore if he voted for him, I was afraid they would give their Business to some other Person . . . I do assure the Publick, that my Indecision for waiting on Mr. Marshall, was not to influence his Vote in any unfair Manner, but to be consistent in the least inconsistent with his high Interest of Choice, but only to represent to him the Inconvenience which might possibly attend his voting against the mercantile Interest.—And from the many Acts of Friendship, I had constantly shewn to his Family, I imagined, I might take that Liberty with him, without giving him a high Air, or Offence, as it seems it has done." Sears sees nothing in his conduct which is inconsistent with his "Profession, as a Friend to Liberty. and the constitutional Rights of my Countrymen." He adds: "The Rejection of Mr. Scott in the present Competition, I conceive to be evidently expedient, on many weighty Considerations; and I believe in such a Case, no Man can reasonably regret the Measure, for reminding my Friend, both his Public Interests, and the public Good, let him to the same Choice... Upon the whole, the Public are left to judge, whether the Party that condescended to tempt a Man to betray the Confidence of his Friend, and represent an innocent friendly Action, as a blamable one, is, in the most deserving of public Censure."—From a photostat (made from an original in the Library Company of Philadelphia) in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11458).

Feb. 1769. John de Peyster, Jr., barrack master, is ordered by the provincicial council "to deliver his accounts."—Cal. Coun. Min., 478. His successor was Gerard Bancker, warrants for whose accounts for "necessary to the troops," repairing the barracks, etc., were issued by the council from time to time.—Ibid., 479, et seq. Evert Bancker became an associate with him in this work, in 1774, and they are then spoken of as "provincial barrack masters."—Ibid., 509, 513; Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 850.

On order of Feb. 22 from the provincial council, the barrack-master, John de Peyster, Jr., makes a accounting.—Cal. Coun.
Min., 479.

A meeting of the subscribers to the resolutions (see Aug. 27, 1768) respecting the non-importation of goods from abroad is held at the house of Bolton and Sigel and a committee is appointed to inquire into and inspect all European importations.—N. Y. Merc., Mar. 20, 1769. See June 19, 1769, and June 11, 1770.

John Livingston (see below) was engaged in a campaign to celebrate the Anniversary of the Repeal of the Stamp Act, on Saturday the 18th Inst. at the house of Edward Smith, In-keeper, in the Fields [later Hamden Hall]; are requested to give in their Names to Mr. Hugh Gaine, or the said Smith, [by this Evening] in order that suitable Provision may be made for their Accommodation.
N. B. Dinner to be served precisely at two o'Clock, and the Bill called at six."—N. Y. Jour., March 16, 1769. Commenting on this dinner in the next issue of the newspaper, the editor said that a "considerable number of the Genuine Sons of Liberty" met at Smith's, "where an elegant Entertainment was prepared for them; after the Company had dined, the remains of the Dinner, and a quantity of Strong Beer was sent to the New-Goal, and properly distributed among the Prisoners."—Ibid., March 23, 1769.

A similar meeting was held at Henry van de Water's on Nassau St., opposite the Brick Presbyterian Church, and on March 1, 1770, about a year later, a friend of Mr. Livingstone, who had been for the other two bells was made on June 8 (q.v.).—Ibid., VII: 15
Two men are "carted round the Town, on a Wooden Horse, besides being whipped at the Post 39 Lashes, a punishment for Stealing.... They had each of them Labels pinned on their Breasts, and were surrounded with a Crowd of spectators; and it is hoped this Method of exposing such Criminals, will have a better Effect, than merely Whipping at the Post."—N. Y. Jour., Feb.
25, 1769.

The "Arms" of John Harpending in the "Old Church" shall "be copied in an appropriate manner, and the copying hung in the North Church above the pulpit."—Dr. Corwin states in a footnote that "This Coat-of-Arms continued to hang over the Pulpit, in this church, until its demolition in 1875, and is well remembered by the writer."—Ibid. The Rev. Thomas de Witt reproduced the "Arms" in his Discourse (1857), opp. p. 34.

The proprietors of the "Pawless Hook Ferry" (see March 23, 1767) having been at an expense of over £200 in making a pier and ferry stairs and a new "Eli," and at an expense of £330 in providing boats, find they have been at a loss of over £150 in seven years, even from the purchasers their initial expenses, as well as rent to the city, and the wages and board of boatmen. They complain of the "extraordinary high rents," and petition the common council for relief.—From the original petition (MS.) in File No. 4, city clerk's record-room; M. C. C., VII, 155. On May 11, an abatement of £70 was ordered "in the heat of the last two years."—M. C. C., VII, 165. [Heath.]—VII: 165.

23. Jacob van Voorhis, George Stanton, and Peter Mesier, Jr., petition the common council for a water lot extending 200 feet into North River and from Deys Dock "northward to the corner of Barbe's Lane, and from which they desire to have their said original petition (MS.) in city clerk's record-room, endorsed "Read & filed the 23rd of March, 1769." The corporation of Trinity Church having petitioned for the same lot, a hearing of both applicants is appointed for the next meeting of the council.—M. C. C., VII, 155. On Aug. 10, it was decided that a plan of the ground would be exhibited and a committee of the board appointed to treat with the petitioners.—Ibid., VII: 175. The report of this committee, with terms, on Sept. 6, shows that the space in question consisted of "Sundry water Lots in the North River from McAdams's Dock to the corner of Barlys Street," and included 100 feet on each side. [Ibid., VII: 187.]

Hillsborough writes to Gov. Moore: "It is unnecessary to inform you that the King saw with great concern, the violent and unwarrantable resolutions entered upon the Journal of the Assembly on the 21st December last [q.e.d.]. When I compare the sentiments of duty and respect for this description out of the original petition (MS.) in city clerk's record-room, enclosed "Read & filed the 23d of March, 1769." The corporation of Trinity Church having petitioned for the same lot, a hearing of both applicants is appointed for the next meeting of the council.—M. C. C., VII, 155. On Aug. 10, it was decided that a plan of the ground would be exhibited and a committee of the board appointed to treat with the petitioners.—Ibid., VII: 175. The report of this committee, with terms, on Sept. 6, shows that the space in question consisted of "Sundry water Lots in the North River from McAdams's Dock to the corner of Barlys Street," and included 100 feet on each side. [Ibid., VII: 187.]

44. Samuel Francis leases that part of the "Church Farm" bounded by Greenwich Road, Chambers, Chapel, and Warren Sts.—Bogardus vii. 196. [L.C. Ivi. 159.]

Abraham Mortier, deputy paymaster of his majesty's troops, leaves to his wife Martha "the parcel of land situate in the Out Ward" on which he had erected the mansion later known as "Richmond Hill" (see May 1, July 1, 1767).—Abstracts of Wills, VIII: 281.

The consistory of the Dutch Church resolves to send a call to Rev. John H. Livingston, now at Utrecht. This was drafted and approved the following day. It began: "The approaching completion of one of the third Church called the North [Church] obliges the Consistory to look around for a suitable minister to perform service there, along with the one [Rev. Mr. Liddell] now established in the Second Ward called the New Church, to English," His salary is to be £500 a year.—Eccles. Rec., VI: 4145. His acceptance is dated Aug. 8, and the consistory, on Nov. 7, wrote him "to come over as early as possible in the ensuing Spring."—Ibid., VI: 4171. He was ordained by the synod of North Holland to the ministry for the city of New York by the Rev. Henry Rey, the Rev. Public Spirit, and the consistory, of which the first English minister, Rev. Archibald Liddell, was then president.—Ibid., VI: 4191.

April 6. Col. Morris makes the following motion in the assembly: "As the utmost bounds of religious liberty is essential to the public peace and tranquility of this colony; and a taxation of protestants of all denominations indiscriminately, for the support of the ministers of any sect in particular, is most palpably partial and unjust; and great discontents have long been occasioned by the ministry acts in the counties of Westchester, New-York, Queens and Richmond, in consequence whereof, the Episcopalian ministers are maintained by taxes upon other persuasions, not even excepting their clergy: I therefore move for leave to bring in a bill, to exempt protestants of all denominations in the said counties from the payment of such taxes raised for the support of ministers of a religious persuasion to which they do not belong." Such permission is granted.—Assembly Jour. (1769), 10. The bill was passed by the assembly on May 10.—Ibid. (1769), 18, 21, 61. In the council, after two readings, it was rejected on May 19, William Smith, Jr., being the only one in favour of it.—Jour. Leg. Coun. II: 1702, 1704, 1706. Another attempt to enact such a law was made during the session (see Nov. 30).

A sale at public venue is advertised for this day, at "the king's Arbour Tavern in the Field," of "Household and Kitchen Furniture with an excellent good Clock, and double Sleighe, . . . and a great many other Articles too tedious to mention."—N. Y. Merc., April 3, 1769. By April 20 (q.e.d.), Abraham de la Montagne had taken over the house, which became famous as "Montagne's Tavern."—See April 5, 1764.

The assembly votes that the petitions to king, lords, and commons (see Dec. 12, 1768), "transmitted by the late house of Assembly to the agent of this colony at the court of Great Britain, be forthwith entered on the journals of this house, and that the clerk of this house be ordered to deliver copies thereof on the occasion of the petition of this colony, that they may be by him inserted in the public newspapers." It is deemed "highly necessary that the inhabitants of this colony should be acquainted with all the transactions of their representatives in general assembly."—Assembly Jour. (1768-9), 41.

The common council orders the payment of £8411 for "a Cast iron Stove" for the "hott house."—M. C. C., VII: 159. This "hott house" is mentioned again (see Aug. 10, 1770) in connection with the new jail and almshouse, additions to which had been ordered on July 2, 1766 (q.e.d.), and Aug. 15, 1768 (q.e.d.). This building was already provided with at least one iron stove (see Feb. 17, 1767).

The petition presented by the Trinity Corporation, on Feb. 26, 1769 (q.e.d.), to the common council is again submitted to that body. As a result, a committee is appointed to confer with and receive proposals from Trinity.—M. C. C., VII: 159. There is, apparently, no report of this committee. On June 16, 1772 (q.e.d.), the petition was finally acted upon.

A motion is made and carried in the assembly the "thanked of that house be given to the Merchants of that dry and colony [New York] for their repeated disinterested and patriotic conduct in declining the importation or receiving of goods from Great Britain until such arts of Parliament as the Assembly had declared unconstitutional and subversive of the rights and liberties of the people of this Colony, should be repealed." It is also resolved "that no Judge of the supreme Court and all the future Judges have a Seat Dec. 10, 1769."—N. Y. Jour. (1769), 192-95. This occasioned deep concern on the part of the king (ibid., VIII: 176-77), and on Dec. 21, the lords of trade urged him to take action regarding such "unwarrantable" proceedings (ibid., VIII: 194-95). Judge Robert R. Livingston (on Dec. 4) wrote that he opposed the refusal to allow him to sit in the assembly.—Ibid., VIII: 192.

In an address to Gov. Moore, the assembly says: "The sums that have been already granted for the support of his Majesty's troops in barracks, are, very considerable: the repeated application of monies to that purpose, would effectually ruin a colony, whose trade by unnatural restrictions, and the want of a paper currency to supply the almost total deficiency of specie, is so much declined, and still declining, that its distresses, in a very short time, will become so great, that it will be almost equally difficult to conceive, as to describe them."—Assembly Jour. (1769), 55. It was Bayeux May 18.

A bill is introduced into the assembly "to reimburse the persons who have at their expense, erected a public free bridge across Haerlem river, and to charge the future expense of maintaining [it] the same equally upon the inhabitants of the city and county of New-York and county of Westchester."—Assembly Jour. (1769), 98. It was rejected on May 25, 1769. There was no further reference to this in this session.—Ibid. (1769), 35. A similar bill, on Jan. 26, 1770, was ordered " postponed till next session."—Ibid. (1769-70), 100. No such law was enacted prior to the Revolution (see March 21, 1766).

Abraham de la Montagne, "Having taken and open'd 20
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1769—tavern, at the house lately let by Mr. Edward Bardin, in the fields, Apr. in this city, hopes the gentlemen who used to favour him [Bardin] 20 with their Company, will continue the same favour to his present successor the subscriber, who will be at his utmost endeavours to entertain you, and do all who will favour him with their complaisance, the most agreeable manner in his power. N. B. He intends as soon as it can be procured, to keep the same sign (the King's Arms) which was kept by Mr. Bardin.—N. T. Jour, Apr. 20, 1769. See April 5, 1754.

A committee appointed to regulate Roosevelts Street.—M. C. C., VII: 160; see also Nov. 9, 1764. Roosevelt St. was extended from Cherry St. to the East River in 1792 (Law of New York, 1792, Chap. 49:5: and on March 18, 1795, was continued through the ground lately purchased of Daniel Latham.—M. C. C. (May 25, 1795). On petition of Nicholas Bayard (see Dec. 10, 1767), his lease of the slaughter-house which he built on his own land in 1750-1 (M. C. C., V: 307; 343) is renewed for 18 years, to commence March 25, 1771 (ibid.; VII: 161). At one time, complaint was made by 25 butchers, in a petition to the common council, that he had failed to comply with the requirements of his lease, by not supplying the tackle used in slaughtering cattle, or keeping the slaughter-house clean. See the original, undated petition in city clerk's record-room.

The council orders payment of £677:3 for fixing Irons in the Exchange & fly market, mending the drain and market in Montgomerie ward &c.—M. C. C., VII: 161.

The common council order that the Neighbourhood between the Cuffy House and the fly market have Liberty to Sink a well on the West, in opposition to the house in which James Depeyster now resides in the East ward.—M. C. C., VII: 161.

Because some goods have been sent from London without Orders, and repugnant to the Agreement entered into by the inhabitants of this City, a number of merchants meet and agree "That such Orders should be strictly insisted on, without opening any of the Packages."—N. T. Merc, May 15, 1769.

In some "notes and observations," Du Simitiere (see 1766) says: "The oldest date I have been able to discover mark'd by large Irons in the front of the houses in this City, is 1678 it is upon a house Standing on the East side of the broad way & betwixt Stone & marketfield St., from that date one can almost find some of Every year to 1701 or 2 in some Part or other of the City, there is certainly Still remaining much older buildings than the above date, but without any & therefore not easily discover'd it seems the fashion dropt after the two or three first year[s] of this [eighteenth] century. For I have seen one of a mode & order a Sugar house built upon Cowfoot Hill (Pearl Street) in my time in 1756 where the date is in the Same manner." Not without interest, also, is his description of the Kings Farm and the house of Thomas Coker, both of which are mentioned in the Doongan Charter of 1689 (M. C. C., I: 90.),—Du Simitiere Papers (M.S.) 96. For the description of the Visscher series, referred to in Vol. I, p. 145, see 1651.

May 1

The custom-house is moved "from Wall-Street, to the House at White-Hall, fronting the Great-Dock, lately occupied by Mr. Samuel Farmer."—N. T. Jour, May 4, 1769.

"The Duty on European Goods imported into this Province last Fall, we are told, amounted to some Hundreds Sterling, but we are credibly informed it does not exceed 40s. this Spring."—N. T. Merc, May 8, 1764.

Some "boulters and merchants" of New York City inform the assembly "that the wheat brought to this market for sale, is generally mixed with a good deal of foul trash, which tends, in a great measure, to injure the reputation of the flour of this colony at the places it is usually export'd." They ask that provision be made "for the screening of all wheat brought to the city of New York for sale, at a proper penalty upon the measurer."—Assem. Jour. (1769-70), 52.

The common council orders payment to Henry Sickels of $52:21 toward repaying the Exchange.—M. C. C., VII: 162.

An act to confirm estates claimed by or under aliens; after having been amended by the council is passed by the assembly.—Assem. Jour. (1769-70), 63; Jour. Leg. Coun., 1701. However, May there is no record of its approval by the governor. See Sept. 5, 1771.

The following is published by order of the committee of mechanics: "Whereas in August last [see Aug. 25, 1768] an Agreement was made not to import any Goods from Great Britain . . . that should be ship'd after the first of November, until an Act of Parliament laying Duties on Paper, Glass, &c. . . . should be repealed. Vessels have lately arrived and brought some small Parcels of Goods, most of which on Examination, appear to have been sent contrary to orders . . . it is now hoped that all Persons whatever, the Ladies in particular, whose Conduct may have great Influence, will rouse and show their public Spirit and Virtue, in maintaining the Agreement entered into for the public Good by laying any Conviction with such selfish People; and that they will not buy from them, or any others who may purchase from him or them any Goods that they have now imported, or have on Hand, but deem them obvious and hold them in the Contempt they deserve, let their Station in Life be what it will."—N. T. Merc, May 25, 1769.

The treasury office "is removed from Smith-street, to Dock-street, in the house where Charles M'Evers, Esq lately lived."—N. T. Merc, May 15, 1769.

The Virginia house of burgesses resolves that an "humble, dutiful and loyal Address" be presented to the king. The following address appears "in their Journal of the Day after:"

"We your Majesty's most loyal, dutiful, and affectionate Subjects, the House of Burgesses of this your Majesty's ancient Colony of Virginia, . . . beg Leave, in the humblest Manner, to assure your Majesty that your faithful Subjects are so far from countenancing Treasons, Treasons, or Miniprints of Treason, are ready at any Time to sacrifice our Lives and Fortunes in Defence of your Majesty's sacred Person and Government. . . . It is with the deepest Concern and most heartfelt Grief that your Majesty's dutiful Subjects of this Colony find that their Loyalty hath been so unluckily abused and this the Measures which a just Regard for the British Constitution . . . made necessary Duties, have been misrepresented as rebellious Attacks upon your Majesty's Government. . . . When we consider that by the established Laws and Constitution of this Colony the most ample Provision is made for apprehending and punishing all those who shall dare to engage in any reasonable Practices against your Majesty, or disturb the Tranquility of Government, we cannot without Horror think of the new, unusual, and permit us, with all Humility, to add unconstitutional and illegal Misdemeanors against our Sovereign and the Measures which a just Regard for the British Constitution . . . made necessary Duties, have been misrepresented as rebellious Attacks upon your Majesty's Government. . . .

On this day, at the annual commencement of King's College, held in Trinity Church, the first medical degrees are bestowed on two candidates. Dr. Samuel Bard (see March 9, 1770), the professor of medicine, takes this opportunity to urge, "with great Pains and Strength of Argument the Necessity of establishing a Hospital in this City, for the Reception of the poor Sick."—N. T. Jour, May 25, 1769. This appeal meets with immediate response, Sir Henry Moore then and there heading a subscription-list for the proposed hospital. See Pres. Sheldon's Address at the 150th anniversary of the Soc. of the N. Y. Hospital, in Trinity Ch., Oct. 26, 1921.

Gov. Moore, in a message to the assembly, says: "A subscription having been very lately set on foot for building an hospital in this city, it has already been attended with so much success from the general approbation of so humane and benevolent a design [see May 16], as to afford the fairest prospect of carrying it into execution: As the contributions of individuals alone, will be inadequate to the plan proposed of rendering it beneficial to the whole province, I beg leave to recommend this useful undertaking to the consideration of the house of assembly, and hope that the advantage to be derived from it... may appear in such a light as to be thought a proper object of the attention and encouragement of the legislature."—
1769-1776

1770

Joseph Andrews, a seaman, is found guilty of murder and sentenced to death.—N. Y., Merc., May 22, 1769. On May 23, he was executed, "After which his Body was hung in Chains on the most conspicuous Part of Bedlow's Island, in our Bay."—ibid., May 29, 1769.

The assembly after considering the government's message of May 17 (p. v) resolves "That as this present session is near at an end, and the house not having sufficient time maturely to consider the same; that the further consideration of the said message be postponed until the next meeting of this house, after the first of August."—Assemb. Jour. (1769), 79. For definite action by the legislature, see March 24, 1772.

The legislature passes an "Act for making a further provision of eighteen hundred pounds for furnishing his Majesty's Troops quartered in this Colony with Necessaries."—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 1078.

On this day it also passes another act "for preventing suits being brought in the Supreme Court of this Colony for any Sums not exceeding Fifty Pounds." At the prosecution of suits in the Supreme Court is necessarily attended with "Great Charge and Trouble," those persons who have "occasion to Sue for Debts and Wrongs" are to take their cases to the courts of record where they "may with small Expenses receive Justice according to the Merits of their Causes." The law was to remain in full force until Jan. 1, 1773.—ibid., IV: 1688. The bill, as first proposed, read "One hundred Pounds."—ibid., IV: 1078.

Pierre Eugene du Simitier (see 1767) is naturalized by act of the legislature.—Col. Laws N. Y., IV: 1118-19. He took the prescribed oaths on Aug. 4 (p. v).

The North [Dutch] Church was opened for Divine Service on this day the 25 May 1769 by the Rev. Mr Archbald Laidlie with a Suitable Discourse to a very Croud Audience, His Excellency Sir Henry Moore being present.—Journ. of the proceedings of the Ref. Prot. Dutch Church. See also N. Y. Merc., May 24, 1769, and the entry made by Deacon Ahel in Selyns' diary (1866), published in Collections of the Holland Society of N. Y. (1916), V: 58. After extensive improvements in 1820 (p. v), and 1842 (p. v), this church was taken down in June, 1875 (p. v).

In a letter to Hillsborough, Gov. Moore says: "The dissolution of the late Assembly [see Jan. 2] had occasioned great contests in the subsequent Elections [see Jan. 20], and on the meeting of the house of Assembly, it was but two apparent, how much influence private pique had on their proceedings. Their Journals give the strongest testimony of what I here advance, and the session was protracted to an unusual length for the season of the year, by disputes which could only affect individuals."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 96.

Smith says that, before the assembly met on April 4, "Sir Henry Moore saw himself in the Zenith of Power—Four of his principle Enemies were trembling at the Expectation of Chastisement from Home for voting in Council ag[t] the Dissolution of the last House—and the Contests at the Elections & about Bishops &c had broke the Sea's of Liberty to peices & so divided the People that both Parties stood ready to court his Favor—We never had a Governor in a safer Condition & it was the more fortunate to him as the Times were so critical between us and the Mother Country.—He seemed nevertheless to be insensible of the advantageous Ground he had under him."—Wm. Smith's Diary (M.S.) IV.

Du Simitier (see 1767), advertising to the Montgomery Charter of 1731 (see Feb. 11, 1731), and to the city's division into seven wards, comments on changes that have taken place since that time. For the most part these are printed in connection with the description of Pl. 27 (Vol. I, pp. 257-258). Among his papers is a manuscript copy of the Bradford Map, by which he apparently intended to make his comments intelligible to the reader. In referring to the markets allowed by the charter, he says that the one at Conies' dock "is now call'd Conies market & in the plan of 1757 [see 1757] [in the Manchester] is mention'd. He says that "Burgars path... goes yet by the same name." Concerning the market "at the Lower end of Wall Street," he says: "this was call'd the meal market but is no more. the coffee house bridge is in the same place." Concerning the "Long Bridge," he says: "this is no more, the Exchange is built in the same place."—Du Simitier Papers.

June 1

"This is to give Notice, that Jacob Kempier, has removed to the House of the late Mr. William Burnham, about A Mile out of the City along the New-Road; where he proposes to entertain Gentleman and Ladies with Breakfast, and Tea in the Afternoons,..."—N. Y. Jour., June 1, 1769. Burnham failed in this enterprise, and on Oct. 4, 1770, his household furniture and other effects were sold at public venue to settle his debts.—N. Y. Merc., Oct. 4, 1770.

Moore writes to Hillsborough that the Sons of Liberty have had "very great influence on the Elections of Members [of assembly] for this City."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 170.

There is a general review of the "Soldiers in Town." The men go through their exercises "with a great Variety of Movements and Evolutions" and in a manner which is a credit both to themselves and to their officers. Gen. Gage gives a dinner to the prominent citizens and, at night, entertains them with fireworks.—N. Y. Merc., June 12, 1769.

Bells for the city hall and the "New Gaol," ordered by the common council on Feb. 15 (p. v), are paid for. The combined weight of the two bells was 514 lbs. A "Small old Bell" was accepted in partial payment, making the net cost to the city £597.—From original voucher in comptroller's office (box No. 1). See also M. C. G., VII: 172.

A committee is appointed to regulate Crown St. and to make a report thereupon as soon as possible.—M. C. G., VII: 165. The report was submitted on July 12 (p. v).

Samuel "Frances" advertises Vauxhall Gardens as "newly fitted up," he adds that they "would have been opened earlier in the Spring instead, but on account of the Theatre."—N. Y. Chron., June 5, 1769.

The flat copper roof of the city hall is ordered to "be Solder'd." A bill for the work (£503½d) was ordered paid on July 12.—M. C. G., VII: 169, 172.

Place the common council authorizes the payment of £436 6/ to Cororor Skrwe "for the Expenre of his Burying Stephen Porter a pirate who hanged himself in Gaol."—M. C. G., VII: 169. The original voucher, preserved in the comptroller's office (box No. 1), says that the man "was buried at the upper end of the Bowery Lane at the Cross Road, with a stake through his body and a sign thereon, agreeable to the judge's order." The committee appointed (see March 15) to inspect and inquire into the importation of goods informs the public that Alexander Robertson has, contrary to the spirit of the agreement, "ordered sundry goods from Philadelphia and has attempted to introduce them into this City." He was prevented by the patriotic conduct of a "Gentleman in the Jerseys," who, on examining the packages, and finding they contained goods prohibited by the agreement, "gave Intelligence accordingly."—N. Y. Merc., June 19, 1769. Robertson alleged, in vindication of his conduct, that "as the Philadelphians had acceded to the said Agreement he thought himself at Liberty to purchase Goods from them." On realising the displeasure of the public, he pretended to send the goods back, but the wagoner testified to having taken back only empty casks, Robertson having emptied them and left the goods in the cellar of the ferry-house to be privately introduced into the city.—N. Y. Jour., June 22, 1769. He was later made to confess and apologize for his actions.—N. Y. Jour., June 29, 1769.

An advertisement reads: "The Stage Waggon which last year ran from Mr Vandenbergh's in the Fields, to the said Glasshouse [see Feb. 8, 1769], will now continue so doing from Mr Holland's the Corner of Chapped-Street, near the new Meeting on the usual low Terms of 1/6 up and down for each person."—N. Y. Merc., June 19, 1769.

Among the passengers reported as sailing for London on the 23 "Duchess of Gordon" are "the Lady of his Excellency Sir Henry Moore," and "Master Billy Gage, Son of his Excellency the General."—N. Y. Jour., June 22, 1769. Lady Moore was accompanied by an adopted daughter, and was impelled to return to England because her son was living there, if we may credit the contents of 25 verses entitled "Catherine, and the Little Maiden, or the Sixth Chapter of the First Book of Lowest"—Debt. He leaves reports in N. Y. Jour., Oct. 8, 1772, and were written by an anonymous fellow passenger on the "Duchess of Gordon," who, in a letter to Editor Holt (ibid., Sept. 16, 1772), signed himself "A. B." Verses descriptive of other passengers on the ship appeared in five earlier "Copeters" in previous issues of the Journal, and were subsequently republished in a small pamphlet (ibid., Dec. 10, 1772), no copy of
THE ICONOGRAPHY OF MANHATTAN ISLAND

1769
June 20

For stealing a barrel of tar and a cask of "yellow oaker," Thomas Fleming is "exalted on an empty Tar Barrel in a Cart, his Hat painted yellow, with Lahcen each Square of it, and on his Breast and Back, expressing his Crime." In this manner he is carried about the city, and afterwards receives "the Misanthropic Law; to wit, forty, lack one Lashes, well laid on, at the public Whipping Post."—N. T. Merc., July 3, 1769.

27

July
12

A broadside appears, emanating from the "United Sons of Liberty," and embodying a series of resolutions to which they propose "strictly to adhere." There is good reason to believe that this is an expression of the original Sons of Liberty. Six copies are known; one in the Library Co. of Phila.; the other in the author's collection, from which the reproduction on p. 39 was made. See Addenda.

A Londoner writes to his friend in New York: "You will hear many reports and promises of a Session taking place soon. But don't give too much Credit to Men, who would if they dare enslave both you and the People of England... I should tremble to hear that you entertain'd a most distant thought of relaxing in your Firmness and Oeconomy in consequence of any less being done, than a total Repeal of the Revenue Acts, an Extirpation of all the Revenue Officers; and in short, a Redress of every Grievance, and a Security against any future Invasion... May you not have the Liberty you ask, unless you seize this favourable Moment, and secure it. Your Conduct as yet has been noble and spirited: Depend upon it, you have thereby wrought out your own Salvation—the Union of all America, which has at last taken Place, has extinguished every Spark of Hope which your Enemies had entertained, of reducing you to immediate Revenue Taxation. But unless you take prudent Measures, your Trade will in future be saddled most grievously."—N. T. Merc., Aug. 7, 1769.

13

The provincial council takes cognizance of a demand for payment for quarters for officers for whom there is no room in the barracks.—Col. Coun. Min., 479.

15

The committee appointed to look into the importations of goods into this city (see March 13) contrary to the agreement subscribed by the merchants, traders, and others, is "under the Necessity of advertising to the Public, that Thomas Charles Willett, Milliner, in Wall Street," confesses to having brought goods from Philadelphia for sale in this city, in Excuse of the Excuses made to the impartial Public, and the patriotic Ladies of this city, who will undoubtedly treat him accordingly.—N. T. Jour., July 13, 1769.

18

A conference of commissioners begins in New York City to settle the boundary between New York and New Jersey. For an account of the proceedings, and a description of the line decided upon, see The Penn. Chronicle and Universal Advertiser, of Oct. 9-16, 1769, where it appears that the decree of the commissioners was pronounced on the 7th of July, the 6th of Aug., and by Judge V.J. Smith, the 28th of Aug., in his diary: "I, in 1760, divided the Line between the provinces of New York and New Jersey by astronomical observations, so long a bone of contention, and in Chancery so many years."—Montresor's Jour., 113. See also Col. Hist. MSS., Eng., 778; Penn. Chron., Dec. 12, 1768, "Declares the Line, as determined by them..."

An interpolation on a large map published by Wm. Faden, Charter Cross, Dec. 1, 1777, and contained in the Faden Atlas of North America, states that it was drawn from a survey of New Jersey made in 1769 by Lieut. Bernard Ratzer, of the 6th Regt., "and from another large Survey of the Northern Parts of Pennsylvania by the Earl of Dunmore by Gerard Barker."—Description of Pl. 41, 11. The boundary line was confirmed by a provincial act on Feb. 16, 1771.—Cal. Hist. MSS., Eng., 792. On Nov. 26, 1771, James Clinton and Anthony Denis made reports on their survey of the line, ibid., 799. On Dec. 1, 1773, proclamation was made of the royal approval of the act for establishing the boundary or partition line between New York and "Nova Caesarea," or New Jersey, and for confining titles and possession.—Ibid., 812.

The common council orders that "A Small Shred be Erected adjoining the poor House to be appropriated as a wash House."—M. C. C., VII: 173. On September 29, payment of £40 was made toward this object.—Ibid., VIII: 185. Subsequent payments (ibid., VII: 195, 196, 197, 198) brought the cost of the "Small Shred" to over £235.

An advertisement, "Of greater Importance to the Public, than which any has yet appeared on the like Occasions," states: "It was hoped that the odious Manner in which some late Violators of the Non-importation agreement had been held up to the Public; would have prevented all others from following such detestable Examples.—But, it seems Advertisements alone will not do... The Favour or Hatred of the Public begins to be a Matter of the most perfect Indifference... A certain Simon Cooley, Haberdasher, Jeweller and Silversmith, a few Years since from London... and who in that short Space of Time has benefited so much by the Favour of his Customers, as to enable him to purchase and live in a House of his own in this City, hard by the Merchants Coffee House; betrayed some Marks of Delicacy, and a Disposition to cooperate with his Fellow Citizens, in the Measures thought necessary to be pursued for the Recovery and Preservation of their common inestimable Rights and Liberties.—As the said Simon Cooley, having been found amongst the first who had imported Goods, contrary to the Agreement aforesaid, pretended they had been sent for and expected to have arrived here long before the Agreement took Place.—This, and his conspiring with seeming Cherefulness to put the Goods in Store, which was actually done, saved his Credit at that Time; and so unsuspicous were the Committee of Office, who knavish Jests made to represent him as...—Upon these Circumstances,..." (June 8) reports that the street has been levelled by the city surveyor. The common council approves the report and orders "that the said Committee take Care that the said Report be forthwith complied with."—M. C. C., VII: 177-72.

Inhabitants living near the "Old Slip" complain, in a petition to the common council, "That the Street or Cartway, on each side the Old Slip, is "narrow, inconvenient, & dangerous." They ask liberty to erect a bridge over the slip at their own expense, sufficient for Carriages to pass & repass theron at the same time, with an Arch sufficient in Breadth & Height for Carriages to pass & repass under the said Bridge."—From original petition (MS.), in box 4, city clerk's record-room. Granted.—M. C. C., VII: 171.

The provincial council takes cognizance of a demand for payment for quarters for officers for whom there is no room in the barracks.—Col. Coun. Min., 479.

The committee appointed to look into the importations of goods into this city (see March 13) contrary to the agreement subscribed by the merchants, traders, and others, is "under the Necessity of advertising to the Public, that Thomas Charles Willett, Milliner, in Wall Street," confesses to having brought goods from Philadelphia for sale in this city, in Excuse of the Excuses made to the impartial Public, and the patriotic Ladies of this city, who will undoubtedly treat him accordingly.—N. T. Jour., July 13, 1769.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD 1763-1776

July 1769
The criminal of his Crime, a public Confession of it, a fervent Supplication of Forgiveness, and a Promise never to be guilty of the like offence,—so it is highly necessary that the Punishment of the said Simeon Cooley should be equal to the Crime, Occasions, and by all legal Means as an Enemy to his Country, a Pest to Society, and a vile Disturber of the Peace, Police, and good Order of this City.—N. T. Jour., July 20, 1769. See July 27.

27 'The Conduct of Simeon Cooley, as set forth in the Papers of last Week (see July 20), in contradiction to the General Agreement for the Non-importation of British Goods, is contrary both to the public Interest and Disfame of the Subscribers, and supporters of the said Agreement, having drawn upon him the public Resentment, the Inhabitants of this City sensible of the exceeding great Importance of a strict adherence to the said Agreement, determined—at a general Meeting held last Friday [July 21] for that Purpose to make Mr. Cooley sensible that the public Displeasure of his Countrymen, upon so interesting an Occasion, was not a Matter of so trifling a Nature as he seemed to imagine; and that he must not expect the People with whom he lived in Society, would permit him with Impunity, to transgress and violate the Rules and Agreement they had entered into for their Welfare and Security in their highest and most weighty Interests. Two Gentlemen were appointed to inform Mr. Cooley, of the Sentiments of the Inhabitants assembled, to require his immediate Attendance, and assurance should he be unwilling to be present (Public Secured with some Difficulty). He at first refused to attend, saying he did not think he could do it with Safety to his Person; but expressed his willingness to make the Concessions required, from his own parlor Window. Whether he was really influenced to this by the exertions of some forward-headed meddling Advisers, it is uncertain, but it was disagreeable to the People assembled, who immediately proceeded towards his House. He had before this, procured . . . a File of Soldiers to guard his House, who were drawn up and charged their Pieces before his Door; But this Step appeared highly disapproved by the superior Officers, the Soldiers were soon withdrawn, and the House and People of the People assembled, thought proper to decamp to the Fort, but soon consented to make the Concessions required of him, the next Day. Accordingly, on Saturday [July 22] at 4 O'clock in the Afternoon, he attended in the Fields, where he publicly acknowledged his Crimes; implored the Pardon of his Fellow Citizens; engaged to store an Equivalent to the Goods he had sold, together with all those he had in Possession that were imported contrary to Agreement; and so to conduct for the future as not to render himself obnoxious to the Contempt and just Resentment of an Inhabitants of the City . . .'.[MS.].

28 Jonathan Hampton, "In Chapel-Street, New York," advertises "Windoir Chairs, made in the best and neatest Manner, & well polished. 4 ft. High back'd, 2 ft. in Breadth, & 3 ft. in Chairs," etc. He sells by wholesale or retail.—N. Y. Jour., July 27, 1769.

An advertisement reads: "Mr. Du Simièrere [see 1767], Miniature, Paitenter, Intending shortly to leave this City, and it being uncertain whether he will return again, if any Gentleman or Ladies should incline to employ him, he is to be found at his Lodgings, in the House of Mrs. Ferrara, in Maiden Lane."—N. Y. Merc., July 31, 1769.

29 During the session of the supreme court which ended on July 29, "John Hennessy, for Felony and Statricle, in stealing the Shipp'd Goods of Mr. C. of Scotch Plains, N. J., for which He received Sentence of Death, and is to be executed the 23d of August."—N. Y. Merc., July 31, 1769. He was later pardoned by the governor.—N. Y. Chron., Aug. 24, 1769.

30 To be seen At the House of Mr. Abraham De La Montayne, being the very equal Exemplary; and what that be treated on all Beautiful Animals, called, A Tiger. Price six pence."—N. Y. Post-Boy, July 31, 1769. See April 5, 1754.

Pierre Eugene Du Simièrere [see 1767] . . . appeared in open Court . . . did then and there . . . Subscribe the Text, as a Member of the Court, and submitted to the Abjuration Oath . . . [and is] made his majesty's natural born Subject."—Min. Gen. Session of the Peace (MS.), Aug. 4, 1769.

The location of this tavern is not known. The "York Arms" was also one of the names by which the City Tavern at 115 Broadway was designated.

Jacobus Stoutenburgh is paid £163:2: for 'Cleaning and keeping in Repair the Fire Engines belonging to this Corporation.'—M. C. C., VII: 176.

32 John Cox, who has been confined for over nine years in the "Debtors Gaol" (which is part of the bridewell), having "taken all Methods in the Compass of his power, in order to bring his Creditors to a Composition" but without finding it possible "to obtain a discharge," and having contributed to the partial support of his wife and eight children by selling liquor in the gaol and by acting as a turnkey or under-keeper for several years, now petitions the common council for appointment as keeper of the bridge-well, at the yearly salary allowed to the present keeper. He promises to "find the People confined therein Provisions at his . . . Own Expenze, for the benefit of their Work."—From the original petition (MS.), in city clerk's record-room. The petition is deferred for future consideration.—M. C. C., III: 176. Before his imprisonment, Cox had been a constable.—Ibid., VII: 147. On Aug. 21, the present keeper of the bridewell, William Dobbs, replied to the foregoing in another petition. He referred to Cox's "pathetic description of the distress of his Wife and Numerous family and the insufficiency of the privilege he enjoys to support them,—upon which he Solely grounds his Extraordinary request," and added: "Yet the said John Cox's tenderness is so wholly absorbed in his own family, that he has not the least consideration for the unhappy State Your Petitioner and his family would unavoidably be reduced to if deprived of the said Employment [Dobbs himself had been a debtor to the corporation].—M. C. C., VII: 79:1.' He further stated that there is a purchase some time ago of a valuable concern in this City, for which he paid £500, and from which he receives the Yearly Rent of Eighty pounds. And has likewise Shipped a valuable Cargo of Wine and other Merchandise to Virginia . . . From these particulars, it fully appears that Mr. Cox in the account he has given hath attempted to impose upon your Worship the Appraiser of the People of the People assembled, thought proper to decamp to the Fort, but soon consented to make the Concessions required of him, the next Day. Accordingly, on Saturday [July 22] at 4 O'clock in the Afternoon, he attended in the Fields, where he publicly acknowledged his Crimes; implored the Pardon of his Fellow Citizens; engaged to store an Equivalent to the Goods he had sold, together with all those he had in Possession that were imported contrary to Agreement; and so to conduct for the future as not to render himself obnoxious to the Contempt and just Resentment of an Inhabitants of the City . . .'.[MS.].

33 Dimensions 6 Feet 9 Inches whole Keel, 28 Feet Beam, 12 Feet Hold, 5 Feet 4 Inches between Decks. . . She is built for the London Trade. Her Head is a Bust of Britain, supported on the right by America, and by Hibernia on her left: Expressive of our variable Affections and indissoluble Union with the Chief of Nations."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 21, 1769. The ship-yard where the vessel was probably built, see Pl. 40, Vol. I. "The Ratzen Plan" (see 1766-7 and Pl. 42. Vol. I) is now first advertised for sale:

"Just published, and to be sold by J. Gaine, [Price, 166, coloured, and 8s. plate.]

"A Plan of the City of New-York, Dedicated to his Excellency Sir Henry Moore, Bart. The above Plan is done on a Sheet of Imperial Paper, the Streets laid down very exact, with the Names of each, the Ward's, Wharfs and all public Buildings in and about the City properly distinguished this City, and the whole can be considerably farther than Corle's Book."—N. Y. Merc., Aug. 21, 1769.

34 Pres. Cooper of King's College writes to John Singleton Copley: "I should be very glad if you could persuade yourself to exercise your Art for a few Months in this place [New York]. I am satisfied you would find an unbounded field for your powers, standing the common Complaint of the Scarcity of Money. Any assistance that I could lend you, you might depend on receiving."—Letters & Papers of John Singleton Copley and Henry Pelham, 1739-1776, 75-76. On Sept. 24, Copley answered: "I am much obliged to you for the assurance you are so kind to offer me should I visit New-york. Although I cannot at present make that excursion for the exercise of my pencil, I may in some future time."—Ibid., 76. For Copley's arrival in New York, see June 16, 1771.

21 Theophilus Hardenbrook and other house carpenters of New York petition the common council for relief against unfair compe-
Jonathan, according to the ordinance of the town, was appointed to the magistracy. The public print shop was established in the town in 1685, and the first newspaper, the New-York Gazette, was published in 1725.

The city was incorporated in 1664 and has been continuously in existence since then. It has been a center of commerce and industry, and has been the site of many important events in American history. The city was the capital of the United States from 1789 to 1800.

The conformation of Manhattan Island is such that its shape is roughly that of a long, narrow strip, with a width that varies from about 1 mile in the west to less than 1/2 mile in the east. The island is bounded on the east by the East River and the west by the Hudson River. The length of the island is about 13 miles, and its greatest width is about 2 miles.

The island is divided into three main sections: Lower Manhattan, Middle Manhattan, and Upper Manhattan. Lower Manhattan is the oldest part of the island, and it is home to many of the city's most famous landmarks, such as the Statue of Liberty and the World Trade Center.

Middle Manhattan is the commercial center of the city, with many of the major financial institutions and corporate headquarters located here. Upper Manhattan is a residential area, with many of the city's finest neighborhoods located here.

The island is also home to many of the city's renowned universities and hospitals, such as Columbia University and New York University.

In conclusion, the conformation of Manhattan Island is one of the key factors that have contributed to the city's success as a major center of commerce and industry. The island's shape and geography have allowed for the development of a unique and vibrant urban landscape, with a rich history and culture that continues to thrive today.
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763-1776

1769

22

of 73. "He was born in England, and arrived here in the Year 1715.

Nov.

He practised the Law with great Reputation, and was esteemed one of the most eminent in his Profession. In the Year 1753, he was made a Member of His Majesty's Council for this Province, which Office he afterwards resigned, and in the Year 1769, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court. He was a Gentleman of great Eрудition, and the most eloquent Speaker in the Province; of an amiable and exemplary Life and Conversation, and a zealous and inflexible Friend to the Cause of Religion and Liberty. His Remains were recently interred in the Presbyterian Meeting-house."—N. Y. Merc.,

Nov. 27, 1769.

27

"An Hostler, That get's drunk no more than 12 Times in a

Year, and will bring with him a good Recommendation, is wanted.

Such a Person will meet with Encouragement, by applying to H.

Gaine."—N. Y. Merc., Nov. 27, 1769.

30

Two somewhat similar bills are introduced in the assembly, one to " exempt protestors of all denominations, from paying to any clergymen by compulsory taxation," the other "to exempt

the inhabitants of the counties of Westchester, New-York, Queens and Richmond from any taxation for the support of the ministers due to them not belong" (see April 6).—Assemb. Jour. (1769-70), 13, 14, 16, 17.

Both bills passed the assembly but failed to pass the council. The opposition to them came chiefly from New-York City.—Ibid. (1769-70), 14-15, 24, 75, 95, 56.

For a complaint against the dilatory proceedings of the assembly in regard to to these bills, see Jan. 27, 1769. From the records it appears that such law was enacted by the legislature prior to the Revolution.

Dec.

1

A number of residents in Montgomery Ward petition for permission to erect a Bridge a Cross Beckmann Slip at their own expense." Consideration of the petition is deferred "until the next Common Council that the Neighbourhood there may in the mean time have an Opportunity of making their Objections to the same if any they have".—M. C. C., VII: 105. On Dec. 12, some people "Residing Contiguous to Beckmann Slip" requested that the above Bridge might not be granted, and consideration of the matter was deferred "to some future Common Council."—

Ibid., VII: 197. See Dec. 30, 1771.

4

Colden has hopes "that a more moderate temper, begins to gain ground among the People, and that many incline to avoid, as much as possible, what may irritate or give offence to the parent

Mr. Le Gry, fencing and dancing master, proposes to open his school on this day at the house of Mr. John Eber, at the sign of the Roebuck, at the upper end of Horse and Cart-St.—N. Y. Merc.,

Dec. 16, 1769. Chief Justice William Tryon had his Horse and Cart-st. because of the presence at William Fulton St. of the noted Horse and Cart Tavern. In 1786, the "sign of the Roe-Buck" hung out from an inn on the New Road, of which Edward Collins was proprietor.—N. Y. Jour., Sept. 21, 1786.

History of Colden that has been graciously pleased to approve of the Earl of Danemore to be Gov't of New York, the necessary instructions are preparing for him, and

His Lordship proposes setting out for his Gover'n as early in the spring as he can find a safe conveyance."—N. Y. Col. Docs., VIII: 193.

An extract of a letter from London states: "You have a new Governor appointed, Lord Dunmore, he has the Character of being a temper'd honest Man; a Soldier, brave and generous. He does not go over till the Spring. I hope you will all be as happy in him as in his Predecessor."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 16, 1770.

12

The Board of Proprietors of the Ground over the Petitioners Lots that in the first of the above said plans, they proportion the Loss which each said Lot will Loose, in order that this Board may be the better Enabled to Judge where and in what manner the Broad Street may be

In response to Colden's request of Nov. 22 (q.v.), the assembly, by a vote of 12 to 11, in favor of H. Gry, the sum of two thousand pounds, for supplying the troops quartered in this colony with necessaries for one year."—Assemb. Jour. (1769-70), 38. The act granting this money was signed by the lieutenant-governor on Jan. 5, 1790 (q.v.). The broadside of Dec. 16, 1769 (q.v.) was a direct result of this vote of the house.

A broadside addressed "To the Betrayed Inhabitants of the City and Colony of New-York" is issued by "A Son of Liberty." It reads: "In a Day when the Minions of Tyranny and Despotism in the Mother Country, and the Colonies, are indefatigable in laying every Snare that their malvolent [sic] and corrupt Hearts can suggest, to enslave a free People; when this unfortunate Country has been striving under many disadvantages for three Years past, to preserve their Freedom . . . when the Merchants of this City . . . have nobly and cheerfully sacrificed their private Interests to the public Good . . . it might justly be expected, that in this Day of Constitutional Light, the Representatives of this Colony, would not be so hardy, nor so lost to all Sense of Duty to their Constituents . . . . as to betray the Trust committed to them. This they have done, in passing the Vote to give the Troops a Thousand Pounds, For any Monies that may be in the Treasury, and another Thousand out of the Money that may be issued, to put out on Loan [see Dec. 15] . . . Our granting Money to the Troops, is implicitly acknowledging the Authority that enacted the Revenue-Acts, and their being obligatory on us. To what other Influence than the deserting the American Cause, can the Ministry attribute so pusillanimous a Conduct, as this of the assembly; so repugnant and subversive of all the Means we have used, and Opposition that has been made . . . to the tyrannical Conduct of the British Parliament? To no other. Can there be a more ridiculous a Place to impose for the Assembly to have given their Thanks to be given to the Merchants, for entering into an Agreement not to import Goods from Britain, until the Revenue Acts should be repealed, while they at the same Time counteract it by counteracting British Acts, and complying with Ministerial Requisitions, incompatible with our Freedom . . . . And what makes the Assembly's granting this Money the more grievous, is, that it goes to the Support of Troops kept here, not to protect but to enslave us . . . . This Consideration alone ought to be sufficient to induce a free People, not to grant the Troops any Supply whatsoever if we had no Dispute with the Mother Country; the more necessary now the more necessary not to grant any Thing that might destroy our Freedom, Reasons of (Economy and good Policy suggest, that we ought not to grant the Troops Money . . . .

"Hence it follows, that the Assembly have not been attentive to the Liberties of the Continent, nor to the Property of the good People of this Province, in particular having . . . . that there be granted to his Majestye, the sum of ten Thousand Pounds, to attribute this Sacrifice to the public Interest, to some corrupt Source . . . . Mr. Colden Knows, from the Nature of Things, that he cannot have the least Prospect to be in Administration again; and therefore, that he may make Hay while the Sun shines, and get a full Salary from the Assembly, ratifies the ignorant Members of it, with the Consideration of the Success of a Bill, to emit a Paper Currency, when he and his arthful Coadjutators must know, that it is only a Snare to impose on the simple; for it will not obtain the Royal Assent [see Jan. 5, 1770]. . . .

"The Delancy Family knowing the Ascendancy they have in the present House of Assembly; and how useful that Influence will be to their ambitious Designs, to manage a New Governor . . . like true Politicians, altho' they were in all Appearance, at mortal Odds with Mr. Colden . . . yet a Coalition is now formed, in order to secure to them the Sovereign Lordship of this Colony . . . The Assembly might with the V.I.A. establish his Rules, take their Seats in the House of Assembly, and place the Lieutenant Governor in the Speaker's Chair, and then there would be no Waste of Time in going from House to House . . . . Is this a State to be rested in, when our all is at Stake? No my Countrymen, Recommend to be wise. What Hall Slip is the Counties peer and the other of the Ground opposite the Petitioners Lots; that in the first of the above said plans, they proportion the Loss which each said Lot will Loose, in order that this Board may be the better Enabled to Judge where and in what manner the Broad Street may be —From a broadside in the N. Y. in for our invaluable Birth Rights, dared to vote Supplies to the

Dec. 1769

Pub. Library. For an answer to the broadside, see Dec. 18. The Dec. assembly offered on Dec. 19 (q.v.), a reward of £100 for the discovery of the author.

In the meeting in the Fields suggested by the broadside of Dec.
16 (g.v.) is held at noon. The inhabitants discuss the "Inexpedi-ency, and dangerous Consequences that would result to this Colony and the common Cause of Liberty, by granting Money to support his Majesty's Troops." The questions "Whether they approved of the Vote of the House of Assembly, for granting Money to support the Troops? . . . and . . . whether they were for 8 — Gentlemen — would this and the broadside of Dec. 16 (g.v.) "a false, seditious and infamous libel." The lieutenant-governor was asked to offer rewards of £50 and £100 for the discovery of their respective authors.—

Colden issues a proclamation offering a reward of £100 to 18 — Gentlemen — for giving in a bill "that all elections to be held or made, in the future, for the House of Assembly, for the Colony of New-York, shall be by ballot only."—Assemb. Jour. (1769-70), 47. See Jan. 4, and Jan. 5, 1770.

A broadside, addressed "To the Public," and signed by "A

3 — Freethinker," says: "As it is generally imagined, the Assembly will be necessary to the known Constitutions of their Constituents, for Supplying to the Troops—I would therefore advise my Fellow Citizens, immediately to appoint a Committee, and give them

Instructions, (in Case the said pernicious Supplies should be granted) to draw up a State of the Case, and transmit the same to the Speakers of all the Houses of Assembly on the Continent,

(New-Jersey excepted) in order to preserve that Union and Harmony so necessary at this Time to our political Safety.—

From the original in Mass. Hist. Soc.

A notice calling upon the inhabitants of the city to meet tomorrow at the liberty pole is issued in a broadside by those who are in favour of election by ballot.—From the reprint in the N. Y.

"J. W. a Squatter on Public Affairs" issues a broadside entitled:

29 — The Mode of Elections Considered." He says that both in Pennsylvania and in Connecticut, representatives are chosen by half a house, by the same method; and that people may be ignorant of the English language "are thereby frequently the Means of electing Persons, whom they detest in their Hearts; and that the method has led to threats and bribery. From these alleged facts, he concludes that the Mode of Election hitherto used in this Government, (whereby every Elector is a Representative of his Heart publicly, which is the Glory of the British Constitution) is preferable to either of those before mentioned."—From a photostat in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11517).

A broadside, addressed "To the Freethinkers, and Freeman of the City and Province of New-York," praises the motion that elections be conducted by ballot (see Dec. 22). The writer says that such a law "may be properly stilled, An Act for the Redemption of the Poor, and the Establishment of the Liberties of the Colony.

A Law friendly to all but such as are desirous of selling their Birth-Right for a Mass of Potgage; and the Sons of Wealth and Ambition, who despise the Power of enslaving the rest of their Countrymen." He shows that corrupt ministers in England have tried to force the election to the house of commons of men favourable to their measures, and points out that what has happened in England may happen in America. He urges the people to realize "that our constitutions are not established to be used; that they should ever be in Confederacy with a wicked Governor, that Colony is irrecoverably ruin'd." The broadside states that voting by ballot has been successfully tried out in other colonies, and that it is the most "effective Antidote to Corruption," because the "man of Opposite Party will be at no Expense in the Assemibly, by an undue Influence upon the Fears of the Electors; nor find it worth his While to spend Money, which he can never be sure will have the wicked Effects for which it was given."—From a photostat (made from an original in the Library Company of Philadelphia) in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 11497).
Gentlemen

Your very acceptable favour of the 28th March, signed by Mr. Gates to our Committee, came duly to hand, and the subject of it would have been carried into execution, even after the Departure of our Tea Ships; but we have not been alarmed with Intelligence from England of more Importance, that calls for our utmost Attention and Vigilance. Soon Tuesday evening Captain Cooper arrived from London in 27 days, and brought us Advice that General Gage was appointed your Governor, and that he was to sail for your Town in the Lady Suzanne the Day before he sailed; but is not certain of the sailing at the time appointed. By him we have received the shocking and detestable Act of Parliament, that takes up your Acts of Justice next a Copy of which was sent to your Agent by the last Thursday Post, but as it may miscarry we have sent several other Copies of it. We have Language to express our Discontent at this additional Act of Tyranny to America, we clearly see that she is to be attacked and overwhem by force and without you. This Intelligence would have been immediately communicated to you by Captain Cooper, but we conceived the heavy Charge of shipping Acts had brought you the unlooked for before it reached us. Therefore we judged it most eligible to put the Fate of the Inhabitants upon some Means to entice you out of your Difficulties, which should be communicated to you without delay of Time.
CHRONOLOGY : THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD
1763-1776

1770

1770.

Maj. Walter Rutherford, a half-pay officer of the British army, erected a residence, at some time prior to the Revolution, possibly about 1770, on the corner of Broadway and Vesey Sts., opposite St. Paul’s, a location which he described as “far up the street with an open square in front, and good air, as there are but few houses in the neighborhood.” Here he lived until his death in 1804. Rutherford, Family Records and Events (1842). 34, and description of Pl. 68, I: 451. Here the corner of the Park Hotel (soon after named the Astor House) was laid on July 4, 1834 (q.v.). See also Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 952.

The domestic establishment of Abraham Meyer, of Harlem, has been described by Valentine as an illustration of the household property of a respectable farmer on Manhattan Island at this time. The record is an inventory, in Dutch, of his stock and labouring tools, as well as the furniture and utensils in use in his family;—See Man. Com. Coun. (1858), 524-26; and compare with the more elaborate establishment of the merchant De Peyster (see 1760).

In this year, the French Baron Pierre L. de Tulle, and Augustus P. de Tulle, made a catalogue of persons who owned coaches, chariots, post-chaises, and phaetons at this time in New York. He made similar tabulations for Philadelphia in 1772, and for Boston in 1768. In New York there were 85 vehicles of this character, namely: 26 coaches, 33 chariots or post-chaises, and 26 phaetons, kept by 62 residents of the city. The original MS, now preserved in the Ridgway Branch of the Library Co. of Phila., has been published by Houghton, in Coaches in Colonial N. Y. (1890), 24-25.

The City of New York contains near 3,000 houses, and above 14,000 inhabitants, the descendants of Dutch and English, it is well and commodiously built, extending a mile in length and about half a mile in breadth, and has a very good aspect from the sea; but it was no means till lately properly fortified. The houses are built with brick, mostly in the Dutch taste, the streets are not regular but they are clean and well paved. In the year 1770, the number of places of public worship in this city stood as follows: Dutch Presbyterian 3, English dö. 2, Scotch dö. 1, Episcopalians 3, French Refugees 1, Quakers 1, Baptists 1, Moravians 1, German Calvinists 2, German Lutherans 1, Methodists 1, Jews 1. Hence it should Seem needless to observe that all religions are tolerated here without the least restraint upon any character. The town has a very flourishing trade, and in which great profits are made. The merchants are wealthy, and the people in general most comfortably provided for, and with a moderate labour at present, the trade of New York must be very considerable as well as extensive. The houses being their manufactures are carried there in great abundance, and from thence clandestinely conveyed to different parts of the continent of America.”—From MS. entitled “A Concise Description of New York and New Jersey,” apparently by Du Simitière; no date or author given, but evidently from early Revolutionary period (He was in New York in 1769); in Du Simitière’s “Papers relating to N. England N: York &c.;” in Library Co. of Phila.

Sometime between this year and 1781, St. Jean de Crèvecoeur (see Dec. 23, 1766) wrote a description of New York. As it fits the early part of 1776, it has been placed there in the Chronology.

In this year, Alexander Cliny published in London a small volume of letters, entitled The American Traveller: containing observations on the Present State, Culture and Commerce of the British Colonies in America ... By an Old and Experienced Traveller. His “Letter XIV” (undated), 26-38, describes this province thus:—

The British in New York, in every Respect, possibly the happiest for Habituation in all North-America; the Healthfulness of the Climate vying with the Fertility of the Soil; which not only produces aboriginally every Necessary of Life, but also brings all the vegetable Productions of Europe, that have been tried there, to perfection, existing in every kind before the Revolution, possibly no trouble, than they arrive at in England, under the most careful and expensive Culture.

... I shall ... lay before your Lordship the following View of the Trade at present carried on between it, and Great Britain . . .

“Commodities exported from New York to New York.

“Commodities exported from New York to New Britain, and other Markets.

“Flour and Biscuit, 250,000 Barrels at 200s.

Wheat, 70,000 Quarters at 20s.

Beans, Peas, Oats, Indian Corn, and other Grain 40,000

Salt-Beef, Pork, Hams, Bacon, and Venison 18,000

Brew-Wax 50,000 lb. at 12s 1,500

Tongues, Butter, and Cheese 5,000

Deer, and other Skins 35,000

Flax-Seed, 7,000 Hds at 40s 14,000

Horses, and Live Stock 17,000

Timber, Plank, Mats, Batts, Staves and Shingles 25,000

Potash, 7,000 Hds at 40s 14,000

Ships built for Sale, at £700 14,000

Copper Ore, and Iron, in Bars and Pig 20,000

“... The whole at a Like Average of three Years £526,000.

... The Success of repeated Experiments has proved that it abounds in valuable Metals. Iron, and Copper, have already been raised in such Quantities, . . .

In this year, there was published in London A Brief State of the Controversy between the Colonies of New-York and New-Jersey, Respecting their Boundary-Line, containing an engraved copy of a map made by Bernard Ratzer for the commissioners, which shows the various changes in the boundary.

In this year, Hugh Gaine printed a pamphlet entitled Rules for the St. Andrew’s Society, in New-York. The preface states that “The Natives of Scotland, and those descended of Scots Parentage, in the City of New-York, have agreed to form themselves into a Charitable Society; the principal Design of which is, to raise and keep a Sum of Money in Readiness for the above laudable Purpose; if the application of this Charity is confined, so is the manner of collecting the same; but whatever is the least prevent our action, we are bound to advance the Principles of universal Charity on other Occasions.” The rules, which were adopted on Nov. 30, 1764, provide for regular meetings, admission of new members, election of officers, payment of dues and fines, disbursement of benefits, keeping of accounts, recording of minutes, possession of said society. Besides the rules, the pamphlet contains a list of the officers and the members of the society. Peter Middleton was president, William M’Adam vice-president, and John Ramsey secretary and treasurer. Many prominent New-Yorkers were numbered among the resident and the honorary members. The N. Y. Hist. Soc.’s copy of this publication was reprinted in 1847.

The Earl of Dunmore is commissioned governor of New York.

—N. Y. Col. Doc., VIII: 203 (footnote). On Feb. 21, Colden was expecting his arrival.—Ibid. On July 7, Dunmore’s furniture having arrived, Colden wrote that he was retiring to his house in the country, so that the Governor’s house may be fitted up for his reception.—Ibid., VIII: 217. On July 16, Dunmore was about to leave England for America.—Ibid., VIII: 221. On Aug. 18, he was daily expected by Colden in New York.—Ibid., VIII: 245. On Oct. 18, he arrived.—Ibid., VIII: 249. This delay in his arrival raised a dispute between Colden and Dunmore regarding the division of the perquisites of office.—See Nov. 10.

A broadside, directed “To the Freethinkers, and Freeman of the City and County of New-York,” gives four reasons in favour of electing representatives by ballot (see Dec. 28, 1769):

1st. Such a Law, will in a great Measure, prevent tumults, Riots, and Disorders, agreeable to the Prosperity of the Electors, for no Trouble, than they arrive at in England, under the most careful and expensive Cultivation.

3d. It will prevent Men of Property, Power, and Tyrannical Dispositions from prostituting their Wealth and Influence, in giving Weight to their Threats, and thereby intimidate the Electors from a free Disposal of their Votes, according to their Understandings.
The Geography of Manhattan Island

The balance (£85) and all that was saved in purchasing the above articles were to be "applied towards the purchasing of Mollases and establishing a Spruce Brewery for the Soldiers." —Caled Pop-

Costen sends to Hilliborough a copy of the broadside of Dec. 16, 1769 (p. 4). He adds: "This some of our Newspapers make the meetings of the sons of Liberty, as they call themselves, on this occasion to be numerous and of consequence, the party was really disappointed. The numbers who appeared were too small and inconsiderable to have any weight, or be of any service to their purpose. They have been further disappointed in three attempts since made. People in general, especially they of property, are now aware of the dangerous consequences of such riotous and mobish proceedings." —N. T. Col. Dets., VIII: 199.

Parliament passes an act to enable the government, etc., of New York, to pass a Balloting in its powers [see Dec. 12, 1769]; we therefore... do, for the following Reasons, instruct and direct you our Representatives to oppose, by all legal Means in your Power, the proposed Alteration.

"Because we conceive it to be a dangerous Innovation directly contrary to the Laws and Customs of our Realm, and unknown in any royal British Government on the Continent.

"Because we apprehend it to be an implicit Surrender of one of the most invaluable Privileges which we enjoy as Englishmen, to wit, that of declaring our Sentiments openly on all Occasions..."

"Because we conceive the principal Argument used by the Abettors of the Mode of Balloting to be put forth in a manner, which they assume to be clear from the influence of the Rich, and enable them to vote free and unbiased; in answer to which, we insist, that neither Law nor Reason can suppose that an honest Man will sell his Birthright for a Mess of Pottage and sacrifice to a selfish and mercenary Consideration his Honour, his Judgment, and his Conscience..."

"Because we apprehend the Mode of Balloting, so far from preventing Frauds and Imposition, as is pretended by its Advocates, will rather open unto them a wider Door; for as many Persons as will be allowed in the judgment, in the English Language, and, particularly with writing it, they will be necessarily exposed to the villainous Arts of crafty Emissaries, who, under a pretended shew of Friendship, offering their Assistance, will often cause them to deliver Suffrage directly contrary to their True and Judgement..."

"Because it will be dangerous to the Rights and Liberties of the People to intrust in the Hands of a returning Officer, the sole Power of determining on a Scrutiny; which must of Necessity be the Case, if the Mode of Balloting be adopted."—N. T. Merc., Jan. 9, 1770. These instructions were signed by 1,007 inhabitants. By Jan. 16, when they were presented to the representatives, the bill for election by ballot had been rejected by the House.—Ibid., Jan. 22, 1770.

Lieut.-Gov. Colden signs the bills passed by the assembly for granting £2,000 for supporting the troops quartered in New York City, and for emitting £240,000 in bills of credit. The matter had been under consideration since the meeting of the assembly on Nov. 21, 1769. Colden was anxious to secure funds to support the troops; the assembly was very desirous of securing the power to emit bills of credit; so the two bills were passed. The action of the assembly was obnoxious to the people of New York, and there was a popular protest, while the government in England afterwards refused the measure for issuing bills of credit and censured Colden for having approved it.—N. T. Col. Dets., VIII: 189-99. See Jan. 9, April 30.

On Jan. 15, Colden and Gage drew up an agreement specifying that the bounty appropriated by the assembly for the troops should be spent in the following manner:

"For a Bed and a Blanket for each Birth amounting in the whole to the sum of... £30000

"For Firewood for 77 Rooms the sum of... 110400

"For Firewood for three Guard Rooms the sum of... 81900

The soldiers make an attempt to cut down the "Liberty Pole" on the common, but their endeavours are in vain; the "Pole being so well secured with Iron." Incensed at the futility of their efforts and the taunts of a number of gentlemen standing near Montague's house, they entered the house "with drawn swords and Bayonets, insulted the Company and beat the Waiter." Not yet satisfied, they "proceeded to destroy the said lands and that the said Committee take such further Steps in behalf of this Corporation for the obtaining their Grant as they shall think expedient and necessary."—Tyr. Min. (MS.).

The Legislature passes two laws affecting the city of New York; one to establish the Rates for Carrying of Vessels and other Vessels, and the Rates to be taken for Cranage," and the other "to ascertain the size Casks in which White Bread shall be packed... and to regulate the Manner in which the same shall be sold."—Col. Lat. N. T., V: 80-83, 86.

The soldiers are ordered to "cut down the "Liberty Pole" on the common, but their endeavours are in vain; the "Pole being so well secured with Iron." Incensed at the futility of their efforts and the taunts of a number of gentlemen standing near Montague's house, they entered the house "with drawn swords and Bayonets, insulted the Company and beat the Waiter." Not yet satisfied, they "proceeded to destroy the said lands and that the said Committee take such further Steps in behalf of this Corporation for the obtaining their Grant as they shall think expedient and necessary."—Tyr. Min. (MS.).

The Legislature passes two laws affecting the city of New York; one to establish the Rates for Carrying of Vessels and other Vessels, and the Rates to be taken for Cranage," and the other "to ascertain the size Casks in which White Bread shall be packed... and to regulate the Manner in which the same shall be sold."—Col. Lat. N. T., V: 80-83, 86.

The soldiers make an attempt to cut down the "Liberty Pole" on the common, but their endeavours are in vain; the "Pole being so well secured with Iron." Incensed at the futility of their efforts and the taunts of a number of gentlemen standing near Montague's house, they entered the house "with drawn swords and Bayonets, insulted the Company and beat the Waiter." Not yet satisfied, they "proceeded to destroy the said lands and that the said Committee take such further Steps in behalf of this Corporation for the obtaining their Grant as they shall think expedient and necessary."—Tyr. Min. (MS.).
The hostility between soldiers and citizens, which has been increasing steadily for several days (see Jan. 13 and Jan. 17), culminates in the "Battle of Golden Hill." On the day a party of soldiers went about the city nailing up, in conspicuous places, a broadside published by them which attacked the Sons of Liberty and lauded the conduct of the soldiers. Isaac Sears and Walter Quackenbos attempted to prevent the posting of one of these papers at Liberty Hall, &c., but were attacked by the inhabitants; one soldier drew his bayonet and Mr. Sears struck him with a "Rams Horn." Two soldiers were seized and taken to the mayor's house, where a number of citizens soon assembled. Shortly after, about twenty soldiers, with Cutlasses and Bayonets, from the Pavement Barracks [at Orange Lane], enforced the withdrawal of the broadside. On Jan. 19, it was reported that the loyal citizens and the magistrates and citizens; in another, "one of the Citizens was wounded in the Face, and had two of his Teeth broke by a Stroke of a Bayonet: A Soldier received a bad Cut on the Shoulder."—N. Y. Post-Boy, Feb. 5, 1770. The same account may be found in Supplement to Penn. Gaz., Feb. 15, 1770, and Boston Evening Pst, Feb. 19, 1770.

The Gorden Hill, a Round Hill in the city of New York, is often called the "first blood shed of the Revolution;" for a contradiction of this statement, citing an earlier occasion, also in New York, see Aug. 11, 1776. In Dawson's Sons of Liberty in N. Y., Stone's Hist. of N. Y. City, Leake's Life of John Lamb, and the 15th Ann. Rep., Am. Soc. & Hist. Pres. Soc. (1910), 412, the date of this fight is erroneously given as Jan. 18th. Also, according to this last publication, "the soldiers turned fire on the citizens, killing one, wounding three, and injuring many others;" no contemporary account of the affair contains this remark. Stedman, in his History of the American Revolution, p. 27, quotes a letter from New York, dated Jan. 22, 1770, which appeared in the St. James Chron. (London), Mar. 5, 1770. The writer, in describing this affair, says: "one sailor got run through the body, who since died;" this statement cannot be found in any other newspaper report of the encounter. In his official report of the affair to Hillsborough, Colden speaks of the "ill humour" that had been "artfully worked up between the Towns people and Soldiers, which produced several affrays," until "At last some Towns people began to arm, and the Soldiers rushed from their Barracks to support their fellow Soldiers. Had it not been for the interposition of the Magistrates, and of the most respectable inhabitants, and of the Officers of the Army, it had become a very dangerous affair—as it was, only a few wounds and bruises were received on both sides."—N. Y. Col. Doc., VIII: 208. See Jan. 22 and 23.

"A broadside appears bearing the superscription: "Signed by the 16th Regiment of Foot," and beginning with these lines of poetry, "God and a Soldier all Men both adore, In Time of War, and not before. Then the War is over, and all Things righted, God is forgotten, and the Soldier slighted."

The broadside of Jan. 15 (q. v.) is called a "seditionist libel," expressing "the most villainous falsehoods against the soldiers. Those who "stifle themselves the S— of L—y," it declares, may more properly be called "real enemies to society. Those infatuated "brutes," who think their freedom depends "in a piece of wool," to Esau, "who sold his birth-right for a mess of potage." It further asserts that the regiment has "watched night and day," since its arrival, "for the safety and protection of the city and its inhabitants."

William Lish, the rival, The Soc., when the orders ceased, foresees the law of the Constitution, and that the people are brought to the peace of the commonwealth. It is therefore ordered by this Board, that upon a service of a copy hereof on the said William Lish, he appear before this Board on Thursday next, to Shew Cause why he should not be disfranchised for his Conduct aforesaid."—M. G. C., VII. 202.

The mayor informs the common council that some of the inhabitants have requested him to order the House belonging to this Corporation formerly in the possession of John Harris deceased, freezing the Commons to be pulled down as the same is now occupied by a number of disorderly Soldiers. The board orders that the said House be not pulled down as Requested, but that the same be let to such gentlemen, professors of Physick & Surgery as have the management & care of the Hospital, as soon as they shall be ready to receive the same, upon such conditions & terms, as shall hereafter be made by this Board, and that such same, who now occupy the same (several of which being dangerously ill) do continue therein, no longer, until the said professors of Physick and Surgery shall be ready to receive and take possession of the same."—M. G. C., VII: 200-1. The John Harris property became the site of the last liberty pole erected by the Sons of Liberty.—See Feb. 3.

Mayer Hicks issues the following proclamation "To the Inhabitants of this City:"

"Whereas some unhappy differences have lately happened between the Inhabitants and the Soldiers [see Jan. 19]; I am authorized to inform the Public, that to avoid the like for the future, Orders are issued to the General, that No soldiers are to go out of their Barracks, off duty, unless under the Command of a Commission, who is to be answerable for the orderly behaviour of the Soldiers, and take Care that they offer no Insult to the Inhabitants; and this order will be strictly observed till the Amity and Friendship that should subsist among the King's Subjects, is restored; and in case the Citizens abuse them, they are to endeavour to discover the offenders, and report them to a Magistrate, that they may be proceeded against according to Law; that Soldiers are not employed to protect in good, but the Inhabitants are not to be alarmed, as it will be in consequence of the above-mentioned Orders. This precaution it is hoped, will prevent further Evils, restore Peace, and quiet the Minds of the People; and it is expected, that the Inhabitants, on their Parts, will promote every good Intentions to preserve Peace and good order."—From an original preserved in the N. Y. Hist. Soc., reproduced in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Quarterly Bulletin, Jan. 1820.

"The Town has been greatly disturbed for some time past by the Gift of the Bileeting Money or Necessaries for the Troops in Barracks & the attack & Destruction of the Liberty Pole & sundry inflammatory Papers & a Compact not to employ Soldiers have been printed which occasioned Riots and yesterday a Council was called. . . . I advised a diligent Enquiry by the Magistrates or rather the issuing of a Commission of Oyer & Terminer if the Spirit of Rioting was quelled—If not that the General should be applied to for a Removal of the Regiments as the only Means to preserve Peace when the Ordinary Powers of the Law failed. The Paper of the Day ag1 the Troops was much censured. I joined in it—They talked of attacking the Printer—I advised that the Attorney General's Opinion be first taken and then that we should consider the Spirit of the Times, for it is possible that the City of New-York, West-Chester, Queens and Richmond, for the Support of the Service shall be exempt from any Taxations for the Support of Ministers of Churches to which they do not belong, in order that "the Counties concerned and the whole World may know the Scope of this Bill, and judge of the Conduct of both Houses."—From the broadside (without date) in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

The following letter is addressed to Mayer Hicks, signed by Jacobus van Zandt, Isaac Sears, Joseph Bull, Joseph Drake, and Alexander McDougal:--

The Town of New-York, West-Chester, Queen's and Richmond, are determined to erect another Liberty pole, as a Memorial of the Repeal of the Stamp Act. They consider no place so proper for it, as that on which the other pole stood, But if contrary to all Expectation the Corporation Should not be disposed to Give leave to have it Raised, we shall feel theQuestion from the Town that they Cannot have any objection to its being fixed opposite Mr Van Den Bergus near S1. Paulus Church, a Small distance from where the two Roads meet, which we have Reason to suppose will next to the other place be most acceptable if the Board Should not think proper to Grant Liberty for its Erection, or of either of the above places, as in that Case, no monument of freedom will appear in the Fields (the most publick place) the people are Resolved to procure it a place in the Fields or private Ground, and as the pole will be finished in a few days we therefore state a Committee of eleven-twelfths of the people, which we cheerfully would be pleased to Quicken an answer from the Corporation on this Subject."—M. C. C., VII: 203-4. The original letter is preserved in the No. 4, city clerk's record-room. The mayor communicated this letter to the common council on Feb. 2 (q.v.), and the resolution stated, "By a vote of nine to one the board of common council decided that the liberty pole be erected within a few days at the N.Y. Journal, the petition was rejected, not because the board was out of sympathy with the project, but because "it was thought the former Allowance was insufficient; and the the Corporation did not give their Consent, which, if they had done, might have been thought by some making themselves Parties in the Act, yet . . . they would not have objected, or been displeased, if the Pole had been erected without any fresh Application to them."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 8, 1770.

The common council votes that the doors of the "Common Corporation" must be kept "be left open" during the sessions.
—M. C. C., VII: 204-5.

The decision of the common council, of Feb. 2 (q.v.), evokes a broadside, "To the Sons of Liberty in this City." In this, the belief is expressed that the board's action cannot be "parallelized by any Corporation in the British Dominions, chosen by the Suffrages of a free People." The broadside is preserved in the N.Y. Hist. Soc., and is reproduced in this volume as Pl. 40. See also Man. Com. Coun. (1855), 85. In the final paragraph of the document the committee authorizes the statement: "We have purchased a Place for it [the fifth "Liberty Pole"—see Feb. 6] near where the other stood." This seems rather loosely worded.
The fact is that Isaac Sears acquired in his individual capacity, by quitclaim deed, dated Feb. 3, the "parts or shares, divided or undivided, belonging to Thomas Arden and wife, in a certain house and plot of ground" in the present City Hall Park, which belonged to John Harris at the time of his death, in 1770.—Liber Deed, XXXVIII: 407.
Inasmuch as Mary L. Booth, in her Hist. of the City of N. Y.
(1859), 58f., made the statement that this ground (which she erroneously described as on the north-west corner of the City Hall Park) still belonged "to the heirs of the New York Liberty Boys,
"a statement which has remained unchanged by later historians, though a thorough search of the city's title to the land was undertaken at the present author's request, in 1915-7, by Comptroller William A. Prendergast, and Miss Jennie F. Macarthy, historical expert of the Title Guarantee and Trust Co. This resulted in finding that the property had been clear since 1806, when the city bought and paid for Sears' interest.—See June 16, 1798.

This search of title disclosed the exact interest which was acquired by Sears in the Harris property, the quitclaim deed not specifying the interest nor citing the derivation of Thomas Arden's title. The report made by Comptroller Prendergast to the author, Sept. 16, 1915, shows:

"The John Harris property . . . was a plot 248 feet square, with a frontage on the east side of Broadway, the southerly line being just north of Murray street. John Harris in his last will, amended August 29, 1750, and probated August 13, 1756, bequeathed it to his wife, Jane (or Jan'tit) Harris. (Record 12 of Wills, page 192.) Jane Harris, in her last will, made August 13, 1756, and probated August 21, 1756, divided the property into four equal parts, on one of which stood the dwelling. This latter part she bequeathed to her son John, and one further part to each of three other children (with life estates) and a fourth daughter, Jane (Harris) Lynsen, participating merely in the part left to John Harris, in case he die without issue (Record 14 of Wills, page 102). By inheritance and purchase, William Peartree Smith, only child of Catherine (Harris) Pemberton, became seized of the whole interest in the property which he conveyed to the Corporation by Indentures of Lease and Release dated December 28, 1768. (Minutes of the Common Council, Vol. 7, page 141, and Book D of City Grants, page 1.) On September 7, 1769, the Corporation further acquired the interests of three of the six surviving children of Jane (Harris) Lynsen, the said six children having inherited a two-twelfths interest by reason of John Harris' Feb.
death, intestate without issue, some time in 1766. (Liber 38 of Conveyances, page 98.) This made the Corporation the owner of a twelfth-twentieth interest in the property prior to the time that Sears entered into his title, such as it was."—From the comptroller's letter to the author.

Sears conveyed his interest to the city on Oct. 19, 1785 (q.v.).
The broadside had been erected on part of this property.—M. C. C.
(VIII: 417). See also Key, III: 965. For the erection of the fifth liberty pole, see Feb. 6.

The Sons of Liberty erect their fifth "Liberty Pole" (for the earlier ones see March 19, 1769) on the plot of ground purchased for the purpose on Feb. 3 (q.v.). For the exact location, see Feb. 3, and the following summary. A letter to the journal describes the ceremony thus: "a hole was dug 12 Feet deep, and a large Pitch Pine Mast erected. The Mast was strongly cased round with Iron Bars, laid length wise, riveted thro' with large flat Rivets and laid close together, so as entirely to cover the Mast for about two thirds of its Length, and over these Bars were driven Iron Hoops, near half an Inch thick at small Distances, from Bottom to Top. On the upper Part, the Bars were not laid quite so close, but riveted and hooped in the same manner, and the Wood between the Bars driven as full of large Nails as it would hold. It was drawn through the Streets from the Ship-pants by 6 Horses, decorated with ribbands, 3 Flags flying, with the Words Liberty and Property, and attended by several Thousands of the Inhabitants. It was raised without any Accident, while the French Horns played, God save the King. It was strongly secured in the Ground by Timber, great Stones and Earth, and is in Height above the ground, about 46 Feet; on the Top of it was raised a Topmast 22 Feet, on which is fast a Gilt Vane, with the Word Liberty. No Sort of Disturbance happened during the whole Affair. The Gentlemen of the Army had taken a laudable Care that not the least offence should be given by the Soldiers, many of whom, were present, and neither gave nor received any Affront."—N. Y. Jour., Feb. 8, 1770.
This pole is shown in caricature in A. Pl. 41, Vol. III. The plate description (III: 854-67) was written with the mistaken conception that this pole was the fourth instead of the fifth, and there is a corresponding error in Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 963, under "Liberty Pole (first site)." A more careful study of the drawing in connection with the facts concerning McDougall's imprisonment, which is clearly depicted, fix the date as Feb. 14, eight days after the erection of the fifth pole.

The location of this fifth pole is determined, primarily, from "A Plan of the Ground of the latter historic surveys, to which the 22d of June, 1774, by G. Baunceker, C. S., was filed in box B-F, folder "Broadway," Baunceker Collection, N. Y. Pub. Library, and reproduced as Pl. 40, in this volume. On this plan, it will be seen, the location of this pole has been drawn. The Harris plot (see Feb. 2), 248 feet square, in which Sears acquired his interest, is blocked out on this survey, and it is on such a line as runs from Ratzer Map of 1766-67 (see Pl. 41, Vol. I), where the surrounding present-day streets are shown by name. From the data supplied by these plans, supplemented by that obtained from the following surveys, it has thus proved easy to ascertain very accurately the location of the fifth liberty pole on the modern map:

a—"Dr. of part of the Commons done for A. Hammond July 20, 1792—"Fields—285."—A survey of the fields etc. made July 14, 1770 by F. M. [Francis Mareshackle] C. S. (This is endorsed. "Fields

b—"Survey of the Fields—241."—The Common or Field.

c—The original "Plan of the Corporate Ground from the Park to Chamber Street surveyed April 1, 1854 by Joseph F. Mangum (which is numerous, a copy also in the office of the municipal department, office of the president, Borough of Manhattan, and bureau of design).

A feature which deserves notice in the Baunceker survey is "Barrack Street," now obsolete, which extended east from Broadway within the present Park area between Warren and Chambers Sts. All these data were gathered and digested by Leonard L. Breitwieter and Silas B. Tuttell, city surveyors, of the survey dept. of the Title Guarantee and Trust Co., who, at the request of the art commission, and in consultation with the author, prepared a new 1770 survey (dated Feb. 11, 1721) showing the location of the pole in Feb. relation to the present city hall. This survey, a copy of which is preserved in the map room of the N. Y. Pub. Library, shows that the pole was erected at the west of the city hall, and 55° 21' north of the southwest corner of this building.

This was the last of the pre-Revolutionary liberty poles. The first four poles stood on one site, and the fifth on another site. A summary of the dates of erection and demolition, the description (so far as we know it), and the location of each, is as follows:

1. The first liberty pole was erected May 20 or 21, 1766 (q.v.), in celebration of the repeal of the Stamp Act. It was a "maст erected on the Common," inscribed to "his Majesty, Sir Ph., & Liberty," also referred to as a "pine post." The pole was erected by British soldiers on Aug. 10, 1766 (q.v.). (A fight ensued, resulting on Aug. 11, 1766, q.v., in the first bloodshed of the Revolu-

2. The second liberty pole, referred to as a "high post," "Mast or Flag Staff," was erected "in lieu of the other" on Aug. 12, 1766 (q.v.). It was cut down on Sept. 25, 1766 (q.v.).

3. The third liberty pole was erected on Sept. 24, 1766 (q.v.), "at the place of the one that stood yesterday." This one was cut down on March 19, 1767 (q.v.).

4. The fourth liberty pole was "immediately erected in its stead," that is, on March 19, 1767 (q.v.). It was "cased below with Irom to prevent such another Action." This pole withstood re-

5. Our knowledge of the fifth and last liberty pole, its history, location, and description, is detailed and complete. The effort of the "Sons of Liberty" to erect this pole was commenced by a few of their leaders,—Van Zandt, Sears, Bull, Drake, and McDougall,—when coffee house, to Mayor Hicks on Jan. 30, 1770 (q.v.), asking the consent of the common council to erect a pole in one of two loca-

6. The site chosen was "near which the other pole stood," or, if the corporation would not allow this, then "opposite M'r Van Derberghs near 2d St. Paul's Church a small distance from where the other pole stood," the "Liberty Boy." The act of the board of the opposing both of these locations, they would erect the pole in the Fields on private grounds." The vote of the common council, on Feb. 4 (q.v.), stood nine to five against granting permission to erect the pole on "either of the above places," that is, either of the two locations on city property. A letter in the N. Y. Journal of Feb. 8 (see Feb. 2) said that the petition was rejected, not because the board was out of sympathy with the project, but because "it was thought the former Allowance [per-

7. Isaac Sears, in his individual capacity, bought by quitclaim deed, on Feb. 3, 1770 (q.v.), an undivided interest in a plot of ground for the pole "near where the other stood." An examination of records, undertaken by Comptroller William A. Prendergast, and Miss Jennie E. Macarthy, historical expert of the Tiele Guar-

8. The sale of the pole to Mayor Hicks on Jan. 30, 1770 (q.v.), reveals the fact that Sears's pur-

9. The "House of Mrs. Wragg opposite the Coffee-House" is the scene of a meeting of the "Knights of the Order of Corisco."—N. Y. Merc. Feb. 5, 1770.

10. A true "Female Friend to American Liberty" presents Capt. McDougall with a fine saddle of venison, "marked with the im-

11. The "House of Mrs. Wragg opposite the Coffee-House" is the scene of a meeting of the "Knights of the Order of Corisco."—N. Y. Merc. Feb. 5, 1770.

12. The "House of Mrs. Wragg opposite the Coffee-House" is the scene of a meeting of the "Knights of the Order of Corisco."—N. Y. Merc. Feb. 5, 1770.

13. The "House of Mrs. Wragg opposite the Coffee-House" is the scene of a meeting of the "Knights of the Order of Corisco."—N. Y. Merc. Feb. 5, 1770.

14. The "House of Mrs. Wragg opposite the Coffee-House" is the scene of a meeting of the "Knights of the Order of Corisco."—N. Y. Merc. Feb. 5, 1770.
"The 16th Regiment now here are ordered to be got ready to embark for Pensilvania; and we hear they are to be replaced by the 14th Regiment now in Boston."—N. Y. Merc., Feb. 26, 1776. The 16th embarked on March 25—Ibid, March 16, 1770. The transports sailed on March 27—Ibid, April 3, 1770.

The common council authorizes the payment of £14614 for the building of "a new Engine House [see Sept. 27, 1769] &c. for this Corporation."—M. C., VII: 208.

In a bill rendered to the common council by Hugh Gaine (bearing date of April 26, 1771), it is an item of this date for "a plan of the City coloured," at 16 shillings. In a bill rendered by John Watson (bearing date of May 27, 1770), it is an item for "a plan of ye City framing" at five shillings. Another item in the latter bill is for "a large Mungohoy Arm'd Chairs Car'd with Compass Backs, Calf skin Bottons," at £3. From the original, in file No. 5, in city clerk's record-room.

The provincial council appoints Whitehead Hicks, James Dunne, and Thomas Jones to be assistants to the attorney-general in the prosecution of Alexander McDougall for libel.—Col. Coun., Min., 481.

At about this time, "A Merchant" issues a broadside in favour of appropriating money for the support of the royal troops, and denouncing the American patriots. He remarks: "May it not from what has happened, be justly suspected, that the frequent Notices to meet at Liberty Pole, the violent Rage and Resentment which some People have endeavoured generally to excite against Soldiers, pretended to proceed from a Love of Liberty, and a Regard to the Interests of the People Pore; but all to the same End, although the Pretences have been so very different.—May not—No Money to the Troops—wharaw for Ballotting,—employ no Soldiers.—All mean the same Thing!—Liberty is the Pretex.—But, it may be interpreted thus; if we cannot breed a Disturbance, and kick up a Dust in one Way, we must in another. And if we cannot render Mr. Colden's Administration odious, and breed Dissentions and Animoisies amongst the People; and frighten the Assembly . . . all our Hopes in a future Election will be blasted."—From an original, without date, in the N. Y. Pub. Library.

The "Boston Massacre" occurs.—Boston Gaz., March 12, 1770.

The news was first published in New York on March 19 (p. 5).

Pres. John Cruger reports to the Chamber of Commerce that Colden, on receiving their petition (see Feb. 15), said: "I think it a good Institution, and will always be glad to promote the Commercial Interests of this City, and shall deem it a peculiar happiness that a Society so beneficial to the General good of the Province is incorporated during my administration."—Col. Recs. N. Y. Chamber of Commerce, 1768-1784, 78-79. The charter was granted on March 13 (4. 2).

Several members of the Marine Society (see Nov. 13, 1769) petition for a charter of incorporation.—Col. Hist. MSS., Eng, 783.

This was granted on April 12 (q. u.) Charter of the Marine Society (1788), 3.

Fire starts in large wooden building, the meeting-place of St. John's Lodge of Masons, in Snow St. (a name sometimes applied to Ann St.—see June 29, 1772). The inhabitants, "with their usual Alertness on such Occasions," as well as many soldiers and sailors, tried to extinguish the flames, "but found their Efforts much baffled by the Narrowness of the Streets, a scarcity of Water, being far from any of the Rivers, and the great difficulty of getting to the Fire." The flames soon extended across the street, and the fire "burnt with great Fury, carrying every Thing before it, being all Wooden Houses." Finally, after seventeen houses in the vicinity had been completely destroyed, the fire was "happily subdued."—N. Y. Merc., March 13, 1770; N. Y. Jour., March 15, 1770.

Dr. Peter Middleton, John Jones, and Samuel Bard, having petitioned for a charter of incorporation for the proposed hospital (see May 16, 17, 1765), are permitted by the provincial council to submit a draft of it for the board's approval.—Gaz. Min. (M.S.), 371 (Albany). See May 29, 1765.

A royal charter (see March 6) is granted to the Chamber of Commerce.—Col. Recs. N. Y. Chamber of Commerce, 1768-84, 89-97. This instrument is on record in the office of the secretary of state, Albany, as well as in the minutes of the Chamber. The original has been lost. On Nov. 20, 1765, Mr. Robert M. Stuart, more secretary of the Chamber wrote to Mr. Alexander Cober: "In my search for objects of interest connected with the past history of the Chamber my attention was naturally directed to the original charter. . . which I knew had been in existence some years previous. Every effort in my power was made at the time, and has been continued since, but as yet without success, for the recovery of this interesting link in our historical chain.

"There is a bit of history, also, connected with this old charter. Some five-and-twenty years ago, Admiral Walton, of the British Navy, descended by inheritance to the property of his family in this city; and on taking possession, among a vast accumulation of miscellaneous lumber, boxes, baskets, and chests, articles of domestic economy, dragon saddles and Hessian muskets, in the spurious attic of Walton House in Pearl street, was found the original charter of the Chamber of Commerce. It was very dirty, about three feet in width, with the massive waxen seal of the crown, six inches in diameter, attached, and the whole carefully encased in tin and enclosed in mahogany. The Admiral immediately made known the discovery to Mr. Piattard, who took possession of the document.

"Secretary Van Dam was known to have been an intimate friend, probably a relative, of the Walton family. William Walton had once been President of the Chamber. These facts may account for the situation in which the charter had been found, and we must therefore believe that the instrument had lain undisturbed in the recesses of Walton House for the period of nearly half a century. On the night of the great fire, the mahogany case containing the charter, was seen in the room occupied by the Chamber at the Exchange. As everything portable was supposed to have been removed from the building before its tragic destruction, it may be supposed that the box containing the charter was able to escape the fire. In this, I regret to say, I have been disappointed. If it was saved from the fire, it has ever since been so carefully guarded that the most diligent research has not been successful in tracing its whereabouts. Like the old seal [see May 5, 1774], it may yet turn up in some unexpected manner, and then our memories of an existence of four-score years will be complete."—Ibid., 316-27, 371. See April 2, 1771.

James Parker, printer of the "Libel for which Alex't McDougal is being prosecuted," is pardoned by the council.—Cal. Coun. Min., 548.

The anniversary of the repeal of the Stamp Act, falling on Sunday, is celebrated on Monday at the tavern of Abraham de la Montagne, Broadway, south of Warren St., at Samuel Walbroth's at the L. I. ferry, and at "Capt. Beckora, (where Mr. Jones and Smith formerly lived, within a few Doors of Mr. Montague's)," on Warren St. and Broadway. This latter tavern was now known as Hamden Hall. At Montagne's house, 250 "of the principal Inhabitants, Friends to Liberty, Friends to Trade, dined on an elegant Entertainment which was prepared for them."—N. Y. Jour., March 22, 1770. Montagne's tavern was at the present 255-254 Broadway, formerly Bardin's "King's Arms Tavern," while Jones' and Smith's was Hamden Hall, on the corner of Warren and Broadway. A meeting at Hamden Hall is given in the issue of the Journal for March 29: "A Company of about 300 Gentlemen, Freeholders and Freemen of this City (real Friends to Liberty) met at the former, in order to celebrate that memorable Deliverance from the Chains which had been forged for the Americans, by a designing and despotic Ministry. A decent and plentiful Entertainment was provided. Before they sat down to Dinner, the Company nominated Ten of their Number to dine with Capt. McDougall, at his Chamber in the New-Goal, where a suitable Dinner was also provided; After both Companies had dined, a Committee was appointed to send two Barrels of Beer and what was left of the Dinners, to the poor Prisoners, in the Goal, which was received with great Thanks." Forty-five "loyal and patriotic Toasts were drank," forty-five being at this time a particularly popular number both in England and America among the devotees of liberty; it having been the number of William the Conqueror's (Pl. 4, Vol. III). One of these toasts, probably with the company at Montagne's in mind, was "Unanimity among all the Sons of Liberty in America, and Perseverance in the glorious Cause." In the same issue of the Journal, an anonymous writer declares that on this very Night at Hamden Hall was regarded by most of the gentlemen composing the Chamber of Commerce as "insignificant, self-conceited," and "utterly incapable of writing the scandalous Paper laid to his Charge."
CHRONOLOGY: THE REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD: 1763–1776

809

1770

fire place, and five very elegant gerandees."—N. Y. Merc., Apr. 9, 1770. Vauxhall Gardens were earlier known as the "Old Bowling Green." See March 29, 1778.

12

The king assents to the repeal of the Townshend Act, leaving a tax merely on tea.—Ann. Reg. (1770), 91; Stat. of Gr. Brit., VIII 1770.

17

"A charter is given to certain persons, constituting them a corporation under the title of "The Marine Society of the City of New-York, in the Province of New-York, in America." This society was formed (see Nov. 13, 1769) for the purposes of "improving maritime knowledge, and for relieving indigent and distressed seamen and their orphan children of destitute masters of vessels."—Charter of the Marine Society (1788), 5:12; The Picture of N. Y. (1807), 112.

A four-page broadside is issued, entitled "No 3. The Douglass on Liberty. Humbly inscribed to the Grand Jury for the City and County of New-York." This condemns McDougall's address of Dec. 16, 1769 (p. v.), and his later conduct. The writer claims that McDougall's refusal to give bail was "a weak Artifice, to acquire Popularity; exhibit himself as a Spectacle of Compassion; and countenance the City of Oppression." He contends that, since the men of the Assembly are chosen by the people, it is the duty of all good citizens to uphold the decisions of the house, and not to make it "the Subject of Storn and Contempt." The broadside ends thus: "It must not be understood, that the conduct of the Assembly is admitted to have been in the least degree reprehensible; they did their Duty, and consulted the State, and true Interest of the Colony. If any differed in Opinion, they were to blame themselves, that they did not, when the Requisition was under Debate, present their Instructions. . . . All I now aim at is to shew, that even if they had engaged in their Proceedings beyond the Just Exception; Mr. M'Dougall is not the least culpable; and that his Prosecution, is no Invasion of the Liberty of the Press or of any Privilege of the People; on the Contrary, the Honour, Interest, and Safety of the Community, call aloud for his Punishment, if he is really the Publisher."—From photostat (from an original in the Library Co. of Philadelphia) in the N. Y. Pub. Library (Evans, 1615).

Yesterday the Packet arrived—a Council now met—The Kings Dissallowance of the Act to emit $120,000 passed on 5 Ja[2] last [p. v.] was read & ordered to be published—I ask'd Colen the reason—He read the Secretary of State's Letter of the 17 Feb. but would not put it on the Minutes—It was vastly severe—asserted the Act to be contrary to the Stat. &g Paper Money & the Kings Instructions and his Conduct very exceptionable as a similar Bill was under the Royal Consideration—It reminded him of the Danger he exposed himself to from the Terms of the Statute—Infidel to a Treaty was in a Torment suspended, and with the popular Voice at the Ex pense of his Instructions—testified that his Majesty was pleased in the Grant of Money to the Troops & intimated that a Motion would be made to give us Leave to strike Money by Act of Parlaim'.—"Wm. Smith's Diary (MS.), IV, p. 307. June 5 and 9.

Abraham Montague opens a tavern at the present Nos. 253–254 Broadway, where Edward Bardin had kept the King's Arms.—N. Y. Jour., April 20, 1760; cf. Liber Deeds, CCXX: 370. See also June 23, 1785; Landmark Map Ref. Key, III: 79–80.

The "Gentlemen of the English Nation, residing in this City, and those descended from English Families," give an entertainment to Gen. Gage and Lieut.-Gov. Colen, "in Commemoration of St. George, their tutelar Saint." The day is celebrated "in true Mirth and perfect Harmony, every Heart being delighted with the festive revival of a Custom much neglected in this City."—N. Y. Mag., Oct. 26, 1774.

May

1 May

Bolton, who has been associated with Sigel for three years as a joint owner of the respectable Isaac's Head Tavern and Pearl Sts. (see Jan. 8, 1767), announces his removal to the New York Arms.—N. Y. Jour., April 19; N. Y. Merc., May 7, 1770. Under Bolton the Province Arms, or City Tavern, which stood at the present No. 115 Broadway, seems to have enjoyed its usual patronage. It was the meeting place of the "benevolent Order of St. Patrick." On June 18, 1770 (ibid., June 11, 1770), and of St. George's Society in 1771 (ibid., Apr. 29, 1771); here various other entertainments of note were given during the short period of Bolton's occupancy. Nevertheless, Bolton appears to have been unsuccessful, and had given up the house before Nov. 11, 1771 (p. v.), when Robert Hull announced that he would "open" the tavern in Broadway "lately kept by Richard Bolton." Hull maintained the house, which was almost always designated as Hull's Tavern, until 1778, when he left New York and his house was eventually removed to Philadelphia. No one seems to have occupied the house after Bolton's departure until Sept. 20 (p. v.), when Francis himself re-opened it, after having fitted up the tavern, as he announced, in the "most genteel and convenient Manner."—Ibid., Sept. 13, 1770.

The provincial council issues a warrant for payment to Michael Cummings a reward for discovering the publisher of the paper signed "Son of Liberty."—Cal. Coun. Min., 481. See Feb. 7.

Anticipating the arrival of the statue of the king (see Feb. 6, 1771), the provincial authorities request the common council to permit the erection of the same in "some part of the Bowling Green, fronting the fort." Permission is given by unanimous vote.—M. C. C., VII: 212–23. The statue arrived on June 4 (p. v.), and was set up on Aug. 16 (p. v.). An appropriation for its erection had been made on May 5 (p. v.).

The common council authorizes the payment of $738.6 for nine Speaking Trumpets, Sundry Lamp frames &c. made for the use of this Corporation, and the payment of $1591.14 for "the loss of 38 barrels delivered out at the late fire at Lambert Garrison's and for Brandy and Geneva delivered out at the fire in Scotch Street [see March 8] to Sundry people who appear'd to stand Greatly in need of it."—M. C. C., VII: 213.

Archibald Kennedy presents a petition to the common council claiming that he "is entitled to a Certain Message and Lott of Ground in the City of New-York in the Street and Square [Hanover Square] now known as the Dock in the Rear thereof." As he is desirous of carrying out a dock from his present boundary into the East River, he requests a grant of the "Soil and water" from his ground into the river. His petition is granted, and the clerk is ordered to prepare a draft.—M. C. C., VII: 214–15. The grant was sealed and signed on Sept. 14—Ibid., VII: 229.

